SO THEY SAY!

QUESTION: WHAT DO YOU THINK IS WRONG WITH THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION ON OUR CAMPUS?

Billie Fischer, A.S. junior: If anything is wrong with the SGA, it is its conservative attitude, with the exception of its elections, are not known to the average student.

O. C. Severs, Engineering, sophomore: SGA has never, in my memory, taken any action which caused any interest. It is too conservative a body, run by a few people, as the vast majority of the students say, while standing around and doing nothing about it.

Lola Stokes, A.S. sophomore: I don't think the students know what the SGA does. We should know more of just what they are doing and planning to do.

Richard L. G. R. and A. Agriculter, senior: They don't get enough cooperation from the student body. The student body needs to be better acquainted with the functions of SGA.

E. R. Payne, Education, junior: It should better acquaint itself with the student body. Practically the only time it is mentioned is at election time.

Edward Barr, A.S. senior: SGA hasn't become an integral part of every student's campus life. Its functions are not understood.

W. E. Buckler, Graduate student: There are several definite weaknesses in the operation of the Student Government association. In the first place, half the students do not know that it exists, and the others know it only by name.

Country's Status Determined By Military Power In War Reports Dr. Vandenschosch

Year's Outstanding Professor Speaks

Dr. Amry Vandenschosch, recently chosen most distinguished professor at the University in 1945 by the faculty, spoke at the Memorial hall Tuesday night on his findings during three months of research on international politics. He discussed the place of the small states in international politics and organization. The status of a country is determined by its military power in actual warfare, Dr. Vandenschosch said.

Equality of voting power between large and small nations will produce a more democratic organization that is "sterile and impotent," he said. The block of the large states by the small has been admitted to be one of the chief causes of the failure of the League of Nations by Gen. Jan C. Smuts, originator of the idea of allowing small states a large voice in the League, the speaker said.

The place of the small states in the United Nations Organization will not be as great as in the League, Dr. Vandenschosch said. Because Great Britain, Russia and the United States bore the brunt of the war, their statements insisted that they should have a stronger place in the international organization than in the League, he said.

The small nations have faced both praise and criticism of their place in the world, the speaker said in further defining the position of the small states. He charged that the small state is "an anachronism in a day of expanding and intensified technology, a hindrance to economic progress and higher standards of living."

Speaking for the small states, Dr. Vandenschosch stated that "we shall have to admit that there is a danger of the merging of the small states with the larger ones, until the world is divided into two or three huge hostile camps."

Concluding, he stated: "If nationalism succumbs to rival ideologies, the result very probably will be the merging of the small states with the larger ones, until the world is divided into two or three huge hostile camps."

Speech Preliminaries Preliminaries in the debating tournament held Wednesday afternoon. Semi-finals were held yesterday afternoon, and they were not available at Kerm press time.

Dean Chamberlain will preside and the president of the Kentucky High School Debate League will preside over the event. They are expected to put on an excellent debate.

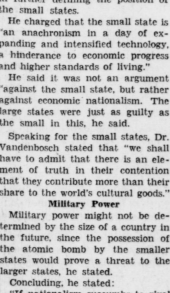

These debates are not amateur; they are expert debaters and they have been "toughly" trained throughout the school year. Louis Clifton, director of the University Extension department which is sponsoring the event, said they are capable of putting on an excellent debate.

Events scheduled for today in the Kentucky High School Speech Festival include contests in oratorical declamation, extemporaneous speaking, impromptu speaking, interpretative reading, radio speaking, discussion. The festival, which draws students from high schools throughout Kentucky, will end today.

Guignol Rounds Out 18 Years Of Service An abandoned Negro church near the University was the home of the first little theater in central Kentucky. Repeated applications of soapy water and paint, all used by earnest people, both young and old, made ready the frail building that until it fell apart, served active drama. Even then old lumber was salvaged and added to that of present structure to form the foundation of the theater.

Million Dollar Arts Building, Radio Department, Approved; Cooperstown Manager Named

Elmer G. Sulzer

Sulzer Named Radio Arts Department Head Establishment of a department of radio arts in the college of arts and sciences, with Elmer G. Sulzer, since 1929 director of publicity and radio activities at the University, as its head, was approved Wednesday by the board of trustees.

Wald Replaces Sulzer Replacing Mr. Sulzer as director of public relations will be Raymond Wesley Wild, new editor of the department of public relations at Michigan State college, a native Kentuckian and University graduate.

In recommending the establishment of the new department, President Donovan explained to the board that "while the University has maintained a radio station for many years for the purpose of training young men and women in the techniques of broadcasting, and also for disseminating information regarding the University over the radio station, which gave the University free time on the air, the institution has had a frequency modulation station which it can operate 24 hours a day if it chooses to do so."

In addition, scores of young men and women are anxious for a career in radio. This is the opportune time for the University to enter radio education.

Mr. Sulzer is a native of Madisonville, Ind., and came to the University in 1926 as instructor in music and director of the University band. He was named director of publicity in 1929, and in that year, the University radio studios were opened under his supervision. He is a graduate of DePaul University.

Mr. Wild was assistant instructor in the department of journalism at the University during his senior year; associate editor of The Kernel; assistant editor of the Kentucky Press, and campus correspondent for The Lexington Herald.

Since graduation from the University in 1935, he has worked 12 years on both daily and weekly newspapers; has instructed at Ohio University, University of West Virginia, University of Maryland, and Michigan state.

Mr. Sulzer and Mr. Wild will assume their new duties at the beginning of the University's fiscal year, July 1.

Mr. Wild was assistant instructor in the department of journalism at the University during his senior year; associate editor of The Kernel; assistant editor of the Kentucky Press, and campus correspondent for The Lexington Herald.

Boles To Direct Housing Project S. A. (Daddy) Boles, manager of athletic ticket sales, has been appointed manager of the Cooperstown housing project, Dr. H. L. Donovan announced Tuesday.

The appointment, effective yesterday, will result in the transfer of Mr. Boles from the Athletic department, with which he has been associated in various capacities since 1916.

In charge of Rentals As Cooperstown manager, he will be in charge of rentals, maintenance and repairs, and general supervision of the student housing project, which is the largest of its kind in the United States.

During his 30 years with the Athletic department, Mr. Boles has served in all capacities from instructor in physical education to athletic director. In 1916, his first year at the school, he was director of the gymnasium and assistant football coach under Dr. John J. Tigert, now president of the University of Florida.

After the departure of Dr. Tigert in 1917, Mr. Boles served as head football and basketball coach until after the first world war, when he became director of athletics, a position he held until 1934.

No Successor Appointed Athletic Director Bernie Shively said yesterday that no successor had been appointed for Mr. Boles, but that a new setup for ticket sales had been announced.

It does not blame Mr. Boles for taking the new job, Mr. Shively said, "because handling ticket sales has become quite a headache."

Aspiring Writers Found Organization

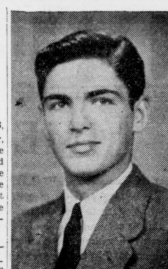

Do you have any latent genius, or merely a "yen" to discover? Are you waiting to be discovered, or is it only a sympathetic audience that you need? Do you have a story to tell, or a cause to promote, or only a brain full of ideas that need an outlet? Perhaps you come in from a date wondering why he or she didn't say this or that instead of the obvious thing that was said. Perhaps you could make characters say those clever things. In other words—do you want to write, and do you want constructive criticism? If you are interested in a writers' club, be at room 210, McVey hall, Monday night at 7. Mrs. Kinoy Harris, of the English department, co-author with her husband of six recently published books, both fiction and non-fiction, will be the sponsor.

Have You Ever Been Broke?

By Roger Wilcox
Have you ever been broke? Have you ever dug hopefully into the depths of every pocket of every pair of trousers you own and found the depressing void which you feared but wished to doubt? Have you ever allowed a Lauren Bacall or Van Johnson picture "run" for an entire week without seeing it? Have you ever started to work Sunday night with your stomach screaming for the dinner which you slept through, and the special Sunday night hamburger? Have you ever gone to bed at 9 p.m. Saturday night? ... Not! Then you will never be broke—but you will be. Being broke is one of the unadvised courses of every college campus, a course, I'll wager, which every UK frosh has taken, a course in which there can be no failures. While being one of the most troublesome and trying courses in the curriculum, it is at the same time, one of the most interesting ones.

Dr. Plummer Writes About Watterson

By Carl "Hoot" Combs
In an article in the February 18, 1936 issue of Editor and Publisher, Dr. Niel Plummer, head of the Journalism department, quoted Henry Watterson, who practiced the journalism profession in Louisville for a half century, as saying that honesty and independence on the editorial page make strong newspapers.

Newly elected Phalanx president, Howard Stephenson.

It is the first article by Dr. Plummer to appear in the national news, paper which is the oldest publisher's and advertisers' newspaper in America.

In his article Dr. Plummer quotes "Marse Henry" as saying, "It has been my rule, aim and effort in my newspaper career to print nothing of a man which I would not say to his face; to print nothing of a man in malice; to look well and think twice before consigning a suspect to the printer's ink; to respect the old and defend the weak and to be good to the girls and square with the boys."

Using Mr. Watterson's one-hundredth birthday as the occasion for recalling the famous newspaper editor, Dr. Plummer quoted "Marse Henry" further as saying when offered a political job as a reward for his services, "... I cannot help feel a kind of resentment." It is rather a badge of servitude. For all dignities my respect is reverent, ... but there is also dignity in duty done for the foreign service when he is on for his own sake; and this dignity cannot be enhanced by any blue ribbon or titular distinction."

Dr. Plummer, who received his Ph.D. degree from University of Wisconsin in 1940 has been head of the Journalism department since the death of Mr. Enoch Grehan.

Bells! Bells!

By Myrtle Weathers
They soothe the ear, ruin the digestion, stir the sensibilities, disrupt sweet slumber, restore life and vitality, and clip love in the bud. "They" are the bells by which this well-ordered University is directed. To the entering freshman, may the following explanation be of some help. To the upperclassman, may it put a new polish on the techniques dully by our small—but noteworthy—vacation.

At first a distinction must be made between the different noises, signified by the name of bells. To cite an example, there is the strange case of Neville hall, the place where the psychologists toy with rats and things to see what makes them "craze."

In this building there are at least three different types of instruments which emit harrington sounds. Almost every other structure on the campus has that many or more, so by explaining one system and by constant alertness and special exercises of the beginner, he may eventually come to discriminate. Most difficulty is experienced in determining the summoning bell, the one that marks the beginning of an hour of personal combat. Three sounds may be taken for this, and only one is right. There is the bell which is tapped by hand and used in experiments, the telephone, and lastly, the one which means business. To the trained ear the last has a harsher sound than the others. When in good voice, it begins with a slight tremor barely discernible, runs the scale to a high pitch never found on a musical instrument, starts a slow decline with a mixture of huzzaw noises which give cold shivers to the listener, and ends in an impetuous thump.

Indeed, there is a certain magic air and something of finality in the tone, especially to a student taking a quiz that hour. If the freshman learns to recognize this bell, he needn't bother with the others. It is the one which ruins the digestion, disrupts sweet slumber, and clips love in the bud.

Somehow, the same bell, which rings again at the end of the hour, is not difficult to distinguish. It seems to lilt, to flutter, to coo; it soothes the ear, stirs the sensibilities, and restores life and vitality.

Arts Building

given to the University by the late A. M. Miller.

Building Near Memorial
The building will be opposite the southeast end of the campus proper within 100 yards of Memorial hall. President Donovan explained that the recent state legislature, which gave the University the largest amount of money ever granted the institution, had allotted $1,050,000 for new construction. The $50,000 will be used for a dairy building as authorized earlier by the trustees. The trustees also authorized Mr. Peterson to procure bids on air conditioning of the Union building, the law building, and the bacteriology laboratory. In 1941 some material was procured, but shortage of materials prevented completion of the work.

President Donovan also announced that a total of 464 freshmen had been procured for war veterans now enrolled in the University. Judge Richard C. Stoll of Lexington, vice-chairman of the board and chairman of its executive committee, presided in the absence of Gov. Simeon Willis.

Philosophy Club

The Philosophy Club will hold its first meeting of the spring quarter at 7:30 p.m. Monday in room 200 of the Union building. Stanley Moton will present a paper on "The Nature and Art of Beauty." Officers for the coming year will be elected.

Elmer's Excursion - - - Or What Th' Hell Anyway

By Dottie Ramirez
Registration day, March 26, dawned with a down-pour of Kentucky rain, and through the rain, the larger group of excited freshmen, brimming with energy and anticipation tripped merrily to the gym for the great event. Behind them, dragged limply from tree to tree, the upperclassmen, juniors helping seniors, made their way to classes, gazing with exhausted interest at the newcomers, some remembering the days before they developed the U. T.'s (University) tremors. Say, there goes Elmer, typical example of the freshman. Let's go along with him and see how he makes out.

Upon entering the gym, little Elmer trudges from table to table, signing up for classes, and filling out schedules, wondering in a spare moment what it's all about. Occasionally he gazes about him and on one side there's a man, on the other side, a man, across from him a man, and sitting at the far end of the table, a girl! Yes, the crop of males looks pretty encouraging to the UK lassies, what with the rumored estimate of three men to one girl. (Don't get excited. It's only a rumor.)

Time marches along with our specimen, and he finds himself gazing at the crowd in the Union building, envying the thought that it faintly resembles a breadline. However he studies himself as he finds that in order to register, he also must take his place at the end of the line. Par' out in a corner an upperclassman, looking on with malicious amusement, is figuring up the profit he would make by selling coffee and donuts.

He finally reaches the room where he is to register, and after fiddling for a few hours, his row is called, and he wades through the cigarette butts to the front of the room. Oh boy, we're almost through, he thinks. The thought is smothered as more cards are shoved into his hands, and he rushes about trying to remember to keep out of the flock of ruptured ducks in one group.

As the evening sun sets, the steps over the weaker bodies, gladly pays his fees, and departs in a state of weary bewilderment.

Especially amusing were the fifty new students from foreign states, especially picked out by the disappointed look as they stoop to examine the "blue" grades.

The total enrollment soared to 4,221, and all newcomers, we say—better luck next time.

Pont Digest

Items of Interest in the Fields of Chemistry, Engineering, Physics, and Biology

NYLON—PRODUCT OF PURE RESEARCH

NYLON exists today because of curiosity—the curiosity of a group of Du Pont chemists who wanted to know more about polymerization, that strange process by which small molecules of chemical units to form larger molecules with entirely new and different chemical properties.

Du Pont chemists began a study of polymerization in 1928. They experimented with dibasic acid and diamine polyesters with molecular weights up to 25,000. In the spring of 1930, on removing one of these "superpolymers" from the molecular still, one of the chemists noted that it could be drawn out into a thin strand, like taffy candy. But, unlike taffy, it was not brittle when cooled. In fact, the cooled strand could be further drawn out to several times its former length and when so drawn became not only stronger but elastic! This original ester polymer had a low melting point and was sensitive to water. Nevertheless, it suggested that some related type of polymer might produce fibers which would be of practical use in textiles.

Numerous superpolymers were synthesized and tested. Finally, in 1935, a polyamide was prepared. From it, the first nylon filaments were made—by forcing the molten polymer through a hypodermic needle!

Nylon Polymer Developed

Further experimental work resulted in the development of a polymer that possessed the desired characteristics. This material was later christened nylon. But the job was not yet done. Research chemists—particularly physical chemists—and chemical engineers were called upon to devise practical methods for making the polymer and for spinning and drawing it into high-quality yarn. Mechanical engineers were given the task of designing plant equipment to carry out the processes. Organic chemists were required to develop new dyeing agents and to find a size to make knitting possible. At one time or another more than 200 research men, engineers and marketing specialists worked on the giant task of converting this child of chemical curiosity into a marketable product.

RESEARCH LOWERS PRICE OF SYNTHETIC UREA

Lower prices, as well as new processes, can result from intensive research. Take synthetic urea, for example. In 1930, urea sold for about 80¢ a pound. Great promise was held for this compound as an industrial fertilizer and plastic use—if an inexpensive manufacturing process could be found.

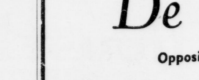

By methods then in use, ammonia and carbon dioxide were heated to about 150°C., forming urea and water in equilibrium with the unconverted original compounds. The yield of urea was approximately 45%. Research by Du Pont chemists and engineers showed that, by adjusting the proportions of the reactants, raising the temperature and increasing the pressure, conversion could be improved materially. But the corrosive mixture resulting quickly chewed up the best grades of steel available.

Long investigation by metallurgists, chemists and chemical engineers finally produced an autoclave in which the operation could be carried on a production basis. Today, Du Pont is able to sell synthetic urea for less than 4¢ a pound. Men of Du Pont take pride in the fact that their work has made it possible to reduce the price of urea from the "drug" class to a level where it can be used as a fertilizer by the farmer.

Questions College Men ask about Working with Du Pont

WHAT ADVANTAGES DOES DU PONT OFFER A RESEARCH MAN? To men interested in pure or applied research, Du Pont offers unusual advantages in equipment, facilities and funds. Men of Du Pont are constantly developing new processes and procedures, and seeking improvements in the fields of organic, inorganic and physical chemistry, biology and engineering suggest the diversity of the activities of Du Pont research men.

Coach Rupp to Be Presented With New Automobile at Jaycee Testimonial Banquet, April 9.

Coach Rupp

Coach Adolph Rupp will be honored at the Junior Chamber of Commerce's "Rupp Appreciation Celebration" to be held at the Lafayette Hotel at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 9.

Need Irish, nationally known basketball promoter and vice-president of Madison Square Garden, will be the principal speaker at the banquet.

The celebration is the climax to Rupp's most successful season at Kentucky. The team under his leadership won 28 of 30 games and were winners of the National Invitational and Southeastern Conference tournaments.

Coaches Pick Ky To Be No. 1

The country's leading basketball coaches have come to the conclusion that Kentucky will be the number one team in the nation next year.

Winner of the National Invitational tournament the Southeastern Conference and triumphant in 28 of 30 games, the Wildcats will have their entire team back next season with the exception of Wilbur Schu.

The Oklahoma Aggies, who finished ahead of Kentucky during the recently completed season by six points, 339 to 323, lose big Bob Kurland and his absence is bound to hurt the Cowboys.

The Kansas Jayhawks, with their entire team back, and Yale with Tony Lavell in action, also were pointed out as among next year's leaders along with Muhlenberg, Lafayette, West Virginia and Dartmouth.

The banquet and dance were given by the Alumni association.

TIME OUT!

By O. C. Halyard, Jr.

The spring athletic program at Kentucky has really shifted into high gear this week, and in another two weeks should be rolling along smoothly.

Football practice is moving along and gaining momentum every day and certainly seems to have more prospective candidates turn up each day or so.

Track and golf practices are also underway, but aren't having as much success as hoped for.

The sun finally stayed out long enough for the Athletics department to get some of the tennis courts in shape, and so Dr. Downing led his group of 31 hopefuls out to the clay courts Tuesday for something besides blackboard practice.

Baseball practice started Wednesday afternoon, and thus rounded out the schedule of spring sports—with the exception of swimming.

W. A. A. News

The W. A. A. Gladiators will leave for Cincinnati tomorrow morning to participate in the University of Cincinnati's play day.

Softball practice got under way this week with 27 girls turning out for the first call.

The "Gladiators" basketball team defeated the Inter-Sorority team 19-17 in the finals of the women's intramural basketball.

Climaxing the current basketball seasons in one of the outstanding games of the season, the Eastern All-Stars thrilled the patrons in Madison Square Garden with a one-point victory over the Western All-Stars.

A layup shot by Sid Tannenbaum of New York University a minute and half before the end of the contest proved to be the winning goal for the East.

The winning basket when Kenny Sailors of Wyoming missed a rebound as the game-ending whistle blew.

Ernie Vandeweghe of Colgate dashed the capacity crowd with his all-around ability and play for the West.

The game was the first of its kind and was played for the benefit of the Tribune Fresh Air Fund. It provided the fans with 46 minutes of thrills, and seems sure to become a yearly event.
