Executive branch reform defended by Carter aides

By DEBBIE McDANIEL
Kernel Staff Writer

Three White House officials, including Stuart Eizenstat, President Carter's Domestic Affairs and Policy Advisor, participated Friday in a UK Colloquium, "Executive Reorganization: Fact or Fantasy." Dr. Louis Fisher, a member of the Congressional Research Commission of the Library of Congress, challenged Carter's purpose for reorganization.

"The White House does many things not authorized by law," Fisher said. Continuing, Fisher questioned the justice of using campaign pledges as the rationale for eliminating 28 percent of the executive branch's employees.

"If it's politics behind the proposal, why not go through the regular legislative route — you can't treat this as the President's private domain," he said.

"The real issue is not did we intend to trim the White House staff by 28 percent," responded Terry Straub, a member of Carter's Reorganization Project. Straub said there were 16 agencies in the executive branch when Carter entered the White House and each agency had its own set of issues.

"There aren't enough hours in the day for the President to deal with each group," Straub said and added that increased efficiency was the rationale for consolidating these agencies.

"Under the old arrangement the President was not served well," he said. Eizenstat added, "I know personally that I cut the staff of my predecessor by almost a third. We have never sold reorganization and the President has never sold reorganization to reduce the federal work force. Most of these people have the full protection of the Civil Service."

Eizenstat answered Fisher's claim that reorganization may not be entirely legal.

"We sought reorganization authority from Congress when we first came into office," said Eizenstat. Under this authority, the President submits reorganization plans to Congress for approval. Each plan has a 30-day period for amendments, and — unless either the House or Senate vetoes it — lapses into effect after the 60-day lifetime.

The administration works closely with the appropriate congressional committees in reorganization plans, Straub said, because, "Congress doesn't like surprises and we want their expertise. This has been pleasing to them and gives them the assurance that the administration listens to what they say."

"The real point here is that there are certain areas in the constitution that are cloudy on the division of responsibility between the authority of Congress and the President," said Eizenstat.

Fisher conceded that it is unknown to what extent presidential power can be restricted by law.

Eizenstat said the next important reorganization step is the Civil Service Commission reform Carter introduced last Thursday. Eizenstat described the current system as having "regulations encrusted on it — all of these things have been built up over generations."

Reorganization of the Commission involves dividing it into an office of personnel management and a merit protection board to rule on employee grievances. To bring greater incentives into the system, the plan ends automatic pay increases. Pay would be based on performance with annual performance reviews.

"There are three ways to deal with problems," said Eizenstat. "You can ignore them or propose quick-fix solutions, which don't get to the heart of the problem. We've chosen a third way, a comprehensive approach tackling these problems and trying to come up with solutions to get to the heart of the problem," said Eizenstat.

"I think by the end of the (Carter's) first term these programs will fall into place," he concluded.

ticketsticketsticketstickets

Student tickets for the NCAA basketball tournament's preliminary round, to be held March 11 in Knoxville, will be distributed by lottery at 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 8, in Memorial Coliseum.

A total of 44 tickets have been allocated for sale to UK students. Any full-time student with validated I.D. and activities cards may participate in the lottery.

The doors to the coliseum will open at 6 p.m. Students participating must arrive before 7 p.m., when the doors will be closed, and be present for the drawing.

Any student who wins the lottery will be permitted to purchase two tickets upon presentation of two validated student I.D. cards. Tickets cost $5 each and must be purchased with cash.

At the time of the purchase, a voucher will be issued for the tickets. Only full-time UK students with validated I.D. cards may use this voucher.

On the day of the game, two full-time students with validated I.D. cards must present the voucher at the Stokely Center in Knoxville to receive the tickets and be admitted to the games.

If the Wildcats win Saturday, a lottery for UK's 237 student tickets for the NCAA Mid-East Regional Tournament to be played March 16 and 18 in Dayton, Ohio) will be held at 7 p.m. on Sunday, March 12, in Memorial Coliseum.

The procedures for that lottery and subsequent distribution of tickets will be basically the same as for the preliminary round.

Title IX Law calls for equality in sports

By JEANNE WEHINES
Copy Editor

Editor's note: This is the first of a three-part series about the effects of Title IX on UK and other institutions.

Equal rights and college sports aren't usually thought to have much in common. But that connection will soon be familiar due to a piece of legislation called Title IX.

Passed by Congress as a part of the Educational Amendments Act of 1972, Title IX prohibits sex discrimination at federally-assisted schools, such as UK.

In 1974, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare ruled that all schools receiving federal money had one year to begin to meet requirements of Title IX.

Compliance in universities' athletics departments was delayed for three years. The deadline for compliance with sports programs is July 21, 1978.

While sex bias may be hard to identify in academic areas, it is difficult to conceal inequality in sports programs. The accompanying chart compares the situations of men's and women's sports at UK.

"Comparable" programs

The HEW said men's and women's sports need not receive the same amount of money, but should have "comparable equality" in their budgets. Similarly, programs need not have men's and women's squads for every sport, but teams must be added if there is reasonable student demand.

Title IX was denounced by officials in many athletic departments. The athletic director at Oregon State left his job, calling Title IX "horrible legislation." The National Collegiate Athletic Association said Title IX "may well signal the end of intercollegiate (men's) athletic programs as we have known them."

Athletic directors expressed concern because their programs are often financed by revenue from one or two major sports. Opponents of Title IX say "comparable equality" will weaken major college athletics, reduce the quality of competition and decrease gate receipts.

If revenue from the "big" sports is lost, there is fear that many non-revenue sports may be dropped.

Asks good faith

To achieve compliance, a HEW paged lead of the game, 27-20, to 2:32 remaining.

The Office of Civil Rights, a branch of HEW, is in charge of enforcing Title IX. The OCR has said it will be looking at the quality of equipment, locker room facilities, medical and training facilities, scheduling of games and practice times, staff salaries, travel expenses and publicity — "among other factors."

In addition, scholarship guidelines have been set, although conditions are vague. Women must have a "reasonable opportunity" to receive as much aid as men based on their level of participation, according to the OCR.

UK Athletic Director Cliff Hagan said although the point of ambiguity can be argued, a problem with HEW is that it does not understand the problems indigenous to athletics. "They know about civil rights issues, discrimination and those sorts of issues, but they don't have the feel for athletics, how it has grown and nurtured and taken 75 years to get where it is."

Cautious attitude

John Darsie, UK legal counsel, said the federal government was unsure how to deal with Title IX. Some schools have received a "wait and see" response from HEW on questions concerning points they thought were unclear.

It may be necessary to wait until subsequent court cases are decided after the compliance deadline to see what exactly will be required to have "comparable equality."

But Sue Feamster, UK women's athletic director, said it's clear that HEW is attempting to give universities flexibility in designing their women's programs.

"There is nothing vague about those seven areas," Feamster said. "Tomorrow, Part Two of the series will discuss UK's problems in complying with Title IX."

Lady Kats win state crown

By BRIAN RICKERD
Kernel Staff Writer

Kentucky's Lady Kats broke open a tight game in the second half as they captured their first state championship with a comeback 61-49 victory over Western Kentucky's Lady Toppers yesterday afternoon at Memorial Coliseum.

"We wanted it so bad," UK guard Geri Grigsby said. "We knew we had the best team last year."

Lady Kat coach Debbie Yow said her team was "really up" for the game after losing in last year's state semifinals to the same Topper team. "We were crushed when they beat us last year," Yow said. "We had no problem getting up today."

Both teams opened tight, making for a first half of turnovers, bad shooting, and good defense.

The Toppers jumped on top early 4-0 as Kentucky failed to score the first three minutes of the game. The Kats were perhaps feeling the pressure of playing in only their second state title contest in the eight-year history of the tournament.

UK came back to take a 16-15 lead midway through the first half but went cold again, having trouble with Western's pressure defense.

WKU outscored Kentucky 12-4 over a five-minute span to take its biggest lead of the game, 27-20, to 2:32 remaining.

The Kats' offense then came alive behind the outside shooting of guard Janet Timperman and the inside work of center Pam Browning. The pair combined for seven of UK's last nine points as the Lady Kats tied it 29-29 at intermission.

Grigsby felt that the late surge was a big factor.

"I was a little worried early," she said. "But we felt very confident going into the locker room after we had tied it up."

In the second stanza, the Kats gradually gained control of the contest, dominating the boards and drawing numerous Western fouls as the Toppers tried to defend UK's inside strength.

A five-footer by Western's center Pam Kordonbrock gave the Toppers their final lead of the game at 31-29 early in the second half.

Behind Browning and center Jeanne Mjoseth, UK followed with a 17-5 tear to take a 46-36 advantage. Western could not recover against a Kentucky defense which harassed the Toppers throughout the game and held WKU to just 20 second-half points.

A defensive play by Mjoseth with a minute to play in the game provided an indication of the way the afternoon went for the Toppers.

SHOUTING "TEAR THE SON OF A BITCH UP," two coal miners in Marlin beat freelance cameraman Fred Johnson with wooden desk tops Saturday in a parking lot where UMW locals 1373 and 9845 voted on a new contract. A crowd of onlookers refused to assist Johnson.

Johnson, 30, was working on a coal documentary. He received multiple bruises and his portable video equipment, valued at $200, was destroyed.

nation

OPponents of a PROPOSED contract to end the 90-day coal strike held a steady 2-1 lead as votes were counted Sunday, and the Carter administration prepared to step in swiftly to try to force miners back to work if the walkout continued.

Sources said the president was likely to invoke the strike-halting provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act today, setting in motion a sequence of events that could lead to a back-to-work court order within a few days.

However, miners have ignored such court injunctions in the past and it is believed they will disregard any injunction Carter tries to impose.

FLOODING FROM TORRENTIAL rains of a Pacific storm continued in Arizona yesterday as California dug out from mudslides.

In the Los Angeles area, the bodies of five persons killed in the flooding and mudslides were recovered and the Hollywood Freeway was closed after a hospital's parking lot oozed out the roadway.

In northeastern Arizona, National Guard troops and Army helicopters airlifted supplies to families stranded on the Navajo Reservation.

ELP at Rupp
At last, a show that 'Works'

By WALTER TUNIS
Arts & Entertainment Editor

It took a while, but Keith Emerson, Greg Lake and Carl Palmer have finally found a new format that they're comfortable with. Friday evening in Rupp Arena, the three gave an audience of 12,000 over two hours of some of their finest compositions, but the seriousness that the group so long had pegged to their music was missing.

ELP appeared instead considerably more relaxed, taking a lighter approach to their songs. The usually sullen Keith Emerson flashed enthusiastic smiles several times during the show, and the three worked off each other better than had in some time.

Last spring, the trio emerged after a three year hiatus with a new double album and one of the most ambitious tours ever by a rock group. They decided to bring an entire orchestra with them on tour.

It was a neat idea, but it didn't work. The sound problems they encountered were extreme and quite often entire segments of the orchestra were lost in the sound mix.

Financially, the orchestra cost the trio so much that they had to be dumped early into the tour.

ELP included more of their older material Friday, but they didn't spend the evening trying to capture any earlier spirit. The extended "Take A Pebble" included two newer piano solos from the Works albums, including Scott Joplin's "Maple Leaf Rag."

It was encouraging also to Emerson perform the pieces that appeared on record before with strings. His "Piano Concerto No. 1" suffered hardly a bit without the orchestral arrangements.

The three added a few theatrical gimmicks, which really weren't necessary, like an exploding computer synthesizers spitting flames and a set of fireworks that succeeded in scaring the audience.

But the theatrics were few and well spaced out, and always took a back seat to the music.

Musically, Emerson and Palmer carried most of the load, with Lake serving as a vehicle for the two. Lake's best feature was "Cest La Vie," where he was ably assisted by an accordion break by Emerson.

Palmer was allowed to perform his traditional percussion solo during an updated version of "Tank." His speed was truly striking, but his slamming soon melted into predictable showmanship that hid most of his talent.

Instead Palmer, who in terms of most rock drummers has always been extraordinary, was at his best during the group numbers like "Karn Evil 9" and his jamming with Emerson's electric piano on "Nutrocker." His sense of rhythm and timing were impeccable.

Without the orchestra, the set closing number, "Pirates," was all the stronger, with Emerson reproducing the majority of the arrangements on a variety of electric keyboards and synthesizers.

The only composition that lacked a little from the orchestra's absence was the trio's performance of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." Their arrangement has always been one of the group's weaker selections, primarily from Greg Lake's lyrical additions.

The three ended with a jam arrangement of Aaron Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," the three were at loosest here, with Keyboardist Keith Emerson (above), and guitarist-bassist-singer Greg Lake (below) performed, along with percussionist Carl Palmer, in concert at Rupp Arena. The Friday night concert drew about 12,000 fans.

The show ended, very appropriately, with a jazz-blues reworking of "Show Me the Way to Go Home."

Dunks by seniors cap it all Cats outrun Vegas 92-70

feet and had added five charity tosses for 21 points.

But Kentucky coach Joe Hall told his team at halftime that Smith could not continue his pace, and that if he did, the Cats would have had a much tougher struggle.

After Smith settled down, the Kentucky senior dunk show began. The Rumin' Rebels were able to stay fairly close in the second half until Robey started the show with a powerful two-handed slam from the left side for a 64-57 lead.

Two minutes later, Phillips took an assist from guard Jay Shidler and connected on a slam dunk to push the lead to 68-60.

Then, with 5:55 remaining in the game, Lee charged down the left side of the court with Rebel forward Reggie Theus coming down from the other side. When Lee cut loose with what he called his second best dunk of the year, Theus had wisely slowed down.

But the one that brought the house down came over a minute later. After Phillips pulled off a rebound, he hit Givens with a pass into the front court. The path was clear for the "Goose," except that Theus was streaking down the middle and Lee was on the move at the right.

"I was gonna give it up to Lee," Givens said. "But he pointed to the basket and I took it in. He has always been wanting me to dunk."

"I knew Jack could do it," Lee said. "I could see it in his eyes."

As the dust was settling with the Rebels in shock and the cheers building, Vegas called a futile timeout with the score 79-62.

After the game, Tarkanian was generous in his praise of the team which outperformed his club 38-13.

"They're so strong and powerful inside," he said. "We just wore out at the end."

"Robey was just sensational. God, just sensational."

Robey rose to the occasion three years ago during the last game played by Kevin Grevey, Jimmy Han Connor and the rest of their class with 28 points and a couple of memorable steals.

On Saturday, he saved the best for last, scoring 26 points on 10 of 13 field goal attempts and six of seven shooting from the free throw line. He led the dunk squad with three devastating blows.

"It was one of the best games I've ever seen him play," Hall said about Robey. "Going to the basket, he had some brilliant moves on the baseline. He exploded to the basket."

"When we (the four seniors) went on the floor to be introduced, we looked at each other and said it's been a great four years," Robey said. "When I saw 23,000 looking down on me, I was glad and disappointed."

Hall echoed those thoughts when asked if he felt it was a rewarding experience when the seniors were introduced. "I didn't feel rewarded. I felt kinda sad and empty, losing those guys. They've been tremendous and good to coach."

UK center Mike Phillips jams one of seven dunks by the seniors in their last home game, a 92-70 nationally-televised win over Nevada-Las Vegas.

By DAVID HIBBITTS

Saturday afternoon's 92-70 UK explosion at the expense of Nevada-Las Vegas was the end of an era for four seniors at Rupp Arena. And each one of them made the most of it for a national television audience and a record crowd of 23,000.

Between them, the seniors inessed seven convincing dunks, including Givens' and Robey's career bests. Even freshman forward Freddie Cowan topped the show with a sweeping one-handed slam for the final score of the game.

But the win was not as easy as the capacity crowd anticipated before Kentucky eventually pulled away in its 40-39 halftime lead.

Vegas guard Tony Smith had connected on eight of his nine first-half attempts from 20-25

Lady Kats cop state title with 61-49 revenge win

Kordonbrock attempted a 15-footer which Mjosech convincingly crammed back at the flustered Topper.
For Mjosech, it was the final touch on a 10-point, nine-rebound performance. The Grigsby dribbled away the last seconds of the contest, and the Lady Kat bench erupted in jubilation after capturing the state title which had weighed heavily on their minds throughout the season.
After the game, Yow credited all the Lady Kats for the victory but said the key to the win was UK's defense of Western's premier senior guard, Brenda Chapman.
The Topper star had pumped in 61 points in UK's previous wins over Murray and Louisville, but was held to seven by the Lady Kats.

"We've been working on a box-and-one defense, and we executed it very well tonight," Yow said. "Our players were coming off the court saying that Chapman was frustrated; she couldn't get her shots.
Despite the off game, Yow praised Chapman.
"She is one of the best guards I have ever seen," Yow said. "She's proven herself time and time again."
"I didn't think stopping Chapman would stop the team," Topper coach Julie Yeater replied. "We were flat and our shooting was off. I have no excuses for it. We were up for the game."

UK forward Debra Oden, who joined Chapman and Lady Kat forward Maria Donhoff on the all-tournament team, grabbed 16 rebounds to climax a tremendous tournament. She had led the Kats with 26 points and a school record of 20 rebounds in the 84-76 semifinal win over Morehead State Saturday night.
Kentucky led 45-35 at halftime in that game and were never seriously threatened in the second half.
In the other semifinal, Western defeated Louisville 90-81 to advance to the championship game, which it lost for the second straight year.

Lady Kat forward Debra Oden looks for an open teammate after pulling down one of her 16 rebounds (36 for two games) in the championship game of the women's state tournament, which Kentucky won with a 61-49 win over Western Kentucky yesterday.

VU provides UK's last SEC test

By BOB STAUBLE
Assistant Sports Editor

After roaring past the University of Nevada-Las Vegas on national television on Saturday, the Wildcats hit the tubes again tonight for the final Southeastern Conference "Game of the Week" against Vanderbilt at 9:00.

Even Vanderbilt head coach Wayne Dobbs is

UK faces FSU first in NCAA

Pairings for the first round of the NCAA tournament were announced yesterday. Kentucky is matched against Florida State, runner-up in the Metro Seven Conference tournament, in a game to be played at Knoxville this Saturday.
Other key first-round contests find top teams, UCLA and Kansas, clashing in the West Regional while Southwest Conference champion faces Notre Dame in the Midwest Regional.

downplaying the game. "We're suffering from the end-of-the-season blues," Dobbs said, referring to his team's 10-16 overall record and 6-11 SEC slate. "I can't begin to tell you how to beat Kentucky. We'll just have to play good basketball and compete with them on the boards."
"When you play a 27-game schedule, it's difficult to prepare for each game differently,"

The Commodores are led in scoring by freshman forward Mike Rhodes. The 6-4 new-comer averages 18.8

points per game. Forward Charles Davis is hitting for 17 points per contest.
Memorial Gymnasium has captured the highlights of the season for Vanderbilt. The 15,626-seat arena is the second largest facility in the SEC and has been host to a number of upsets this season.
"We can't slip up," UK forward Dick Hobey said. "We want to keep our momentum. In the (two) games we've won down there in my three years, we've only averaged beating them by about one point."
