Student Senate denies Honors College funding

The Student Senate sent the fund-seeking Honors Program home empty-handed last night. The Senate later voted, however, to give them the program a wish of good luck in its search for mouey.

its search for mousy.

The Senate, by a vote of 21-8, chose not to appropriate $450 for the Honors Program to engage in a film program. The bill which provided for the move was tabled at the last Student Government (SG) meeting on Sept. 20 in order for the SG finance committee to study it further.

Dr. Robert Evans, Honors Program director, told the Student Senate that the money, while need-ed, was not critical to the existence of the film program.

He said the Honors Program would show the film series with or without the financial support of the Student Senate.

Some senators expressed opposition to the grant on the grounds that it would set a "precedent" for the granting of money to academic programs, a practice which SG has avoided in the past.

Nancy Daly, Social Professions senator, said the granting of funds would have opened up a "Pandora"s box" in SG, If the Senate were to begin granting funds to programs in which student senators participated in a student-teacher relationship, she said, then teachers would conceivably be able to "punish" senators who voted "wrong."

The program is looked upon by the university as an academic program, according to Evans. He said, however, that until recent years, the university considered the program a status of the program, he said, was service organization. The change in status of the program, he said, was made in part to allow for a more stable funding program.

After defeating the move to grant the program money, a resolution was passed which gives the Honors Program the support of SG in finding money for the series elsewhere.

The appointment took place after a debate which was held in a session closed to the public. Some observers expressed doubt as to the constitutionality of the closed session, because of a section of the SG constitution which states that all meetings shall be "open to the public." Not just another report?

Freshman year study has impact

By KIM YELTON
Kernel Staff Writer
A time-honored method that organizations use for problemsolving is to form committees to do studies and make reports on possible solutions. Usually those reports go no further than the first intellectual stage and the meet an early death from lack of interest or motivation.
A UK commission has writen a report that may be different; its authors are sure it will defy this predictable demise. It is the Joint Vice Presidential Commission
Report on the Freshman Year.
About two years ago Dr. Robert Zumwinkle, vice president of student affairs, expressed a concern over the lack of programs to acquaint freshmen with the campus and—once they were here—to help them survive their first year.
"I think one thing can happen in a large university," Zumwinkle said what time. "A group of students like freshmen can be easily forgotien. They have a problem with newness to the campus. We need to address ourselves to them."
Consequently, in 1974 he formed a commission to focus on the newness to the campus. We need to address ourselves to them."

Consequently, in 1974 he formed a commission to focus on the problems. He approached Dr. Lewis Cochran, vice president of academic affairs, "to work with people on the academic side." He said. Together they organized a committee of concerned faculty and administrative officials to look into the problem.

That committee then formed task groups to work on improving UK's programs in four areas: pre-admission contacts, advising, orientation conferences—and once students were on campus—helping them to adjust to studies and their new life or campus.

The first task group looked at the kinds of information UK sent out to prospective students to acquaint them with the university. "We wanted to improve on how the university presents itself to students." said Dr. John Stephenson, dean of undergraduate studies.

The fruits of their efforts is a new information booklet that Stephenson and others designed.

Another group examined past summer advising conferences in order to determine flaws. "Students are Fustrated" at the conferences, Stephenson commented. "There is a lot of advising and no talk about the future or long-range planning."

The committee suggested extending the advising conferences to two days "to discuss aspects of campus life students will confront, career opportunities, and what university experiences will be like. We want to take the emphasis off short-range goals of fixing schedules and focus on a student's future."

The third group looked at cademic programs —how effective and interesting they were, and the quality of the classes.

The fourth task group examined life unconnected to academia —the campus climate. They made several suggestions for improving the environment on campus, such as using central locations for outdoor concerts and plays.

All four groups suggested appointing a director who would continue to work with problems freshmen confronted during the year. Two directors have been appointed —Dr. David Stockham, assistant to the vice president of academic affairs, in Cochran's office. "These needs were to have a single point of contact in an office dealing with problems freshmen." Corhran's office. "These needs were to have a single point of contact in an office dealing with problems for these programs," Stevenson said. Both directors "will be heavily involved in that."

It hink it (the report) will find its way into some kind of action, Stevenson will also be working with them.

"I think it (the report) will find its way into some kind of action, Stephenson said.

Several programs to help freshmen have already been started on campus, ahead of the commission directives, according to Stephenson. The university now offers classes in the residence halls to promote a closer one-to-one learning situation between students and their instructors.

Most of the changes will not be immediately apparent. They will be small and incremental, Stephenson warned. "That is what I see coming out of this. There are only a handful of big ones, like the plans for the summer advising conference. But to my knowledge this has never been done before here or anywhere else."

"I encountered a great deal of positive support from faculty," Zumwinkle said. "We were encouraged by many departments who were concerned with this and are trying to improve their instruction."

Assertiveness

It might mean learning to be more gentle....'

By VIRGINIA WALTER Kernel Reporter

Is assertiveness the same thing as aggressiveness? Elmer Maggard doesn't think so. Maggard is a counselor at the UK Counseling and Testing Center.

Discussing an assertiveness training class which will be held at the center this fall, Maggard said "Assertiveness is more synonomous to being expressive and forthright. For some people, this might mean learning to be more gentle; for others, it involves learning to say no."

The assertiveness training class is one of three which will be offered to students, faculty and staff this fail. The other classes are vocational and interpersonal awareness.

The purpose of the groups, which are experimental, is "to bring more students in contact with the counseling and testing center," Maggard said.

"We are providing students with topical structured groups, to show them that there are a variety of services that the counseling and testing center can provide."

The goal of the assertiveness training group is "to put people more in charge of their own lives, and make them feel less helpless, and make them feel less helpless, and make them feel less helpless, and was the feel goals." Maggard said. "We want to help students take an active initiative in their lives." Maggard explained that emphasis will be divided among different areas. Partial emphasis will be on increasing awareness of goals and feelings, and part will be on learning to say "no".

"The class will be directed toward an entire approach to living." Maggard said. "Some of the activities of the class will include role playing, awareness exercisese and tivities of the class will include role playing, awareness exercises and contracts to try a specific behavior outside of class." Maggard said it was important to "give yourself permission to dection; which was to appropriate to be aggressive. For many of them, the problem would be learning to take initiative and be competitive, without being applogetic.

"For many men, it would probably involve expressing their emotions," he said. The vocational group is more related to academics. However, the Counseling and Testing Center is taking a new approach to an old subject.

Counseling and Testing Center is taking a new approach to an old subject.

"In the past, you had a test or a counselor telling you what to do," said Maggard. "However, this group is to help the student be self-directed. We want to increase the student's awareness of his vocational style, and provide information as a reference."

The group will share vocational experiences, among other things. This is in order to help the student discover his vocational style. The third type of group offered is the interpersonal awareness group. The objective of this group will he interpersonal style."

Maggard explained that this group will have a more general focus than assertiveness training. It involves becoming aware of types of boundaries between and within people.

"Some people have rigid boundaries in some areas, and liberal boundaries in others," he said. The group will be fairly structured and low key because, Maggard said, "There has been a tendency to identify awareness groups with encounter groups. There is a lot of pressure on the individual to self-disclose. This has been clearly demonstrated as destructive."

Some of the activities of the groups may be a first impressions game, "getting feedback from other members of the groups on their first impression of you," and some role playing.

Farewell, ninety-fourth Congress

The largely non-productive 94th Congress adjourned last week from a session highlighted by revelations about U.S. intelligence agencies and Congressional sex scandals.

and Congressional sex scandals.

Perhaps more than any previous session, the 94th Congress was dominated by the actions of its members. Wayne Hays, a Democrat from Ohio who boosted himself into an influential role after serving decades on the Hill, saw his power vanish at the hands of his mistress-secretary vanish at the hands of his mistress-secretary who couldn't type. Other influential legislators retired, leaving in their wake a battle for Congressional leadership. House majority leader Carl Albert (D-Okla.), and Senate leaders Mike Mansfield (D-Mon.) and Hugh Scott (R-Penn.) called it quits, enting their respective eras on the Hill.

The Congressional session also revealed stunning information on U.S. intelligence agencies that would have floored members of the first Congress some 200 years ago. Congressional committees discovered that the CIA plotted to murder foreign leaders, the FBI conducted illegal break-ins into American homes and offices and both agencies meddled with citizens' fices and both agencies meddled with citizens' mail.

The real story of the Congressional session, however, was perhaps the most intense conflict ever between the executive and legislative branches of government. President Ford vetoed $50 bills and the Congress rebounded to override a modern record 12 of them.

Ford wanted to counter a faltering economy by slowing inflation while the Congress cried the tragedy of unemployment. The end result was WIN buttons and a losing economy.

From beginning to end of the session, the Congress and the president fought on the issue of taxreform. Ford supported massive tax cuts but smehow tried to justify tax breaks for corporations. The Congress approved $19 billion in tax cuts but still figures to wind up $50.6 billion in the hole.

The final tax reform package produced by the Congress was five inches thick. But the Wall Street Journal, a premiere financial publication.

When the Congress did make sense, Ford didn't. He became known as Mr. Veto and the nation was deprived important legislation. Ford, the minority leaders and big business lobbyists killed a clean air bill which would have limited new industrial sites and held automobile manufacturers to pollution standards set in 1970. Ford foolishly vetoed comprehensive national strip mine and energy bills. Conflict between the President and Congress also precluded important legislation to upgrade social programs and enact national health insurance and welfare programs. And, the President and Congress Acquiesced to overgorwn oil companies by not ordering divestiture of their holdings. The 9th Congress was often confusing—it made an unprecedented attempt to open its meetings to the public, yet pursued newsman Daniel Schort for publishing information in the public interest.

American congresses have traditionally been unpredictable—no two are genuinely similar. In overview of the 9th Congress, we can take pleasure in this quirk of American history.

Use it once system depletes natural resources

In an historical sense, the United States is rightly seen as a vast storehouse of natural resources. In fairly recent times, settlers from the small crowded European nations were flocking to the huge new continent, which was mostly wilderness:

Our rapid industrial development our rapid industrial development was due in large part to our natural resources, not only to be used by industry, but producible in such excess that raw materials were shipped to Europe in exchange for capital to further our development still faster. Balance of payment problems for the U.S. are a recent phenomenon.

Going into World War II with 140 million people, the U.S. was still nearly self-sufficient in the resources needed by our people and industries. Pushed by the German U boats' threat to our shipping, we strove for complete self-sufficiency:
Our farmers planted sugar-beets, our chemists developed synthetic rubber, and rationing and careful conservation of tin and other scarce minerals allowed us to survive on our own for several years.
Following the war, we were so our own for several years.

Following the war, we were so delighted to get rid of scarcity and rationing (materials were diverted from the war effort into domestic products) that we went on a consumer spree the likes of which the world has never known. We introduced the concept of use it once and throw it away —a system designed to sustain continuous economic growth by turning our resources into junk at an everaccelerating rate. accelerating rate

And our new disposable society brought on Toffler's Future Shock and a generation of lost souls who are today's young people searching for identity and a sense of accomplishment amid the chaos and ever-spreading wasteland that is the affluent society.

We consume much more than we produce, becoming more dependent upon the rest of the world for raw materials. And in the rest of the world world, demand for minerals is escalating even more rapidly than in the U.S. Since the earth and its resources are not growing any these days, we are rapidly approaching a crucial resource squeeze.

what does this mean to you and me? Well, the U.S. Geological Survey reports that "Many resources are being depleted to the point where it will be difficult for same, or many, of our industries to continue. The extent of our dependence on mineral resources places in jeopardy not merely affluence, but world civilization" (United States Mineral Resources, USGS 1973, 722 pp).

The National Academy of Sciene released a report stating "Man faces the prospect of a series of shocks of varying severity as shortages occur in one material after another...", and the Federation of American Scientists says that the shortages represent a lowering of the standard of living in America.

Actually our loss in real income has been rather mild, with the average American losing slightly in purchasing power in four of the past six years. In 1973, when "For almost every commodity world production is falling behind ravenous demand, and hectic bidding for supplies is rocketing prices" (Time), things looked bleak We were temporarily saved by the world wide recession which slackened demand and knocked the props from under the bargaining position of the OPEC nations and other suppliers of raw materials. But the problem will return.

There are several lessons to be learned from the realities of population, resources and industrial demand in today's world:

Any real effort to recover from the recession will lead. to disaster, for the industrial nations as costs of materials soar beyond our ability to buy enough to maintain rising production.

Rose St. control

Don't ask me why UK doesn't think of it. I mean, after all, the parking lots have guards and UK police ride around the campus all day. Are these jobs more necessary than, say, two of them directing traffic —cars and pedestrian —at two busy intersections on Rose Street? ("Busy" must be the understatement of the year.)

The value system is a wry. People getting hart seems, at least to me, more important than keeping cars parked properly.

No, I didn't say this is a permanent solution. No, I didn't even say it would work. But, replacing traffic signals with humans seems to have its advantages, like holding traffic while masses of students can walk across the street and discouragin incessant jay-walking. This idea would at least be a control which could be quickly put into effect while the officials bicker about who is responsible.

about who is responsible. "Pedestrian crossing," "Traffic police ahead" signs, along with broadly painted crosswalks and stop lines wouldn't hurt.

The number of people crossing Rose Street must exceed 15,000 per day. Come on, UK, don't wait until someone else gets hurt to do anything. The odds are not waiting,

American Party, free enterprise candidates get this vote in '76

With the approach of an election, both Republicans and Democrats veer opportunistically toward conservatism, if only by straddling many issues. The rest of the time, they sidle toward a welfare state socialism that a majority of voters disapprove of and which compromises their collective credibility. Tom Anderson and the American Party ticket which he heads offers a genuine alternative to this politicsgenuine alternative to this politics as-usual con game.

Consider some of the specific issues. Carter supports the absurd and dangerous Humphrey-Hawkins bill, Ford gives implicit assent to existing government interventions, and "McCarthy proposes redistributing the work week, with wage and price controls, which would quickly guarantee full employment." (To call McCarthy 'an economist' after such a proposal is to do violence to the mother tongue.)

Anderson favors curtailing or abolishing all federal regulatory agencies not specifically addressed to the prevention of violence or fraud. The free market can set freight rates, milk prices, ool prices, wage rates and interest rates more fairly and more productively than all the government bureaucrats since the beginning of time. The only result the other schemes could guarantee would be a lower stand of living.

Ford, Carter and McCarthy all favor the so-called Equal Rights Amendment. Anderson opposes the amendment on the grounds that it would take from women some of the privileges accorded them over the centuries, such as exemption from combat duty in the armed forces, as well as more recent privileges such combat duty in the armed forces, as well as more recent privileges such as exemption from Soviet-style heavy labor.

McCarthy supports amnesty, Carter tries to weasel-word by calling it a pardon, and Ford opposes both. Anderson goes beyond them all by getting to the root of the problem, calling for an amendment which would prevent undeclared wars and would equate a no-win policy with treason, as defined in the Constitution.

More important, however, than a recital of all the particulars of differences between Anderson and his opponents, is a recognition of the philosophical chasm which separates Anderson's American Party from the rest. Ford, Carter, McCarthy and their political legions are undeclared socialists. They favor mandatory government-controlled health insurance, mandatory government social security, government control of the postal service. government housing, federal welfare, control of the railroads, the airlines, the farmers, the business men, the schools, and a host of other aspects of society.

the businessmen, the schools, and a host of other aspects of society. The American Party and all its candidates know that free enterprise can provide better health insurance and medical care, better retirement programs, better postal service, better housing, more effective welfare, better transportation services, more efficient farming, better education, etc. The American Party and its candidates seek to dismantle the bungling, inefficient, costly, self-serving, self-dismantle the bungling, inefficient, costly, self-serving, self-perpetuating, counter-productive government bureaucracy whose heavy hand is stifling the free enterprise system, eroding the personal freedoms of American citizens, and levying intolerable taxes upon productive middle class citizens.

taxes upon productive middle class citizens.

Ford and Carter talk of balancing he budget by increasing efficiency of government; only bumpkins in orange shoes fall for that. Ford and Carter make no mention of cuts—the only known method of actually balancing today's bloated budgets. The American Party would start with the immediate cessation of foreign aid. It would phase out subsidies to farmers, businessmen and art commissions; open the postal service to competitive free enterprise; divest the government of businesses such as TVA and Amtrak.

Tom Anderson and the American

Tom Anderson and the American Party think those who receive the benefits of any program should be those who pay the cost; taxing unwilling citizens to provide services they do not want enough to pay for is tyramy, even if practiced by a majority. Tom Anderson and the American Party are the only ones who think the national debt should be retired, not repudiated by the device of galloping inflation. The American Party alone is concerned about this nation's being strong enough to forestall either military conquest or internal subversion by aggressive Communist totalitarianism. The price is military strength second to none and a foreign policy which actively promotes freedom throughout the world, on both sides of the Iron and Bamboo Curtains.

The American Party scorns both Ford's snub of Solzhenitsyn and Mondale's cols-shouldering of the flussian dissidents during his visit to Mondale's cols-shouldering of the flussian dissidents during his visit to Mondale's cols-shouldering of the flussian dissidents during his visit to Mondale's cols-shouldering of the flussian dissidents during his visit to flaw upon tyrants — whether Hitter, Brezhnev, or Mao.

The differences between Tom

Anderson and the American Party on the one hand and the two major parties (with Gene McCarthy thrown in for good measure) on the other, can be summed up by onlining to their platforms. The Democrating to their platform — The Democrating Land Jimmy Carter could be expected to work for its implementation. It contains every quack remedy known to economics and sociology.

The Republican platform — Ronald Reagan's platform — though much superior, is a meaningless document. Veep Rockfeeller himself says "I don't think the platform.—Felects the President's basic philosophy or belief...and it doesn't reflect mine." A vote for Carter, McCarthy or Ford will get you the Democrats' program, just as Nixon and Ford gave us Humphrey's and McGovern's. The only alternative is Tom Anderson and the American Party.

Ford signs new comprehensive tax bill

Ford signed the measure at a White House ceremony, commenting that the legislation is "sound, positive and long overdue."

Most of the tax changes will take effect this year or next, but some will not be phased in until later. Five years from now the bill will produce a net federal revenue increase of about $994 million over the present law.

Here are the major provisions of the new law:

INDIVIDUAL CREDIT —
Each taxpayer will be allowed to subtract $$35 for himself and for each dependent from the total tax he owes. Or, he can subtract 2 per cent of his first $$0.000 of taxable income, up to a maximum credit of the first $$0.000 of taxable income, up to a maximum annual contribution to $1,750 to benefit his PHOENIX, Ariz. [AP] — Eighteen investigative reporters from 15 news organizations converged Monday on Arizona to probe alleged land fraud and corruption they believe led to the car-bomb slaying of reporter Don Bolles. "We're not commenting at all on any phase of what we're doing," said two-time Pultizer Prize winner Bob Greene of Newsday, the Long Island, N.Y., newspaper. "It would be kind of ridiculous to advertise what you're trying to do when you're just starting to do it," said Greene, who is spearheading the Investigative Reporters and Editors Association project. Bolles, 48, was lured to a north-central Phoenix hotel June 2 by a caller identifying himself as John Adamson and promising information on a crooked land deal purportedly involving prominent Arizonans, police say. After waiting a few minutes in the hotel lobby, Bolles received a telephone call, went to his car in the parking lot, and began backing up. A homemade bomb exploded beneath the vehicle.

Stevie Wonder stays ahead of the music pack

By STEVE REYNOLDS Kernel Reporter

"Songs in the Key of Life"

With the release of Stevie Wonder's eagerly awaited "Songs in the Key of Life," a new standard of excellence has been set for rock music to aim for. "Songs" is (or will be considered a monumental landmark in Seventies music.

of contemporary music, Wonder is one of the few artists who always moves forward. His writing is fresh, original and moving.

and composed all the selections. He also played harmonica and various keyboard instruments.

Backing him is an incredible army of talent, with over 100 artists listed in the credits. Some of the more familiar names are: Minnie Riperton, Herbie Hancock, George Benson, "Sneaky Pete" Kleinow, "Snutfy" Walden, Mike Sembellow, Nathan Watts, Raymond Pounds, Ben Bridges and Greg Phillinganes.

The medium tempo 'Love's In Need of Love Today' opens side one. Its theme is a recurring one throughout the album, a plea for more love and less hate in the world.

Also om side one is "Village Ghetto Land." Done in a classical style, it points to many of the problems of our society. The jazz-influenced 'Contusion' is an instrumental jam. "Sir Duke" is a jazz-swing tribute to Duke Ellington.

"Knock Me Off My Feet,"
"Pastime Paradise" and
"Ordinary Pain." Side
three's "Black Man" says the world is made for all men.
Side Four is solid from beginning to end, "As" being a highlight. On the 48 disc,
"Saturn" and "Ebony Eyes" are best.
Wonder's music is a joyous explosion of love for humantity. Although he writes about race, beliefs and politics, the love theme transcends them
all. "Songs in the Key of Life" is his finest effort yet and is should be enjoyed by anyone who wants to hear one of music's real talents at his best.

One More For-From the Road

There's no new material on Lynyrd Skynyrd's new re-lease, One More For-From the Road." It is a double album recorded live in At-least dwing Lylu 1978.

Lynyrd Skynyrd plays a hard-driving rock that makes it difficult to stay in your seat. Featuring three lead guitars, Skynyrd's bread and butter is Southern rock with a touch of English heavy metal.

Their songs are romp and stompers that speak mostly about whiskey drinkin', fight-in' and women.

in' and women.

Featuring the best of their earlier material, the live guitar mixing is less distinct than the studio versions. However the raw energy generated by this live set all but makes up for it.

A great party album, "One More" is most effective with the volume turned way up.

Mariah, a Chicago-based rock band's debut album, features tight playing and fine vocal harmonies. They have taken numerous tried and tested riffs and incorporated them into medium to fast-paced rockers. Playing mostly original material, Mariah utilizes two lead guitars, Len Fogerty and Frank Sullivan, Mark Ayers on keyboards, Wayne De Marco on drums, Ed Burek on bass, and V.J. Comforte on lead vocals. Their style is hard to pin down, but the most obvious comparison is their vocal harmonies to that of the Dooble Brothers.

first studio album in over a year for Trower. The album moves from soft ballads like "I Can't Live Without You" to hard rocking Hendrix sound-alikes "Long Misty Days" and "Caledonia."

The album features Trower on guitars, James Dewar on bass and vocals and Bill Lordan on drums. Trower's fantastic work on his Fender Stratocaster is the highlight of the album. Trower does sound like Hendrix, but some times he's even better.

The title cut is a rocker, with Trower laying down some heavy chords. Possibly the best cut on the album, Dewar's lyrics are very ef-fective.

Now after four albums (three gold, two making platinum) Trower has released "Long Misty Days" which ranks with his best.

"That (the season) had a lot to do with it," Horne said, when interest increased, people who had never been out here before and enjoyed our games may have wondered why at a school this size, we had our scorekeeper at a table on the ground."

Next season, however, the scorers and reporters will be able to work in a completely equipped press box behind the first base bleachers. The concrete block structure will be about 30 feet long and two stories high. The spacious booth will have a long counter where the reporters will work, with telephones, ticket window, storage space and possibly a mimeograph machine.

Assistant Athletic Director-Finance Larry Ivy said the project will cost about $7,000. He said the funds for con-struction will come from the athletic department's equip-ment and improvements ac-

Minority recruiting stressed in health services colleges...

Television advertisements are part of the minority recruiting drive in the health profession colleges at UK. The colleges also use other means, such as articles in the Louisville Defender, a black newspaper, to provide role models for disadvantaged students.

John Wiggs, chairman of the medical center special student committee, said, "We put articles by black professionals in The Defender to provide models for black students. This lets them know that opportunities are available to them."

The purpose of the special student committee is to recruit and retain students with limited backgrounds. "We also help them to find financial aid, if they should need it," Wiggs said. The minority recruitment drive is not aimed only at black students. In the television advertisements, which run on three of Lexington's channels, a broader appeal is employed. "The advertisement for the College of Medicine is aimed at women. The one for the College of Nursing is aimed primarily at men," stated Wiggs.

under-represented in the health fields."
When questioned if a quota requirement had caused the advertising. Wiggs said, "Quota is not a factor at the medical center. We don't have enough applications from black students for quota to be a problem."
Citing an example, Wiggs said, "The percentage of Kentucky's population that is black is 75 to 8 per cent. This year we only have between seven and nine black students out of approximately 240 in dental school."
That represents about 3 per cent of total enrollment.

Wiggs explained that the percentage of females in the dental school has been growing. The number of female students is in the wentles. "However," Wiggs said, "there should be about half females in order for them to be accurately represented."

Another concern of the committee is to recruit rural students, who would be likely to return to the less-populated areas to practice. "An extremely high percentage of students from rural areas go back to those areas to practice," Wiggs commented.

Asked if specially-recruited students need to show the same qualifications as others, Wiggs commented. "The qualifications must be the same for all students. If they were not, we would have reverse discrimination." You are only working against yourself by accepting underqualified students. For instance, if you accept 10 blacks and 5 flurk out the first year, other blacks will be discouraged from applying," Wiggs stated.

The college has been able to accept only about one-third of its fall applicants in the past two years.

In the Colleges of Education and Pharmacy, work experience is used as one criterion for admission. In both colleges, applicants are expected to be at a stage where they are prepared to begin work closely related to their actual career objective without having to go through much more classroom preparation.

Generally, the colleges which have stiffened their admissions standards are those which hould suffer in quality if they admitted too many students to their programs or which do not have the facilities to handle a large number of applicants.

For example, the physical therapy department in the College of Allied Health accepted only 32 of 100 applicants last year. The College of Pharmacy had positions for only 86 of the 225 students who applied last year.

Selective enrollment standards seem to have hit their peak at UK, at least for now. George Dexter of the registrar's office said he doesn't "foresee an increase in selective enrollment is he near future because total enrollment increase this fall, but that the rate of increase; sevening out. If the number of students enrolled stays the same from year to year, the same from year to year, the same from year to year, the chere should be no need for admissions standards to increase, said Dexter.
