A student out in California with nothing else to do, asked 364 fellow loafers if they were communists. Eighty-six said they were but 10 came back and said they were just kidding. They must have thought he was one of the gum-shoes.

The dropping of football at Washington and Lee leads to the thought that while subsidization and big time emphasis has made competition too tough for small schools, the outlet of physical exertion for the student in the United States makes this country free from riots and strikes that are so common in the unsettled countries of France, Chile, Brazil, etc. In these countries when youthful blood rises, instead of sportsmanship and clean contact of the athletic fields there is bloodshed in the streets and students in the jails. We don't think that universities that drop intercollegiate sports will arrive at any such position but perhaps the evils of football which have been to pronounced in the last few years are actually relatively minor.

The liberal tendencies of the student are not deplorable in themselves but they become a focal point of communist activity. Often the actions are not born in the student mind but rather the result of communist plots which sway the mob.

Dave Brubeck has gathered a tremendous album of music on his recent campus tour entitled JAZZ GOES TO COLLEGE. In this reflective and occasionally rowdy collection the "greatest jazz combo on records" points the way for serious modern music while preserving the mood of true jazz. Time Magazine which is so perceptive, hardly ever, says that the records "to the squares surprise was outselling Liberace."

"The College News" of Murray State ran a group of cartoons and pictures under the rather biased head of light summer news, but we know better and with journalistic frankness we can only offer lack of copy as the reason for all of our pictures. In the summer people just don't do anything noteworthy.

Dr. Stein, who has been awarded a Fulbright grant, handled the University Chorus last spring with amazing patience and fortitude. The members of the singing group were composed of many, many wise young gentlemen who were more interested in the grade than the musical production yet Dr. Stein cultivated a large enthusiasm until one and all enjoyed their work.

Editorials we never finished reading — (ACP) from the Sophian, Smith College:

"Is a liberal arts education preparation for motherhood? Frankly we don't know . . ." Let's hope some sort of education is.

70 Managers Register For CBI Meeting

About 70 college business managers and similar business officers—representative of 23 Eastern, Southern and Southern states—have registered for the University of Kentucky's second annual College Business Management Institute, which opened Monday and will continue through tomorrow.

Announcement of the institute was made by Edgar Gabbard, assistant comptroller at the University. He listed the following educators as instructors for the institute:

Dr. C. C. Carpenter, dean of the UK College of Commerce; Dr. Frank D. Peterson, UK comptroller; Dr. Frank G. Dickey, dean of the College of Education; Raymond W. Kettler, business manager and comptroller, Purdue University; Charles W. Hayes, director of purchases, Emory University.

George E. Van Dyke, assistant comptroller, Rockefeller Foundation; Kelley Thompson, assistant to the president, Western Kentucky State College; George Kavanaugh, business manager, Berea College; E. B. Farris, chief engineer, UK; Dr. Leslie L. Martin, dean of men at UK.

Three other University figures will serve as visiting lecturers during the week. They are Dr. M. M. White, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Dr. Vernon A. Musselman, professor of business education; and Marie Fortenbery, director of the University commons.

The affair is being sponsored by the UK College of Commerce and Department of Business Management and Control with the cooperation of the Southern Association of Colleges and University Business Officers.

According to Gabbard, the institute has been arranged as a study course for college business managers and other business office personnel. Among those who have enrolled are several college deans and presidents of small institutions.

Delegates will represent schools ranging in enrollment from 86 at Dominican College, Racine, Wis., to 16,948 at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.

Educators will come from the following states, in addition to Kentucky: Tennessee, Alabama, Texas, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Michigan, Illinois, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Georgia, Arkansas, South Carolina, Florida, Iowa, Louisiana, New Jersey, Mississippi, Minnesota, South Carolina. Many of the participants will live in University dormitories during the week.

One University of Kentucky department head and two UK political scientists are among Kentuckians who have been awarded Fulbright scholarships for study abroad during the 1954-55 academic year.

They are Dr. Edwin E. Stein, head of the Department of Music; Dr. Jasper B. Shannon, professor of political science; and Ruth McQuown, research associate in the Bureau of Government Research, Department of Political Science.

Dr. Stein will study in Austria, Dr. Shannon will go to Norway, and Miss McQuown's grant provides for research in England. All will remain in Lexington through the Summer Session and leave in late August or September.

Announcement of these winners, as well as those of other Kentuckians selected for Fulbright awards, was made by Dr. Adolphe E. Bigge, head of the Department of Modern Foreign Languages at UK and Chairman of the Kentucky Fulbright Committee.

Under provisions of his award, Dr. Stein will be engaged in research in religious choral music in Austria. He will be attached to the University of Vienna during his year's stay.

The UK music educator said this morning that his work abroad will be a continuation of his past research in Renaissance music. He will be accompanied to Vienna by his wife and their four children.

Dr. Stein has been head of the UK Department of Music since 1948 when he came to Lexington from George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn. Last year he was elected to the Graduate Commission of the National Association of Schools of Music.

Dr. Shannon will spend his year at the University of Oslo in Norway and will do research on the topic, "The Influence of Money in the Selection of Political Leaders." Accompanying him will be Mrs. Shannon and their two children.

Miss McQuown was selected as a Fulbright scholar to do special research concerned with pressure groups in a parliamentary system of government with strong party responsibility. While in Great Britain she will be attached to the University of Manchester.

During the past few months, Miss McQuown has been associated with the Greater Lexington Committee as its executive secretary.

Also among Kentuckians winning Fulbright awards, as announced today, was Miss Sara E. Ballenger, former Lexington resident and UK graduate. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Ballenger, Lexington, she received an A.B. degree from UK in 1948 and the M.A. degree in 1950.

Miss Ballenger's grant calls for study in German literature at Freiburg, Germany. Since 1950 she has been teaching at Northern Oklahoma Junior College, and at the present time she is engaged in graduate study at the University of Indiana's Summer Session.

Also released by Dr. Bigge, as chairman of the Kentucky Committee, were the names of two non-Kentuckians who have been awarded grants under the Fulbright program. They are:

Miss Clara Jo Smith of Louisville, graduate of the University of Louisville, for study in linguistics at the University of Montpellier, France.

Edwin H. Walker of Richmond, graduate of Centre College, for study in German literature at the University of Heidelberg, Germany.

Dr. Bigge pointed out this morning that applications for 1955-56 Fulbright awards will be received between now and Oct. 31. Detailed information concerning these awards may be obtained from his office in UK's Miller Hall.

Yale Author To Publish Essays Here

A new book, "The Verbal Icon," by W. K. Wimsatt Jr., member of the Yale University English faculty, will be published later this week by the University of Kentucky Press.

Editors of the UK Press announced the coming publication of the volume today. It is made up of several essays expressing the literary philosophy by Prof. Wimsatt, recognized as a distinguished critic in his field.

Two preliminary essays included in the book were written by the author in collaboration with Monroe C. Beardsley, associate professor of philosophy at Swarthmore College. According to Press editors, Prof. Wimsatt exposes several prevalent fallacies in contemporary criticism in these essays.

In the course of the book, the Yale educator examines literary theories of Aristotle, Benedetto Croce, T. S. Eliot, R. S. Crane and William Empson.

A native of Washington, D. C., and a graduate of Georgetown and Yale universities, Prof. Wimsatt is the author of two other books and of numerous essays published in journals and collections of criticism and research.

Former Kernel Editor Serving In Washington

Former Kernel Managing Editor, Ben Reeves, the only newspaperman in the group of six Congressional Internees now in Washington under the sponsorship of the American Political Science Association, has been working with Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee and Representative Don Magnuson of Washington, according to the New York Herald Tribune which carried an article about the internees last Sunday.

The internees are in great demand says the Herald Tribune and the number will be increased to ten for next year, half of whom will be journalists and half academicians.

Reporting on Reeves' assignment the Herald Tribune article continues, "Thirty-one year old Ben Reeves, general assignment reporter specializing in politics for the Louisville Courier-Journal says his experience has been invaluable. 'But it leaves me with some strong impression on congressional coverage by press and radio. You usually find the Senate on page one, but most of the time the House lands on the back pages. Why is that? After all, the two houses are supposed to be equal.'

Reeves was graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Journalism from the University in 1949 and two years later earned his Master of Arts degree in Political Science.

Casby Collection Shown At Library

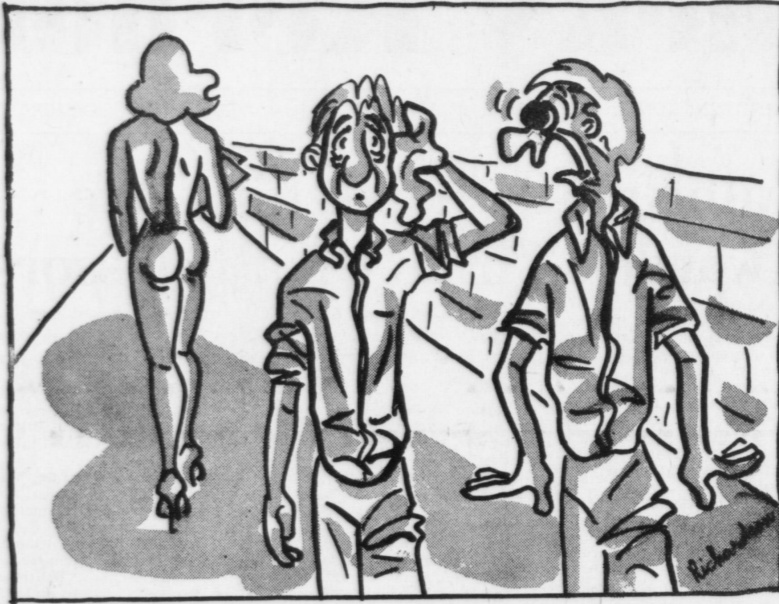

Playbills, Gold Rush books, and private letters from the Trabue collection by William H. Casby Jr., are exhibited in display cases on the ground floor of Margaret King Library.

Mrs. Halyard Injured

Mrs. Camille Halyard, head of the Department of Radio-Arts, is recovering from a leg fracture sustained in a fall on a Lexington street last week.

THE MUD AND THE BUMPS are no longer visible when you visit Fraternity Row. The streets surrounding the houses have been asphalted and grass has been planted in the back yards.

Teague, Mrs. Viola Williamson and Miss Mary Elizabeth Wilson.

Assisted by faculty members of the College of Education, the officers of Kappa Delta Pi will conduct the services.

COLONEL Of The Week

Louis C. Pritchett is a senior from Morganfield, Kentucky, and journalism major. Editor of this rag for the summer, Lou has struggled magnanimously to create copy out of the indifference of summer news. Now, after six weeks he is getting hungry and what's more nobody has offered a: Colonel of the Week suggestions. So with his generous consent the Stirrup Cup presents him with two tickets for an appetizing meal.

Editorially speaking Lou has not troubled the students with controversial material although he firmly believes that Bermuda shorts should be worn to class by all pupils and professors. He dreams of a Pulitzer Prize on the subject, and perhaps some day they will wear shorts to class.

"Set Your House In Order" Advises Purdue Manager

The business manager of Purdue University advised a national group of college business officers Wednesday at the University of Kentucky to "set your houses in order" before the critical period arrives.

He was Raymond W. Kettler, who holds the title of business manager and comptroller at Purdue, and the critical period to which he referred was the time when a new horde of students will flood American colleges within the next ten years.

Kettler appeared as a principal speaker and instructor during the University of Kentucky's second annual College Business Management Institute. Topic of his address yesterday was "Fundamental Approach to the Business End of Small Colleges and Small Universities."

The institute opened Monday at UK and will continue through Saturday. About 70 college business managers and similar business officers—representatives of 23 Eastern, Southern and Central states—are taking part.

"Look critically and carefully at expenditures not directly related to instructional costs," Kettler told his listeners. "Examine these supporting services in an effort to increase efficiency in management and operation."

According to the speaker, business managers and comptrollers in most colleges and universities are inclined to be "ultra conservative."

While commenting on the duties of business officers, the Purdue official declared that the "operations of even the smallest colleges have become extremely complex."

Among other principal lecturers for the institute is George E. Van Dyke, assistant comptroller, Rockefeller Foundation. He spoke on two topics yesterday, "Preparation of the Budget" and "Accounting for Current Funds."

Other instructors are: Dr. C. C. Carpenter, dean of the UK College of Commerce; Dr. Frank D. Peterson, UK comptroller; Dr. Frank G. Dickey, dean of the College of Education; Charles W. Hayes, director of purchases, Emory University.

Kelley Thompson, assistant to the president, Western Kentucky State College; George Kavanaugh, business manager, Berea College; E. B. Farris, chief engineer at UK; and Dr. Leslie L. Martin, dean of men at the University.

Edward Gabbard, assistant comptroller at the University, is serving as co-ordinator for the affair.

J-School Asked For Display At Convention

The School of Journalism of the University of Kentucky has been asked to join other schools with outstanding instructional facilities in presenting a display at the annual convention of the Association for Education in Journalism next month at the University of New Mexico.

Joining in the exhibit, among others, will be Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, Syracuse, Texas, Northwestern, and Ohio State.

Barnhart Shows American Art At Ohio And Butler Exhibitions

Prof. C. Raymond Barnhart of the University of Kentucky Department of Art is presently showing two of his paintings in significant exhibitions of American Art.

At Ohio University's 12th Annual Ohio Valley Exhibition, Barnhart is showing his "Honduran Hillside," a painting in vinylite on masonite. It was painted in Mexico City immediately upon Barnhart's return from Honduras last summer.

The painting gives a geometric interpretation of a Latin-American city against a hillside, with the pattern of simple architecture expressed in an irregular but finely ordered organization of angled lines and patches of color. The whole complex of architectural lines is projected on a conical plane which graduates from light to dark within a range of subdued earthy colors brushed over a bluish underpainting.

At the Butler Institute of American Art in Youngstown, Ohio, Barnhart's "Mexico City" was chosen by the jury to be hung alongside works by some of the most significant present day American artists represented in the Butler's 19th Annual National Mid-Year Show. "Mexico City" is painted in vinylite on a concave panel.

Barnhart mixed marble dust with the vinylite in order to achieve an unusually soft texture. The painting interprets the effect of looking down on the entire Mexican capital at night. The deep blue-purple tone of this three-dimensional work is heightened by hundreds of small lights created by brilliantly painted nail-heads which protrude toward the spectator from the dark concave surface of the painting.

Both of Barnhart's pictures were painted while he was on a research and creative work leave from the University last summer. Long a student of Latin-American culture and a sympathetic observer of the Mexican countryside, his work reveals the depth of his understanding and appreciation. His continuing experimentation and wide range of productivity has brought Barnhart to a position in the world of art that all Kentuckians can share and rightly be proud of.

Clay 'Jubilee' To Be Held This Monday

A gold old fashioned burgoo and barbecue will be held at Ashland, home of Henry Clay, on Monday evening, August 2, under the joint planning of the University of Kentucky and the Henry Clay Memorial Foundation.

According to the plans, burgoo and barbecue will be "prepared in the famous Ashland manner." Music of Henry Clay's period will be presented, including some of Stephen Foster's compositions. These selections will be played by a local quartet, made up of Johnny Rogers, Gentry Shelton, Mrs. Edmond Henry and Mrs. Clyde Arnold. The hosts and participants, including Dr. Jones, will be in costume.

All interested persons are invited to attend the barbecue dinner, scheduled for 5 p.m. (Daylight Saving Time), and tickets for the meal will be $1. Reservations must be made before noon Saturday, July 31.

Tickets have been placed on sale at offices of all University deans and at the UK Office of Information, Administration building.
