Engineers hold exhibition

Open house gives public hands-on fun

Bringing UK's College of Engineering to the public was the idea behind Saturday's Engineering Open House.

The event, which was held in conjunction with National Engineering Week, featured demonstrations, exhibitions and student contests.

The Kentucky Society for Professional Engineers, for example, provided demonstrations on properties of density and resonance to motivate younger students by showing them that science can be fun.

"We want to spark them on to science," said Misha Goetz, president of the society and a civil engineering senior.

One of the contests involved high school and middle school students, who competed in a model bridge building contest. The bridges were judged on their strength and efficiency of design.

Another contest, called the "E Olympics," was held between agricultural, mechanical, materials and chemical engineering students. The students ran an obstacle course in which they were required to do everything from solve equations to wheel around on desk chairs.

"The demonstration shows (the public) that engineering is fun," agriculture freshman Ben Koostra said.

One of the more popular exhibits, sponsored by the Society of Women Engineers, was the "Wild Thing."

It consisted of a rotating teeter-totter type of plank with a waste paper basket on one end and a chair on the other. Participants sat in the chair and tried to throw tennis balls in the basket while rotating around the room.

Jennifer Kelly, an electrical engineering senior, said the contraption was built at Northern Kentucky University.

Other events included a "crash survivability" demonstration in which competitors tried to pack eggs so they would survive a vertical drop without breaking.

Also on display was a 20 foot-long steel bridge built by civil engineering students for an Ohio Valley Conference competition last year.

The bridge, which took a semester to design and build, placed third at the competition.

UK officials dedicate engineering complex at weekend ceremony

UK's new Civil Engineering and Transportation Center will help establish the College of Engineering as one of the best in the world, University President Charles Wethington said Saturday.

"When we look back, we will see this facility as the special catalyst to a world class College of Engineering," Wethington said at dedication ceremonies for the $11.6 million structure.

Thomas Lester, dean of the College of Engineering, agreed, noting that the facilities are "as good as any place in the country."

Those facilities include laboratories for classes on structure, pavement, computer imaging and computer-aided design.

In addition to new classrooms, and faculty and staff offices, the building also contains a computer lab that houses 48 personal computers for use by students and faculty.

The additional computers could not have come at a better time, said Brian Woods, president of the Engineering Student Council. He said engineering students are experiencing a major computer crunch.

Lester said the building actually is much larger than it appears.

The total square footage is 44,244, about 40 per-

University has several options for Rose Street

By Anne Jackson
Staff Writer

UK is committed to solving safety problems posed by Rose Street, but closing the thoroughfare is just one of several options currently being evaluated, school officials say.

Earlier this month, in a presentation on UK's future Central and Life Sciences Library, director of UK Libraries Paul Willis observed that pressure to resolve the Rose Street dilemma will mount with the library's expected completion in 1996 and the ensuing construction of academic buildings east of Rose Street.

"We don't have any specific proposal to close Rose Street," said Donald Clapp, UK Vice President of Administration. "We (are) concerned about the safety of students and others trying to cross Rose Street. In fact, we identified a whole list of alternatives trying to deal with that."

Other options outlined in UK's Physical Development Plan, completed in 1991, include construction of vehicular or pedestrian overpasses or underpasses, and limiting access of vehicles.

According to the plan, a vehicular underpass would reduce only some of the safety hazards vehicles pose to pedestrians and would not relieve the flow of traffic.

Additionally, the report said, the expense of disrupting utilities along Rose Street and the required construction time would be considerable, while offering "questionable paybacks to the City of Lexington and the University."

The study also finds fault with another approach — building an overpass for Rose Street. The report said such a structure would be "visually discordant and inappropriate" and have "a detrimental impact to the image of the University." Furthermore, its long ramps would impede pedestrian and vehicular access to buildings on Rose Street.

Pedestrian bridges and tunnels offer less expensive options, but pose different problems.

"Obviously, if you're talking about building an overpass or an

Breaking the Silence Events to focus on sexual abuse

By Trent Knuckles
Staff Writer

A coalition of UK groups is sponsoring Sexual Violence Awareness Week in an effort to raise students' consciousness about a problem that remains hidden from society.

Dr. Rob Ferguson, a counselor at the UK Counseling Center, said sexual violence "usually takes place in isolation and secrecy." He hopes the week's activities will bring attention to the problem and help create solutions to stop it.

The groups sponsoring the event, which begins today, include the Counseling Center, UK National Organization for Women, the Religious Advisers Staff and Student Health Services.

The Rev. Richard Elliot of Saint Augustine's Chapel and Sister Ellen Kehoe of the Catholic Newman Center are the main coordinators of the event.

Events begin today at noon with speeches by several campus ministers on "Faith and the Sanctity of the Person." The presentation will be given on Student Center patio.

Tomorrow, Ferguson will speak at the Newman Center at 7 p.m. "We will be letting people know the stats on sexual violence," Ferguson said.

Ferguson said he intends to do more than just give a speech, however.

"We plan to do exercises to get people thinking more about sexual violence," he said.

Ferguson also will be taking his message to psycholo-

PLO chief seeks more from Israel

By Salah Nasrawi
Associated Press

TUNIS, Tunisia — Seeking to capitalize on the worldwide outcry over the Hebron mosque massacre, Yasser Arafat said yesterday that Israel's pledge to crack down on Jewish extremists was not enough and demanded international protection for the Palestinians.

The Palestine Liberation Organization chairman left the door open for resuming peace talks with Israel, despite pressures to quit in protest over the slaying of 39 worshippers on Friday.

But he and top aides said that if the talks resumed, the focus would shift to the need for removing 144 Jewish settlements before the implementation of the Sept. 13 Palestinian self-rule accord.

Friday's bloodbath plunged Israel and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip into chaos.

By yesterday, the death toll from the massacre and subsequent rioting had climbed to 65 with about 360 wounded.

The Israeli Cabinet on Sunday ordered the arrest of Jewish extremist leaders and pledged to disarm hardcore settlers in a crackdown designed to lure the Palestinians back to the negotiating table.

But Arafat, in an interview with The Associated Press, said the measures were "hollow and superficial."

"These are empty decisions which have no relation with the seriousness of the crime or with the basis of resolving it," Arafat said.

He renewed his rejection of Israeli claims that a lone, mentally unstable extremist was responsible for the massacre.

He said a "gang of settlers" carried out the shooting and army soldiers later opened fire on the worshippers.

The Israeli Cabinet decisions, which also included a pledge to release hundreds of Palestinian prisoners, were designed to absolve the government of any responsibility, Arafat said.

"Why didn't the Cabinet say anything about the involvement of some elements of the Israeli army in the killing?" said Arafat.

"These elements not only let the criminals flee the scene but they opened fire on our people who were trying to take the injured to the hospitals or came to see their dead," he said.

Unless the U.N. Security Council "takes concrete decisions to provide international protection for the Palestinians, the whole peace process will be in jeopardy," he said.

Israel has vehemently rejected stationing peacekeepers in the territories.

Asked if he accepted President Clinton's call for resuming the peace negotiations in Washington, Arafat said the PLO leadership will meet Sunday and today to decide on the issue.

Arafat has recalled his chief delegates to peace for-

Lynchings, former KSU president discussed in instructor's two books

By Joe Godbey
Contributing Writer

UK educator Gerald Smith has faced the grueling pressures of academic life and realizes the value of research and hard work.

Now he has used that hard work to his advantage by writing a book based on research he did while writing his doctoral thesis.

"It's like your first child," the history professor said about his book, "A Black Educator in the Segregated South: Kentucky's Rufus B. Atwood."

The book, which was released Feb. 4, details the life of Atwood, former president of Kentucky State College. It also highlights his ability to raise funds for the college, known today as Kentucky State University, and his ability to guide the school during a difficult period of racial segregation.

"Atwood proved to be a skilled interracial diplomat," Smith said.

Smith also is working on another book, to be called "The Duty of the Hour: Memphis Migration and African-American Agency, 1862-1923." The book is being co-written with Kenneth Goings, a professor of black American history at Florida Atlantic University.

"The books are two different worlds," Smith said in a recent presentation at the Martin Luther King Jr. Cultural Center.

"The Duty of the Hour" deals with the personal feelings people had toward lynchings of blacks and the overall structure of the communities in Memphis, Tenn., between 1862-1923.

The community of migrants was the most important, Smith said, but the town also had communities the two authors have termed the "race" and "accommodation" communities. The race community supported injustices of the blacks, while the accommodation community accepted the limited rights given by whites.

"The purpose of the book was to expose the feelings of the African-Americans that were part of this time period," Smith said. "We just didn't want another book just about lynching."

Adviser lays out Iran, Iraq plan

By Carl Hartman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's national security adviser, Anthony Lake, has laid out a plan for "dual containment" of Iraq and Iran and their hostility to the United States.

He calls them both "outlaw" and "backlash" states, along with Cuba, North Korea and Libya.

But Lake makes a difference between Saddam Hussein's Iraq and the fundamentalist Muslim government of Iran in an article appearing Monday in the quarterly "Foreign Affairs." He says the Clinton administration supports Iraqi exiles, who want to overthrow Saddam. With Iran, he foresees the possibility of better relations.

"In Iraq, the regime is responsible for both war crimes and crimes against humanity, a regime whose invasion of Kuwait and gassing of its own people have rendered it an international renegade," Lake wrote.

He also condemns "outlaw behavior" by Iran, saying it "is the foremost sponsor of terrorism and assassination worldwide." But he added:

"We remain ready for an authentic dialogue in which we will raise aspects of Iranian behavior that cause us so much concern..."

"The Clinton administration is not confronting a blatantly aggressive state that invaded and occupied a weaker neighbor."

Lake lays out different ways of dealing with Iran and Iraq.

In a swipe at former Presidents Reagan and Bush, he recalled that they tried to build up "moderates" in Iran.

"These same 'moderates' are responsible for the very policies we find so objectionable," he wrote.

He said Iran wants to dominate the Gulf. To prevent that, he noted cooperation by the Clinton administration with allies to keep materials for chemical and nuclear weapons out of Iranian hands. It also keeps watch to prevent Iran from getting missiles from "current suppliers, including North Korea," he said.

He called containment of Iran a harder job because some countries want to deal with it and there are no U.N. Security Council resolutions against Iran as there are against Iraq.

Chlorine phase-out plan has lobbyists out in force

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — From vinyl siding to shower curtains and from toilet paper to water pipes, chlorine is in thousands of products. So, it's no wonder industry lobbyists sprang to life when the Clinton administration began talking about banning the chemical.

An intense lobbying war in recent weeks has centered on Capitol Hill where lawmakers are working to overhaul a law that protects lakes and streams from pollution, including highly toxic releases of chlorine compound byproducts.

The industry won an early battle by keeping out of the legislation an administration proposal that the government develop a long-term strategy to phase out the use of chlorine in manufacturing and elsewhere because of health concerns.

There was no mention of chlorine in the clean water bill that cleared the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee on Friday. But several lawmakers, including Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, were expected to resurrect the Clinton proposal on the Senate floor.

Clinton administration plans to re-examine chlorine "firmly established a chlorine phase-out as the future direction" of U.S. environmental policy, maintains Greenpeace lobbyist Rick Hind.

Environmentalists, especially Greenpeace, have fought for years to curtail chlorine use, especially in the making of paper, where it is blamed for contaminating water and fish with cancer-causing dioxin and other toxins. They argue there are substitutes readily available to bleach paper.

Some chlorine byproducts — dioxins, PCBs, DDT and others — already have been banned or curtailed because they are linked to cancer, birth defects, neurological impairment and reproductive problems.

But environmentalists argue that these chemical byproducts cannot be adequately controlled unless chlorine as a chemical class is replaced. Last week a joint U.S.-Canadian commission for the third year agreed, saying the continuing presence of chlorine-based toxic chemicals in the Great Lakes poses a serious health risk.

"Dealing with thousands of chemicals individually ... has and will continue to be a never-ending quest," said the commission, proposing that classes of "persistent toxic chemicals" be removed from use.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner proposed a detailed study into chlorine's health effects, followed within three years by "a national strategy for substituting, reducing, or prohibiting the use of chlorine and chlorinated compounds."

"It came completely out of the blue," says Fred Webber, president of the Chemical Manufacturers Association. He promised a "full court press" against the Clinton proposal.

Suddenly lawmakers and reporters were bombarded with an avalanche of information touting the benefits of chlorine, and the economic costs of phasing it out.

Chemical industry lobbyists cited reports suggesting elimination of chlorine could adversely affect a $100 billion a year chunk of the economy ranging from pharmaceuticals to pesticides, and jeopardize 1.3 million jobs.

Charles River Associates, a consulting group often used by industry, issued a study concluding that finding a substitute could cost $67 billion in capital investment, take as long as 20 years and cost consumers $91 billion a year.

The manufacturers of vinyl accused the EPA of "declaring war on modern society" by challenging chlorine.

Cats ride run past Dawg

Wild, wooly month has Epps, Harrison ready if called upon

By Brian Bennett
Senior Staff Writer

In this wild and wooly month of Mardi Gras miracles, free-throw shenanigans and shorthanded victories, the one thing UK fans have dreaded all season happened yesterday — an injury to point guard Travis Ford.

Ford, the team's shrimpy stalwart, strained his right hamstring with a 4-44 left in the first half of yesterday's 80-59 win over Georgia.

"I was running down the court, and it locked up on me," said the 5-foot-9 senior. "It felt like someone grabbed me. It was excruciating pain."

Trainer JoAnn Hauser said after the game that Ford suffered a mild strain.

He will undergo treatment today and may be ready for Wednesday's home finale against Florida. But if Ford does play, he won't be 100 percent, Hauser said.

"I don't think this is anything too severe," Ford said. "But I'm not going to rush things."

Enter Anthony Epps and Chris Harrison.

The two reserve guards, used sparingly throughout most of the season, will be called on to pick up the senior's slack.

And pick it up they did yesterday. Harrison had a career-high 12 points, making 3 of 5 three-pointers. Epps, meanwhile, logged a career-high 22 minutes, making 5 steals and 3 assists.

The two guards' poised play helped the Cats go from three down when Ford left the game to a 21-point victory. And over the next few games, UK will have to continue to count on a couple of guards averaging less than seven minutes a game.

Ford, however, is not worried. "They're playing great basketball right now," Ford said.

And how were they able to improve their games? Maybe it's because of this wild and wooly month.

"Everything that went on in the last few weeks has really helped us develop Anthony Epps and Chris Harrison," UK coach Rick Pitino said. "And we needed them to win this game."

Facing a 31-point deficit at LSU, Pitino emptied his bench, looking for the right combination. Harrison helped fuel the impossible victory with 8 points and 2 three-pointers.

"Anytime you can get in and hit a couple of shots, your confidence builds," Harrison said.

At Tennessee on Wednesday, Harrison got the start as Ford served a one-game suspension for his role in the Vanderbilt free-throw conspiracy. Epps played 19 minutes and hit two crucial threes in the 77-73 win.

"My confidence is really high right now," Epps said. "I've worked hard to contribute to the team."

Epps' quick hands and deft passes sparked the decisive 18-0 UK run at the start of the second half yesterday. The 6-foot-2 freshman also helped the team swipe 20 steals and tally a season-high 50 deflections, a stat followed religiously by Pitino and his staff.

"Anthony stepped up today," Harrison said.

"I think he'll be able to get the job done."

"We've got to get Anthony to lead us," Pitino said.

Harrison had to overcome mental hurdles to get where he now stands. Pitino said the junior gets on incredible shooting streaks in practice. But coming off the bench cold, Harrison would miss his first couple of shots and then get down on himself — the curse of a reserve jump shooter.

"Coach tells me to keep shooting as long as you take good shots," Harrison said.

Harrison's defense has been more encouraging than his improved shooting for Pitino.

"When I got here, I couldn't play any defense, so the only way to go was up," the 6-foot-1 guard said.

Few would have thought at the beginning of the season that Harrison and Epps would play integral roles as the Month of Madness, a.k.a. March, begins.

But the two say they're ready to assume the added responsibility. Nothing wild. Nothing wooly.

"We just have to go out there and do our job," Harrison said.

Prior to yesterday's game against Georgia, Bulldog Shannon Anderson seemed to have UK forward Rodrick Rhodes' number. In the last meeting between the two, Anderson grabbed 12 rebounds (Rhodes' number). Rhodes had one of his worst games of the year, as he scored just four points.

Rhodes shut down Anderson on the boards this time, allowing him no rebounds. Rhodes denied even being the same person that had the lackluster night in Athens, Ga., on Jan. 8.

"I knew that wasn't me," Rhodes said. Satisfaction clearly ruled his emotions. "I did think I had something to prove to myself. For him to have such a great game last time killed me. I was kind of crushed."

In the first five minutes of the second half, Rhodes and his UK mates crushed any hopes for a Georgia upset. An 18-0 run turned a 30-all tie into a 48-30 UK lead. The Cats (22-5 overall, 11-3 Southeastern Conference) went on to win 80-69 over the Bulldogs (12-14, 6-8 SEC).

"We haven't played like that before," freshman Anthony Epps said. Epps had five steals in the game. "We can do that for the whole game if we put our minds to it. We've got the athletes to make it happen."

The ringleader in the Wildcats' circus, which was held at the outset of the second half, cracked his whip and asked for deflections. His Cats responded, totaling a season-high 50 for the game and scoring 46 points off of Georgia turnovers.

"The last four or five games we have made a concentrated effort to pick up the deflections," UK coach Rick Pitino said. "We haven't come close to (50) all season. That was a tremendous, tremendous effort on the players' part."

Pitino wasn't happy with his Cats' tricks in the first half, due in part to playing at Rupp Arena.

"Sometimes our players ... think the crowd is going to win games for them," he said. "They've got to get away from this Rupp Arena comfort zone they have."

Following last week's free throw fiasco at Vanderbilt, Jared Prickett, Travis Ford and Gimel Martinez made their return from a one-game suspension.

"It was kind of tough, but there's a lesson to be learned in everything," Prickett said. "We got the most out of it that we could."

Ford created UK's scariest moment of the game with 4:44 remaining in the first half. The senior point guard pulled his hamstring driving to the basket and did not return to the game.

"It's just like a cramp, but much worse," Ford said. "I tried to jog down the hall but there was just no way. Hopefully, I'll be back. I want to be ready for the tournament. I've got to take it slow."

There were many opinions on how soon Ford could see action following the game.

"You never know when you're going to have a key injury," Pitino said. "I don't think this is a short injury. We've got to get Anthony (Epps) to lead us. How bad it is right now, we don't know. That's a nagging type of injury."

Rhodes is sure Ford will be taking aim at the Florida Gators come Wednesday night.

"I think he'll get better," he said. "I think he'll be 100 percent. This is the big game. These are the games you die for. I know he'll play. There's no doubt in my mind."

Epps, Ford's replacement, is sure his practice partner won't miss a game of this importance.

"I've been around Travis for a year now," Epps said. "He'll work hard to be ready to play (Wednesday). He's not going to miss this game."

Lady Kats win on senior night

By Doc Purcell
Staff Writer

UK BASKETBALL

Entering Saturday night's match-up with conference rival Louisiana State, the Lady Kats put everything on the line.

Their hope of sending four seniors away from Memorial Coliseum in good cheer was there for the taking.

And their chances of a possible NCAA tournament bid rested on the outcome as well.

Overall, the Lady Kats' final game of the season was perhaps their most pivotal, and their play was certainly up to the task. In a meeting that was highlighted by the brilliant performance of one of the nation's brightest offensive star's, LSU's Cornelia Gayden, the Lady Kats scratched their way to the top, clinching a 89-71 victory.

The win places UK at 16-10 overall and 5-6 in league play, and cements a seventh-seed in the Southeastern Conference tournament in Chattanooga, Tenn., next week.

But, more importantly, the season-ending victory keeps the team's NCAA tournament hopes alive and well.

"This takes us one more step (toward a tournament berth). There are a lot of pieces to the puzzle, and this is certainly one that had to be there," UK head coach Sharon Fanning said.

The Lady Kats' puzzle was nearly picked apart by Gayden, a dazzling guard who lit up the UK defense for a game-high 39 points.

"She's a super-quick athlete. She's a very intelligent player. She knows her plays well offensively and defensively," UK guard Stacey Reed said of the LSU junior's prowess.

Fortunately for the Kats, Gayden couldn't win alone, as the rest of the Lady Tigers offered her little aid. LSU's next highest scorer, center Julie Lewis, contributed just 12 points.

UK was another story. Led by Reed's 29 points, the Kats placed three players in double figures, with senior forward Tetra Eberhart pouring in 23, and senior center Jennifer Gray adding 15.

"Teddy and Reed have really been seeing each other on the back-door, cross-court things," Fanning said. "Jennifer, tonight, did a great job on pulling out baseline when people penetrate because, basically, that's her shot."

It wasn't until the second half however, that the Lady Kats showcased their relative balance.

The game began as the Gayden-Reed show, with both players dominating their teams' offensive scheme throughout the first stanza. Gayden's barrage of three-pointers, which included four before the break, and impressive inside moves, garnered her 23 points — her game average for the season.

Her long-range bomb with 6:56 left in the half, gave the Tigers a five-point advantage — their largest of the evening.

Reed was nearly as impressive, pouring in 20 points before intermission with an inside-outside attack.

"Occasionally, I took that outside shot and they went in and I was able to go back inside again," she said.

Sports BRIEFS

Women's tennis defeats FSU

The UK women's tennis team notched its fourth victory of the season on Friday, knocking off Florida State 7-1.

At No. 1 singles, Susan Bari beat FSU's Audra Brannon 6-2, 3-6, 6-2. Freshman Erica Gianci topped the Seminoles' Lori Sowell at No. 2.

UK freshman Kristen Pietruch won at No. 3, ousting FSU's Elke Juul 6-3, 7-5. At No. 4, Florida State's Laura Randma stopped UK's Sheri Bash 7-6, 6-1. UK won again at No. 5, with Bethany Avington holding off the 'Noles' Jen Hyde 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.

"This was a fantastic win for us," UK head coach John Dinnien said. "Florida State is a team like us that is vying for the NCAA Championships."

Men's tennis upsets No. 5 Duke

The No. 15 UK men's tennis team advanced to the semifinals of the 1994 USTA/ITA Men's National Indoor Intercollegiate Tennis Championships before losing to No. 1 Georgia 5-2 on Saturday.

UK, the event's host, got to the semifinal round by knocking off No. 5 Duke 4-3 on Friday. Against the Blue Devils, UK's Mahyar Godard beat Duke's Peter Ayers 7-5, 6-3 in No. 2 singles. UK also got wins at No. 4, by Jason Yeager, No. 5, by Ford Lankford and No. 6, by Jason Thompson.

The Cats' No. 3 doubles team notched UK's only doubles victory again as Lankford and Trebby topped UGA's Nirav Patel and Eddie Jacques.

Track teams have strong meet

The UK men's and women's track teams turned in impressive performances at the Southeastern Conference Indoor Championships in Gainesville, Fla., last weekend.

Sprinters Tim Harden and Clyde Rudolph led the men's team as both captured victories. Harden cruised to a win in the 55-meter dash in an SEC meet record time of 6.17 seconds, while Rudolph finished fourth in 6.29. Rudolph was even more impressive in his marquee event, the 200-meter dash, successfully defending his SEC title with a 21.01 clocking.

Harden finished third in 21.26.

"Both of the guys ran outstanding races, and I am very pleased. They came in as favorites and both got the job done," UK coach Darryl Anderson said.

All-American Raina Turner turned in the women's lone win, upsetting pre-meet favorite Gai Kapernick of LSU to win the high jump with a season best leap of five feet 11 1/2 inches.

Students show love for ice

By Rebecca Farmer
Staff Writer

Some UK students, like biology freshman Jason Hickman, had their first ice skating experience during the ice storm a few weeks ago.

"I might consider trying ice skating for real," he said.

Other students, like Spanish and education senior Suzanne Correa, visit the Lexington Ice Center once a week.

"I only do it as a form of exercise during the winter," she said.

For other UK students, however, ice skating is more than a hazard of winter or an occasional excursion to the ice center.

For these students, skating is a way of life.

Laura Oremland, an undeclared freshman, has been figure skating since she was three years old. Repeated injuries cut her career short when she was a high school sophomore, but she recently has taken to the ice again.

Oremland currently is working on creating a program to help underprivileged children learn how to skate and is considering joining the Thoroughbred Figure Skating Team at the Lexington Ice Center.

Oremland, a native of Cleveland, was introduced to figure skating by her mother, whom Oremland surprised by skating around the rink with no problems her first time.

"It just came naturally," she said, shrugging her shoulders and smiling.

Chris Boyd, a management and marketing sophomore, first hit the ice when he was five. He is now the president of the Cool Cats hockey team, the third largest money-making sport at UK.

He plays right wing and occasionally center.

At his elementary school in Owensboro, Ky., Boyd picked up a pamphlet that promoted the local hockey league. He wore hockey equipment his first time on the ice, and therefore did not fare as well as Oremland.

"They had so many pads on me, it was hard for me to move," he said with a laugh. "I don't think I really actually made it around the whole ice rink the first time. It took me a while before I really learned how to go through all the motions."

Oremland began competing in local figure skating competitions when she was in the fifth grade. She soon began participating in out-of-state tournaments.

Boyd got off to a slow start but advanced rapidly after he mastered the basics, moving up to the 7- to 9-year-old league bracket when he was only 6.

Both skaters have made sacrifices for their sports. Oremland had to deal with the stress of the intense competition of the skating world. She now sees her injury was a release from that stress.

"It was a break after all the years of going at it like a kamikaze. It gets to you," she said.

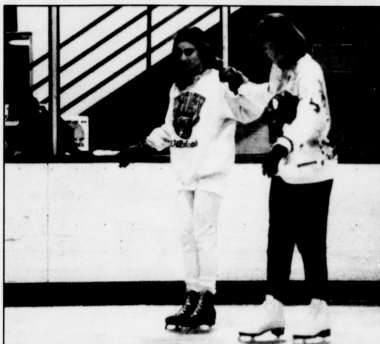

Boyd was an award-winning soccer and tennis player in high school. His father wanted him to try for scholarships in those sports, but Boyd passed them up to play hockey.

Oremland enjoys figure skating, despite the sacrifices involved, because it is a fusion of two of her loves: athletics and theater.

"Whatever you're feeling on the ice, people will feel right along with you," Oremland said of the drama of ice skating. "You can reach out and touch people."

Boyd said he thinks hockey is more of a graceful sport than many give it credit for being.

"People see hockey as one of these blood sports. I see it as pure grace."

Members of Joe Summerfield's UK skating class attempt to make their way around the rink.

Pumped-up Tyler & Co. get a grip on Rupp Arena crowd

By Ty Halpin
Sports Editor

Aerosmith played with some old toys in the attic Saturday night at Rupp Arena.

In a concert spanning all genres of their storied career, the Boston-based megastars pleased fans both new and old.

Gripping the audience with their characteristic flash and undeniably bold style, Tyler and company seemed generate an incredible amount of energy that bounced off the screaming crowd and back to the band.

Lead singer Steven Tyler was a bundle of energy, continually darting from one side of the stage to the next, singing effortlessly all the while.

The band opened with "Eat the Rich," a track off its latest album, Get A Grip. From that point, Tyler was pure adrenaline.

His voice was consistent, even though he was dancing and jumping throughout the show.

The performance of the opening act, a band called Cry of Love, was uneventful at best.

To say the least, Cry of Love did not whip the crowd into a frenzy.

The virgin band was supporting their debut album, Brother, which has received considerable airplay on classic and new rock stations for the vintage sound of such singles as "Peace Pipe," "Too Cold In The Winter" and "Bad Thing."

Cry of Love, although not as exciting as the headlining band, seemed appropriately paired with Aerosmith due to their '70s sound, continuing the tradition of other such tribute bands as The Black Crowes and Slick Lilly.

Cry of Love was basically background music for connoisseurs trying to wade through the enormous beer lines.

The fact that beer sales were allowed probably helped to make the near-sellout crowd as loud as it was for the UK-Arkansas basketball game earlier in the year.

Once Aerosmith took the stage, the audience was quickly on its feet. Aerosmith's talented axeman, Joe Perry, showed talents that aren't seen in Lexington too often. In the blues portion of the show, Perry led the other Aerosmith members in some soulful Memphis-style blues.

Tyler clearly is the heart and soul of the band. With his ragged shirts, tight jeans and two-hour aerobic workout, fans were left feeling more than satisfied.

This concert was my fourth Aerosmith endeavor, and the band has proved to me that it hasn't entered the realm of sell-out facades the way some bands have.

The group had a fresh, new sound on the Get A Grip tracks, but switched easily to its older, more raw sound on songs like "Walk This Way" and "Sweet Emotion."

The band hit its Permanent Vacation effort, playing "Dude Looks Like a Lady" and "Rag Doll," covered Pump with "Love in an Elevator" and "Janie's Got a Gun" and sprinkled in some older albums with hits like "Toys in the Attic" and "Draw the Line."

"Draw the Line" included an impressive solo by Perry. With the spotlight securely on him, he delved into his familiar blues style.

After a few minutes, he started the "Spy Hunter" theme and was joined by the rest of the band. A few bars later, they were at the bridge of "Draw the Line," and the crowd was excited again.

Aerosmith left the stage the first time with the crowd knowing the band would be back.

The group returned for the encore set and started with "Dream On," which made for a good transition. They finished with "Walk This Way," and the crowd seemed satisfied.

Overall, the lighting effects were solid.

Some concerts are overdone in this area, but Aerosmith used a good mix without being too fancy. The sound quality in Rupp was decent.

At times, distortion could be heard, but that gave the music an added dimension.

Play auditions begin today

Spring Showcase seeking students for script readings

By Rebecca Farmer
Staff Writer

If you ever wanted a chance to strut your stuff in the spotlight, now is the time to try.

All UK students who are interested in flexing their theatre muscles are encouraged to audition for a role in the Spring Showcase of One-Act Plays.

"There will a large variety of roles; male, female, mystery to drama to comedy, everything," said Chris Arnold, a student in instructor Brady Thomas' principles of directing course, which is coordinating the event.

Each of the 13 students in the class will direct a play in the showcase, as well as conduct the auditions.

The plays are of the "five and dime" variety, said Glenna Flannery, another directing student. "Five and dime" plays are shorter than regular plays, require little technical support and can be performed on a small budget.

"They rely on good scripts, directing and acting," Flannery said.

As theatre students who understand the pressures of trying out for a role, the directors hope to create a "warm and welcoming atmosphere" at the showcase auditions.

To help create this atmosphere, the directors encourage those interested in auditioning to arrive early. Though the pieces to be read will be less than a page long, students are encouraged to read the entire script of all the plays before arriving. All those who audition will have the opportunity to read for a role.

Those auditioning will list their preferred roles and the times they would be available to rehearse on an application form when they arrive. Rehearsal times will be discussed after the casts are selected.

Auditions for the Spring Showcase of One-Act Plays will be held today and tomorrow from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Briggs Theatre in the Fine Arts Building. The Showcase will feature 13 short plays, with roles for 25 women and 20 men.

The plays are "4 A.M. (Open All Night)," directed by Kara Graham; "Aria Da Capo," directed by Jae Alexander; "The Attack of the Moral Fuzzies," directed by Laurie Genet; "Catesby," directed by James Byrum; "Finger Food," directed by Julie Kenney; "Haku," directed by Emily Donaldson; "Here We Are," directed by Tom McCormick; "Inside Out," directed by Daphne Roberts; "Keely and Du," directed by Glenna Flannery; "Overtones," directed by Melanie Julian; "Property of the Dallas Cowboys," directed by Lis Jacobs; "Sunday Go To Meetin'," directed by Mark Smith, and "Sorry, Wrong Number," directed by Chris Arnold.

Scripts are available in the Fine Arts Library.

Students who do not land roles are encouraged to work with the technical aspects of the Spring Showcase, such as lighting and stage managing. Theatre students will receive a 1/2 performer's practice for being a performer or stage manager in the Spring Showcase.

The Spring Showcase will be held April 27, 28 and 29. A portion of the plays will be performed on the 27th, the other portion on the 28th, and all of the plays will be performed on the 29th. The Showcase will be free to all students.

underpass, the question is, are people going to go to that point and use that anymore than they now use the crosswalks that are across Rose Street?" Clapp said.

"One of the problems that we have, and if you just go look, you'll see, (is) people don't cross Rose Street at any particular point. And so as you look at the various options, the question is what do you assume about the ability to change the patterns."

Closing Rose Street from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. would relieve Central Campus of traffic seven hours per day, but the same problems would plague the University outside of these hours.

"We'll know more about (the most viable option) as we see how the usage patterns continue to develop there over the years," Clapp said. "Ultimately, (it) will depend on the evaluation of these options, the availability of resources for carrying them out, the feelings generally in this University community and the community at large."

Last fall, Lexington Mayor Pam Miller opposed another mayoral candidate's proposal to close Rose Street. She said the plan would cause Nicholasville Road traffic to triple in volume.

Calvin Grayson, director of the Kentucky Transportation Center, advocates a cooperative approach to Rose Street.

"Most ... communities (that include universities) can usually find mutual benefits (in solving) any type of transportation difficulty," he said. "I think all transportation problems can be worked out if they work from areas of agreement rather than areas of disagreement. "Us' and 'them' doesn't get it done," he said.

ums in Cairo, Paris and Washington to discuss Clinton's call.

Arafat's credibility among his own people has been on the decline because of delays in implementing the Israeli-PLO accord on self-rule, which was to take effect Dec. 13. Many Arabs are opposed to the peace process entirely.

Faisal Hussein, a leading PLO official in the West Bank, complained that despite Palestinian warnings that the settlements were a potential powder keg, Israel has been looking for ways to keep the settlers in the occupied territories.

"If anyone would like to talk about the continuation of the peace talks, first he must know that the matter of the settlements must be the priority and on the agenda immediately," he said.

The Hebron massacre "proved there is no way to have peace and settlements together," he said.

Speaking in Cairo before leaving for Tunis, chief PLO negotiator Nabil Shaath said the PLO did not wish to quit the 2-year-old peace process.

But, he added: "There are extremist elements within the Israeli Clapp suggests that the University and the city indeed have shared interests.

"I understand what their concerns are, and my assumption is we both want the same thing, and that is we want a safe condition here."

The Physical Plan argues that Rose Street and its associated problems be dealt with now, otherwise, safety and circulation problems are expected to worsen.

Rose Street is designed to accommodate from 14,500 to a maximum 18,000 vehicles per day. As of 1991, daily traffic ranged up to 24,200 cars daily.

The University has not established a time limit for dealing with the problem.

"The University is committed to (resolving) it and thinks it is important," said Joseph Burch, vice president for University Relations. "We don't have a date."

army and within the government, especially in Hebron, that try to abort the peace process."

Jibril al-Rejeib, Arafat's security adviser for the West Bank and Gaza Strip, said in Tunis that the PLO leadership would "commit a grave mistake if it ignores the national mood of outrage" and returned to the peace talks.

King Hussein of Jordan also has come under pressure from Muslim fundamentalists in his kingdom to withdraw from the peace process in retaliation for the mosque attack.

But Hussein still has the power and enough public support in the kingdom to silence opponents of the peace process.

cent if which is underground.

He said he hopes the new building will help attract top students and faculty to UK.

Wethington noted that UK's building is the first at an engineering college to accommodate both civil engineering facilities and a transportation center.

The opportunity for the center's professional research staff to interact more closely with engineering faculty is one of the benefits of the combination, officials said.

Students and faculty members echoed the sentiments of Wethington and Lester.

Dennis Webb, a instrumentation technician, said the building is "a great boost to the whole school of engineering."

The building also reflects the heritage of the College of Engineering. Architect Jim Gibson, a 1958 UK civil engineering graduate, said the building's twin towers are an architectural reference to the University's original engineering building, Mechanical Hall, which was built in the 1890s.

Bravo's discrimination case postponed until March 31

By Chris Tipton
 Staff Writer

Hearings in a racial discrimination lawsuit against Bravo's Restaurant, formerly co-owned by UK basketball coach Rick Pitino, have been postponed until May 31 to avoid conflicts with UK's basketball schedule.

Attorneys for UK basketball coach Rick Pitino, who was principal owner of the Lexington restaurant at the time of the alleged discrimination incident in 1992, sought the delay.

Pitino originally was a party in the suit, but he later was dropped by the plaintiff, Love Talley, who was a chef at the restaurant.

But Talley's suit is against the restaurant itself, not Pitino, and Joseph Kimball, Talley's attorney, thought that dropping the coach from the lawsuit would help speed up the trial.

In the lawsuit, Talley claims he was unjustly fired by the restaurant because he is black. He is seeking $1 million in damages.

Hearings were scheduled to begin Feb. 15, and the continuance came less than one week before the trial was set to begin.

Talley's attorney said Talley opened Bravo Pitino restaurant, located in Victorian Square Shoppes, after regular business hours on April 11, 1992.

Talley claims he was ordered to do so by the spouse of general manager Jodi Diraimo.

Diraimo could not be reached for comment.

Two days later, Talley was fired by the restaurant for reopening the store. Eight other employees of Bravo Pitino who were involved in the incident also were fired.

Within one week, however, all of them were rehired by the restaurant, Kimball said.

Talley maintains that he was told he would not be reinstated because he was in charge April 11 and he made the decision to reopen the store.

Kimball said he is prepared to call witnesses who will testify that Diraimo used the word "nigger" on several occasions and made disparaging remarks about blacks, including calling one a "stupid nigger."

Attorney Glenn Acree, who represents the restaurant, said Pitino was upset about the accusations against restaurant management.

"He just about couldn't believe it," Acree said.

The Equal Employment Opportunities Commission and the Human Rights Commission both declined to take on the investigation.
