

The World Whirls On

By JIM WOOLDRIDGE

Last week, when the Allies made it plain that they were not to accept Adolf Hitler's peace proposal in any way, the world waited to see what his next maneuver would be. The expected offensive on the western front was not expected, but his undersea campaign against English and French shipping has been redoubled.

The British ministry of information announced that the German battleship Royal Oak, with a complement of 1,200 men, had been sunk by a Nazi submarine. It was reported that 386 men were saved, but 804 were missing. This disaster occurred only a few days after the airplane carrier Courageous went down under similar circumstances. By sinking the Royal Oak, the Germans have demonstrated the belief that the Germans have perfected some means of propelling their U-boats which escapes the search detectors of the Allied warships and with this they are able to attack surface craft without danger of discovery.

As the attention of observers shifted to the sea this week they were given a revelation of the darkest mysteries of the war — "Where is the Bremen?" The German liner Bremen left New York harbor a few days before the outbreak of World War II, after being detained for nearly a week by unusually thorough customs investigation. It faded out of sight and was not heard from again for weeks. Rumors flew thick and fast. It was said that the liner had been seized by a British cruiser which was allegedly waiting for the prize. Just outside the three-mile limit, a later dispatch claimed that it had been interned in an unknown harbor. However, last week its true fate was made known.

From a member of the ship's crew came an account of its perilous voyage across the treacherous North Atlantic, around the Scandinavian peninsula, and through the Arctic circle to the Russian port of Murmansk. After a few days out, he said, "the captain informed us that war had been declared. We at once set to work to camouflage the vessel with a coat of gray paint. We then placed drums of gasoline within easy reach to fire the ship in case of any attempt to seize her. The captain vowed that the Allies would never take her, and they didn't. I still don't see how we escaped."

Another note from the last week was the unofficial report of an early settlement in the Russo-Finnish dispute. It was said that the Finns were willing to relinquish certain islands in the Baltic Sea in exchange for a guarantee of the safety of the island group.

LAST MINUTE FLASHES:

LONDON — The Nazi air force made a bombing raid over the northern coast of Scotland today, aimed to destroy the famous First of North Bridge and the naval base of Scapa Flow. Of the twelve German planes which made the attack, only seven were reported to have escaped.

Defending out over the North Sea by chasing off British pursuit planes. The damage was estimated to be pleasure craft in the vicinity of Scapa Flow.

PARIS — The official French war commission stated that late yesterday afternoon the German military machine launched its first mass offensive of the war. Advancing along a four-mile front the Nazis were said to have been met by advanced position before being checked by Allied artillery. Official sources seemed to think that the beginning of the great onslaught which Hitler had promised in his peace offer.

NYE WILL SPEAK FOR NEUTRALITY

Senator's Talk Stated For November 2

Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, author of the much-disputed, it was said that the Finance Committee of the senate committee which investigated the munitions industry, will speak on "Neutrality and Peace" at 8 p. m. Thursday, November 2, in Memorial Hall.

Senator Nye, known as a "champion of peace," appears under the auspices of the student-welfare committee of the University Women's Club. Nye's name is the committee's annual benefit project for needy students by which funds are raised to purchase books, payments of entrance fees, and other emergencies.

"With a reputation for telling uncomfortable truths about the munitions makers, Senator Nye's name has become a household word, according to R. Francis Brown, writer in a recent edition of Current History.

"He has made himself one of the most valuable members of the senate," said Nye, "in the fight for peace." Says Oswald G. Villard, Nye has made an international name for himself in referring to "off-camera" or "diplomats."

NEUTRALITY ACT CHANGE IS URGED

Cash-Carry Harmful Vandebosch Says

Speaking yesterday afternoon before a meeting of the University chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, honorary history fraternity, Dr. Arno Vandebosch, head of the political science department, urged strongly the repeal of the currently effective Neutrality Act.

Dr. Vandebosch stated that this act which represents an embargo on all war materials, was first of all non-enforceable, for it does not prevent the exporters from selling to non-belligerents who in turn can resell immediately to the warring nations. "Also," he asserted "this act will not prevent the so-called war-boom for actual war materials constituted in the last war only nineteen percent of the exports to foreign nations." Dr. Vandebosch stated that he believed it foolish to consider it impractical to sell war goods, for he considered immoral to sell arms to a country which is a neutral to defend itself, and there is no true line of demarcation between defensive weapons and offensive weapons. He urged the repeal of the act.

"In conclusion Dr. Vandebosch mentioned the fact that, although the act prevents the booking of passage by American citizens on ships of nations at war, it is much safer to ride on a so-called 'neutral' liner."

Oil Only Half Used, David Scott States

David C. Scott, special student in chemistry and director of the Kentucky highway department's research bureau, in a report prepared for Robert Humphreys, commissioner of highways, disclosed that lubricants now being used in state-operated motor vehicles were good for at least twice the use to which they were subjected.

The importance of this fact, carried on in the University's chemistry laboratories, is shown by the fact that with the adoption of Scott's recommendations, the yearly expenditure for oil may be reduced from $100,000 to approximately $50,000.

Still less than a year old, the technical research bureau of the Kentucky highway department has carried its investigations of lubrication, cylinders, pistons and bearings into such revolutionary fields that the attention of the U. S. Bureau of Standards and the Works Progress Administration has been attracted.

Also keenly interested in this work are many of the major oil companies, including Gulf, Standard Oil, Texaco, Phillips, Tidewater.

Bridge Lessons

AL VOGEL FILES SUIT FOR $4,000

Claims Wildcat Took Sour Mash Material

The lawsuit over the University humor magazines, "Sour Mash" and "The Wildcat," was filed Friday in Fayette circuit court. Named as defendants in the $4,000 suit charged wrongful use of editorial and advertising matter were Bill Costel, editor and business manager of "The Wildcat," and James S. Shuremire, director of student publications.

Al Vogel, who for the last two years managed "Sour Mash," contended through the corporate title "Sour Mash Magazine company," that in the first issue of "The Wildcat" Costel and Mr. Shuremire fraudulently printed and appropriated unpublished material and caused it to be printed and sold in magazine form under the name "Wildcat."

This action, the petitioner further averred, diverted and deprived the "Sour Mash" of the right title and good will of "Sour Mash" was destroyed and Vogel damaged in the sum of $4,000.

The litigation is the latest squall in the stormy life or lives of University humor publications.

"Kampus Kat" was the last humor publication in recent years, a tabloid started by Sigma Delta Chi, men's honorary journalism fraternity. When it weakened, another magazine "Moonshine" appeared.

"Moonshine" faded and the parent organization, having changed its own name to Delta Sigma Chi, continued the "Sour Mash" in its infancy. "Sour Mash" suffered severe financial cuts and bruises, and Vogel was called in to guide the sheet out of debt.

For the last two years Vogel's name has appeared on the masthead as managing editor, with a varying crew of editors. This fall "The Wildcat" an unheralded infant appeared with Bill Costel as editor.

Dear Margie: When you asked, "What kind of clothes, what fads are all the rage now at U. K.?" in your last letter, I'm afraid you let yourself in for a deluge, because I'm simply bursting with enthusiasm over the things I've seen on the campus as well as in the shops here in Lexington...

Since anything goes, the fads that abound fertile soil here range from the ridiculous to the sublime... Another idea that I heartily endorse is that of tying our curly locks up with little bows of lacy name tags...

Stormy Petrels Reel As Wildcats Surge on To 59-0 Victory

9 TOUCHDOWNS ARE SCORED BY 7 MEN

In a rehearsal for tougher games to come, Kentucky's touchdown conscious football team, using every scoring device in the books, plucked the Oglethorpe university stormy petrels by a 59-0 score Saturday afternoon on Stoll Field.

The massacre was started on Kentucky's third running play of the game when Dave Zoelzer swept around right end like fire around a celluloid collar, reversed his field and breezed 50 yards to score standing up. From that point on it was merely a question as to how high the Cats would boost the score.

While the powerful Wildcat runners were wading through the line and around the ends for 18 first downs and 62 yards from scrimmage, the Oglethorpe offense was as helpless as a sparrow in a tornado and could register but 62 yards by rushing and four first downs. The only Petrel scoring threat came in the final three minutes when, with Wildcat third and fourth string men in the game, the leather was pushed to the Kentucky 17 yard line before the timers gun ended the drive. Despite the scoring derby, which delighted a gathering of 10,000, including some 4,000 high school day guests, Kentucky was far off the form they carried them to in their sterling 21-13 win over Vanderbilt last week. Especially absent was the savage blocking that marked that game. Still the touchdowns came thicker than ants to a picnic. The point collecting was well distributed with seven men dragging across markers.

A couple of hinge-hipped, fezzed-up sophomore halfbacks, Junior Jones and Ernal Allen, led the scorers with two touchdowns each. In addition, Jones ran his point total for the day to 15 with three perfect after touchdown kicks. Other markers were escort past the final double stripe by Zoelzer, Hoot Combs, Joe Shepherd, Charley Ishmael and Noah Mullins. Mullins and Jim Hardin each added to the deluge with extra points.

How It Began Carries kicked to Sheffield on the Oglethorpe 30 to open the game and he was nailed in his tracks. Then after three pitiful punches at the stout Cat line, Axelburg punted out on the Kentucky 29. On the first play Zoelzer rounded end for 15 yards to the 43. Combs then set the stage for Zoelzer's touchdown sprint by pounding over the tackle for 7 up to the middle stripe. Swinging wide around end, Zoelzer, with perfect blocking, scampered home without man threatening him. Hardin's kick was wild, marking the first time this year he has missed.

Kentucky's second marker came exactly four minutes later, after Axelburg had again punted out of bounds on the Cat 29. Combs hit around left end for 13 yards and blocked a punt. From that point Zoelzer moved to the 23. Zoelzer then shot a perfect pass to Hardin, who caught the ball and fell on the one yard line. From that point Combs plowed over. Hardin again missed the point.

Later in the first period Kentucky again struck when Capt. Joe Shepherd, from deep punt formation, followed devastating interference like a road map around right end and stepped 49 yards to register. Hardin's try was a new team came into the game.

Carried On But the riot was not yet settled, but by 40 points and after three minutes of play in the second period, Jones' devastating interference like a road map around right end and stepped 49 yards to register. Hardin's try was a new team came into the game.

Calling 'Em Wild

By Joe Creason

With the same helpless look of a man watching a truck run over his new derby hat, Coach John Patrick sat on the bench Saturday afternoon at Stoll Field and witnessed the complete dismembering of his Oglethorpe Stormy Petrels by Kentucky's Wildcats, 59-0.

A one line description of the game would aptly be that Kentucky fouled Oglethorpe a hard team not to score on.

Compared to their performance last week against Vanderbilt, the Cats suffered the worst letdown since the Wright brother's first flying machine failed to function. Like a stone bath in a cheap hotel, the Blues were hot and cold by spells. Every Kentucky play was as open as a pair of combs, nothing more complete than an off-tackle smash being called, but still the touchdowns came with monotonous regularity.

Shoot if you must this old grey head, but the victory, decisive as it was, left me as an empty vessel as the steak is served. Something other than opposition—was lacking. Too frequently Cat runners ferried the leather into six point land, not because the road cleaning crew had swept open a path, but due solely to their blinding speed.

There were notable exceptions to this. Particularly at the third quarter when Dutch Ishmael added six six points to the riot. With the ball snatched on the Petrel 17 yard stripe, third down and 11 to go, Dutch backed up, took aim, and sent the leather into the end zone. The opposition like a thunderbolt from Jove's fist, exploded straight over center and scores without such as a restraining glance being cast.

Caused by Opposition For most of the first half the Cats worked like a barrel of corn mash but after that, except for spasmodic fits (for Oglethorpe), team work was shelved. Since there are two sides to other things than photograph records, perhaps it was a good thing that the Cats were slightly off their feed. For most of the second period, then, too, a spot opposition might have caused the let-up. The Wildcat line, the field center, Buster Brown, Skipper Mann and a couple of those little cotton pickers who are always available at the field.

Crying Fowl Dropped Now having finished weeping into my hot dog, the game did have its diversified features. For instance, the first seven touchdowns were hauled over by seven different backs. That shows how well the scoring pin is distributed. Then the touchdowns were scored in every conceivable manner. There were long runs (Zoelzer 50 yards, Shepherd 49 yards); shot backs (Combs 2 yards, Mullins 2 yards, Jones 6 yards and Ishmael 16 yards); pass interceptions (Allen 32 yards); punt returns (Allen 70 yards) and even a marker scored on a fumble when Jones scooped up a loose ball and galloped 9 yards.

Trying to halt the mercury-flooded Cat backs was as useless as yelling "whoa" at a tornado and expediting it to stop. Line Work Grand Down in line, the work of both the starting and substituting teams was sterling. The 62 yards picked up by Oglethorpe brought to 139 yards the distance covered by the opposition in three games. While the tackles, guards and centers were working together like ice cream and apple pie, in halting the grasping Petrel attempts, the ends were hanging around the necks of the Oglethorpe runners like lead collars.

JONES HITS TOP AMONG SCORERS

By furnishing 15 points in Saturday's 50-0 riot of Oglethorpe, Junior Jones, sophomore halfback, moved into first place among the Kentucky team grid scorers with a total of 22.

Jones' total shows three touchdowns and four extra points. Jim Hardin, although missing on his first two tries for extra points Saturday, finally connected with his final attempt to run to the 15 yard line.

Thus far Kentucky has outscored its three opponents by 101 points to 15. Fifteen touchdowns have been scored with 11 extra points being added.
