Sproing!

Spring isn't officially here yet but it sure is fun pretending isn't it. The forecast through Monday night is partly cloudy and warmer with the high Monday and Tuesday near 60. The chances of precipitation in 10 percent Monday and 20 percent Tuesday.

It's a break!

There's no keeping a good man down, especially when the weather turns warm and the spring breezes blow. Does John Kouka climb the Rose Street Parking Structure "because it's there?" Or could there be a frisbee on the roof? (Kernel photo by Phil Groshong.)

Kirwan students unhappy with new rules for open houses

Residents of Kirwan Tower, mad about the new open house rules and how the open houses are handled, held a mass meeting Thursday night to discuss the cancellation of an open house two weeks ago and the vandalism that has followed.

"People resent being treated like juveniles," said Mike Martin, Kirwan Tower president. He referred to the rule that each floor must have a "floorwalker" available in case of emergencies. "It's hard to get 22 people to walk around like baby-sitters," he said. "It's like pulling teeth."

Resentment and confusion

Although the Thursday night meeting with the two assistant head residents calmed some, it did not resolve the basic issues. There is confusion as to who's ultimately in charge of open houses and uncertainty as to whether or not an open house will be cancelled at the last minute. Students don't know who to blame, and thus are turning against the dorm government.

Martin said he suspected resentment was also behind the original vandalism that caused the closing of the Friday open house in Kirwan Tower two weeks ago. Dorm residents have charged their government with using the cancellation as punishment for the vandalism.

More vandalism

Two vending machines and an elevator light were destroyed sometime early Sunday morning.

Resentment of the open house policies has also spilled out in letters posted in the Kirwan Lobby.

"Unknown to all ranks of administrative personnel," reads one letter, "within this tower are 600 men who are on the verge of marrying and making babies, who have voted for governor, who will vote for president, who pay their own ways through this university, who file income tax returns, and who fight the wars that those in authority are too old to physically (or mentally) to handle themselves."

Dan Schwartz, Complex president, blamed only certain members of the administration. "The dean of students (Jack Hall) is making the staff and student government look like mud," he said early last Thursday. The open house policy uncertainties are frustrating the students, causing a severe problem, he said.

"Dean Pond, associate dean of students, has been emphatic to student problems," Schwartz said. "The ones above her are not aware of problems in residence halls."

The present campus-wide policy allows four-hour open hours on the three weekend nights. In addition, requests for experimental weekday open houses will be considered. For each open house a "floor-walker" is required for each corridor. His responsibility is ambiguous, other than being on the floor to be available in an emergency.

Last year the policy was essentially the same, except enforced more flexibly, explained Schwartz. Kirwan's government had two to five people working during open hours, he said. This year assistant head residents spot-check floorwalkers during open hours.

House votes to reorganize education council

By DIANE NASER
Kernel Staff Writer

Senate Bill 54, a bill that would reorganize the state Council on Public Higher Education, passed the House last week by a 91 to 4 vote.

Attempts to add the student body presidents as nonvoting members and to remove the college and university presidents from the Council on Public Higher Education were both defeated.

Blocked earlier by foes

According to Ernesto Scorsone, student lobbyist, the amendment concerning the student body presidents had to be attempted on the House floor because Rep. Brooks Hinkle, chairman of the House Education Committee, had blocked the amendment in committee.

Rep. William Kenton, D-Lexington, introduced the student amendment which was defeated by a 51 to 30 roll call vote.

There was little house discussion on this amendment.

However, one representative who spoke against the amendment said that two years ago the students wanted to be on their Board of Trustees and now they are back at this legislative session and want a vote on that Board. So if we pass this amendment, he said, the students will be back in two years asking for a vote on the Council on Public Higher Education.

Amendment was debated

The proposed amendment to remove college and university presidents, introduced by Rep. Joe Clarke, D-Danville, was defeated by a 62 to 23 vote but touched off extensive debate.

Clarke said he would like to see the college and university presidents on an advisory committee to the council. This would still make their expertise available to the council, but would not permit them to attend regular meetings where they could unduly influence the decision making, Clarke stated.

Allowing the presidents to be on the council would create a conflict of interest, Clarke said, because the presidents' primary mission is to expand and enhance their own institution, whereas the council's role is to oversee planning for the entire higher education system in the state.

Could people resist?

Rep. Carl Nett, D-Louisville, a member of a committee that studied the present higher education system, urged the House to defeat Clarke's amendment. "We've got to trust the Governor to appoint people (to the council) who are strong enough to resist the influence of the university presidents," Nett said.

The reorganized council will include the Superintendent of Public Instruction, ten lay members appointed by the Governor, and the president of each four-year state institution of higher education in the state.

SB 54 will give the reorganized council the authority to determine the needs of the universities and colleges in the state, to review the universities' budget requests, and to review and approve all capital construction projects.

UK is top dog

The bill also makes UK the principal state institution for statewide research and statewide service programs and the only institution authorized to use state funds for statewide research and service functions.

The University of Louisville shall continue to be a principal university for research and service programs without any geographical limitations. But as stated in SB 54, no state funds will be used except by UK.

The bill will now go back to the Senate for approval of a technical amendment before it can be signed by the Governor.

Little UN: international students discuss problems

By PRINCESS M. LAWES
Kernel Staff Writer
If you walked into Carnahan House by accident last Saturday you probably thought you were at a meeting of the United Nations. Actually it was a U.S.—Foreign Student Relations Workshop sponsored by the UK Human Relations Center.

The group of nearly 80 students, representing countries and cultures from Latin America, the Caribbean, Europe, Africa, Asia, and the United States, heard an address by James Dean, Special Assistant to the U.S. Ambassador to the Organization of American States.

End to egotism
He said Americans used to think that "any country given a choice would not choose anything but the American way." But Americans are learning that "we are not a doctor and other countries are not sick patients," he said.

The highlights of the day's events were two one-hour task group meetings where the workshop participants divided up into small groups and discussed specific problems facing the foreign student on American campuses and some possible solutions.

American isn't English
Means of effective communications—the language barrier—were a key concern. It was pointed out that most students who studied formal British English have trouble understanding and communicating in American English and every-day slang.

Finances also pose great problems for the foreign student. Most students come to the U.S. with little financial backing, hoping to work their way through college. In recent years this has become harder.

Cross-cultural discussion
There was also a panel presentation on "Cross-Cultural Relations on Campus." Panelists were Jerry Stevens, assistant to the vice-president for student affairs for minority student affairs; Chuck Alton, UK student; Fernando Bodden, Georgetown College student from Nicaragua; Aristides Candris, Transylvania student from Greece, and Vish R. Keshaviah, UK student from India.

Stevens said the legacy of cross-cultural exchange could help the U.S. find better solutions to its own problems.

Misunderstandings
Bodden also spoke about cultural misunderstandings. He said most Americans view the Latin-American "siesta" as laziness. He drew loud laughs when he said, "We don't live to work, we work to live; we must take a break."

Alton discussed the education system and the way it affects students in general.

He said there was a "lack of desire to learn" among all students who are faced with a faculty that doesn't like to teach or that is too busy to teach, poor advisors, indifferent administrators and an appalling state legislature that is more interested in how good a football team a university has than how good an academic program it has.

Keshaviah said he found Americans friendly but "superficially so." He said the approach is one of curiosity "whereas most foreign students just want to be accepted as one of the crowd."

They noted that the American, over the years, has acquired many myths and misconceptions about other countries via grade school, movies and television. By developing meaningful relationships the foreign student can help to eliminate stereotypes and teach American the truth about his country.

Un-American film tells about 'American way'

Denounced by the House of Un-American Activities Committee and released only through underground movement film outlets, the film "Salt of the Earth" will be shown on campus this week.

The film is a story of the struggle for racial and social equality. A documentation of the strike by Local 890 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers against the Delaware Zinc Company in New Mexico in the early 1950's, the film examines equality on the job for the chicano miners and in the home for their wives.

When the miners are forced to stop picketing, the women take over the picket line, facing police harassment but keeping the scabs out. The film centers around the changing relationship between the local union president and his wife during the strike.

With the exception of the union president's wife and the anglo sheriffs, all the actors and actresses in the film were actual participants in the strike.

The film, co-sponsored by the Department of Sociology and the Council on Women's Concerns, will be shown today at 7 p.m. in Room 110, Classroom Building and Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Room 214, Classroom Building. No admission will be charged. It will also be shown to several sociology and social problems classes and to the A & S 300 class, "Women in History, Society and Literature," today and tomorrow.

Political satirist-activist Gregory to speak

Dick Gregory, black political satirist and ex-presidential candidate, will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 2 in the Student Center Grand Ballroom.

Gregory has for the last decade been an eloquent voice for the black minority in this country, jabbing at the blind ignorance of white America. He is appearing as part of Kappa Alpha Psi week, courtesy of the Student Center Board.

Don't get assassinated

Besides being a comedian and politician, Gregory is an author. In his book, "Dick Gregory's Political Primer," Gregory says "I tried to convince President Johnson that if he was really smart he would have picked me as his vice-presidential running mate in 1964. That way he would never have to worry about some one being crazy enough to assassinate him. It begins to look like President Nixon adopted my idea."

Gregory also includes Communists in his comments. "If a group of marchers are demonstrating, carrying signs saying 'Free the Indian' invariably folks will say 'That's Communist inspired'....I've never understood why the Communists never get blamed for anything bad."

Gregory even manages to get to some political personalities. For example, "Reagan" pronounced backwards is 'nigger'. That's why I've always hoped Governor Reagan would pull himself together and get elected President. Then we could say we have a backward nigger in the White House."

Outside of his book Gregory has tried to explain his humor. "Laughter is the best way to release tensions and fear. If I fall down three flights of stairs, you just stand there and hold your breath. But if I get up and laugh about it, you laugh too. Then we can get together and fix any bones that got broken."

A new training program at the Med Center is helping increase the manpower in the field of radiology.

The Department of Diagnostic Radiology in the College of Medicine has established a project to train selected radiologic (x-ray) technologists, who will perform many of the duties normally done by a physician radiologist.

Dr. Harold D. Rosenbaum, department chairman, likens the effort to a physician assistant program applied to the field of radiology, although UK currently does not operate a formal physician's assistant program.

The physician's assistant or clinical associate program is designed to supply the practicing physician with a specially-trained non-physician associate. By removing from the doctor some of the functions for which the assistant is trained, the physician is enabled to concentrate on additional aspects of health care delivery.

In the UK project, six students are being trained annually and a new group enters each year. They are being trained at the Med Center and at other Lexington hospitals under the supervision of the Department of Diagnostic Radiology.

The initial program, funded by the U.S. Health Services Mental Health Administration, is scheduled to run five years. Only a specially selected group of trainees is being admitted, with the current students averaging 10 years' prior experience.

Surveyor training

Exams leading to qualification as a land-surveyor-in-training will be offered April 21.

H. L. Reynolds, director of the Kentucky State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors, will administer the tests. Reynolds also announced that tests will be given April 22 for engineers-in-training.

The registration board last July adopted a Land-Surveyor-in-Training program similar to the Engineer-in-training plan adopted in 1949. The LSIT plan went into effect Jan. 18.

Reynolds said provisions which were enacted into the 1938 Engineering Registration Law in June of 1966 provided for the licensing of land surveyors. Basic requirements were eight years experience or eight years combined schooling and experience, plus a written exam. Board rules require the exam to be 16 hours in duration and cover two days.

Application forms must be obtained from the board and filed with a $10 fee. Qualified applicants filing before March 10 may take the LSIT exam on April 21.

Campus recreation: Out of touch with dorm residents

Two of the characteristics that UK dorm residents are learning about administrative bureaucratic agencies is that they tend to be paternalistic and extravagant.

The Campus Recreation Office, which gets four out of every ten dollars dorm residents pay for activities fees, seems to be sadly out of touch with those it is intended to help.

Its record so far this year reads like those of other such imminently fiscally responsible organizations like Penn Central, Lockheed and the Pentagon.

Out of a $12,000 budget, Campus Recreation budgeted $4,000 for two graduate students to run intramural sports. The trouble is a great many dorm residents don't care that much about intramurals and they resent a grad student telling them how to organize and run things.

Dorm presidents report numerous incidents where equipment sent by Campus Recreation never arrived or where fairly substantial amounts of money have been allegedly spent on a dorm only to have the dorm get two new ping-pong balls or the like.

Complex Government President Dan Schwartz has a good idea that might help stop the current waste. He suggests that Campus Recreation publish a booklet for every dorm resident that spells out what sort and amount of recreation students can get for a specified amount of money. Certainly each dorm and possibly even each floor has a separate identity and residents that want different things for recreation. Possibly by publishing this sort of booklet floors or dorms could decide for themselves what they want and then get it.

But while this might alleviate some of the problems the root of the problems lies in two different offices doing many of the same things. Why should there be two budgets? It's obvious to us that the overlapping functions of the dorm governments and the Campus Recreation Office is wasteful and not in the best interest of those who inhabit the dorms.

Time again for students to review the Code

Since 1967 the Code of Student Conduct has undergone six major revisions. That's more than one a year. In fact code revisions have become an annual affair, at least for the Dean of Students and the Student Body President.

This year, as in previous years, major revisions to the Code have been submitted. The Board of Trustees, which has final say on the Code, will begin hearing about them in Tuesday's Executive session. More will be heard at open hearings Thursday.

The annual battle of the Code is an interesting one. Administrators and trustees would have students believe that the fact that the Code enumerates students' rights and responsibilities does not make it students' business. They operate from the premise that students don't really care about the Code, and they are partially right.

On the other hand, those students who know the Code inside out feel that it affects the vital interests of every student at UK and therefore everyone should be as upset about its very real inadequacies as they are. But most students aren't that concerned with the Code. As Scott Wendelsdorf ruefully remarked about two weeks ago, "Nobody cares about the Code until it's enforced and then it's too late to do anything about it."

We feel that the rules that govern student behavior at UK is of vital interest to all UK students whether or not they are directly affected by the Code or not.

Further we feel that all students should pay more than passing interest to this year's proposed revisions. Some warrant their strong support while others warrant equally strong opposition.

In the next couple of weeks we will be editorializing for or against some of the major revisions submitted this year. Hopefully we will stir some interest among the student body in the Code and also get a notion of student feeling on some of the revisions. Maybe this interest and opinion will be passed on to the Trustees and somehow affect their ultimate decision.

We think the words of French philosopher Montesquieu are particularly applicable to why students should be concerned with Code of Student conduct: "The tyranny of a prince in an oligarchy is not so dangerous to the public welfare as the apathy of a citizen in a democracy."

Hmmm...Punxsawatney Hall wants a pool table... probably to go with that cue stick we sent last month

I feel the inherent fairness of your newspaper will dictate the printing of my letter in response to your February 1st edition regarding a statement attributed to me from a statement I made at a recent meeting of the University of Kentucky Young Democrats. Permit me, if you please, to set the records straight.

As I recall my statement was, "The new Rules of the National Committee regarding delegate selection are unworkable in that they specify 75 percent of the delegates to be elected from the Congressional Districts, 25 percent from the State-at-large, and, further dictate that there shall be certain percentages by sex, age, ethnic groups and races. There is no way to accomplish this in a democratic manner. Consequently, there must be slating."

To the best of my recollection this was my statement and I stand by it.

I might also remind you that it was

I might also remind you that it was under my Party Chairmanship, at the direction of then Lt. Governor Wendell Ford, that the 1968 Democratic State Convention liberalized its Rules regarding the participating of young people, abolished the unit rule and had in its delegation to the National Conveiton more young people and blacks than any other delegation in the history of Kentucky politics.

While I have no desire nor intention to debate this subject, I thought you would be interested in the facts.

Subcommittee vote dashes abortion reform hopes

Abortion laws in Kentucky seem destined to remain the same. After hosting four days of open hearings on a proposal that would have liberalized the existing law, the House subcommittee voted unanimously Friday to recommend that no changes be made in the state's law.

If the full judiciary committee follows the subcommittee's recommendation as most observers believe it will abortion law liberalization will be dead for this legislative session.

Would have eased

The abortion proposal was a part of the 373-page proposed penal code and sought to make abortion legal if there was "reasonable belief" that: the "continuance of the pregnancy constituted a substantial risk that the physical or mental health of the mother would have been seriously impaired," there was a "substantial risk that the fetus would be born with a serious physical or mental defect," or if the pregnancy resulted from rape, incest, or "other felonious intercourse."

The committee voted to substitute the current law for the proposed reform statute.

Rep. William Kenton, D-Lexington, chairman of the subcommittee, said that legislators have received heavy mail from opponents of change and cited "overwhelming public support" as one reason the subcommittee recommended retention of the existing law.

'Living-learning' panel set

UK students and administrators will take part in a panel on "Living-Learning Possibilities at UK" today at 3:00 at the Koinonia House, 412 Rose Street.

The "living-learning concept" includes such potential ideas as dorm assignments by special interests, classes in dorms, dorm life as a lab, and other innovations in life as an education. Nothing is definite about the program; the panelists are just looking for student input on how to improve dorm life.

The panelists will be Dr. William Bryan, director of student services for the Med Center; Glen Harvey, co-chairman for academic affairs, SG; Rosemary Pond, associate dean of students for residence halls; Darrell Rickard, a Holmes Hall CA; Dr. John Stephenson, dean of undergraduate studies; Scott Wendelsdorf, SG president; and Dr. Robert Zumwinkle, vice president for student affairs.

Tennessee loss keeps UK in SEC lead

LSU derails ice-cold Cats

By MICHAEL FIELDS
Kernel Sports Writer

A lot of people figured it would be a one-sided game.

UK had trounced the LSU Tigers by 18 points earlier in the season. In that game, the Cats had exhibited a sharp shooting eye and a tenacious defense.

Saturday was much the same story, but with the roles reversed. Instead of a comedy, it was a tragedy.

Instead of an 89-71 win, it was an 88-71 loss.

With rugged Bill Newton scoring at will in the first half, and sub Jeff Taylor ripping apart UK's zone the second half, LSU humbled the Cats as no team had since the unmentionable Western Kentucky affair of last season.

What was the difference between an 18 point victory and a 17 point loss? Besides a lot of disappointment, Coach Rupp credited LSU's defense.

"This was the best defensive club, shifting the way they did, that kept us constantly off balance. It was the darndest defense I've ever seen."

Cats were cold

But it was also evident that the Cats simply couldn't find the range. Time and again they missed open outside shots and agonizingly easy crisp shots.

Only two UK players reached double figures as Jim Andrews and Tom Parker scored 28 and 15 points, respectively. As a team, the Cats hit only 37 percent from the field.

LSU's two big guns, Newton and Taylor, pitched in 31 and 24 points. The Tigers hit a torrid 60 percent from the field. UK did manage to out rebound the bigger Tigers, 43-41.

UK jumped on top 10-5, but that lead quickly evaporated along with the Cats' defense. The rest of the game was spent trying to decide the final margin.

21-point lead

Midway through the second half, LSU's lead ballooned to 64-43. UK then scratched its way back to within seven at 74-67, mainly because the Tigers' big advantage led them into some fancy passing and reckless play.

But LSU then settled down and scored eight straight points to cinch the victory and end a 15-game losing streak to UK.

The game was very rough, as shown by the number of fouls. UK lost Bob McCowan and Larry Stamper to fouls, while LSU miraculously finished the game with four players having four fouls.

Following the game, several UK players questioned some of the referee's decisions late in the game when UK was scrapping back.

But no amount of hindsight can cover up the fact that it was simply a down UK team up against an inspired LSU team.

Down to a slim nine players and with two competitors breathing down its neck, unnerved UK meets dangerous Alabama in a battle of paramount importance tonight at Tuscaloosa.

The Tide was nice to UK Saturday night by knocking Tennessee out of an SEC lead it enjoyed only five hours.

Kentucky had led since beating the Vols, Jan. 22, in Lexington until Saturday afternoon's massacre by LSU in the Cats' worst effort of the year.

The mysterious absence of Elmore Stephens and Daryl Bishop left UK with only four substitutes—and just two with any experience—at Baton Rouge. With two players having fouled out, UK finished the game with seven eligible men.

Meanwhile, Alabama, who is unbeaten at home, fought back from seven points behind in the late stages at Tennessee. An Alabama fan showed his appreciation by tossing an orange on the floor, and a technical foul ensued, thus sending the game into overtime.

But the Tide had little trouble in the extra period, outscoring Tennessee, 7-2, to preserve its homecourt record.

Alabama played UK even if their earlier meeting at Lexington before succumbing, 77-74. A bitterly disappointed C. M. Newton, a former Rupp player who now serves as head coach for the Tide, promised revenge in Tuscaloosa.

So UK remains a half-game up on Tennessee and two ahead of Alabama. The Cats have only to play Auburn and Tennessee after tonight, while the Vols and the Crimson Tide will have three and four games left, respectively.

As an added attraction, UK's unbeaten Kittens will attempt to rid a 45-year-old record from the books as they seek their twentieth straight win of the season against the Alabama frosh.

Firemen like UK students despite false alarms

By FLOYD GIVENS
Kernel Staff Writer

"Naturally, you're a little irritated when you're pulled out of bed at night, and it's chilly and cold, or wet and snowy."

"But, there's not any big controversy between the students and firemen. I'm very proud of that. We haven't had the trouble other campuses have had," fireman Bruce Linville said of false alarms on the University of Kentucky campus.

Linville is stationed at Firestation No. 6, at Upper and Scott Streets, across from the University campus. It, and Fire Station No. 5, on Maxwell Street and Woodland Avenue, give fire protection to the University.

"We haven't had any problems with the campus," Lexington Fire Chief Earl McDaniels said.

Stupid prank

Fireman Linville, again, "I don't think there is vehemence or animosity toward the students. It's an assinine, juvenile thing for someone at the university level to do. You would expect it from elementary school children, but not from adults."

Linville said, "There is a lot of cooperation between the campus and us. It (false alarms) is a difficult thing to solve with students leaving, and new ones coming in, all the time."

The cooperation between the campus and the fire department has come about through Mr. Steve Logan. Logan works at the University of Kentucky Safety Department. He was brought to the U.K. campus from the Lexington Fire Department.

"I firmly believe the greatest majority of our students are law abiding, and when they understand it is for their safety, they help us," Logan said.

Alarms decreasing

There were 30 "malicious false" alarms, in the U.K. residence halls in 1971.

"We've had a lot fewer alarms, this year," Logan said. He said the training programs have helped in cutting down the number of alarms.

"Most false alarms are just pranks," Logan said. "I am a firm believer that when students are involved, when they realize what it's all about, they help. Students have a big part now," he said.

In 1966, Logan was told fire drills were not possible in men's dorms. "Panty raids" and other disturbances occurred when the men came out for the drill, he said. Logan has organized the drills for men, too. But, he quickly adds, men and women have drills at different times to thwart the alterations.

Fire drills

Two fire drills per semester take place. The state law requires a drill per month for schools. But, Logan said, this seemed to be mainly for elementary schools.

The training and involvement of the students include "fire chiefs" on each floor of a hall. They make sure all people are notified and off the floor.

Students whose job is to keep an area clear for firemen, and dorm personnel, also help firemen.

"Several years ago, there were gripes by individual firemen because there was no one to meet them and students were still in the building," Logan said. "Now there are 'Head Residents' who meet the firemen at the door to tell them if it is false or real."

False alarms dangerous

How do the firemen feel about the false alarm?

"It's not the idea of it being a false alarm, but the idea of making the run and the chances of injury in an emergency," Fireman Dave Chipley said. "Most of the men," he added, "feel they are just trying to do their jobs, protecting people from fire."

Fireman Linville said, "There's always an element of danger in driving an emergency vehicle. Someone may be permanently disabled or killed," he said.

"Regular citizens get hurt, policemen, anybody," Chipley added. "When you get on the street with an emergency vehicle, it's a hazard yours, and somebody else's. Drivers get nervous."

New rules unpopular in Kirwan

After pressure from Complex governments last year, Vice President Zumwinkle promised changes. Students returning after summer vacation found stricter policies, however, with only one open-house a week. Hall made clear that no changes would be made, Martin said.

During last Christmas vacation, Schwartz and Scott Wendelsdorf, Student Government president, met with administrators including President Otis Singleterry and Hall to liberalize the rules. Schwartz proposed that dorms be open every weekday from four to ten and each weekend and holiday from one to twelve, each dorm being responsible for its own security. Hall revised that proposal to the present plan.
