Cora Wilson Stewart is one of the most forceful speakers of the American platform. She has the greatest living message presented to any public. She was the headliner of our Summer Quarter among great speakers such as Edward Howard Griggs, Edward A. Steiner, Count Tolstoy, William Mather Lewis, Dallas Lore Sharp and John Adams of the University of London. She appeared before the Colorado School Masters' Club where she literally swept the men off their feet by her splendid present-day presentation of great educational problems. Hers is a charming personality and wins readily in every community.

J. G. CRABBE, President State Teachers College, Greeley, Colo.

Mrs. Stewart's book "Moonlight Schools" has the same literary quality that she puts into her addresses. She is one of the few educators who never has a crude sentence in anything she says.

DR. A. E. WINSHIP, Editor Journal of Education, Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Stewart looks like an old fashioned miniature and when she speaks it is as if someone had struck a note upon a clear silver bell.

ANNIE LAURIE, in the San Francisco Examiner.

Mrs. Stewart is in my opinion the greatest woman speaker on the American platform today. She has won the hearts of everyone who has heard her speak. Hers is the "art that conceals art." She has a wonderful message.

JOSEPHINE CORLISS PRESTON, State Supt. Public Instruction, Olympia, Wash.

Mrs. Stewart is a charming speaker, forceful, fluent, straight to the point and holds her audience with a magnetism that is gained through a subtle humor and striking personality.

Birmingham Age Herald, Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart has just finished a series of most wonderful addresses in Colorado. As usual, she captivated her audiences by her charm, thrilled them with her enthusiasm, converted them by the power of her convictions and exalted them by the fervor of her superb message. She takes rank among the most notable successes of the American platform.

MARY C. C. BRADFORD, State Supt. Public Instruction, Denver, Colo.

We know as our "good gray poet" said, "The song is to the singer and comes back most to him," therefore it must have been the free, generous and loving gift of herself to the lonely people of her State that has endowed "The Moonlight Lady" with her soft, radiant, vital air. To see her, to listen to her makes one feel something of the peace, the repose, the beauty of moonlight on a valley.

The Columbus Enquirer Sun, Columbus, Ga.

At the World Conference on Education Mrs. Stewart was an outstanding figure—not only on account of her constructive work, the genius for projecting her ideals but for the broad humanity which she represents.
