ALUMNI NOTES

The alumni of the University living near and around Louisville were called to a meeting held April 16 at the Kentucky hotel in honor of the late Dean F. Paul Anderson.

Former students and graduates were in attendance. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. A. A. Alumni Day Is Marked Success

May 31st, 1934, is a date which will remain in the minds of many Kentucky alumni as one of the outstanding days of their lives, in happiness, pleasant associations, and renewal of friendships. For on this date, Alumni Day was held at the University of Kentucky, a day crammed full of events of interest and planned for the entertainment of the alumni.

The day opened with breakfast at Maxwell Place, after which the annual meeting of the association was held. For the first time in the history of the Association, the entire Senior Class attended the alumni meeting.

After the reading of the Secretary's report and the minutes of the last meeting, President McVey made a short talk, praising the alumni for their loyalty and good will evinced during the year. "I want the University alumni to grasp the idea of service this institution can render the commonwealth. Justification of a University is in you and your attitude as an alumnus to your alma mater. It is necessary to have trained citizenship, to understand the problem of social organization, and to support loyally your educational institutions if you want a greater commonwealth," Doctor McVey said.

The 321 members of the graduating class, led by Dr. G. Davis Buckner, '08, past president of the association and member of the Executive Committee, recited the following pledge:

"With full realization of our responsibilities as alumni of the University of Kentucky, prizing our ideals, esteeming our heritage, and above all and before all honoring our alma mater, we, the members of the senior class, do hereby enter into the ranks of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association, pledging our support to its projects and our loyalty to those principles for which the University of Kentucky stands: the service of the people of the commonwealth, the education of its children and the promulgation of good citizenship; so that our vision of an even greater University will be realized for our children and our children's children."

Doctor Buckner praised Doctor Wilson, the retiring president, for his capable leadership in that office during the past two years.

Doctor Wilson announced the new officers for the ensuing year. They are: Judge Charles I. Dawson, Louisville, president; and Mrs. Jesse M. Herndon, Irvington, vice-president. Wayland Rhoads and Miss Lullie Logan were reelected to serve on the Executive Committee. Due to a sudden illness, Judge Dawson was unable to be present at the meeting. Doctor Wilson turned the meeting over to Mrs. Herndon, who presided for the remainder of the time.

N. B. Hays, Lexington and Tampa, Fla., and C. G. Blakely, Topeka, Kans., two of the oldest living graduates of the University, attended their 55th anniversary reunion. They were graduated in the Class of '79 and are the only surviving members of their class. They had a 100 per cent attendance at the reunion and were granted honorary life memberships in the Alumni Association.

At noon, group luncheons were held by various classes, and at 3:30 o'clock, alumni attended the memorial services for the members of the faculty who died during the past year. The memorial honored Dean F. Paul Anderson, Dr. J. B. Holloway, Reid P. Meacham, John B. Dicker,

W. A. Newman, Alonzo D. Moore, Judge Lyman Chalkley, Mrs. Mary Stinehour and Mrs. Ludlow Petty. Mrs. Stinehour and Mrs. Petty were fraternity housemothers. President McVey presided at the memorial services and Prof. Edward F. Farquhar spoke on "A Presence Which Is Not to Be Put By."

At 4:30, the alumni were guests at Maxwell Place for the annual "at home" given by the President and his wife. Many alumni, seniors, and friends of the University were in attendance.

Alumni Day festivities were concluded with the annual banquet at the Lafayette hotel. A feature of the evening was the awarding of five honorary life memberships to graduates who had been out of the University 50 years or more. The two sole surviving members of the Class of 1879 were present. General N. E. Hays, Tampa, Fla. and Lexington, and Charles Graham Blakely, Topeka, Kansas, celebrated their 55th anniversary reunion and attended all the functions of alumni day and Commencement Day. This was the first time in many years that any class had had a 100 per cent attendance at reunions.

Of the three surviving members of the Class of 1884, only one was in attendance. He was Scott Graves, Lexington. President McVey award-ded the life membership certificates to these three men at the alumni banquet. The certificates were sent to the two absent members of the 1884 class, B. P. Eubank, Hopkinsville, and Dr. R. T. Ramsey, Denver, Colo.

Lee McClain, '19, toastmaster at the banquet, presided in a way which was a credit to his alma mater, introducing the speakers of the evening and officers of the association. Senator Owsley Stanley made a short talk, reminiscing on his days as a student at the University.

James K. Patterson Statue Is Dedicated

Before a large crowd, including members of the faculty, student body, alumni and friends of the University of Kentucky, the memorial statue to Dr. James Kennedy Patterson, for 41 years president of the University of Kentucky, was unveiled on the University campus June 1 after a dedicatory address by Former Gov. and United States Senator A. O. Stanley. A perfect June day marked the exercises, which were held under the shade of century-old trees.

The statue, the work of Augustus Lukeman, distinguished American sculptor, has been placed on the quadrangle east of the administration building and in front of the University museum, formerly the University library, which Doctor Patterson had built. It is the seated figure of Doctor Patterson, his left hand grasping his cane and his right hand a sheaf of papers. The bronze statue is mounted on a marble base, flanked by a small tile pavilion, and surrounded by a low marble wall. Two marble benches have been placed by the wall, and the entire terrace is surrounded by shrubs. Mr. Lukeman was present for the dedication and was introduced to the audience.

Dr. George Roberts, head of the University department of agronomy and graduate in the class of 1899 under President Patterson, presided at the exercises. Dr. E. E. Snoddy, professor of Christian doctrine at Transylvania College, asked the invocation.

Child Unveils Statue

Charles N. Manning, secretary-treasurer of the Patterson memorial committee, presented the statue to the University, after its unveiling by his small granddaughter, Elinor Manning Isaacs.

In accepting the statue, Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University since 1917, said he did so "because it is an expression of appreciation, generosity and love of a large number of men and women. Second, because it is a beautiful expression of the sculptor's art, and third, because it carries the spirit of James Kennedy Patterson and will serve as a constant reminder of what he did for the University, and thus will bring to the University staff of today and the future a new understanding of what the University is and the service we owe to it."

In presenting the statue, Mr. Manning said:

"Ten years ago, almost to the minute, a group of men and women who either were connected with or friends of this University, assembled near this spot and with words of admiration, appreciation and affection dedicated the residence in which James Kennedy Patterson had lived for many years and in which he had died as a shrine to his memory. The tablet affixed to its wall recites that from 1869 to 1910 he was the president of this institution and bears the quotation from Virgil: 'Haec olim meminisse ju-vabit—hereafter it will be a delight to remember these things.'

"And indeed it is a delight to realize that the fame of this great man has increased with the flight of years and with the growth of this University, of which it may be truly said he was the father, for which he labored so long and so zealously, upon which he bestowed his pride and affection while living, and to which he gave virtually his entire estate at his death.

JAMES K. PATTERSON STATUE

—Kenneth Studio.

"The foundations which he laid were so broad and so strong that his successors have been able to build upon them a greater institution than the means at his command permitted him to erect; and upon the greatness of him upon whom his mantle has fallen is attested not alone by the additions which he has made to the achievements of his distinguished predecessor, but likewise to his earnest and constant efforts to honor his memory and to preserve the traditions which he has bequeathed.

"And doubtless other friends and defenders of popular education throughout Kentucky, in this moment of its distress and peril, remembering the battles fought and won in its behalf by this indomitable Scotsman in earlier days, would join with the head of this institution in a paraphrase of Wordsworth's apostrophe to Milton, and exclaim: 'Patterson, thou shouldst be living at this hour; Kentucky has need of thee!'"

"It is my part and my great privilege and pleasure, Mr. President, on behalf of the Patterson memorial committee and of all who have contributed of their time, their labor or their means to the fruition of this day, to present to the University of Kentucky, as a token of their admiration, appreciation, affection, gratitude, and pride, and as a symbol of those unseen things which are eternal, this statue of that great scholar, great teacher, great statesman, great man, president for more than 40 years of this great institution which will ever stand as a memorial to the useful and consecrated life of James Kennedy Patterson."

Stanley Lauds Scot

In his dedicatory address, Senator Stanley, an alumnus of the University, extolled the accomplishments of the penniless Scot, who overcame apparently insurmountable difficulties to become the head of a university and one of the most renowned educators of his day. In his address, Senator Stanley gave quotations from certain of the now famous speeches the brilliant educator made before the Kentucky general assembly in behalf of the University.

"Were I asked where is the monument of James K. Patterson," Senator Stanley said, "with one hand I should point to the University and with the other to the accomplished manhood of the commonwealth of Kentucky.

"Twice 10,000 aspiring youths of whose plastic lives he was at once the architect and inspiration, have eternally incised upon throbbing hearts and the tablets of love and memory the ineffaceable story of his nobility and worth. And that story as a proud and tender tradition shall pass from father to son, so long as yonder bronze shall defy the wasting tooth of time. For him there is no need of 'storied urn or animated bust.' This University is the fitting and eternal monument to James Kennedy Patterson."

Tracing the life of Doctor Patterson, the speaker told of the early struggles of the Scottish cripple to acquire an education, of his career as a school teacher in Indiana as a young man, and of his coming to Kentucky, where he was placed in charge of a school near Newcastle, after which he became principal of the Presbyterian Academy at Greenville, then principal of Stewart College, Clarksville, and president of Transylvania University before becoming established as a member of the faculty of the new University of Kentucky in 1867.

"History made him wise, mathematics subtle, philosophy profound, and the natural sciences revealed to him the hidden forces and mysteries of nature," the speaker said, and "his mastery of the classics afforded a diction, copious, ornate and polished as Parian marble. Such was the man who, in 1878, became president of the A. and M. College of Kentucky," which at that time, to use the words of Doctor Patterson, "had a name, a charter a yearly income of $900 and nothing else."

Senator Stanley then told of Doctor Patterson's fight for state appropriations for the University, and of his appearances before the general assembly, with the result that "the foundation of its imposing halls were set by his skill, and by his tireless energy, his transcendent genius and his indomitable will."

The Patterson memorial dedication brought to a close impressive commencement activities during which 321 degrees were conferred by President McVey.

Prior to the dedication, the 1934 graduating class, through its president, Smith Broadbent, Cadiz, presented to the University a memorial tree, an artistically designed bulletin board, donations for the University Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. funds, the first donations for installation of chimes in Memorial hall, and a donation of a fund for the erection of the student union building. The gifts represented an aggregate of $200. The tree will be placed near the recently-enlarged entrance.

Daniel W. Goodman, journalism graduate and one of the students joining in publishing "The Cub Review" which was sent to publishers in all parts of the country, has accepted a position as proof-reader with a printing company in Detroit.

EFFORTS OF BONNYMAN MAKE STATUE POSSIBLE

A large portion of the credit for the beautiful memorial to the memory of Dr. James Kennedy Patterson, for 41 years president of the University of Kentucky, is due to the untiring efforts of Alexander

ALEXANDER BONNYMAN

Bonnyman, Knoxville, Tenn., alumnus of the University, and loyal friend of President Patterson, who upon the death of Charles R. Brook, native Kentuckian and prominent attorney of Denver, Colo., was appointed chairman of the Patterson memorial committee, and through his own generous contributions and untiring solicitations of funds, was in a great part responsible for the consummation of the project.

The only regret expressed by alumni and friends of the University in attendance at the dedication was that Mr. Bonnyman, who was on one of his frequent visits to Europe at the time, was unable to attend the exercises.

McGINNIS ENROLS IN CINCINNATI SCHOOL

Louis McGinnis, former University of Kentucky athlete and currently associated with the W. R. Milward mortuary, has enrolled at the Cincinnati School of Embalming. Mr. McGinnis will be gone about six months.

Upon his return to this city, he will renew his connections with the local morticians. Mr. McGinnis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. McGinnis, 160 Jefferson street.

U. K. Benefactor Fatally Injured

E. O. Robinson, 67, Fort Thomas, a pioneer developer of the hardwood industry of the south, widely known philanthropist and a member of the board of trustees of the University of Kentucky, died shortly before 12 o'clock Monday night, June 25th at St. Elizabeth hospital, Covington, as a result of injuries received earlier in the day when his automobile plunged from the Cincinnati-Louisville highway 30 miles southwest of Covington near Warsaw.

"Mr. Robinson was a great friend of the College of Agriculture and of the University, and was deeply interested in the economic and social progress of eastern Kentucky," Dr. Thomas P. Cooper, dean of the agricultural college and head of the University Experiment Station, said in discussing Mr. Robinson's death.

Mr. Robinson was on his way to Cumberland Falls when he was hurt. He told hospital attendants, after regaining consciousness, that he could not explain how the accident occurred, but advanced the possibility of a momentary dizzy spell.

For a number of years Mr. Robinson took special interest in the College of Agriculture. Ten years ago, shortly before his retirement as president of the Mowgray and Robinson Lumber Company, he donated a tract of 17,000 acres of cut-over timber land around Quicksand, in Breathitt county, for use as an experimental station. On this donated tract was built the Robinson sub-station, named in his honor.

He also set up the E. O. Robinson memorial trust fund for advancement of economic and agricultural conditions in eastern Kentucky. This fund is administered by a board of trustees, and part of it is used in the Robinson sub-station vicinity. The Robinson fall-festival held at the Quicksand sub-station each September annually attracts thousands of persons, and demonstrates possibilities of planned farming in the mountains.

Mr. Robinson was chairman of the board of the Mowgray and Robinson

Lumber Company, Cincinnati, owner of rich lumber lands in eastern Kentucky. The firm was one of the pioneer developers of hardwood tracts in eastern Kentucky and Tennessee and had extensive holdings in Clay and Breathitt counties, and a large mill at Quicksand.

The work done by the University College of Agriculture at its Quicksand sub-station has been carried along the same lines as those followed at the Lexington station. The staff has made an extensive study of forestry and reforestation, and has spent considerable time in advancing the production of fruits in eastern Kentucky. The station also maintains its own experimental dairy and swine herds and poultry flocks.

Mr. Robinson was a frequent visitor to Lexington and the Quicksand station, and devoted much time and interest to the mountain section. In May, 1931, he was a recipient of the Sullivan medallion, given by the University for meritorious service to his state.

He was a former president of the National Hardwood Manufacturers' Association and was a member of the National Hardwood Lumber Association; Cincinnati Lumbermen's club, the Business Men's club of Cincinnati; Queen City club of Cincinnati; Highland Country club, of Fort Thomas, and Maketawah Country club, of Cincinnati.

Mr. Robinson also was a member of Queen City Lodge of Masons and Hanselman Commandery, Knights Templar.

MODELING CLASS IS MOVED TO U. K.

Arrangements have been made for resumption of the free modeling classes which Augustus Donfred H. Build has been offering under auspices of The Lexington Leader. Since the down-town studio that the sculptor had been using has been leased and must be cleared for the new occupant, the classes were shifted to quarters of the department of building and grounds, University of Kentucky. The building, a former tobacco warehouse, is on the west side of south Limestone street, opposite the campus.

Classes are held Monday afternoon from 3:15 to 5:15 o'clock, and Monday night from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. A number of University of Kentucky students who are interested in the art have expressed a desire to enter a proposed new class. There is no charge for the instruction, but each student is required to furnish the modeling clay with which he works.

A bust of Samuel J. Roberts, founder of The Lexington Leader, has been placed in the lobby of the newspaper office. It was one of four statues of prominent men that Mr. Build has executed since he has been in Lexington. His bust of James Lane Allen has been placed in Henry Clay high school, and one of Dean F. Paul Anderson in Mechanical hall on the University campus. A bust of Dr. Frank L. McVey is to be put in the new library at the University.

F. G. CUTLER DIES AT HOME IN ALABAMA

Word of the death recently in New York City of F. G. Cutler, formerly of Louisville and a graduate of the College of Engineering University of Kentucky, in the class of 1901, has been received by members of the college staff.

Mr. Cutler, whose home was in Ensley, Ala., where he was chief engineer with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Company, was in New York to take treatments after three mastoid operations.

He is survived by his wife, a brother, Thomas H. Cutler, who graduated from the University in 1903, and two nephews, Frank M. and T. H. Cutler Jr., both graduates of the University in 1932.

The University And Education In The State

By J. S. Caudel

From an educational standpoint, we must begin by considering Kentucky fortieth in the parade of states toward educational advancement.

At this very time, we are experiencing a new deal; we are rushing into new fields of endeavor; launching upon ideas and plans, revolutionary in thought, and aspect. We are doing things, thinking, planning, actually engaged in works, which, only a year ago, were unheard of—thus the rapidity with which we progress.

And, as the world advances, so does the value of a higher education increase, and the necessity therefore, become more apparent.

Higher education, and its increasing necessity, becomes more in demand and more useful to the entire nation, from an entirely different field of thought than that of advancing civilization, namely that of combating the increasing crime wave.

It must be admitted that higher education is one of the most efficient means of combating crime; one fifth of the inmates of the Kentucky Reformatory have never been to school. Seventy percent of the inmates of Atlanta prison have less than a sixth grade education. Only one percent of the criminals over the country have as much as a high school education, and the percentage of College graduates becoming criminals, is so small as to be insignificant.

The great recruiting ground for crime and lawlessness is among the youngsters who leave school before they have enough to broaden their interests and give them a proper view point or responsibility as citizens.

This is only another way of saying that public schools and state-maintained schools of higher learning are most effective in the prevention of crime. The increasing complexity of modern life demands that an increased education be provided the youth of the nation to better prepare them for the more exacting duties of citizenship.

Thus it must be admitted that higher education decreases the percentage of criminals, and consequently decreases the costs of the courts, and relieves the enormous burden of the taxpayers. From this standpoint alone, higher education is the soundest investment for the taxpayers, whose direct benefits are repaid many fold.

We people of Kentucky, in considering higher education, must turn to the one central spot—the very hub of higher education in Kentucky—the University, from whence radiates the forces and influences directly bearing upon all other institutions of learning in the state, and for the existence of which, we depend upon appropriations from the General Assembly.

In facing the problems of appropriations to institutions of learning we see but one objection which any one could conscientiously advance, and that is the time-honored excuse of over-taxation. Taxation is, always has been, and always will be, a thorn in the flesh of humanity. Our taxes are great, and our unemployed and needy many. Their needs must be administered unto. But we have a growing generation. Young people who must take up the reins of government as we release them, must grasp the wheel of state as our faltering hands—through time and age—are no longer able to steer.

Recent national legislation, as well as state legislation has resulted, and will result, in greater revenue without added burden to the taxpayers as a whole. In speaking of appropriations for our University, we need fear no added burden to the taxpayers, for unemployment and relief funds now being raised, being but temporary, the necessity therefore must and will soon cease, but the funds for our institutions must be appropriated to cover a period of two years to come.

Why, we may ask, do we maintain a University at public expense? Primarily, to prepare the youth of our land for a better outlook upon life—better equip him to face the problems of the world. In short, give him a better chance in every field of endeavor open to humanity. Hence the many departments of our University. For here, we learn to be a better, more competent, more economical farmer, a better mechanic, musician, printer, editor, engineer, lawyer, or doctor. In short our University offers a chance to each student to improve himself in any field he may wish to enter as a life work. We may say then, the University of Kentucky is established, first to train for leadership. But it does not stop here. Its second great mission is that of a fact finding laboratory. But of all services, it is first to the Commonwealth which it serves.

For instance, if you find a strange plant or animal, a peculiar rock or fossil,—mineral you do not know the contents of,—but submitting to the proper department of the University this plant, animal, or whatever it may be, will be properly identified and classified. A peculiar disease infests your livestock, for some unknown reason your crops are being destroyed,—certain crops fail to produce sufficiently for profit,—the University will determine the cause and present a remedy. A lawyer may have a point of law to trace down, to determine what law applied to a certain state of facts, the University law library has an exhaustive treatise on the point and has there, available, the latest law on the question involved.

The College of Engineering and connected therewith, the bureau of mines and mining, gives valuable information concerning coals and iron, where located, how most economically mined and marketed. Here are tested the various coals for domestic purposes and the valve of various coal burners on the market and the types of coal best suited for various burners—here too are tested various road materials and concrete mixtures for road building; clay products and their uses are also here tested. You desire a mechanical device tested to determine its uses and economical value to man.

The University will be able to tell you these facts by tests under operating conditions and to determine the economical value of your invention.

Here are Public Service laboratories making tests and analyses for the information of public health officials and private physicians and citizens concerned with the health of their families and the community.

The Department of Public Hygiene and Public Health is rendering a service of great value to the students on the campus, and by its studies of conditions, to the whole state.

The Bureau of Governmental Research is giving valuable aid to the study of state and community conditions and offering tested plans for improvement.

The College of Commerce and Bureau of Business Research are providing definite contacts with economic problems and principles of business.

No doubt the College of Education is one of the most important colleges because it touches the remote sections of the state—giving equilibrium to the teaching profession and aiding them to maintain uniform methods of teaching. In connection with this is closely allied the Extension courses. You desire an education along certain lines, but cannot, from economical and other reasons attend the University. Then the University comes to you, through extension courses. There are extension courses in home economics, which have given invaluable information to home owners and home makers, giving better and more economical conditions to the home and farm.

The extension work reaches every part of the state, offering courses and aid to rural teachers, social workers, housewives, musicians, ministers and many other vocations and professions.

The College and department benefiting most people is perhaps the College of Agriculture and the Experiment Station closely allied therewith. For, through this agency millions have been saved the farmers of this state by testing and insuring pure, wholesome and true feeds, seeds, nursery stock and fertilizers, all of which must be tested and approved before sold, and this service comes to you all through this department without a single cent tax upon the people of Kentucky.

Then comes the 4-H clubs causing direct interest in agriculture among our boys and girls.

Thus we see the many ways the University serves and reaches every nook and corner of the state. Rich and poor, skilled and unskilled alike—the many ways it serves have been touched upon but slightly, because none are of interest to you all, but some service is of interest to some one of you, no matter what you do or where you are, what you earn or where you labor—your University directly repays you for your taxes no matter whether you ever saw the University or not.

But the University cannot serve without competent supervision and trained experts, and we cannot have trained and competent experts without funds with which to operate and pay their salaries.

The University of Kentucky—our bulwark of learning, the seat of publicly maintained educational institutions of our state—from which center, radiates the influences upon Kentucky education all over the state—needs funds upon which more efficiently, to operate. But let me pause here, because I can almost hear some of the readers say they do not want their taxes to go to pay for athletics. Well let me assure you that the athletic activities of the University do not cost a single tax payer one cent. Not one penny for salaries or equipment for players comes out of the pockets of a single tax payer. Not even was the Stadium built at the cost of a single cent of tax money. Athletics at this University are self-sustaining. When appropriations for our publicly maintained educational institutions are curtailed, we are cutting at the very heart strings of our future civilization depriving our children—neglecting our greatest duty to them.

The General Assembly of Kentucky is now convening. Those who compose that Assembly are there because the majority of the people placed them there. But once in office they represent all the people. They are in their respective seats to make laws and appropriate funds as the people as a whole, or the greater majority thereof see fit and desire. These legislators cannot know what the people of Kentucky want unless these people make known their desires.

If you believe in the future of our country, if you want the future generation to be fitted to combat the problems which will confront them—if you want Kentucky to be a better state—to step up in the parade of states toward educational utopia—if you want the crime wave of our nation quashed—write or contact your senator and representative, ask them to give our children a chance, a better chance than we had by appropriating an amount of money to our University so that it may operate efficiently, so that it may maintain the status it has set. That is the least you can do for educational advancement; it is the greatest thing you can do for your children and the future generation as well as yourselves.

It does not necessarily mean added taxation, but placing the revenue raised, where best suited and most needed. The funds for operating the University must come by appropriations from our law makers. We have in Frankfort a body of men anxious and willing to help our state. Whose whole hearts are filled with a desire to serve best our people, who wish to place funds where greatest and most lasting results will be had. People cannot and will not exist upon a dole—relief is wonderful and temporarily necessary, but higher education is most essential and the results of it are permanent. They sparkle through the ages—live as a monument to our endeavors as nothing else lives—continue through the cycle of time.

Of all evils, the greatest is an ignorant people, devoid of educational desires and opportunities.

Of all virtues the greatest is an educated populace, trained experts in their particular field of endeavor.

For, from ignorance is born evil, a desire to break down law and order, to overthrow the government, to raise the red flag of Communism.

But from education flows a desire for better respect for laws—to uphold and foster a great government, by, with, and for the people that our nation may live and prosper.

The will of the people must rule. Let the will of the people be to protect and educate our youth—express that will by notice to our law makers that we want an appropriation sufficient to maintain the bulwark of Kentucky education—our University.

If the public education in Kentucky is to go forward and the University is to continue its great and useful service to the people as a whole, we must rally to her standard. Never before were universities needed more than now, for a government, deriving its just rights from the consent of the governed—an educated and informed citizenry is essential to the preservation and support of that government.

(The above is a radio talk given by Mr. Caudel, alumnus of the University in the Class of '23, through the University studios of WHAS, Louisville).

LEXINGTONIAN RECEIVES MICHIGAN PH.D. DEGREE

Joe Lee Davis, son of Col. R. Lee Davis, dean of The Leader news staff, recently was awarded his Ph.D. degree in English at the annual commencement exercises of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Dr. Davis received his A. B. and M. A. degrees from the University of Kentucky in 1926 and 1927, respectively, was instructor in English at his alma mater from 1927 to 1930, and has for the past four years been part-time instructor in English at the University of Michigan. His Ph.D. dissertation was a two-volume contribution to the study of Ben Jonson's influence on English literature and the history of Caroline drama, the title being "The Sons of Ben in English Realistic Comedy, 1625-1642." It will ultimately be published as one of the University of Michigan series of studies in language and literature.

Dr. Davis will return to the University of Michigan in the fall with the rank of full-time instructor in English, and in addition to his regular teaching will conduct an extension course in Shakespeare at Flint, Mich.

Dr. and Mrs. Davis, with their daughter, Shirley Jo, are spending the summer vacation with their parents, Col. and Mrs. R. Lee Davis, 118 Victory avenue.

Alumni Secretary Gives Annual Report

To the Members of the Alumni Association:

The Secretary of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association takes pleasure in submitting for your approval a brief report of the activities of the Association, its officers and Executive Committee, for the current year ending May 15, 1934.

The report will outline, briefly, some of the activities of the Association, its plans, and the degree of success with which its various projects have met.

Activities

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:

The first meeting of the Executive Committee was held on June 14th, upon call of the President of the Association. At that time, James S. Shropshire, secretary of the Association, resigned and his resignation was accepted. His assistant, Betty Hulett, was appointed secretary to take his place. The Executive Committee has met the first Monday in each month during the school year. The meetings have been characterized by a good attendance, enthusiasm for alumni work and loyalty for the University and the Association. New members appointed to the Committee last June were Mrs. Harry Herring and Herschel Weil. Members reappointed were M. J. Crutcher, Lee McClain, and G. Davis Buckner.

MEMBERSHIPS: Beginning with the July meeting, the members of the Committee decided to make a concentrated effort to increase the membership in the Association. Due to the low price of dues, it was thought that all graduates and former students should join the Association. Many letters were sent out from the Alumni Secretary, and the Class Secretaries. Some of the Alumni Clubs made a concentrated effort to get a 100 per cent membership from their club members. In June, 1933, paid members of the Association numbered 287. On May 15, 1934, this number had been increased to 625, a total of 338 new members.

BOARD OF COMMERCE: The Alumni Association made efforts during the year to become more closely associated with the Lexington Board of Commerce, and was successful in that the Board assisted with the preparations for Homecoming Day.

HOMECOMING DAY: Homecoming was held at the University on November 30th, the day of the annual Kentucky-Tennessee football game. Registration was held in the downtown hotels and several hundred alumni registered during the day, many of them coming from great distances. The Homecoming Dance was held at night in the Alumni Gymnasium and quite a few of the alumni attended. Proceeds from the dance were used to defray the expenses of the Association and the Lexington Alumni Club.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES: In October, nominations for an alumni member of the Board of Trustees were received. In the final balloting, James Park, W. H. Grady, and John W. Woods received the highest number of votes. From these, Governor Laffoon appointed James Park to serve another six years.

RADIO TALKS: Four radio talks were given during the year, through the University studios of WHAS, Louisville, by alumni of the University. S. B. Triplett; Georgetown; Marcus Redwine, Winchester; J. S. Caudill, Owingsville, and John Lair, Cynthiana, gave splendid talks, concerning the University and its relationship and value to the Commonwealth of Kentucky. These talks were given just before the Kentucky Legislature met in January, 1934.

ALUMNI BASKETBALL GAME:

On December 5, Coach Adolph Rupp and his Wildcats opened the season on the home floor with a game with an alumni team, composed of former stars of the Wildcat basketball team. Twenty alumni entered the game for the Association. All proceeds from the game were used to defray the expenses of the Alumni office. As a token of appreciation, the Association granted one year's membership to each alumnus who participated in the game.

MID-YEAR GRADUATION: The mid-year graduating class of the University was entertained by the Association with a dinner in the University Commons on January 24. Many seniors and alumni were present. The Association was fortunate in having Judge Rogers Clay, Frankfort, to speak at this dinner. The deficit on the dinner was paid by the Lexington Alumni Club.

INCORPORATION OF ASSOCIATION: In October, the Alumni Association asked James Park to draw up Articles of Incorporation for the Association. This was done and the papers were filed with the Fayette County Clerk and the Secretary of State.

NOMINATION FOR OFFICERS: In January, the chairman of the Executive Committee appointed two committees to submit slates for the election of officers to the association. Ballots were mailed to members of the Association in April. Nearly 100 per cent of the members voted, and results of the election were tabulated May 22.

KENTUCKY ALUMNUS: Due to the reduction in the dues of the Association, it was decided to have the Kentucky Alumnus a quarterly magazine instead of a monthly, as it had been formerly. The publication was issued in September, December, and April. The fourth issue will be in June. The magazine was larger and contained material of interest to alumni—facts which the alumni should know about the University. The editors of the Kentucky Alumnus tried to give its readers instructive news of the University, alumni, campus activities, sports, etc. As the magazine was published quarterly, we realized that many alumni, interested in sports, would not receive any of the football news until the season was closed. To avoid such a condition, the Association made arrangements with the University, through President McVey, to send copies of The Kentucky Kernel to all paid members of the Association after each football game.

For the first time, an open forum is to be run in the Kentucky Alumnus. It is the wish of the editors to publish letters of the alumni, giving their views on situations at the University. It has been found that many alumni are interested in such a section in their alumni magazines. Alumni of other Universities say that their chief interest in their magazine is in the letters, whether they contain any special news value or not.

LIBRARY MATERIAL: Through the pages of the Kentucky Alumnus and the cooperation of Mr. C. R. Staples, Lexington, the Association asked alumni of the University to contribute old magazines and papers to the University's new library. Alumni all over the country sent in valuable material to help complete the library's collections to a greater extent.

ALUMNI LOYALTY FUND: For the second consecutive year, the Alumni Loyalty Fund Drive was made by the Association, with the cooperation of the President's office at the University. President McVey sent a letter to each graduate of the University, urging him to give any amount from $1.00 up, to the Loyalty Fund. This was followed by a letter from Dr. Geo. H. Wilson, President of the Association. Doctor Wilson's letter did not go to all graduates. More of them will be sent out later. A total of $161 was received from 40 alumni. Last year, the first year of the drive, we received $200 from 24 alumni. We feel that it is much better to receive gifts of a smaller denomination from a larger number of alumni than to have a few alumni make large contributions. Half of the money received in this drive was turned over to the Student Loan Fund. In the last two years, the Alumni Association has turned over to the Student Loan Fund $180.50.

ALUMNI CLUBS: The Secretary has been in contact with all of the clubs at some time during the year. The Philadelphia Club made a special effort toward a 100 per cent membership and increased its membership in the Association by 12. It is hoped that all clubs will do more work toward this end in the coming year. Three clubs, Chicago, New York, and Washington, have had the opportunity of meeting with President McVey during the past year. Attendance at all meetings was good and the clubs seemed very enthusiastic.

ALUMNI CONTACTS: All graduates of the University were contacted this year by a letter from the President's office. This is a custom which we hope to maintain throughout the years. We feel that alumni should have some sort of greeting from their Alma Mater at least once each year.

Contacts throughout the state have been made by James Shropshire, who traveled quite a bit, representing the University and the Alumni Association. A contact man was established in 85 counties in the State. These men have been a valuable aid to the University.

SALE OF STATIONERY: Through the cooperation of the campus Book Store, the Association has sold Rytex Stationery to alumni and friends on a percentage basis. The Association has cleared over $10 on this, and hopes to do better with it when the members of the Association have more time to work on it.

CLASS REUNIONS: Class reunions in 1933 were a marked success. Many alumni returned and enjoyed the functions planned for Alumni Day and Commencement Day. The meeting of the Alumni Association, held on Commencement Day, was characterized by a good attendance and enthusiastic comments.

Plans are now being completed for the 1934 class reunions. A new arrangement is being tried out, that of having the meeting of the Association on Alumni Day and inviting all members of the graduating class to participate. A pledge for the seniors to take has been drawn up and will be administered by an alumnus. They will be officially inducted into the Alumni Association. With the cooperation of the members of the Alumni Association, this plan should be successful.

FINANCES: The Alumni Association is ending the current year with a deficit of approximately $265. Since last June, this deficit has been cut nearly in half, as the deficit of last year was listed as $500.

Respectfully submitted,
BETTY HULETT,
 Secretary.

Radio Talk Is Given By John P. Lair

By John P. Lair

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been selected by the Alumni Association as a speaker upon its program, it gives me great pleasure to have this opportunity to place before the general public some of the facts about the University of Kentucky, which we members of the Alumni Association believe to be one of the outstanding State Universities, scholastically, athletically, and socially, in the entire South.

The University had its beginning in the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1862, when it was placed with Kentucky University; and the history of the institution, as a separate State College began in 1878 with its first buildings being erected in 1880. By an act of the legislature the State College became the State University in 1908.

For the benefit of those who are contemplating entering a university or college in the near future, and for those others who may also have an interest in such matters, I will, at this time, state some facts regarding the organization of the University of Kentucky, that is, the different colleges of which it consists, the deans of those colleges, and other facts which should be of interest, particularly to those intending to enter college for the first time.

With Dr. Frank L. McVey, Ph.D., as its President, the University contains seven different colleges, namely: the College of Arts and Sciences with Paul P. Boyd, Ph.D., as dean; which provides courses in Arts, Sciences, and Journalism; the College of Agriculture with Thomas Poe Cooper, B. E., as dean and which provides courses in Agriculture and Home Economics and has as part of its equipment an Experiment Station and an Extension service; the College of Engineering with W. E. Freeman, M.E., as dean; the College of Law with Alvin E. Evans, Ph.D., as dean and in which I had the privilege of studying; the College of Education with William S. Taylor, Ph.D., as dean; the College of Commerce with Edward Wiest, Ph.D., as dean and the Graduate School for those students who wish advance learning and research in the subjects upon which they have already received degrees and, I might add, that included in the courses offered in these colleges, are all of those that are necessary to prepare one for entrance to Medical and Dental schools.

The personnel of these colleges is made up of deans, eight men and one woman; professors, 87 men and three women; associate professors, 48 men and nine women, and instructors, 59 men and 29 women, all of whom are fully qualified for the position which they hold and who are directly responsible to the President of the University.

Men and women of this calibre, provided, as they are, with modern libraries, research laboratories and equipment are all that is needed to make Kentucky State one of the finest universities in these United States. In fact it has an advantage not enjoyed by some of the larger universities in that the enrollment for the year, first and second semesters 1931-1932 considered of only 3,276 students, making it possible that each one might receive a greater amount of personal attention from the professors and instructors, and this advantage is one fully appreciated by the student attending a university for the purpose of gaining knowledge.

With the enthusiasm which all graduates of Kentucky State have for the old school I could go on naming its advantages for hours, but that being impossible here, I feel that some time should next be given to the relationship between the University and the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Education and training of young men and women for the positions of leadership in the affairs of the Commonwealth as well as private business, in the complex life of the present, is one of the most important problems faced by the people of any state, and, as such, it behooves the State Government to provide such institutions of learning and training for the benefit of its people as can and will furnish them with the opportunity to make themselves fit to carry on such affairs. The two main functions of such institutions are, simply stated, first, to train for leadership, and second, to conduct research.

In the University of Kentucky the Commonwealth of Kentucky has established such an institution, and one of which its citizens can well be, and I think I may safely say, are, extremely proud. I do know that I am proud to be able to look upon the University of Kentucky as my Alma Mater, and am thankful for the opportunity this institution offered in granting me the privilege of studying law under such learned professors as the men who preside over that college.

There is no standard of measurement by which one can determine the benefits derived by the citizens of this Commonwealth, either directly or indirectly, through the University and the facilities offered by it. The complex problems of state government, particularly in times like these, require for their solution every atom of modern knowledge and science and the services of State University specialists and the facilities of its bureaus and laboratories of research are not only available, but should be appropriated to the use of the governing bodies of this state, in order that these problems may be solved to the best interests of our citizens.

This of course, is only one of the many advantages offered by the University to the Commonwealth itself in return for its existence and, although important, has no comparison to the advantages which it offers to the people of the State at large, and which it would be impossible to enumerate.

One of these advantages is very forcibly brought to one's attention through the help and assistance brought to the farmers of Kentucky by the Extension Department of the College of Agriculture. Last year there were 22,577 boys and girls actively enrolled in the 4-H clubs, a part of the Extension service, whose products brought a total of $578,576 even at the low prices prevailing for farm products, and the influence of the University on the poultry industry in Kentucky has been remarkable. One county, for example, last year sold 13,000 cases of eggs instead of 3,100 cases which it sold before the University began extension demonstrations in the county. Facts like these coupled with the common knowledge everyone has of the advantages of the educated person over the uneducated one tends to show to some light degree just what the University does mean to this Commonwealth.

Now to get back to some facts about the University. Having stated at the beginning that it stood very highly, especially in the South, scholastically, athletically and socially and having touched on the first of these, I believe it only proper to say a few words about athletics and the social life on the campus. Of course there are some people who will immediately say, "What do these things have to do with a University?" but let me say right here that they have plenty to do with it and are becoming increasingly more important, as well as more popular, not only at the University of Kentucky, but in every college and university in the country, yearly. Kentucky has a concrete football stadium of which any university can well be proud, and as large a modern gymnasium for basketball and indoor sports of all kinds, as can be found any place. The prospects for an exceptionally good football team are bright for next year, due to the fact that the University was fortunate enough to secure the services of Chet Wynne, former Auburn University coach, as head football coach. Coach Adolph Rupp who has turned out a Southern Conference Championship basketball team at University hopes to repeat the performance again this year. In addition to these sports there is of course a track and a baseball team and all sorts of Intramural teams providing an opportunity for everyone who so desires to compete in any type of athletics.

Last, but by no means least, in the education of any college student, is the social side of university life. There always have been, and always will be, those who believe that fraternities and sororities have as their only purpose, certain ways of taking students away from their studies and causing them to be no longer interested in the scholastic side of the University, but I believe that the majority of the people at large and I know that all university students, whether they are fortunate enough to be a member of a lodge or not, realize the importance of these organizations in the scheme of college life. The association and fellowship one enjoys in a fraternity or sorority, and the strict surveillance to which the under classmen are subjected, safe guards, rather than detracts from the purpose for which young men and women are sent to the college, and, in addition to this, there are the social functions given and sponsored by these organizations which provide excellent opportunities for one to meet and know people from all over the state of Kentucky and from many different states and cities throughout the country, and to form friendships that will continue for life.

It must be remembered that there are evenings and week-ends when students are entitled to recreation, and the dances and other social affairs offered by the University and its organizations, afford all students the opportunity to enjoy themselves at the proper time.

SALES TAX IS PASSED BY SENATE

The senate passed the sales tax bill, which had already been passed by the house. The senate vote was 20 to 17, barely enough to make a law of Governor Laffoon's favored revenue measure.

Although a cloture rule had been invoked to curb debate, many senators took the privilege of explaining their votes, and the roll call consumed an hour. The only senator not voting was Fred C. Van-Hoose, who was absent.

Senator Arch L. Hamilton, Fayette county, voted against the measure after the senate had rejected an amendment he offered to exempt school books and school supplies.

Rejecting by 20 to 16 a motion to take the income tax bill from the revenue committee, the senate on June 15 under suspension of the rules took up the sales tax bill for immediate consideration.

An amendment offered by Stephenson to exempt sales of overalls, work shoes, socks, and clothing selling for $2.50 or less was rejected 19 to 17. Another amendment of Stephenson's to exempt all foodstuffs from the tax was rejected by the same vote.

Senator Arch Hamilton, Lexington, offered an amendment to exempt sales of all school books and supplies. It was rejected 21 to 14.

Some of the senators doffed their coats for relief from the sweltering heat in the senate chamber. The sun beating down on the sky lights made the senate chamber like a bake oven.

All pending amendments were disposed of with the rejection of Hamilton's amendment and Floor Leader Thompson took the floor to press for immediate action on the bill.

Making the principal speech in behalf of the bill, Senator Thompson said a sales tax has been successful in other states. He argued it would relieve the tax burden on property owners.

"We are going to pass this sales tax," Thompson declared during a controversy over whether the cloture rule invoked by the senate had cut off debate. Thompson said he did not care to make a prolonged speech on the bill.

Senator Wise then launched into an attack on the bill, urging the senate to reject it.

Senator Wise declared the bill would impose a three per cent tax on the earnings of laboring people. He charged it would reduce the people of the state to a condition of slavery.—Lexington Leader.

COLLEGE EDITORS PREFER HOOVER

Hoover still stands high in the opinion of college editors according to the recent vote polled by The Graduate Group through the staffs of its 100 official alumni magazines.

Owen D. Young, Booth Tarkington and other distinguished alumni cooperated in the preparation of a check-list of 100 authors and articles suitable for simultaneous publication in Graduate Group magazines.

Herbert Hoover, Stanford, '95, topped the list with an article suggested by Booth Tarkington entitled "What a Citizen Should Know About International Economic Relations."

Walter Lippman, Harvard, '10, tied for second place with William Allen White, Kansas. Lippman was suggested by Owen D. Young to contribute "How Does One Learn to Write English." White was suggested as a favorite son by the University of Kansas and assigned the subject "Is Education Slipping?"

It was a triple tie for third place between Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia, '82; Pierce Butler, Carleton College, '87, and Prof. L. P. Jackson of Oxford. Their subjects in the order named were "Does an Increasingly Numerous and Powerful Bureaucracy Approach Socialism?" "How the Modern College Looks from the Supreme Court Bench," and "An English School Man Takes a Casual Look at American Colleges."

General Charles Gates Dawes, Marietta, '84, got 20 votes for fourth place with "On Looking Backward, the Changes I Would Have Made in My Courses at Marietta."

David Lawrence, Princeton, '10, ranked fifth with this assignment, "Practical Operation of the United States Government."

Other choices in order were Justice Brandeis, University of Louisville, "Possible Simplification of Our Laws"; Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Oberlin, '91, "How Important Is a Cultural Background to a Research Worker in the Physical Sciences"; Ogden Mills, Harvard, '04, "What Practical Economics Could Be Made in the Present Cost of Government"; Booth Tarkington, no subject assigned, and Ida M. Tarbell, Allegheny, '80, "How Co-education Looks to Me Now As Compared with My Experience As a Student at Allegheny."

ALTRUSA CLUB GIVES RADIO

The Altrusa Club of Lexington has just donated the funds for the purchase of a new battery radio set for the University's mountain listening center system, according to an announcement just made by the radio studios.

CAL HOSKINS KILLED IN COLLISION

Calloway Hoskins, 24, coach and teacher at Beattyville high school, was killed instantly in a head-on collision of two automobiles on the new Irvine road two miles east of Winchester.

Five other persons involved in the accident escaped injury except for minor cuts and bruises.

Hoskins, who was graduated in 1931 from the University of Kentucky, where he was varsity football manager, suffered a compound fracture of the skull, a broken arm and severe cuts. At the time of the accident he was enroute home with two students from Beattyville whom he had taken to Lexington to participate in the state high school track meet at the University.

The collision occurred as Hoskins, who was driving, swerved the car to avoid striking a buggy before it crashed head-on into a car proceeding toward Winchester.

Jack Stevens, 65, Clark county, who was driving home in the buggy, was thrown out but escaped injury. The Beattyville students with Hoskins, Jack Rose, 17, and R. A. Daniel, 18, also were unhurt except for cuts. The other car was driven by Ernest Fox, 17, Clark county, who was accompanied by his brother, B. B. Fox Jr., 12. Neither was hurt. Both cars were practically demolished.

Hoskins, who had been coaching at Beattyville high for the last two years, was well known and popular while a student at the University. He was a member of the Delta Chi social fraternity and in addition to being football manager had taken part in numerous student activities on the campus.

Gordon, Shelbyville, in concluding his address on "Social and Economic Planning Needed Today," which was delivered at the general convocation at 11 p. m., Friday, April 12, in Memorial hall. Doctor Gordon, who is an alumnus of the College of Agriculture and one of Kentucky's outstanding ministers, was introduced by Pres. Frank L. McVey.

Doctor Gordon emphasized the fact that the agricultural problem was a national and international one and that it could be solved only by making the country attractive to progressive, intelligent people.

RALPH KERCHEVAL SIGNED BY KELLY

John Sims (Shipwreck) Kelly, '32, former University of Kentucky football star, returned to New York May 16 after spending several days in Lexington where he signed Ralph Kercheval, member of the 1933 Kentucky grid team, for a tryout with the Brooklyn Dodgers of the national pro grid league next season.

Kelly was co-owner of the Dodgers last season, being associated with Chris Cagle, former Army star, but Kelly expects to operate the club himself next fall. Before leaving Lexington, Kelly said he expected no difficulties in completing negotiations for control of the team.

The Brooklyn Eagle reported it had learned "one of William Randolph Hearst's sons" was aiding Kelly in gaining control of the team and would give financial aid to the team.

HUTSON IS AMONG U. K. PROMINENT GRADUATES

Among its successful graduates, the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky numbers J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Washington, one of the nation's leaders in the farm reconstruction program.

A native of Calloway county, Mr. Hutson developed early in life a desire for an education in scientific agriculture. After being graduated in 1918 he became an assistant in farm management at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. In 1923, he was appointed to a position in the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics in Washington.

For two years he was connected with the foreign service of the United States Department of Agriculture as director of research and observation for tobacco work, studying consumption, production and outlets in other countries.

In 1933, because of his experience and authoritative knowledge of the tobacco industry, he was named chief of the tobacco section of the AAA, and now is directing the adjustment program for tobacco production for the entire country.

GRADUATES OF COMMERCE ARE GIVEN POSITIONS

Forty-two students have been placed during the spring months by the Commerce College Senior Employment association, under the direction of Mr. Lloyd Averett. This number includes two members of the graduating class of 1933, and those who were either graduated in February of this year or who will be graduated at the end of this semester. There is every indication that almost 100 per cent of the association members will obtain jobs before the semester is ended.

Results obtained from the booklet, "Bargains in Brains," which the association issues, have been satisfactory, according to Mr. Averett. Of the 42 jobs obtained, 30 have been through the contacts made by "Bargains in Brains."

During the school year, demand for women secretaries trained here at the University has been more than double the number of those available. Positions have been obtained for graduates of this department, as well as of the entire college. This wide recognition has been brought about partly through the cooperative work of the students of the association.

HAY FEVER REMEDY PERFECTED BY CORN

The 3,000,000 sneezers in the country may now look forward to the hay fever season with confidence, according to W. T. Corn, vice-president and general manager of the Manufacturers Soap and Chemical Company, of Cleveland, Tenn., who has perfected a cure for the disease.

Mr. Corn has made a salve which when applied to the nose immunizes the pollen in the nose immediately, he said in a statement concerning the salve. It stops the sneezing and the uncomfortable tickling sensation in the nose. The salve, however, will not relieve asthma, according to the manufacturer, who said it will not go deep enough to be of any relief.

Approximately two per cent of the population of the United States is said to suffer from hay fever, and many remedies have been made which are effective in only a small percentage of the cases. Mr. Corn relieved his own case with his remedy and has a lengthy list of persons who have been helped by the remedy. The salve is said to immunize 95 of 100 different pollens, and has relieved nine out of ten persons, who have used it, the producer claims.—Chatanooga Times.

Mr. Corn attended the University in 1920.

Clifford Davidson is senior member. Mr. Davidson has made a study of his specialized line and is thoroughly familiar with the needs of the trade and specifications prevalent in the various types of construction work. He has been associated in the field for eleven years and has contributed in no small measure to the development of their extensive clientele through the merit of his service in their interest. DEATH CLAIMS EX-PROFESSOR AT UNIVERSITY

Judge Lyman Chalkley, 72, professor emeritus of the University, and for 21 years a member of its College of Law, died April 21 at the Good Samaritan hospital. Judge Chalkley entered the hospital for treatment. Subsequently pneumonia developed. His death was unexpected.

Since his retirement from the University faculty in the fall of 1931, Judge Chalkley had devoted much of his time to writing and research work. He resided at "Green Acre," his home on the Versailles pike.

Judge Chalkley was author of the "Chalkley Papers" and abstracts of the records of Augusta county, Va. He was an able professor and reached scores of law students during his professorship at the University.

Judge Chalkley was born in Richmond, Va., Oct. 20, 1861, a son of Otway Hebron and Susan Marian Jordan Chalkley. He was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1882, received his bachelor of law degree from Washington & Lee, studied law at Columbia University and the universities of Berlin and Bonn in Germany, and then returned to his native state to practice at Covington and Staunton.

On June 27, 1889, Judge Chalkley married Miss Eleanor Desha Breckinridge, daughter of the late Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, distinguished Kentuckian. Elected by the legislature of Virginia judge of the districts of Allegheny and Craig counties, Judge Chalkley served for six years in that capacity.

He served as judge of the Augusta and Highland district from 1898 to 1904. He moved to Lexington to take the position of dean of the law department at Transylvania College (then Kentucky University) and revived that department. He served as dean of the law school of the University of South at Sewanee for three years, resigning in 1910 to become professor of law at the University of Kentucky, where he served as acting dean of the law college in 1923-24 after the death of Judge William T. Lafferty.

Judge Chalkley was historiographer of the Episcopal diocese of Lexington; trustee of Margaret Hall, Episcopal school for girls at Versailles, and a devout member of Christ church.

Judge Chalkley was a member of the American and Kentucky state bar associations, the Kentucky Academy of Science, the Kentucky and Virginia historical societies, the American Association of University Professors, Sons of the American Revolution, American Society of International Law, American Academy of Political and Social Science, the American Political Science Association and Sons of Confederate Veterans. His political affiliation was with the Democratic party, and his fraternities included Phi Delta Theta, Phi Alpha Delta and Pi Gamma Mu. Judge Chalkley belonged to the Lexington Research and Lexington Country clubs, and was a Mason and Knight Templar.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one son, Dr. Lyman Chalkley, New York City, and one daughter, Mrs. Lyssa Chalkley Harper, wife of Dr. Ernest B. Harper, Kalamazoo, Mich., and three grandchildren, Ernest B. Harper, Jr., and Eleanor Harper, Kalamazoo, Mich., and Thomas Ferguson Chalkley, New York City.

RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF DEAN ANDERSON

We, the faculty of the College of Engineering of the University, by the death of Dean Frederick Paul Anderson, have been deprived of his guiding genius and are severely afflicted by his absence. We wish to express our appreciation of his unselfish devotion to our happiness and to our common interests in the training of engineers.

Dean Anderson dedicated his life to the training of young men. Everything else was subsidiary. He resented any imputation of self-gain in whatever he did. His greatest ambition was to receive the approval of his friends and their recognition of his sacrifices in pursuing his main objective.

He delighted in referring to his staff as one big family. A family which existed harmoniously through mutual understanding and tolerance. He endeared himself in our hearts by his many acts of kindness. We gratefully acknowledged his leadership and considered it an honor and privilege to serve under his direction. No one could come in contact with his personality without gaining something of his enthusiasm, his sense of loyalty, and his philosophy of the happy life.

Dean Anderson cultivated friendships. Not that the pleasure and advantages of the personal contacts should end in himself, but that through him such friendships might result in advancing the cause of youth. Through these friendships he secured the loyalty of many persons to his ideals and to the institution which he loved. He thus secured the cooperation of business men in supplying equipment for instructional purposes. By cultivating the friendship of employers he secured employment for his "boys." He was a friend and adviser to all students and especially to the student in trouble. Many persons have added something to their happiness and complacency by loans and gifts to needy students through the instrumentality of the Dean.

He sought and attained fame that the glory might reflect to the good of the institution and the State which he served. He never sought material reward. He exacted only the esteem of his friends and their confidence and belief in his ideals. He never hesitated to risk personal loss in the defense and pursuit of those ideals, nor did he allow material trivialities to turn him aside from his main objective.

He introduced romance into the training of engineering students. He demanded attention to the work of the day; but by his own actions he demonstrated that every task could be made a pleasure when conceived in its relationships to the esthetic and romantic values of life.

He was a friend, adviser and an inspiration to every member of his staff and shall thus remain in our memories forever. We pledge ourselves to foster the ideals which he cherished for this school and to do our very utmost to bring to full fruition his hopes and dreams.

We wish to express to the members of his family our sincere sympathy for the loss which they share with us and with the community. May the esteem in which he was held by his fellow men become a mite of reward for their relinquishment of his companionship.

It is our desire also that these resolutions be incorporated into the minutes of this faculty and a copy be sent to the family and to the press, that this acknowledgment of our bereavement may become known to our contemporaries and be preserved for posterity.

Prof. L. L. Dantzler, head of the department of English at the University of Kentucky, received an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters at the 80th commencement exercises of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C. Professor Dantzler, an alumnus of Wofford College, went to Spartanburg to be the principal speaker at the alumni banquet.

In presenting the degree to Professor Dantzler, Dr. Henry Nelson Snyder, president of Wofford College, said: "Dr. L. L. rating, the highest yet received by the university, entitles it to retain the "gold star" of distinction for another year.

VALUABLE DOCUMENTS GIVEN U. K. LIBRARY

Mrs. Lyman Chalkley has presented to the University of Kentucky library a collection of approximately 200 pamphlets and magazines of a social, legal and historical nature and the private papers and letters from the collection of her husband, the late Judge Lyman Chalkley, for 21 years a member of the faculty of the University College of Law.

Miss Kathleen Mulligan, Lexington attorney, and a daughter of the late Judge James B. Mulligan, former owner of Maxwell Place, now the president's home on the University campus, assisted Thomas D. Clark of the University history department in receiving the Chalkley papers.

Judge Chalkley was a collector of social and historical papers, and this contribution to the University's growing collection of pamphlets will add materially to the library's historical resources.

Another gift which the University library has recently received consists of between 300 and 400 house and senate journals and departmental reports of the state government which were presented to the University by Scott county. These various gifts add greatly to the supply of material on hand for the use of students in law, history, social science and political science.

GREEKS CONVENE AT UNIVERSITY

A full program, including a general convocation, discussion groups at four fraternity houses, an afternoon session in Memorial auditorium for all fraternity men, and a banquet and dance, was arranged for the Interfraternity Council Greek Conclave April 20 on the University of Kentucky campus.

At the convocation, Dr. Francis W. Shepardson, Granville, O., national president of Beta Theta Pi, and president of the Association of College Honor Societies, spoke on "The Challenge of Life's Loyalties." He was introduced by Dr. T. T. Jones, dean of men at the University.

"We paid a bill for the World War. We lost the supreme loyalties of life. Where are American loyalties now in another age of unrest, an age of gin and jazz?—the loyalties to the home, to the growing children, to the church, to country, and to God? They all seem to be hidden, lost behind the ranges!... Suppose they are not restored... What then will be the country which the student of today will know in years ahead?

"In the presence of great problems which may involve even the fate of democracy itself, men and women of powerful personality are needed in America as never before in our country's history. The ranges challenge us as they did our fathers."

Invocation and benediction was pronounced by Rev. Wallace McPherson Alston, pastor of the Maxwell Presbyterian church. At the conclusion of Dr. Shepardson's talk, Gordon Burns, president of the Inter-fraternity council introduced the various members of the organization.

At noon a luncheon was held at the Lafayette hotel in honor of Dr. Shepardson by alumni of Beta Theta Pi and by active members of the same organization from the Centre College chapter. At the same time a luncheon was given at the Sigma Chi house in honor of W. L. Sanders, dean of men at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Early in the afternoon simultaneous meetings were held at the Sigma Chi house and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house with Dean Sanders speaking on "The Fraternity Freshman" and Dr. Shepardson speaking on "The President of the Chapter and His Duties," respectively. At 2:30 p.m. similar meetings were held at the Phi Delta Theta and the Pi Kappa Alpha houses with Dr. Shepardson leading a discussion on "The Relation of the Local Chapter to the National Organization" and Roy Moreland, University of Kentucky, leading a discussion on "The Pledge Master and His Duties."

A general convocation for all fraternity men was held at Memorial hall at 4 o'clock, with Gordon Burns presiding. Dr. J. Holmes Martin, of the University Experiment Station talked on "The Growing Menace of Honoraries." Dr. Shepardson discussed "Inter-fraternity Comity," and Dean Sanders talked about "Fraternity Criteria." Mr. Burns again presided at a banquet at the University commons at 6:30 p.m. Speakers included Dr. Shepardson, Dean Sanders, Dean Jones and Coach Chet Wynne.

The Greek conclave concluded with a dance at the alumni gymnasium at 9 o'clock.

U. K. OPERATION GETS APPROVAL OF AUDIT FIRM

"On the whole," the University of Kentucky "is economically operated and its finances well managed," Griffenhagen & Associates, auditors for Gov. Ruby Laffoon's advisory council, said in their report on an audit and budget survey of the school, made public April 7.

The report was completed on February 15, but was received at the capitol from Chicago, April 7 where the advisory council's consultants have headquarters.

"Lack of funds," the report said, "has entailed deferring essential maintenance, repair and improvement projects. These constitute a very real liability which are none the less so because they are not shown on the balance sheet. To continue to defer providing for them is anything but economical.

"In providing living accommodations for its students," the report continued, the Lexington school "has had to resort to what amounts to long-term borrowing."

Detailing the various functions of the University, the report commented that during the last few years the school "has begun to take on some of the marks and characteristics of a true university. The proportion of graduate students has increased rapidly during the last eight years, and a large number of advanced degrees are now being granted."

Through several research bureaus at the University, the auditors continued, "much important knowledge is brought to light and disseminated to the public."

"An important function of the University," it added, "is to render service to the citizens of Kentucky through the experiment station and through the agricultural extension service by means of which county agents have been placed in over two-thirds of the counties of the state, and home demonstration agents have been placed in about one-fourth of the counties."

That the University has grown steadily is indicated in a comparison of enrollments at three-year intervals beginning with the 1920-21 year and ending with 1932-33. In the year 1920-21 the enrollment at the regular session was 1,259 and at the summer session 491; in 1923-24 the regular session enrollment was 1,965 and the summer session 739; in 1926-27 the regular enrollment was 2,485 and summer, 1,332; in 1929-30 the regular enrollment was 3,171, and the summer enrollment 1,758, and in 1932-33 the regular session enrollment was 2,879 and the summer enrollment 1,329.

Duplicates, special students, and transfers are excluded from the enrollment figures. In addition to the regular enrollment, there were in 1932-33, 368 pupils enrolled in the training school during the regular session and 198 during the summer session. There also were 954 students enrolled in extension classes and 1,244 in correspondence courses.

The report said the University competes principally with six private colleges and one state-supported teachers' college within a radius of 50 miles. These competing schools were listed as Asbury College, Eastern Kentucky State Teachers' College, Transylvania College, Berea College, Georgetown College, Kentucky Wesleyan College and Centre College.

"In addition," the report pointed out, "there are seven others located outside a radius of 50 miles which offer distinct competition to the University."

These seven colleges were listed as Morehead State Teachers' College, Western Kentucky State Teachers' College, Murray State Teachers' College, the University of Louisville, Nazareth College, Union College and Bowling Green College of Commerce.

Commenting on the University's financial condition and operation, the report said the school "has been seriously handicapped by the falling off in receipts from general property and inheritance taxes.

"The present current deficit," it continued, "is entirely due to lack of funds to pay salaries, notwithstanding the reductions that have been effected."

Total current assets of the University as of June 30, 1933, were listed at $115,340.87, and total current liabilities at the same time were $251,719.98. The total current surplus was $136,379.11, which, deducted from the liabilities, left total liabilities of $115,340.87.

Total receipts at the University for the year ending June 30, 1933, were listed at $1,770,042.04 and total expenditures at $1,753,437.25, leaving $16,604.79 as excess of revenues over expenditures. Of the total receipts $279,976.39 was received from the state, $111,105.47 in cash and $168,870.92 in warrants on which $15,691.73 represented discount.

Student fees netted $249,930.24, inspectional services $82,508.62 and fees for special services $14,274.34. Federal aid grants totaled $413,675.30 and net receipts from operation of sundry activities and accounts were $16,890.82.

Administrative and other general overhead expenses were $81,421.80.

Among the recommendations made by the auditors with reference to general overhead expenses were:

elimination of the offices of secretary of the board of trustees and college treasurer; reduction in traveling expense of the president's office; discontinuance of the practice of contributing $100 a year towards the salary of a housemother for each fraternity and sorority; elimination of "a considerable number" of telephones; discontinuance of the practice of engaging attorneys to collect taxes, and provision for the state furnishing legal services.

Discussing the expenditure of $6,133.79 by the university publicity bureau, the report said it was "questionable" whether such expenditure was "justified."

In a section devoted to resident instruction, the report said the University has an average enrollment of 12.9 students for each instructor, and each full-time instructor taught an average of 13.3 credit hours a week. It concluded that "the teaching load is light."

"The teaching load for the university as a whole is considerably lower," it continued, "than is necessary to maintain a high quality of instruction. Only in the College of Commerce is the teaching load heavy."

The cost per student ranged from $163 in the College of Arts and Sciences to $627 in the College of Agriculture, with the average for the University $239. The report termed this "somewhat higher than should be necessary," and said the cost in the agricultural college was "excessive."

Expenses of instruction in the various colleges totaled $648,756, exclusive of the summer session, in which the cost was $17,881.

U. K. APPROPRIATION FOR 1934-35 CUT BY LEGISLATURE

The University of Kentucky will receive, in support from the state in addition to fees, the sum of $679,000 for the next biennium, if the present appropriation bill, passed by the general assembly is approved by Governor Laffoon. All of the Teachers' Colleges received substantial increases in the same appropriation bill.

Early in the year, Doctor McVey presented requests asking the Commission to recommend these requests to the General Assembly.

General support in addition to fees and local income, $850,000; Repairs, $40,000; Summer Session, $20,000; Agricultural Instruction, $30,000; Payment of Back Salaries, $79,000; Experiment Stations in addition to local income—Lexington, $50,000; Quicksand, $25,000; Princeton, $20,000; Public Service Laboratories, $22,000, and Agricultural Extension, $155,109.

While all of the items requested in the budget were with two exceptions reduced by the Appropriations Committee, none of them were entirely lost to the University. Through the influence of members of the House and Senate, an item for back salaries was included in part.

The following amounts were appropriated and can be compared with the figures above and will show the cuts made in the President's requests for support:

General support in addition to fees and local income, $679,000; Repairs, $9,000; Summer Session, $9,000; Agricultural Instruction, $25,500; Payment of back salaries, $71,100.

Experiment Stations in addition to local incomes—Lexington, $50,000; Quicksand, $15,000; Princeton, $15,000; Public Service Laboratories, $22,000, and Agricultural Extension, $126,000.

Information on the support of the University is available and it behooves friends and alumni of the school to become acquainted with the situation and urge the proper support of the legislature when it next meets.

The University contact men, who have been established in 85 counties of the state, gave valuable aid to the University, in using their influence in an effort to secure the proper appropriations. These contact men, all alumni of the University, are well informed concerning the conditions at the University and give their cooperation whenever it is possible.

Some University alumni in the General Assembly were of material assistance, working for the University at all times and supporting measures beneficial to their Alma Mater.

SECOND LOYALTY FUND DRIVE GETS INCREASE IN GIFTS

The second annual Loyalty Fund Drive, staged with the cooperation of the University, is still bringing in results and, although the amount of the contributions is slightly more than that of last year, the number who have contributed has been far greater.

In 1933, a total of $200 was received from 24 alumni of the University. One alumnus contributed $100 of this amount. Three letters were sent out to all graduates of the University. In 1934, although only one letter was sent to the graduates, 58 alumni have sent in gifts up to the present writing. One recent graduate, who had been without employment nearly ever since his graduation, sent in $5, with a letter of encouragement boosting the University. His letter follows:

Sparkhill, N. Y.
April 23, 1934

Dear Dr. McVey:

In response to your letter of the 18th instant, I am enclosing five (5) dollars toward the "loyalty fund." I am sorry that I can't afford to send more, but I was unemployed until January of this year and will be without a position after May 1st, with no prospects for a position for the coming school year.

I'm cheering for the University and have the utmost confidence in you and know you will be able to pull and navigate the University we all love through the mire and stormy sea of depression.

With my best wishes for a happier future, I am

Respectfully yours,
ELMO B. FIRENZE, '32.

Mr. Firenze's spirit is typical of what the spirit of University alumni should be. If all graduates and former students held the loyalty and affection for the University in their hearts as does this one, the University and the Alumni Association would fare much better, both materially and spiritually.

Officers of the Association are gratified with the results of the Loyalty Fund Drive and feel that, since alumni are contributing in larger numbers, interest in the drive is spreading each year. It is hoped that, in the near future, returns from this annual campaign will be large enough to enable the Association to be independent financially. Since dues have been reduced, it is hardly possible for the association to balance its budget with what is received from that source.

Half of the money received in the Loyalty Fund Campaign is turned over to the Student Loan Fund. Up to the present writing, the 1934 drive has brought in $207.15, $7.15 more than the total amount of last year. Members of the Philadelphia Alumni Club contributed as a group.

The names and classes of those sending contributions will be published in the September issue of the Kentucky Alumnus.

STUDENT GROUP AT U. K. IS COSMOPOLITAN

Students from four continents are registered at the University of Kentucky Summer Session this year. Besides students from various parts of North America, Taro Inogaki is from Osaka, Japan, Asia; Lilly Gertrude Swords is the European representative from Gorlitz, Silesia, Germany, and Elizabeth Maxfield McKee is from the Belgian Congo, Africa.

STATE P.T.A. TO MEET AT U. OF K.

The second state-wide conference for officers and workers of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held at the University of Kentucky the week beginning July 10. The chief speaker will be Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, educational secretary of the national conference, Washington, D. C. Last year the conference was attended by more than one hundred delegates from various parts of Kentucky.

U. K. FACULTY MEMBER JOINS NEW DEAL

Black, professor of Law at the University of Kentucky, has been granted a sabbatical leave for next year and will go to Washington in a few weeks to assume his duties as chief attorney of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.
