'Oh, to be in England now that April's there'—Robert Browning

The Vice Of The People

By FRED HILL

March is the windy month. People look out windows with sweaters on their backs and shiver. The wind whistles around their necks. Girls' skirts fluff higher and the inarticulate mutter of romance becomes a gusty rumble which will swell with the days to come.

It is apropos that the list of gossip writers swell with the season like the sorcery laundry in the wind. Their mood sets its pace by the atmosphere. And the atmosphere is lacking gale-size proportions by about three gusts.

For Tuesday's issue of The Kernel, Editor Jim Caldwell received three contributions one of which was not printed. The others were John Ed Pearce's "Well, I'll Be Damned" and "Hoey Polla" by McVey's halls two latest germinal addicts, Les Wallace and "Brownie". Pearce's column was a personal editorial-sarcastic, sometimes kind and sometimes incoherent. Blame for the incoherence possibly lies on the make-up men who were forced to cut its length. "Hoey Polla" is a good column, with malice towards none.

It was the unprinted column, however, that interests us most, for—according to Pearce, we never read it—it was directed at us by a campus character named Donald "Dim-dum" Lall.

Some weeks ago we remarked that "Beautify queen Ann Burton had been devious much of her time to Phi Tau "Dim-dum" Lall and that Burton admirers were horror-stricken. This was a dirty crack. So it was a dirty crack. Campus scandal columns full of dirty cracks still it was a fact. We knew at the time of at least two Burton admirers who were "horror-stricken".

However, rather than engage in an editorial battle with anybody, we will retain the statement that "Burton admirers are no longer horror-stricken that she is spending much of her time with "Dim-dum" Lall. She is devoting her time elsewhere."

The Improbability Of Peace

By JOHN LONG

Certain theorists contend that unsatisfactory peace settlements cause modern wars. Proper treaty making, they say, demands that the vanquished be either killed or cured but that modern peace settlements do neither. The victors, not being able to completely "wipe out" the losers do not attempt to cure them either; and, therefore, instead of removing the causes of the original conflict, they only augment them and heap on a multitude of others.

They point to the treaty of Versailles as the classic example, and attribute the present war to the terribly harsh and greedy terms of settlement. While we are acutely aware of the importance of this situation in the light of the current war, we cannot admit that all wars result solely from improper peace settlements of the past.

Many people believe that the division of humanity into independent sovereign states is the reason for hatred between races and classes. The result of man's inherent evil qualities.

NO SINGLE CAUSE

Obviously, a properly evolved theory of the causes of war will not limit itself to one circumstance but will be inclusive in its scope so as to recognize that such things as hatred between races and classes, fear, capitalist imperialism, economic inequalities, territorial aggrandizement, nationalism, militarism, emotion-arousing propaganda, and racial and individual passions for superiority all encourage war.

History shows that many attempts have been made to preserve peace. Many peace movements have been handed on an international scale only to be interrupted sooner or later by a major war. The movements have involved many basically different methods ranging all the way from the maintenance of peace by force to the outlawry of war.

Agreements have been made to limit armaments; international courts have been established; economic conferences have been held; pledges have been made not to resort to war; a League of Nations has been created; and many at-

The U.S.A.: Ally Or Sucker?

About this time last year, the army of the French Republic was snuggled complacently in its "impregnable" Maginot Line, eating rich food, getting the D.T.S., and complaining generally of the dullness of prewar warfare.

In England the men who controlled the government were speaking wisely of conducting "business as usual" while their superb navy blockaded Hitler's Germany into submission.

In the United States people were saying the whole thing was phoney, and were wondering if Summer Welles' junket to Europe might not mean that a peace was about to be negotiated.

It was the era of the "strikzirk," the period of the "hore war."

But it was also, as it later turned out, the fall before the storm.

Now we are at identically the same point we occupied in early March, 1940, and wondering, as we did then, what is to happen next. The only differences are that France today is Nazi rather than French, and the United States is a non-fighting ally of Great Britain rather than an amused and heckling neutral. And the men who control the government of England are said by most to have learned their lesson.

The British Tories have insisted time and again since Nevinson and Amiens and Dunkirk and Coventry that they now are fighting for democratic ideals rather than war time profits, for the opportunity to liberate Europe rather than for designs of empire. They are quick to say that they are no longer half-hearted, that they have given up the idea of "business as usual"—honest to goodness they have.

Americans want to believe, and many of us do believe, that these things are true. We are now non-belligerents on Britain's side, committed to her aid, and determined to see that she does not go down. Besides, we have seen how the common people of England, already taxed half their wages to support the war and subjected to daily bombings, are holding up and fighting back with a courage that is as heartening as anything history can offer. We want to see the British win; we think the British people deserve it.

But of late some things have been happening that make some of us wonder if the Tories have really assimilated last summer's lesson after all.

Things that remind us somehow of the "phoney war" era of a year ago, that convince us even more that, next to the Nazis themselves, the British Tories are the most thoroughly despicable breed of men on earth.

To begin with, in December there were Associated Press reports out of London to the effect that English mercantile interests were blocking attempts by the Admiralty to transfer Britain's South American shipping to American vessels—a plan designed to free desperately needed British ships for the North Atlantic routes. The London firms admitted the reason for the refusal was that they were afraid the United States would sweep their South American markets away.

And more recently, according to the strongly pro-British column, The Washington Merry-Go-Round, the colonial officials in the West Indian islands have been driving painfully hard bargains for land which the United States needs for naval bases and air fields—land to which America is rightfully entitled because of the President's destroyer deal last September. Those 50 destroyers, which are now in British hands, were completely equipped even down to the cigarettes in the officers' mess rooms; and yet English subjects in Bermuda have demanded $12,000 per acre for the 125 acres needed on that island.

In Trinidad, local government officials at first refused to sell a badly needed 30 square miles because they were afraid militarization of the property would "disturb the normal life of the community" by interfering with certain holiday and sports activities. They finally gave in, but at a cost of $3,000,000.

And last but not least there is that now-famous episode of the Brazilian airplane orders. According to a number of reliable Washington sources the government of Brazil recently asked several American aircraft firms to build her a number of transport planes for military and commercial service—which requests were denied because the companies were engaged in building fighters and bombers for the defense of Great Britain. The Brazilians then approached an English firm, which accepted orders not only for the planes but for a number of aircraft engines.

Now these particular cases may or may not constitute evidence as to the sincerity of Britain's rulers, who insist they are fighting to preserve and expand democratic principles. They may indicate nothing more than the fact that a number of very smart people are taking advantage of the war to clean up at the expense of the many.

If, however, these cases really mean what they seem to mean, then the British Tories are right back where they were this time last year—deeply engrossed in conducting "business as usual."

Which means that we may expect some more bitter surprises from the Nazis in the next few weeks, and that it is not improbable that Londoners may wake up some fine spring morning to find not the nightingale, but the Schut; Staffels singing in Berkeley Square.

25 Pct. Weren't Very Certain

BEHIND IVYED WALLS By ALLEN E. WINER

Only seventy-five percent of those tested have answered correctly the question, "What is the Bill of Rights, where is it?"

Of the twenty-five percent erring on this query, included in the civil liberties poll being conducted by this column, several identified the Bill of Rights as part of the Declaration of Independence; and one called it part of the Monroe Doctrine; believe it or not. Many answers identified the Bill of Rights as "something guaranteeing certain privileges of speech and religion," but failed to locate it correctly.

Opinion on freedom of the press varies considerably. Fifty percent only were approached for their views and there were almost that many different ideas. Surprisingly enough, fifteen believed in some sort of government censorship during the present war emergency, especially, as one person put it "on news that is probably subversive or fifth-column in nature."

Several believed in an absolute freedom of the press under any circumstances, declaring that any infringement of the press' liberties would set a dangerous precedent. This opinion, however, was in the minority, being supported by ten persons only.

Thirty were in accord on a temporary censorship, to be applied only after entrance into war, and covering news only of a military significance. (This term "military significance" is one that can be stretched to mean most anything, however, when a country is at war.)

Sentiment is against labor, judging from replies from one-hundred students. The average opinion is that labor disturbances during national defense operations (specifically strikes, walk-outs, unionizing) interfere grossly with defense measures. Seventy-eight of the hundred declared that these labor disturbances were the makings of "Communists and other subversive groups, including agents representing enemy governments". However, the majority also expressed antagonism toward corporations which are violating present labor laws, particularly the NLRB regulations.

The minority opinion on strikes and walkouts, etc., was that corporations landing large defense contracts are using the situation of national emergency to undermine labor rights behind a screen of patriotism.

Sixty persons believed that labor should make sacrifices during this emergency in order "not to disturb progress of defense armament," and that after the emergency is over they can resume the organization of unions. (This point of view seems to be based upon the assumption of a gold and rosy period following the war, and, in our opinion, quite tragic in its naivete.)

Asks Support Of Religious Emphasis Week

To the Editor of The Kernel:

Surely it is a most puzzling fact that we need to take a week out of a semester to emphasize the need of religion on a campus such as ours, which is largely composed of intellectual, clear-thinking students. It is strange that we are not more conscious of our religion every day, every week, every month of our lives.

So many of us reach a period when we think we can do without religious emphasis, or sleep through a public expression of it, on Sunday especially, but certainly we come to realize the great need for it later, as have men like Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Bingham, our ex-President, Doctor McVey, President Cooper, and so many of the other teachers and leaders on the campus.

Perhaps we must make March the beginning of our personal and campus-wide Emphasis on Religion just as the "Y" creates its special Religious Emphasis Week—although this group's usual programs will continue. May I take this opportunity to add that every student on this campus could and would profit by the more excellent things these different organizations of "Y" offer.

Surely we have been taught in our homes a religion—need we—must of going to church when we arrive at college. Do let us "Go to Church Sunday" and every Sunday afterwards, trying as best we know how to live the lives that Christ would have us live.

... when he wrote "What's in a Name?"

The Bard of Avon was right about the rose—it's name is unimportant. But if he'd had anything to do with naming telephone exchanges, he'd have learned a lot!

Name must be easy to pronounce and transmit—must not look or sound like other exchange names—must not use the same dial finger spaces.

Take MUR and OTIS, for example, Fine!—except they dial alike! For the first two letters of each appear in the same finger spaces on the dial.

Often hundreds of names are listed, discarded, discarded before one is found that meets all requirements. Such care in every phase of Bell System work helps to make your telephone service the world's finest.

Why not telephone home often? Long Distance rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.

The tournament teams will be picked from the top 50 percent in their particular league or division. In division 1 of the A league, the SAE's, Delta, and Phi Tau's have already made the grade.

The Sigma Nu's beat the Lambda Chi's 27-10, to finish on top in the second division of league A with six wins and one loss, but in the first division, the SAE's and the ACP's finished in a tie as the Alpha Gamma Rho's lost their first game of the season, 22-14, to Phi Kappa Alpha and the SAE's squeaked through to a 24-23 win over the Phi Dels.

The KA's won over the Sigma Chi's, 27-14, in division 1 of the A league and the Triangles beat the Delta to gain a place in the tournament playoff.

Other winners in the second division of league A were the ATO's who beat the Kappa Sig's, 19-8, the Phi Tau's who trounced Gamma Tau Alpha, 27-12, and the Deltas, who gained a forfeit from the Phi Sig's. Forfeit Called

Although the Triangles won a 26-11 game in B league play from Phi Kappa Tau, the Intramural department called the game a forfeit, because the Phi Tau's used an ineligible player.

The Lambda Chi's beat the KA's, 16-12, the ATO's stopped the Sigma Nu's 32-18, and the SAE's racked up a 26-10 win at the expense of the Delta in B league play.

Bush Brooker's 12 points weren't a bit unlikely as he led Jake's Independents to a 38-18 victory over the ATO's in Independent league competition. The K club won on a forfeit from the Quadrangle Quinets, the annual Debs won on a forfeit, by the Grave Diggers, the Dare Devils won a 2-0 forfeit from Pieta's County Forencickers and the Dairy Club beat the Wolf Patrol, 28-15.

The Phi Tau's finished up their C league season Wednesday night on top of the standing with a 28-21 win over the SAE's, the ATO's beat the KA's, 21-4, and the SAE's won from the Delta Monday night, 17-8.

'GLAMOR' CATS SELECT SQUAD Coeds Will Open Season March 14 After three weeks of basketball practice, the WAA "Glamor Cats" have been selected and will play two games next week. Eloise Rochester, manager, announced yesterday.

The Cats will open their season Friday, March 14 at 2:30 p.m. in the University women's gym, with the Transylvania team, and the next day will travel to Cincinnati to participate in a sports meet with WAA teams from Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi.

Included in the Cincinnati sports meet will be basketball, volleyball, swimming, badminton, and fencing. Selected from a group of 50 players, the starting line-up includes Doris Reichenbach, Doris Settle, Eloise Rochester, forwards; and Betty Dew, Margaret Pessler, and Jennie Sullivan, guards. Other members of the squad are Martha McCaskey, Dorothy Paul, forwards; Mabel Warnecke, Lida Stoll, and Anne Purdon, guards.

More than 40 girls participated in basketball last year, and 35 were awarded points toward numerals, letters, and pins. Plans for future meets with other WAA teams will be announced at a later date.

Cat Practice Tilt Set For Tomorrow Kentucky footballers will get their first scrimmage workout Saturday afternoon on the Stoll field practice lot.

The entire squad has been working at top speed all week getting into shape for their first real spring test after 4 weeks of grueling training grind. Commenting on the lack of injuries Coach Kirwan remarked "We aren't going to hurt them this spring."

So far the worst complaints from the players have been about sore muscles and bruises. Eleven returning lettermen were exempted from practice for the first three weeks.
