TECHNICALITY: Georgetown College's Board of Trustees' disagreement with the executive board of the Association of Kentucky Baptists over the religious credentials of Dr. Henry N. Sherwood to continue as the president of that institution, is most distressing.

The latest developments of the controversy revealed that the sum of $8,000 annually will be withdrawn from the resources of the college because Doctor Sherwood has not been immersed in baptism by a minister of the Baptist faith.

While this sum does not threaten the existence of the college, it does, we fear, hinder what heretofore has been an efficient and smooth-running small institution. Where the tremendously important task of teaching is concerned, is it really worth while to jeopardize its well-being over technicalities?

All Christians are striving toward the same end, and it appears to be rather superfluous to take issue over such an interpretation of the requirements of the denomination in question. Doctor Sherwood, apparently, is rendering extremely satisfactory service to the college, and his associates have expressed a desire to continue with him as their leader. The Kernel sympathizes with the students of Georgetown College and sincerely hopes that the matter will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned within the near future.

WOMEN GET THEIR WAY: The proverbial saying that women are the "weaker sex" that has been prevailing around these many centuries again came into the spotlight last week when the girls of Vassar used it to good effect upon Yale students and John R. Hersey, chairman of the Yale Prom, changed the date of the dance from Feb. 15 to March 9.

It all came about when the Yale Daily News received a telegram from Margaret Bradley, junior at Vassar College. Vassar's prom, she wired, was to be the night after Yale's. She suspected that the New Haven party would put a crimp in Vassar's plans, and she hinted that Yale could postpone its affair.

Her reply, Hersey said that if Miss Bradley would bring her "gals" down to New Haven Friday night he would guarantee that every Vassar girl "will return to Vassar with one of the Elks in tow on Saturday."

They loaded their machine guns, then advanced, squatting and crawling in approved military fashion. Dismayed and unprepared for this, the Bourgeois forces ducked behind parked automobile, and from barricades of cars fell back to the edge of the woods adjoining the airport, but the menacing machine guns still drew near.

One by one the Square Dealers staggered out on the field and surrendered. A few, including Bourgeois, ducked into the woods and escaped. Only one casualty marred the record—a Square Dealer was seriously wounded by the accidental discharge of a comrade's shotgun.

After the "victory," the Kingfish, flanked by 25 khaki-clad riflemen, entered his automobile and drove to New Orleans. In his hotel that evening, guards stood in impressive line along the corridor leading to his suite. That night the reformer took a train back to Washington, and the curtain fell on this episode, but how long will such things last—how long CAN they last?

AND THE WALLS CAME TUMBLING DOWN (An Open Letter)

By Peter Molyneux: (Ed. Note: Peter Molyneux, once editorial director of the Fort Worth Star Telegram, is now editor and publisher of The Texas Weekly, the most widely quoted single editor in the United States, a director of the Carnegie Foundation, and a recognized economist throughout the agricultural South.)

Recently I received a letter from a young man in a small town in New York asking what he might do to further the cause of tariff reform. I have received many similar letters within the past few months, but I single out this one in particular because the young man makes a definite suggestion. "I have often wondered," he writes, "whether there might not be room in this country for a great organization to bring about a change. And unless something which is the tariff-protected industries will not permit this to be done."

Only an upheaval among the people, an awakening of the man in the street and of the folks at the forks of the creek, can be expected to bring about a change. And unless such an upheaval of the people can be brought about, I am afraid we are sunk.

I am going to attempt to launch a fighting organization devoted to the task of arousing the people of the United States (not merely Texas or of the South) to the support of a program of international cooperation, a program which will include the lowering of trade barriers of all kinds, the settlement of the intergovernmental debts once and for all, the stabilizing of international exchange, and the doing of whatever else is necessary to unshackle the progress of the United States.

This article, then, is in the nature of a call to everybody who feels as this young man that "the need for an organization of this sort is great." I want to hear from ordinary, every-day people, people who have no "vital stake" in the matter, such as Secretary Wallace says the cotton shippers have, but who are concerned only about the general welfare of the people as a whole and of the country as a whole.

I deliberated considerably over this matter before deciding to make this suggestion. Having made it, I propose to stay with it until something tangible results. Write me what you think.

markets on a round, permanent basis." Opening sentences of Dr. Anderson's Boston address are very much to the point here. "Washington, the seat of the Government, is a terrific pressure from many groups, each seeking to get from the Government and from the rest of the country something of special advantage to itself. Any one group, if it alone could get what it wanted, might better its position, but, when many groups all succeed in getting what they want, each at the expense of the rest of the country, difficulties obviously arise for all of them. We are going to solve our economic problems, instead of merely deferring them, only if we can see the whole country, and the interrelations with the rest of the world."

I think it will be obvious why I related these two expressions to this young man's letter. Secretary Wallace's suggestion to the cotton shippers, if acted upon, would only add another pressure group to the general scramble at Washington, and not a very powerful one from the standpoint of political influence. Indeed, the whole tone of Secretary Wallace's article indicates that he has become convinced that other pressure groups are too powerful to be overcome. "Unless ways can be found to increase American exports," he writes, "the recovery of cotton exports on a permanent basis is doubtful. One of the reasons the tariff-protected industries will not permit this to be done." In other words, the protection of the tariff-protected industries is too great to be overcome by that of other groups. The administration is powerless to do something which "the tariff-protected industries will not permit."

Only an upheaval among the people, an awakening of the man in the street and of the folks at the forks of the creek, can be expected to bring about a change. And unless such an upheaval of the people can be brought about, I am afraid we are sunk.

Petite Piece

By LORRAINE LEFERE

The more I read of great writers, the more I am awed at their respective styles of exposition, description, and portrayal. So awed, in fact, that in many instances, I skip completely over the point of view. Ben Hect, whose writing I do not admire, either for subject matter or style, has a fine method of setting down clipped, concise phrases that get right at the core of his ideas. And he goes on but few of those terrible word jags.

Hergesheimer, the master of the short story, has gone back on me. I used to delight in his well-told tales, especially because of his peculiar angle on life in general. But now he has begun to use those long, involved, and crowded sentences whose meanings get lost somehow, in the maelstrom of artfulness he attempts.

The young man was a good farmer, but suffered occasionally from delusions of grandeur. In fine script in a corner of the invitation card was written, "The groom is a second cousin of the ex-governor of South Dakota."

"Hell Week" has been taking it on the chin lately. The first outbreak came from the president of the University of Illinois (Champaign), Arthur Cutts Willard, who said (without smiling) that "Hell Week" takes no originality, brains or education. "Educated and cultured men do not peddle other people," he said.

The recent hot fight out in California for the governorship, by the way, has given rise to the most complete collection of modern political literature in any college. It is housed at the University of California (Los Angeles) and already fills nine cubic feet. Despite his terrific output, Sinclair's stuff was much more meager than that of Merriam, the successful candidate.

If the Townsend plan goes thru, points out a college columnist, Mr. Pitkin of Columbia will be demonstrably in the wrong, for life will begin at 60—not 40.

Remarks of a professor of advertising psychology at Cornell College (Mount Vernon, Ia.): "Among the best advertising slogans now are 'Keep that schoolgirl complexion' and 'As kthe man who owns one'."

The territories of the United States Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, all maintain land-grant colleges.

Approximately 85 per cent of the members of the Columbia University (New York City) graduating class have obtained positions.

Refreshment realism on the campus of the University of Manitoba, in Winnipeg: In a debate there on the question, "Is an old maid more useful on a farm than a wheelbarrow?" the old maid lost by three votes.

Wealth of the Nation: Five per cent of the candidates admitted every year to Columbia University (New York City) are "exceptional," the registrar there modestly admits.

A student at the University of Wisconsin (Madison) tells the story of his receiving an invitation to a wedding of a young couple who lived on a farm out in the country.

A recent picture laid in this atmosphere aroused my curiosity enough to find out a few things about London's much faulted Limehouse, with rather startling results. According to fact, it is probably the smallest, poorest, and quaintest of Chinatowns in the world, and boasts not a single laundry. However, its atmosphere is quite complete so far as fog, odor, and accompanying water front is concerned. Tradition has painted it with romance—yet it really is a veritable gold mine of plots. A pity for writers, painters, and curious travelers that the London powers that be seek to sweep the Limehouse district in a gigantic slum-clearance program. Well, the pea soup fog is bound to remain!

Once in a vaudeville show I heard a composer of one-time popular songs, who was down to his uppers, give his ideas on the subject of what comprises a popular song, and

ALFORD ARCHER—SPECIALIZING IN AGRICULTURE: "Believe me, my schedule is a pretty full one. Lots of classes, lots of night work, and lots of 'lab.' too. It's interesting—but hard work! I smoke a lot because I find that Camels keep me on the alert... banish that drowsy, 'done-in' feeling. And what a swell taste they have! It's a taste you don't get tired of—makes you come back again and again for more. No matter how much you smoke, Camels don't interfere with healthy nerves."

Comparing the scores of various teams in action has a certain element of satisfaction for the followers of the team which is proven the best in that manner.

However, to get back to basketball's comparative scores, it seems that Indiana was only able to defeat Vanderbilt after an overtime period.

Inasmuch as Kentucky outscored Vanderbilt by almost 30 points, the Big Blue should not fear any Big Ten opponent.

Then New York University had little trouble dropping undefeated Temple and some other powerful teams in the middle west.

The longest record occurred in England in 1929 when Coole won a race with the odds of 5,000 to 1.

At the other extremity of the betting is the 1 to 100 odds placed against Man o' War on three different occasions in 1920.

Joe Maniac, Fordham University halfback, is faster on the gridiron than his brother, Sam, of Columbia, who is intercollegiate 60-yard spring champion.

PARKING PERMITS MUST BE OBTAINED

Wednesday, February 6, was set for students to obtain parking permits in the various parking areas on the campus, but at 4 p. m. yesterday only 270 permits had been purchased.

These permits are small metal tags which are to be wired on the radiator of the automobile, and cost only twenty-five cents.

This is a new style, since the old permits were made of paper.

Good parking places are in great demand and it is urged that every one who intends to park on the campus get their permits as soon as possible.

Tickets were given several students yesterday, for not having their permits, and everyone who is found negligent in this point will be turned over to the dean.

GARNER WILL BE RADIO SPEAKER

C. B. S. Will Feature Review Of Roosevelt Administration; Program Scheduled To Begin On March 4

Special to the Kernel Hon. John N. Garner, vice-president of the United States and president of the U. S. Senate, and Hon. Joseph W. Byrns, speaker of the House of Representatives, will be heard in authoritative discussions of the problems and accomplishments of the legislative branch of the U. S. government during the unusual educational program to be heard over the Columbia Broadcasting system's nationwide network on Monday, March 4.

Garner and Byrns are the first government officials to accept invitations to take part in this comprehensive history and civics lesson to be broadcast from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. eastern standard time, on the second anniversary of President Roosevelt's inauguration under the title, "Of the People, By the People, For the People."

Members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet also are being invited to discuss the work of their various departments during the program.

The CBS Public Events and Special Features department will employ a unique production method for the two-hour program.

High spots of governmental activity within the past two years will be dramatized briefly by a cast of actors in the New York studios before each governmental department head is introduced.

The executives and cabinet members will speak from their offices in Washington, where special wire circuits and microphones will be set up.

Musical interludes will be supplied by the Army, Navy, and Marine Bands.

The program tentatively calls for pick-ups from a Senate committee room, the Supreme Court, a battle-ship, the workshop of one of the government's alphabetical units, the House of Representatives, the Mint, the White House and the cabinet members' offices.

Many of the points will be hooked in to a nationwide network for the first time in radio history.

CWENS WILL AID AT OPEN HOUSE

Women's Sophomore Honorary to Direct Series of Social Functions at Women's Building

With the first of a series of general open houses, to be sponsored at the Woman's building during the second semester, members of Cwens will assist as hostesses, it was decided at a meeting of the organization held late yesterday in Boyd hall reading room.

There will be approximately 12 open houses held during the semester, and at each one four members of Cwens will be present to introduce attendants to the events, and assist Mrs. Lebus, the hostess.

Inaugurating an entirely new custom, Cwens will also entertain all freshmen girls entering the University for the first time this semester, with a tea given in their honor from 4 to 6 p. m. Monday in the Woman's building.

The freshmen girls were formally invited to the tea by Dean Sarah Blanding at the compulsory women's convocation held yesterday.

At that time Miss Blanding explained the impossibility of issuing written invitations, since at present there is no complete list of entering freshmen.

Helen Farmer, assisted by Martha Bitzer and Neil Shearer, will have entire charge of the tea.

Temple University (Philadelphia Pa.) will continue its policy of playing night football games during the coming season.
