Dam foes plan another march in Frankfort

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Kernel Staff Writer

A small group of students and concerned citizens who oppose the Red River Dam project met at the Student Center Sunday night to plan another rally in Frankfort.

Gov. Julian Carroll is the immediate target of the rally which will be held Saturday, April 26.

"GOV. CARROLL is still sitting on the fence and he hasn't made a decision on the dam yet," said Linda Welch, rally coordinator. "Meanwhile, appropriations hearings are scheduled the first of May. He has to make a decision soon or funding will be approved."

Tim Murphy, coordinator of the Red River Defense Fund, said if appropriations are approved by Congress then the Red River Dam issue will be taken out of the political arena and placed in the courts. "This will greatly increase the probability the dam will be built because the courts usually favor federal construction projects," Murphy said.

The meeting was an informal strategy session aimed at avoiding last year's mistakes and deciding who should speak at the rally. The first major obstacle was whether to invite politicians to address the rally.

A SIMILAR RALLY in protest of the Red River Dam was held in Frankfort approximately one year ago.

After each person in the room expressed their views on the rally the group decided it would be best to exclude all speeches by politicians. By making such a decision the group felt it could avoid alienating the governor or make any new enemies.

During last year's rally, which was attended by approximately 1,500 people, the speeches lasted over two hours. The group felt people became bored and left early. The coordinators of the rally are planning a shorter speech period this year.

THE QUESTION OF who should address the rally was discussed by the group but no firm decisions were made.

"Last year we had too many speakers," said Welch, "so, this year we plan to have no more than four and to let them talk longer."

Before the rally there will be a six-block march from Ewing High School to the Capitol building. Two Bluegrass bands, the Fall City Ramblers and the Smith Brothers, are scheduled to play for the rally.

AFTER THE MEETING several members of the group explained their feelings about the dam.

"The most influential proponents of the dam have a financial stake in its construction," Murphy said. "That fact was well documented by the Louisville Courier-Journal."

According to government figures 89 residences that have suffered from flooding will be protected if the dam is constructed, however, 59 residences will be flooded by the dam, Murphy said.

Crime:

Expert says

American hypocrisy keeps it in business

By BRUCE WINGES
Assistant Managing Editor

The American public's hypocrisy is the main factor that has kept organized crime in business for more than 50 years, said an organized crime expert.

Ralph Salerno, chief rackets investigator for Queens County, New York, said "the public is ambivalent toward which laws it wants enforced." "They want that long-haired, pot smoker on campus arrested, but they don't want you to touch their local bookie," he said.

SALERNO, SPEAKING TO approximately 35 persons at a lecture entitled "Syndicated Crime in New York in the Seventies," said as long as there is public approval and demand, organized crime can operate.

"A monkey on the police officer's back is not enough to enforce gambling laws without the public wanting them enforced," he said. "And this is a source of corruption."

Salerno said organized crime makes at least $20 billion annually from such illegal gambling activities as slot machines, card games, bets on sporting team events and dog and horse races. All this money is completely untaxed, he said.

"I WOULD FAVOR state owned and operated entities," Salerno said. "But you can't run a gambling casino with civil servants."

New York's off-track betting on horse races has taken some business away from organized crime, however, only about 15 percent of all illegal bets are placed on horse races, Salerno said. The majority of organized crime's gambling money comes from bets on team sporting events, he said.

Salerno said the American public also helps organized crime through its election of public officials. "We elect politicians who give us what we want by telling us what we say," he said.

ORGANIZED CRIME CAN exist in such cities as New York and Chicago because the public never asks the mayor about his position on organized crime, Salerno said. "People don't get excited about organized crime until it walks into their living room," he said. "And by then it's too late."

Salerno defined organized crime as an on-going operation, attempting to corrupt and use fear as a weapon. "With organized crime the name of the game is to make money at the lowest possible risk," he said.

Organized crime wants power in government to insure that the government does not bother its business, he said. However, organized crime does not want to take over the government, Salerno said.

"THEY WANT TO make money," he said. "The government is a losing moneymaker. So they don't want to take over the government."

The Mafia, traditionally of Italian orientation, is organized crime's hard-core group, he said.

"In the 1970's, whether you are a former member of a Mafia 'family' is no longer important," Salerno said. "They'll do business on the basis of capabilities."

ONE RECENT CHANGE in organized crime is the move of the traditional white syndicate into the suburbs with the white population, Salerno said.

"But this is not an abandonment of the central city," he said. "Minorities now play a more important role in organized crime in their own areas, particularly in drug traffic."

No major bars to locating prison here

Fayette County is one of three sites under consideration for location of a proposed state maximum security prison and so far there has been little public support or opposition to the project.

A citizens group, Volunteers in Corrections (VIC), and several Central Kentucky horsemen have said they do not favor building the prison in Fayette County. Mayor Foster Pettit supports the project mainly because of the new jobs it would bring to the community. Other members of the community and the Urban County Council have given little reaction to the proposed building of the prison.

If State Corrections Commissioner Charles J. Holmes is sincere in his statement that the Bureau of Corrections welcomes comment from all people and elements of the community about the matter, then citizens and the local government should soon air their views.

A good suggestion was made by VIC when it concluded that a public hearing should be considered before a decision is made on the location. At least this way the Bureau of Corrections could have some gauge of public reaction to the project from the Lexington area.

The 1974 General Assembly appropriated $15 million for construction of the facility which is expected to be completed in 1977. The proposed site is behind the Federal Correctional Institution on Leestown Road.

Other possible locations reportedly under study by consultants include state-owned property near the Kentucky State Reformatory in Oldham County and another tract near the Kentucky Correctional Institution for Women at Pee-wee Valley.

The advantages for locating the maximum security prison in Fayette County seem to outweigh the disadvantages mentioned by the horsemen and VIC organization.

Ben P. Walden, president of the Thoroughbred Breeders of Kentucky, has said the prison would damage the image of Lexington, hurt the horse industry, present a possible safety hazard to the community and cause land values to deteriorate.

Others fear that the presence of the prison would cause an increase of crime in the area and also that many freed offenders would remain in Lexington.

It seems unlikely that locating the prison here would significantly hurt the community. The reasons mentioned for not building the prison should be considered, but the drawbacks would be the same no matter where the prison is located.

The facility would be good for Lexington's economy because it would bring 125-150 new jobs into the county for local residents. Locating the prison near Lexington would also help the facility attract more qualified staff workers than if it was built at one of the other sites.

In addition, job opportunities for the outgoing prisoner are likely to be better near a city such as Lexington than in Oldham County or Pee-wee Valley. Having the University close at hand should also provide a useful resource for rehabilitation work.

All in all, a maximum security prison would probably benefit more than harm Lexington. But before any decision is made a public hearing should be held to give the community a chance to hear all sides of the issue.

Babylift and cannibalism: Our Asian schizophrenia

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
LOS ANGELES — Last weekend the President rushed out of Palm Springs, down here in Southern California, up north to San Francisco to perform the traditional American political act of baby kissing. Only these were dark-eyed Oriental orphans from Vietnam, those babes who are so exotically super-cute to our occidental eyes.

Just as the President was being photographed, carrying infants in swaddling clothes off a rescue plane, The Washington Post was publishing a story in which it was revealed that our side in the Cambodian war has been practicing cannibalism on the enemy's dead. While it may be that in the final analysis it makes no difference whether the bodies of slain soldiers are buried, burned or eaten, cannibalism, for people of our culture at least, is the symbolic act of barbarism.

Yet here we are, congratulating ourselves on the humanitarianism of Operation Babylift while our ally is literally fricasseeing the members of the other side and consuming as though they were missionaries. It figures. From the start to what we must hope is the end of this affair, our official people have never been able to get a hint of what they look and sound like to second-party eyes and ears.

TAKE THE C-5A that went down, killing all those children. It's the war in microcosm. First a brainstorm in the White House; then a self-serving announcement to the world about this newest example of our selflessness, and next, of course, we had to send the biggest, the mightiest, the most-overpowering plane in creation so that we could claim we'd set a new record for mercy missions.

When it crashed and, once again, we discovered we'd killed the people we'd set out to save, we screamed sabotage. Sabotage or not, it would not be the first time in our long Judeo-Christian history that the Lord has countenanced the slaughter of holy innocents to instruct the rulers of men in virtue.

The incoming, conquering Reds are not going to bloodbathe infants and children with no political convictions. They will feed them and raise them to be good Communists. It's those many, small, non-powerful South Vietnamese adults who took our part in the war who are in serious danger. But no Operation Babylift for them. What do you want to bet that the only South Vietnamese grownups who'll get flown out are the murderers from the political police and the numbered-Swiss-bank-account boys?

DR. K didn't think up Babylift. No, that was either an invention of the childless couples lobby or the suburban guilt-ridden, or the remnants of the old fight-to-win crowd. When they run out of babies, they'll switch to airlifting puppydogs.

So, it's no con game that the Doctor of Diplomacy is playing, and he's right about his critics not having a monopoly on wisdom and morality. Nonetheless, the war for freedom that he and his former boss began in 1970 ends five years later in cannibalism. Shall we blame that on insufficient congressional appropriations, and then mark Kissinger down as one more confused, rampantly misunderstood and misunderstanding American?

If the Angel of Death had been sent to teach the armed, angry and alarmed Americans that there is a difference between morality and the public proclamation of good intentions, it was lost on our Secretary of State. "For God's sake," he cried out from the irrigated Palm Springs desert to a press conference while his superior went golfing, "we ought to stop talking as if one side had the monopoly of wisdom, morality and insight, and that serious people (meaning himself) trying to deal with this problem are trying to run a confidence game."

ONLY THE optimists think Dr. Kissinger is trying to run a confidence game. The pessimists believe he no longer knows what game he's trying to run or even what ballpark he's playing his game in.

If you think Dr. Kissinger is playing a con game, then you can believe he thought up Operation Babylift for some sinister but sane reason, such as he could use it to get votes in Congress for more military aid. A con man might have thought up baby lifts to distract people from considering that it's not the orphans who really need the saving.

In which case Dr. Kissinger will have to live, like the rest of us, with the words of the South Vietnamese army lieutenant on the day the C-5A went down and the orphans were crisped: "It is nice to see you Americans taking home souvenirs of our country as you leave — China elephants and orphans. Too bad some of them broke today, but we have plenty more."

Urges defeat of crime bill

The editorial of April 3, 1975, urging the defeat of Senate Bill 1, deceptively styled "Criminal Justice 'Reform' Act of 1975" should awaken those who now sleep easy under the mistaken belief that the Watergate mentality departed with its exponents. Alas, the evil does indeed live after them.

Well warned, we now have the opportunity to alert our senators and representatives to our firm opposition to a bill which in the interest of efficient crime detection would strip us of the last vestiges of privacy; which in the interest of unfettered executive action would emasculate the First Amendment, and which in the interest of societal revenge would reduce us to collective murderers by resurrecting capital punishment.

The Central Kentucky Civil Liberties Union would urge Kernel readers to write to Washington rejecting this unsought legacy from our National Nightmare.

Some dorm(ant) issues

By MARK STOVER

The current economic situation has caused college students nationwide to return to dormitory living. Dorms are no longer a specialized type of housing for a distinct brand of student, but a place where students with varied interests and personalities live. As a result, the time has come for the University of Kentucky to tailor residence hall policies to the desires of the students who live in the buildings and not to please the administration and alumni.

The money that runs the dorms comes from the students who live in them. They deserve a greater say in setting policies. A prime example is visitation.

THE ESTABLISHMENT of lifestyle dorms would allow students to live in a residence hall with the visitation policy he or she prefers. Thus the rules would conform to the lifestyle of the student and not the student adjusting to the rules. Students could be offered the choice of dorms that allow 24 hour visitation, visitation on the weekends and in the evenings, visitation just on the weekends, or no visitation. The number of dorms allocated for each kind of visitation would depend on the demand for each type.

There are individuals, particularly among dorm administrators, who would be reluctant to grant freshmen 24 hour visitation. Yet there exists no good reason why freshmen should not receive at least 30 hours per week of open house. Since Dr. Zumwinkle, vice president for student affairs, declined last semester to do so, a coordinated effort between dorm and Student Government is necessary to achieve this end for those who desire it.

Last semester Zumwinkle did create a second co-ed dorm. While this display of unbridled generosity is an improvement, the number of coed dorms should hinge on request size and not a fixed number. This insures the pleasing of the maximum number of students.

Sometimes an analogy between a feudal manor and a UK dorm seems apt. The landlord knows he can always find tenants so he is not very receptive to change. The disregard for dorm property may be a result of the alienation some students feel towards a distant and uncooperative administration. When the head resident passes the buck to the Housing Office a broken sink can relieve frustration.

A SYSTEM FOR corridor advisors and students to evaluate head residents is needed. There are head residents who have ruled their dormitory like a principality for years. They perpetuate the overzealous enforcement of restrictive rules reminiscent of grade school. Examples are no more than two guests per I.D., signing out when leaving the dorms after midnight during the week and after 2 a.m. on weekends, and so on. This represents a need to reevaluate priorities when coupled with the inadequate custodial service and poor maintenance common in some dormitories.

The Housing Office is again planning to raise room and board rates. Everybody is aware of the increase in the cost of living, but students are entitled to know just how each dollar they pay is spent. An accounting of all income and expenses encountered by the Housing Office should be made public. It must be detailed enough so that students know just where their money is going and written so that non-business majors can understand it.

Countless rumors concerning the structural safety of Blanding and Kirwan Towers circulate through the University. Is the Service Building so far removed from the rest of campus that the Housing Office is unaware of this situation, or are there real difficulties they prefer not to discuss? Over 2,600 people live in and around the two towers. The stakes are too high to allow doubts to continue. If the buildings are secure then remove the unsightly wooden awning that surrounds each high-rise. If the purpose of the awning is protection against objects dropped from windows then replace it with something more aesthetic. If the towers are not safe then action must be taken immediately to protect those who live and work in the Complex.

As a candidate for senator-at-large on the Meeker-Allen slate, I am particularly interested in the issues pertaining to the residence halls as well as to the University in general. The slate is composed of individuals who will work to bring improvements to the University. I wish to encourage all students to participate in the elections. This is your chance to determine the future of UK.

The slate: 'Interested'

By SHERRY ALLEN

As the vice-presidential candidate, running on the Meeker-Allen slate, I'd like to explain our reasoning for running as a group.

After working with the Student Senate in our respective positions of director of political affairs and administrative assistant, Craig Meeker and I realize the importance of an active, concerned senate. It is to insure this concern that we our presenting our slate.

THE BASIC PROBLEM with the present senate was a lack of interest on the part of a large number of the senators. In examining the entire year you'll find that half of the meetings lacked the necessary quorum to conduct business and that not one senator presented a proposal or plan of action.

Craig and I don't think that it has to be this way.

Yes, the group of people running on our slate is "handpicked" by Craig, by myself, and by other members of the slate. But the important issue to remember is the basis on which they were selected. All Craig and I will vouch for is that these people are interested, concerned and willing to become involved.

EXAMINE SOME OF THE qualifications of those running on the Meeker-Allen Slate: we have a member of campus ROTC; the Chairperson of the University Student Advisory Committee activists in the Red River Defense Fund; past directors of finance, student affairs, student services, and political affairs; President of the Agribusiness Club; president of architecture students; president of the Gay Coalition; Free U coordinator; vice president of the Black Student Union; vice president of Panhellenic—a more diverse group of interests couldn't be found. Craig and I realize and hope that this will not be a "rubber stamp" senate—too many varied interests are present.

We feel that in the past Student Government positions have too often been used as another qualification to be placed on a resume. Looking at the number of students running for a position, (46 for 15 at-large seats) and few people voting, the race turns into the "high school" popularity contest or an "I like the sound of his name" random selection.

Craig and I want to make these people known to you because we can guarantee their interest and because we realize that student power is paralyzed without the senate's concern. However, we neither guarantee nor want a like-minded body.

Look at our platform, it doesn't offer you vague generalities. We offer you specific proposals to serve students. The only general ideology that the slate agrees to is: 1) their belief that student government is the strongest vehicle for student power; 2) That potential student power exists and should be utilized, and; 3) that student government should represent all students.

We offer you a chance to make student government elections more than a "popularity contest" or a game of chance—we give you a reason to vote.

Sherry Allen, an A&S junior, is presently an administrative assistant to the Student Senate.

Company calls Kernel ad 'unauthorized'

By BYRON WEST
Assistant Managing Editor

An advertisement appearing in last week's Kernel has been called "unauthorized" by the company whose name appeared on the ad.

The ad announced special tuition rates of $245 for an Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course. Kitti Greeno, advertising manager for Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics in Austin, Texas, said her company isn't doing any advertising in this area right now.

"EVEN IF WE were," she said, "our ads never mention tuition rates."

Doug Hall, president of Reading Dynamics Institute, said the ad was run by a former franchise holder for the Evelyn Wood course, whom Hall identified as Tom Arnett, a Florida businessman.

"Mr. Arnett is free to offer a reading course if he wants to," Hall said. "But he's not authorized to use the Evelyn Wood name, and Reading Dynamics Institute won't stand good for the lifetime membership or the guarantee in the ad."

THE AD OFFERED a "complete Reading Dynamics course plus extra instruction in technical and textbook reading," a performance warranty guaranteeing a threefold increase in reading speed, and a lifetime Reading Dynamics membership which "assures additional instruction in the future at no additional cost."

Hall said Arnett lost his franchise because he didn't offer enough courses and wasn't teaching enough people to read.

"He didn't think he should have his franchise taken away," Hall said. "When we (the present Reading Dynamics franchise holder) took over operations, he tried to get a restraining order against us, but the judge threw it out of court."

A FORM ALL Kernel advertisers fill out before an ad is run included the name Roger Frazier and gave a Louisville post office box as the billing address. Hall said Frazier is working under contract for Arnett. He described Frazier as "an upright and ethical person."

Frazier said the statement that the ad was not authorized is "true from their point of view, but not from ours."

He said the franchise question is now being appealed in court. "We contend the franchise was taken away illegally, and eventually it will come down to a judge's decision."

"But right now the opinion is that the Kentucky people have just as much right to do business as the Texas people," he said. "This is the same Reading Dynamics course with the same privileges, taught by the same people who have always taught Reading Dynamics in Kentucky."

THERE WAS NO answer at the phone number shown on the ad late last week, but Sunday afternoon a recorded announcement answered, accepted charges, and invited the caller to leave a name and address where information on the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course could be sent.

Arnett could not be reached for comment. Hall said the Reading Dynamics Institute isn't going to start any legal action against Arnett right away. "He's not doing very well with his venture, and we hope he'll just sort of dry up and blow away," he said. "But if he starts doing better between now and the next time we conduct a course in your area, we'll probably take him to court."

The Student Center Board presents

A LECTURE BY

JEB MAGRUDER

Tues. April 15 8p.m.

Memorial Coliseum

admission-free!

Edmonds and Curley rollick

By ALBERT HALLENBERG
Kernel Staff Writer

Wednesday night, the Student Center Board, as part of their Six for Six Contemporary Series, presented a fantastic show by comedians Joey Edmonds and Thom Curley.

From beginning to end, the comedy team clicked in their collection of skits about the mixups of modern day life. Unfortunately for the pair, the audience wasn't as receptive as the team had hoped.

However, neither the performers or the crowd should be faulted for the lack of communications—Memorial Hall is just not the place for the likes of Edmonds and Curley.

REGARDLESS, faultless performances prevailed throughout the duo's set. Their style was immediately recognizable and they enjoy having the audience get involved in the act.

The show began informally by talking about the hassles of flying a jet airplane. They used this skit to feel the audience out to see how receptive they were. Here, each of the two roles could be easily distinguished. Edmonds played the serious co-captain of a jet about to take off, while Curley played the role of the loose captain still hung over from last night's party.

One of Curley's tremendous talents is his ability to make sound effects. You were in the passenger's seat as he made authentic imitations of crashes, near misses and the incompetence of the control tower personnel.

THEN the two did hilarious parodies of a visit to a disastrous dentist, two guys with mental hangups in a restroom, TV commercials and a visit to the girl's powder room.

What made these performances enjoyable was the performers ability to define all the silly hangups and routines of life and make them real on stage. In short, the audience was able to identify with the skits.

When the duo had brought the audience to a comedic climax, they mellowed them out again with a guitar and two carefree songs.

Following the songs, Edmonds and Curley insisted that a girl step up and help the audience imagine what a first date with her boyfriend might be like.

While the attractive girl stood aside like she was at the sorority house, Edmonds, playing the guy, had to ask his fraternity brother (Curley) for transportation. They talked in Curley's car: Curley: Oh yeah, did you pick up some at the drugstore?

Edmonds: "Oh sure," he says, pretending he has a package.

Curley: "Oh no man, you gotta get the colored ones. Here they are. Tijuana Sunrises."

After the duo's call for the audience to applaud a distinguished guest in the crowd—Patty Hearst—and a spoof on the old submarine movies, Edmonds and Curley ended a fantastic show with a good round of applause for the crowd.

Backstage, after the show, I was surprised at the team's reaction to the audience. Comments ensued like:

"WE JUST couldn't get people together. We just couldn't get them involved. People were too hung up. The audience isn't at fault. The entertainer is always 50 per cent to blame for not getting things going."

It's a shame the pair couldn't have performed in the Student Center or Donovan cafeterias, where the pair could have done nooners.

Since the duo performs almost exclusively at campuses, they usually do a show during the day at the favorite campus hangout.

The nooners provide a more casual atmosphere where the students are free from evening responsibilities. Nooners have been a prime success for the comedy team.

ALTHOUGH THE group enjoys a fair amount of anonymity, they have received plenty of public exposure. They have appeared on practically all the major talk shows, have had PBS specials and even a spot on the Midnight Special.

The team has also been the front act for such performers as B.B. King, John Denver and Dionne Warwick. They have also appeared in famous night clubs like New York's Copacabana and Chicago's Mr. Kelly's.

If Edmonds and Curley considered Wednesday a bad night, then I would like very much to see them on a good night. All they had to say as I walked out of the dressing room was, "If we see Patty Hearst, we'll say hello for you."

Tennis team beats 'Bama; falls to UG and Western

By DAVID WEHRLE
 Kernel Staff Writer

The UK tennis team dropped two of three matches over the weekend, losing to defending SEC champion Georgia 6-3 on Saturday and to the OVC's top ranked team, Western Kentucky, 6-3 on Sunday.

The Cats opened a three game weekend homestand on Friday by squeezing past Alabama 5-4, giving fourth year coach Graddy Johnson his first victory over the Tide. Kentucky is now 17-3 overall and 3-2 in SEC play.

AGAINST THE Crimson Tide, the Cats' Scott Smith defeated Sam Vuille 6-4, 6-2 in the number one singles, and number two man Jamie Howell was beaten in a tight contest with All-SEC Chip Wade 6-1, 6-7, 7-6.

However, Johnson said that Howell "played his best match of the year."

In yesterday's clash Kentucky was hoping to win for the first time in three years against Western, but instead will have to wait another year for that chance. Johnson said that he was very disappointed in the singles' efforts at positions two through five against the Hilltoppers.

The bright spot for UK was sophomore Rob Wallace's triumph over Hasan Ozdemir 6-2, 7-6 for Kentucky's only singles victory.

Wallace has now posted an 18-2 overall individual mark, which is now tops on the team.

Senior captain Steve Gilliam lost his fifth straight match 6-4, 6-3 to the Hilltoppers' Jerry Nixon. He had previously won 15 straight this season.

IN THE number one singles match, Western's Bluent Altıwkaya, one of two Turks and three Swedes on the Hilltopper squad, beat Smith 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

The lengthy match was tensely fought as on several occasions Altıwkaya voiced disgust at himself in his native tongue. Nobody really needed a translation.

The duo of Wallace and Pursley also dropped a 6-4, 2-6, 6-1 decision to Altıwkaya and Ozdemir as nothing seemed to go well for the Cats.

Kentucky resumes play on Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. against the Cincinnati Bearcats at the Seaton Center Courts.

UK wrestlers win in AAU

Two UK wrestlers won titles in their weight divisions while one placed second in the 1975 Kentucky AAU Freestyle Wrestling Championships held Friday and Saturday at the Lafayette High School Gym.

Junior Joe Carr weighted through the tournament in the 180.5 pound weight class, while Warren J. Crawford, after losing his first match, won six in a row to earn the title in the 136.5 pound weight class.

SOPHOMORE Garrett Headley placed second in the 125.5 pound weight class after losing by a decision to a former 1968 Olympic gold medalist from Iran.
