DALZELL · DANA

York, 1903-05, marked an important step forward in the American theater.

DALZELL, JOHN (b. New York, N.Y., 1845; d. Altadena, Calif., 1927), lawyer, parliamentarian. Congressman, Republican, from Pennsylvania, 1886-1912; dominant in Rules Committee of the House.

DALZELL, ROBERT M. (b. near Belfast, Ireland, 1793; d. Rochester, N.Y., 1873), millwright, inventor. Introduced and perfected the elevator system for storing grain and meal which is now used in all large ports.

DAMROSCH, FRANK HEINO (b. Breslau, Silesia, 1859; d. New York, N.Y., 1937), music educator. Son of Leopold Damrosch. Founder (with James Loeb) of Institute of Musical Art, 1905, later the undergraduate section of the Juilliard School.

DAMROSCH, LEOPOLD (b. Posen, Poland, 1832; d. New York, N.Y., 1885), conductor, composer, violinist. Came to America, 1871, as conductor of New York Arion Society. Active in many fields, he raised the standard of musical taste and appreciation in America.

DANA, CHARLES ANDERSON (b. Hinsdale, N.H., 1819; d. Dosoris Island, Glen Cove, N.Y., 1897), newspaper editor. Matriculated Harvard, 1839; left in junior year because of failing eyesight. Spent five years at Brook Farm and became "the best all-round man" there. Joined staff of New York Tribune and stood second in the office to Greeley alone when he resigned, 1862, to serve in the War Department. As reporter and observer, he gave valuable aid to Grant and Sherman. After an unsuccessful newspaper venture in Chicago, Dana became owner-editor of New York Sun, 1868. A perverse, cynical and often reactionary leader of public opinion, he achieved high distinction as a news editor, especially emphasizing the human interest story and cleverness of style and reporting technique.

DANA, CHARLES LOOMIS (b. Woodstock, Vt., 1852; d. Harmon, N.Y., 1935), neurologist. Brother of John C. Dana. M.D., Columbian University, 1876; College of Physicians and Surgeons, 1877. His clinical descriptions of combined scleroses of the spinal chord and observations on alcoholism are of outstanding importance. [Supp. 1]

DANA, EDWARD SALISBURY (b. New Haven, Conn., 1849; d. 1935), mineralogist. Son of James D. Dana. Graduated Yale, 1870; Ph.D., 1876. His revision (1892) of his father's System of Mineralogy (1837) has been with its appendices the standard reference in the field. [Supp. 1]

DANA, FRANCIS (b. Charlestown, Mass., 1743; d. Cambridge, Mass., 1811), diplomat, jurist. Son of Richard Dana; nephew of Edmund Trowbridge. Graduated Harvard, 1762; admitted to the bar, 1767.

At first in favor of reconciliation with Great Britain, post 1776 he took a leading part in the Revolution and was secretary of legation with John Adams in Paris, 1780. He spent 1781-83 in Russia vainly attempting to obtain recognition of the United States and a treaty. He was associate justice of Massachusetts supreme court, 1785-1806; from 1791 to 1806 he was chief justice of that body. A true Federalist, he supported the Alien and Sedition Bills and regarded Jeffersonians as a national menace.

DANA, JAMES (b. Cambridge, Mass., 1735; d. New Haven, Conn., 1812), Congregational clergyman. Leading character in the "Wallingford Controversy," 1758; pastor, First Church, New Haven, 1789-1805.

DANA, JAMES DWIGHT (b. Utica, N.Y., 1813; d. 1895), geologist, zoologist. Attended Yale, 1830-33; left to become instructor in the navy. Served as geologist and mineralogist with the U.S. South Seas Expedition under Capt. Wilkes, 1838-42. Editor of the American Journal of Science. Professor of natural history at Yale, post 1849; professor of geology, 1864-90. Despite poor health, Dana was a tireless writer; in addition to his reports from the Wilkes expedition, he wrote standard texts including Manual of Geology (1862) and Textbook of Geology (1864). Influential as teacher and scholar, Dana was America's foremost geologist throughout his active life.

DANA, JAMES FREEMAN (b. Amherst, N.H., 1793; d. 1827), chemist. Graduated Harvard, 1813. Brother of Samuel L. Dana. Taught chemistry at Harvard, Dartmouth, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

DANA, JOHN COTTON (b. Woodstock, Vt., 1856; d. New York, N.Y., 1929), librarian, museum director, author, printer. Graduated Dartmouth, 1878. For reasons of health abandoned practice of law; after trials at engineering and newspaper work, became librarian in 1889 of the Denver (Colo.) Public Library which flourished under his administration. In 1898 he became librarian of the City Library, Springfield, Mass., and in 1902 of the Public Library, Newark, N.J. He greatly increased the circulation of the Newark library, making it the most effective institution of its kind in the United States. As director of the Newark Museum he made it as popular in its sphere as the library. Author of a standard textbook, Library Primer (1896), his pungent style is best represented in Libraries: Addresses and Essays (1916).

DANA, NAPOLEON JACKSON TECUMSEH (b. Eastport, Maine, 1822; d. Portsmouth, N.H., 1905), soldier, business executive. Graduated West Point, 1842. Served in Mexican War and was Union major-general of volunteers.

DANA, RICHARD (b. Cambridge, Mass., 1700; d. Boston, Mass., 1772), lawyer. Graduated Harvard, 1718. A leader at the bar, Dana was an original mem-
