GRADES

Grade: a step or degree in rank, dignity, quality, order, etc.; ranking in a regular series; to take rank—such is the definition given by a modern dictionary. Of course, when we say grade we do not mean it in that sense, but in the sense of the standard by which our "intelligence" is measured.

For the past two or three weeks grades have again taken their place as the main topic of conversation. Some are good and some are bad, but they all have to be discussed.

Many students, of course, did not receive the grade in a certain subject they thought they deserved. Many received a higher grade than they thought was coming to them, but no one kicks about that kind of grade.

High grades may be a great benefit in some cases in aiding the student to secure a job after he is graduated, that is, if the employment is of the type where the person's past record will do him any good, a surplus of such grades will no doubt place him above others who are trying for the same position, but who do not have such a good record to show. However, in the majority of cases it is not what the person has done while he was in college, but what he is able to do after he has put his books behind him.

When the time comes for the person to show whether or not he possesses the knowledge and ability to do the job given him by the one who pays him for his services, the grades he received while in college become of little importance. It is said that the one who works to get the most out of a course and worries the least about his grade is the one who will eventually end up ahead of the others.

Nine times out of 10 that statement holds true, but when a person is in college his grades are the standard by which he is classified in the eyes of the authorities. There are many cases where the person who has made a "D" out of a course has learned just as much as the person who received an A, but you can't tell that to the professors, because they always refer to grades when they compare knowledge.

CHIP ON THE SHOULDER

One of the more important arguments advanced by the nationalists concerning the United States' staying out of another war is that it we possessed an army, navy and weapons of war, second to no other nation, such would be the greatest possible assurance against future war. Is this really a sound argument? Human nature is sure to play an important part in such matters, and since it can not be predicted, we would be expected to delve into its peculiar functioning.

One of the most prominent psychologists of today, when questioned as to whether a nation, armed better than any other was not the most effective method for preventing future warfare, gave an extremely logical and convincing answer. He compared the heavily-armed nation to the child with his new air rifle, or the sportsman with his expensive and superior rifle or fishing rod and reel. Both of these individuals long to try their skill and test the efficiency of the weapons, and it is not hard for them to find something to furnish sufficient excuse for using these articles. The scientist continued his dissertation on the question by saying that as we invent more effective bombs, airplanes, and ships, we acquire a superiority complex thereby placing the proverbial chip on our shoulder towards other nations.

We forget what war means and think only that we are "good enough" to defeat any nation that might cross us. Here is human nature working AGAINST the nationalists, who have used it in their arguments so often of late in saying that it can not be changed and therefore, there always will be war.

A nation with a chip on its shoulder is undesirable. Human nature will tend to bring this undesirable state about if conditions being discussed are allowed to take place. From an international viewpoint, a chip on the shoulder is not only expensive, but it involves persons who are not to blame for such actions, and threatens the very progress of mankind. We, as individuals, are supposed to be living in an advanced age. Let us not turn back the pages of time through warfare, but put our interests to work at something really useful.

TO PUT AWAY CHILDISH THINGS Harvard University is nationally recognized as an institution that turns out at graduation a class of socially stereotyped men. Manners, political thought, philosophy—all the same. Exemplifying the American gentleman.

Individually, however, is not stifled by the social regimen of a school, for a system has been devised to further develop independence of thought, and consequently individuality. No rolls for attendance at classes are called for upperclassmen. "Come in my visit. If not 'D'." Weekly quizzes, tests, and semester examinations have been placed on the shelf with the dodo bird. But one request is made for a check on the amount of knowledge the student has absorbed—once examination in June.

What is the reason behind this unusual method of education? It is not to save the expense of editing and correcting of test papers. It is a psychological experiment, the success of which depends on the assumption that the student's intellectual independence of the mind is more remunerative than appeal to the mind's subservience to compulsory instruction. Such an assumption is wholly logical and based on historical fact. It is not necessary that we abolish our examinations. It is not necessary to cease watching attendance; but it is most advisable to create that "Come-if-you-want-to" attitude. For after all, students are in college of their own free will. There are three not to pass examinations but to peek their minds. If this peaking is done at short intervals, such as from examination to examination, and then forgotten because it is not needed for any future examination, it is peaking that will soon work itself out of the mind.

However, aware that what he learns must be remembered for nine months, the student will undoubtedly give good thought and retain permanently all that is required. We need have no radical change in our educational system to attain a perseverance that will serve to brighten a spot upon a student's record. We need only an attitude prevalent among collegians that they are paying dearly in time and hard currency for the instruction they receive. Institutions and deans need only to build up gradually a consciousness of the advantages and benefits to students and the value of the knowledge that is there for the taking.—The Creightonian.

Columbia University (New York City) physicists last year undertook to measure the size of the neutron during the past year. This is one of the newest sub-atomic particles, having mass but no electric charge. Its diameter was fixed at .000000000901 inch.

Hoi Polloi

By STYLUS

With all due amiable forms of greeting, we commence what must necessarily be termed a little clean dish-dish. I ever say get away! But we have made some remarkable deductions (for that, is) and here's the remedy.

Billy Was Young Then We have heard recently some sort of a story about Billy King of the KA lodge... He used to court Alice Lang Vance, y'know... Well as the story goes, they used to fight every evening just so they could make up again... but to get on the trail—one night Alice slapped Billy's hand during a heated scrap, and Billy, who sought means of making a dramatic exit from the room... All was fine until he got home. It must have been some small rug on a polished floor... Billy gauged his steps rather poorly... I'm sure he will never get King lad sprawling.

CAMPUS PERSONALITIES

ABC Stuff. We are told that Anna Best Clark, the Paris correspondent, was on ATU Bill Amyx. And now that Phil Del Joe Arvin is back among us, we wonder why the little Delt will favor Bill any longer. Amyx is a demon with the women.

Little Caker who remarked that she has time on her hands on account of her two watches, finds a most satisfying little avy. Among other things she says that the little "Delt" has become bad sponsor conscious.

We Didn't Know That. We have a class with Sunny Day, the editor extraordinary, and the class, which is in the Political Science department, teaches aspiring young men to be wise in the great game of politics. They are told to look upon our future president, Mrs. Day always said it would happen.

SSSS SSSSSSS! We wonder whether a certain Delt doesn't feel that a little Kappa has left for Ward Belmont. We mean, does John Staples High stir Sue Swinford's salivary glands?

Av, Blank Blank Blank. One of the actives of a Transylvania Park lodge was sorely in need of a body. Sue Swinford called out, or evening, so he commanded an innocent little freshman thus: "Call me whenever you have the time. The Delt is having open house for us this Friday." Which the freshman did. The Delt, however, has had four words to say in reply to the query. They're in the headline.

INSTANT INTERVIEWS

This is a new column that will be devoted to opinions of persons on the campus. One or more questions will be asked various persons during the week and their answers printed in an undulterated form. It is hoped that the answers will be interesting and humorous because of their spontaneity.

Petite Piece

By LORRAINE LEPPER

There is no earthly reason why an particular individual should take it upon herself to criticize the rest of the mob; inasmuch as the mob probably criticizes her, but it's one of those indoor pastimes to take a snant on people who seem to be one of the ordinary in simple small aspects. For instance, there's the prof who walks about in a daze, with his head about four inches ahead of the rest of his body; then there's the one who strolls along with a great smile of satisfaction; he takes deep breaths and beams upon mankind in general. There's another who's as broad as he is long; it's hard to tell whether he walks or rolls, but his steps are mincing and quick. There's a football player who wears once-gray couriours that have been washed so long they appear white and fit him skin tight. There's a little dark sophmore with curling eyelashes quite unlike anybody else's. There's an engineer with cropped hair; he's not quite in his own class, but at least he's not in the crowd. Oddities are ordinary things. Take Robby and his high shoes. Or Delma and his assistent and his shield and a cigarette hanging out of one corner of his mouth. There's nobody who ever goes around with his hands on his hips. There's a man who walks around with Darnell's. And true to form, the little Darnell with the family strut will continue to amuse us all. Mills is gone. By the way, have you met Mr. Showers? Jay Lucian never gives a telephone number. When the operator queries, "University", Jay commands, "Gimmie the Lexington Herald, or the city jail." Here's the snit person I ever say get away with Tommy.

When Tommy Atkins gets going on something he believes in, he gets a pained look on his face as if he were bothered with athlete's foot or some such. Big Kash thinks he would make a good Mohammedan. Bob Dickey, who plays the organ at most fascinating manner, peers almost blankly in front of him when he's filling, memorial hall with melody.

Jack Crain, who prides himself on being the top of breathal count, goes back every now and then to freshen up on his accent. Ben Taylor really gives em their mondays back and lets the thunder come forth, with a little head swinging throw in.

If you want something awfully funny, something that's ordinary and apt to be taken for granted, but a real rib tickler when you get to thinking about it, just watch Prof. Farquhar teach a class sometime.

Smith, English Dept., "My dear child I probably won't send any at all." ANSWER: Lorraine Lepper, "A long about Valentines Day is a very appropriate time to settle long standing grievances, and so it would be better for me to wait until later to say definitely 'yes' or 'no'."

QUESTION: Would you choose that your boy friend smoke, and if so would you like for him to indulge in a pipe, cigar, or cigarette, and why? ANSWER: Phyllis Caskey, "I like the pipe and cigarette but not the cigar; it belongs to older men."

ANSWER: Marie Vernon, "I should prefer he smoked a pipe. Then he would look better." ANSWER: Sarah Slack, "Yes, and I would have him smoke cigarettes because then I would have something to smoke to."

ANSWER: Louise Kuykendall, "A pipe; I just adore them." ANSWER: Bettie Bosworth, "I ain't proud, I don't care what they smoke."

Special Announcement The contest has begun for February and in case some of you young writers don't know the particulars—one dollar each will be given for the best poem and best short story each month for the next four months. All contributions must be sent in to this column, so get busy and make a "small bit of change". We are challenging you—it doesn't make a bit of difference whether you are a professional writer or not, for the judges to decide—it doesn't hurt to try, you know. We are asking for it, not give it to us.

Subway Interlude Mokey faces. Drawn, worn. Tired, haggard. No beauty, only faces. But there is a pretty one. She took the seat I offered. My southern accent gallantly raved through the car. She sighed and smiled. And then she turned away. I know not why, but from that moment I have loved her always. And she, me.

The most popular Book-of-the-Month selection in years! "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" stands today an accepted modern classic! It is great literature and has assumed a place among the great novels of all time.

Franz Werfel wrote five years ago upon this heroic novel which tells of a desperate little band of men and women who fought against incredible odds for their lives, their homes, their faith.

An American Tom Jones in modern dress. Pulton Oursler has written "Joshua Todd" in an engaging style and has particularly made it a narrative which picks up a novel of human flesh and spirit at birth, sends him through a series of experiences and adventures, trials and tribulations, joys and sorrows, then drops him at death or marriage or some other convenient stopping place.

The author of "Serena Blomfield" has written another novel, "National Velvet"—and the secret is out; she is Enid Bagnold's lady lover in private life.

Enid Bagnold is working very hard on her "Kentucky" book. Upon being asked why she writes books, she replied, "Because I like to! Well, after all, there is no come-back for that one."

Ben Stolberg believes that Russia has nothing, he advocates, that happens to the individual really matters—only the mass. Something to look for in the future—Robert Nathan's "The Road of the Ages."

It was quite a sensational discovery to find that among the best-sellers, that hilarious book, "The Glorious Pool" made its first appearance by catapulting into position over "Anthony Adverse."

The New York Times Book Review of January 27 has a very striking etching of the "Peace Conference". Grim and gruesome but how true.

Dickens, Corelli, Garville, Van Gogh, and Pounder found in one Howard Spring!

English critics are having a rather hard time placing his first novel "Shabby Tiger".

The editor of "Esquire" has written a novel called "Cast Down the Laurel". The story deals with a great pianist and a young girl who was his protegee.

Every star has been a nova in its time.

LIBRARY STATISTICS FOR VISITORS GIVEN

According to the number of persons using the reading and browsing rooms of the University library, the week of December 9 to 15 was the second busiest week since the occupation of the new library building in 1932. The week of November 14 to 20, 1932 was the time of greatest amount of study and research with a daily average for that period being 2,171 persons entering the building.

Last December the total attendance during the record week was 10,240, an average of 1,462 daily for the general library. Estimates show that Wednesdays are the busiest days for libraries, 1,798 persons having visited the building on Wednesday of that week.

GOOD RECORD MADE BY MARION FARMERS

The dairy herds of seven Marion county farmers recently passed the Federal test for Bang's disease. These farmers, all members of the Dix River Dairy Improvement association, have been improving their herds for five years, eradicating disease and producing animals and building up production. They now have highly desirable herds free from disease. As a result they are being flooded with inquiries for stock for sale, and report being offered good prices for clean, healthy cows with good production records, according to Boyd Wheeler, tester for the Dix River association.

HOME AGENT WILL PROMOTE READING

A course of instruction on reading in the home was recently conducted at home demonstration agents' conferences at Madisonville and Lexington, by Miss Lena B. Notler, secretary of the Kentucky Library Commission at Frankfort. The course gave material to be used as a minor project for six months and forms the basis of a long-time project, according to Miss Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home agents. Reading for recreation is a special study, on hobbies, was sketched and books listed for pre-school child, adolescent boy or girl and adult. Agents will use local library facilities, supplemented by books from the Commission office. McNASH'S STORY ACCEPTED

Capel McNash, University of Kentucky student and a member of the Kernel staff, recently received notice of the acceptance of an article by Popular Aviation magazine. The article, entitled "A Rocket Made Practical," deals with the possibility of flight in the atmosphere at speeds in the neighborhood of 5,000 miles per hour, and describes the experiments of the Cleveland Rocket Society, of which McNash is a member.

The University of Wisconsin (Madison) has more than 79,000 books in its library, the largest in the state at the present time.

PEACE DESIRED BY COLLEGIANS

Questionnaire Sponsored by A. C. P. Denotes Increase in Anti-War Sentiments

R.O.T.C. TRAINING SCORE

Madison, Wis. (ACP)—Exact and definite proof that college students are becoming more active in peace movements was gained here today when results of a questionnaire sent to college newspaper editors and college presidents throughout the country by Collegiate Digest and Associated Collegiate Press were announced.

Approximately 400 college editors and presidents answered a series of questions on military training and peace movements, and from their answers it was discovered that 120 college presidents and 131 editors had voted for a definite increase in sentiment in favor of peace movements. Fifty percent of the 56 college editors did not feel there was any noticeable increase in this respect.

Conversely, only 15 presidents and 13 editors felt they noticed an increase in sentiment for either compulsory or optional R. O. T. C.

More closely divided were both the editors and presidents on the question: Do you personally favor the entire abandonment of military training on your campus? Answers in the affirmative were 27 presidents and 56 editors, while 35 presidents and 50 editors were opposed.

R. O. T. C. is compulsory in 24 of the schools included in the poll, optional in 17, and not given in 150, according to the editors, while gymnasium work is required at 147 institutions, optional in 28, and not required in 15.

Exactly 152 of the colleges represented by their editors are not obligated to the government to maintain a military course, while the answers given by the presidents bring the total to 168.

CRYPTOGRAPH

Experts on important books in the literary world will have a chance to prove their superiority in solving Cryptographs with this week's puzzle, for it is concerned with a volume written—well, we suppose we might as well give you at least one clue—Lord Byron. Price Appointed As Farm Bureau Head

The Kentucky Farm Bureau announced Friday the appointment of Ollie J. Price as an organization director following action of the bureau's executive committee.

Mr. Price, a graduate of the University in 1933, has been for the past year in charge of the Kentucky Cities Co-operative Milk Producers Association.

According to the bureau Mr. Price was elected largely because of his distinguished work as a 4-H Club boy in Caldwell county.

TRANSIENTS QUARANTINED

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 4.—(INS)—Threatened by an epidemic of spinal meningitis which has already taken two lives, the federal transient camp at Fort Eustis continued under strict quarantine today. There are 2,600 men and boys quartered at Fort Eustis, a former army post. Four cases other than those resulting fatally have been reported. The disease, described as of particularly virulent type, appeared in the camp eight days ago.

SURVEY TO BE PUBLISHED

The archaeological survey of Kentucky has gone to press. The effort of almost eight years of research are now in the hands of the galley proof readers. The publication, compiled and written by Prof. William Webb and Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, will be available in the spring of 1935. It will be the second volume of reports in Anthropology and Archaeology. Because of limited appropriations, gratis distribution of this survey will not be possible.

SMITH-COR

Although facing the double handicap of playing two of the best opposing quintets in the conference on successive nights after tireless road trips, the Big Blue team came through unscathed to gain undisputed lead in the Southeastern conference.

They then met Vanderbilt, a team holding victories over six conference opponents, including Alabama. The Wildcats were tired from the Alabama game and the road trip and they fully realized they faced probable defeat.

After such a performance, the hope that Kentucky has the best team in the nation rises higher than ever. Their tentative return game with New York University will have considerable bearing on this as will their game with Creighton, the leaders of the middle West and conquerors of the leading teams on the west coast.

Anderson, Edwards and Lawrence have shown consistent brilliance in their work this season. The popularity of Anderson with the crowds has been brought out by the creases he has received after leaving each game. In New York the metropolitan critics voted him the best guard to perform there this season.

Anderson, Edwards and Lawrence is a senior. A sophomore has the added advantages of convincing sportsmen who have never seen him perform. The best chance of getting the two All-Americans for Kentucky is to concentrate on Anderson and Lawrence. Lawrence was an All-American inter-scholastic player and his improvement has been enough to give him the highest honor in basketball. His fine work as a co-captain eliminated all black-

Five Dual Meets To Comprise 1935 Schedule of Cindermen; Strong Squad Foreseen EXPECT 15 TO REPORT

Approximately 15 candidates are expected to report to Coach Bernie Shively for the first practice session of the 1935 track season which will be held Monday, February 11, on Stoll field.

Joe Rupert, weight man; Hocker, miler and two miler; and Ben Willie, sophomore dash and burster man, are expected to furnish the nucleus for the current edition of Kentucky's cinder squad.

The Wildcats cinder artists will participate in five dual meets and the Southeastern Conference meet at Birmingham Ala. May 18. The present schedule shows two meets scheduled for April 20, one with Vanderbilt here and the other with Georgia Tech holding the date of April 20.

The team will journey to Hanover, Ind., for a meet with the Hanover college squad on April 27. April 30, the Berea Mountaineers will invade the Wildcat stronghold, with the Tennessee Vols. following them on May 4. May 11 is held as an open date and probably will be filled with the Kentucky High school track and field meet.

Dr. Leon W. Cohen, assistant professor of mathematics, has been appointed an associate editor of the "Duke Mathematical Journal," a new quarterly publication. The first issue will appear in March.

SUPREME COURT DECISION UPHELD

Former Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Air Mail Company Attorney Held Guilty of Contempt

Washington, Feb. 4.—(INS)—The Supreme Court today upheld the Senate in finding William P. MacCracken, Washington lawyer, guilty of contempt for defiance of the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee.

MacCracken, former assistant secretary of commerce for air and later attorney for many air mail companies, failed to produce important papers for the investigating body. Justice Brandeis delivered the opinion.

After MacCracken had been apprehended and tried by the Senate and sentenced to 10 days imprisonment, he carried his fight to District of Columbia supreme courts.

The Court of Appeals held that since papers sought from MacCracken had been destroyed after he was subpoenaed, with his consent, he did not have them and therefore violated no law in not producing them.

PAROLE SYSTEM SCORED IN TALK

Head of Department of Federal Investigation Says Too Much Judicial Clemency Shown

Washington, Feb. 4.—(INS)—Condemning the criminal parole system in states and local communities, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the division of investigation, charged one out of every eight persons arrested in connection with 32 kidnaping cases handled by the Justice department had received some form of judicial clemency.

Hoover's testimony was made public today in hearings on the Justice department appropriations before the House appropriations committee. He cited the case in which three women of the Dillinger gang were arrested by agents.

"These three girls were brought before the Federal judge at Madison, Wisconsin," Hoover asserted. "They pleaded guilty and were immediately placed then on probation."

"Within two weeks thereafter each one of these three girls was right back with the members of the Dillinger gang, one of them, the wife of 'Baby Face' Nelson, was in the gun battle that resulted in the killing of one of your agents recently."

There will be a meeting of the Dairy Board course Feb. 5 to 7 at the Dairy Building for dairymen, farmers and students who are interested. The lectures and demonstrations will begin at 9 o'clock and continue through the day.

"Kentucky's Dead Indians" will be the subject of Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, head of the zoology department, at the Laymen's League dinner in the Christ church parish house on Wednesday night at 6 p. m. Joseph C. Graves is president of the league.

MacCracken had been apprehended and tried by the Senate and sentenced to 10 days imprisonment, he carried his fight to District of Columbia supreme courts.

"Big Day" Looms For Young Singer

Young Opera Debutante Says It's Stage Fright and Loss of Appetite

New York, Feb. 4.—(INS)—Suppose you were fit, pretty and American, and were to make your debut with the Metropolitan Opera Company and Metroplitan Opera Company and shall not take part in the management of any political campaign."

Little Mary Moore is both. Mary, who hails from the Washinton Heights section of good, old Manhattan Island, and is the youngest Metropolitan debutante since Marion Talley, admitted today she was so excited she couldn't eat or sleep.

She referred to her appetite as the "dear departed." "Oh, dear," she exclaimed, hoarsely, "I wish it were a week from today and it was all over. But isn't everything wonderful? Lily Pons invited me to tea last week. Can you imagine! Me!"

Mary is going to carry a little flat prayer book in her shoe and a lucky ring on her finger when she steps onto the metropolitan stage to sing the role of Gilda in Verdi's Rigoletto. She hopes to charm "Lady Luck" with them. Oh, yes, and under her costume will be a bit of Irish green ribbon and a piece of the dress she wore at her audition.

Mary studied voice culture for six years before she got her audition with the Metropolitan. Her only previous operatic experience was with a small company in Baltimore.

Sen. Norris Strikes At Spoils System

Washington, Feb. 4.—(INS)—Efforts of Senator Norris (R) Nebraska, to rid this and future administrations of what he terms "Farleyism" culminated today in his introduction of a bill in the Senate designed to take the post office department out of control and domination of partisan politics.

President Roosevelt's re-election depends much upon whether or not he curbs the patronage practices of his Postmaster general, asks that the

US Supreme Court Delays Decision Over Gold Cases

Washington, Feb. 4.—(INS)—The rosy optimism of high New Deal officials over a favorable, Supreme Court ruling in the vital gold cases took on a more somber hue today after the court made an unprecedented announcement that it was not ready to hand down a decision.

Experimented court observers found nothing unusual in the delay. Decision in a hundred billion dollar case in less than a month itself would have been unusual.

But many New Dealers in and out of Congress had expected the court to leap to a decision and clear up uncertainty over constitutionality of the Congressional law abrogating the gold clause in public and private bonds.

Just what is meant by cross-blending tobaccos . . . and how does it make a cigarette milder and taste better . . . Well, in blending you take two or more tobaccos and mix them together—a rather simple process. But cross-blending goes a step further . . .

Includes a pack of Chesterfield cigarettes and the text: 'IN making Chesterfields we take 1 Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. We take Burley tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee, and tobacco from Southern Maryland. Then in addition to these home-grown tobaccos we take tobacco grown in Turkey and Greece. We balance these mild, ripe home-grown tobaccos with the right amounts and the right kinds of aromatic Turkish. Then, instead of just mixing the tobaccos together, we blend and cross-blend them so that all the different flavors go together into one full flavor—the Chesterfield taste that so many smokers like. Cross-blending tobaccos as it is done in Chesterfields gives the cigarette a pleasing taste and aroma—they're mild and yet they Satisfy.'
