Carroll supports state-funded dorm but future of facility is still uncertain

By F. JENAY TATE
Managing Editor

During the past two weeks, Gov. Julian Carroll has announced he will support the use of $1 million in state capital construction funds to build a dormitory for UK's football players. However, he has yet to reveal his plan for making this project a reality.

"When the stories started coming out, plans were not that far along," explained Carroll's press secretary, Gary Auxier. He said the staff at the governor's office is in the process of determining various ways to carry out the planned construction. "If they can figure out a way to do it, they are going to."

"The key factor here is, there's no question that the Governor wants to do this," Auxier said. At this point, "how and whether it'll be done is up in the air."

A housing design feasibility study has been authorized by the governor, the press secretary said. "There has been no commitment made. In fact, the feasibility study is necessary to be done before a commitment can be made."

Auxier said an architectural firm had been recommended, but noted,

"I'm virtually positive no contract has been made."

The Lexington architectural firm of Chrisman, Miller and Wallace is reportedly under consideration for the job. According to Jack C. Blanton, vice president of business affairs, nobody is negotiating with them.

Auxier said, "If I'm not mistaken, it (the recommendation) came from someplace at UK."

The final decision concerning who would be contracted for the study, he said, would be made by the Department of Finance.

Three possible strategies exist for implementing the program:

— a direct state appropriation to the University. The General Assembly appropriated $18 million for campus construction projects for the next two years, however the new football dorm was not included in the budget.

— a sale of revenue bonds. According to Blanton, this would be difficult for the University to do. The current University housing and dining issue of bonds is set up so all money will be put into a single pool. Individual, outside issues of bonds can not be set up in competition with the existing system, he said, and "any new issues would work the same way," that is, being put into the same pot.

— a state appropriation to the UK Athletic Association. The legality of this move has been questioned by Edward F. Prichard, vice chairman of the Public Higher Education Council, who said he does not think Carroll has the authority to grant state funds to a private corporation, such as the UKAA.

Where the idea for using state funds originated remains uncertain.

Auxier said it probably arose from discussions between Carroll and UK officials. "It has been a matter of discussion for some months," he said.

Carroll recently met with UK President Otis Singletary, Head Football Coach Fran Curci and some members of the Board of Trustees.

Neither Singletary nor Curci could be reached for comment. William B. Sturgill, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said, "Any comment I would have about that (construction of the football dorm), I would refer to the President."

Although the idea has been talked about for some time, a request from the University for the new dorm has not been submitted, according to Blanton.

Harry Snyder, executive director of the Public Higher Education Council, said, "Part of the problem is we don't have any request from the University."

When asked if he felt the council should have the right to review Carroll's plan,

Snyder said, "I don't know if 'right' is the correct word to use. It's more a question of duties and responsibilities of this agency."

The council must approve all campus construction projects costing $100,000 or more.

Should the council be in a reviewing position in this case, Snyder refused to project what the outcome might be. "One of my rules is to not second guess my board."

But, Prichard said, "I hope it won't be built."

Allegations charge 'irregularities'

By THOMAS CLARK
Editor

After allegations were filed concerning possible violation of Army regulations, UK's ROTC Commander, Lt. Col. Bobbie Pedigo, was relieved of his post on May 27.

Capt. Mike O'Connell of the public affairs office at Ft. Knox said an investigation was begun on May 5 to look into allegations that charged Pedigo with possible irregularities of Army regulations concerning transportation of non-military personnel and the possible entrance of unqualified personnel into Military Science III.

Military Science III is the designation given to Reserve Officer's Training Corp courses for third year students in the program. The courses and options available to students in MS III are different among each university, said O'Connell, but the UK curriculum offers several courses centering on leadership and personnel management.

One of the options open to ROTC students is "adventure training," from which the transportation charges stem. This is a series of instruction to acquaint students with various forms of outdoor activities. In some cases, special trips are arranged to areas that offer a better geography for the training involved.

Such trips in the past have included repelling instruction in the Colorado Rockies and scuba diving in Florida's Key West. O'Connell explained that several methods of transportation can be arranged for these excursions, such as the rental of a bus or using available space on a military transport—including airplanes, and that transportation regulations differ from method to method.

O'Connell and Acting Commander of ROTC at UK, Capt. Keith Skidmore, were hesitant to talk about the charges against Pedigo since he is still under investigation. Skidmore said Pedigo has been reassigned to Ft. Knox for the duration of the investigation.

Pedigo refused to comment on the charges when reached at his Lexington home. "It (the investigation) is still continuing," said Pedigo, "and I'd rather not comment on that now."

The investigation began on May 5, said O'Connell, shortly after the allegations were made, and Pedigo was relieved of his command ten days later. He said the investigation should last "not much longer, it's getting close to being finalized."

The investigation was instituted by Brig. Gen. James M. Wroth, Commander of the 2nd ROTC Regio, who also appointed an investigating officer to look into the allegations. O'Connell would not release the name of the investigating officer, saying only that he was "a senior officer."

ROTC commander relieved of UK post

The investigation, O'Connell said is "similar to a grand jury investigation, only it's in the military." He added the procedure is standardized by Article 32 of the Military Justice Code.

O'Connell said the results of the investigation could produce several options, including everything from no action being taken to a general courtmartial, but he refused to speculate on what the results would be. He also said even if no action is taken, Pedigo could be reassigned to another position because of the publicity surrounding the case.

Skidmore said the present charges are not related in any way to the charges made last spring by an ROTC cadet who claimed she had received unfair treatment.

Summer registration

About 5,000 students are expected to enroll in this year's eight-week summer session. Classes began yesterday and registration is continuing through Monday, June 19, in Miller Hall 5 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Dr. Elbert W. Ockerman, dean of admissions and the registrar, said registration will be extended beyond Monday if necessary. He added school teachers and students delayed in entering UK because of expanded school calendars will not be charged late fees.

"We would prefer that as many teachers and students as possible register and make arrangements to enter the class late," said Ockerman.

Summer school fees are $25 per semester hour for in-state undergraduates and $35 for graduate students. Out-of-state fees are $63 per semester hour for undergraduates and $89 for graduate students.

Arena uses visual search as part of safety program

By SAUNDRA FORD
Kernel Staff Writer

With the upcoming Stones' concert, ticket holders can expect a visual search before entering Rupp Arena. As many concert goers are aware of, this is not limited just to the Stones' concert. It has become a continuous practice employed by Rupp Arena personnel.

"The key thing we try to make understood is we are trying to get you (concertgoers) from getting hit by a bottle or cut up, we are looking out for your safety," explained Tom Minter, executive director of Lexington Center Corp.

Security attendants engage in intensive visual inspection but they are not allowed to touch the patron or his possessions. They have the right, however, to request patrons to open their purses and coats for inspection, a condition of admission.

In the event that an object is found, the ticket holder is asked to dispose of it properly. If it is a bottle or can the proper place is in the trash can. If the object is of more value it can be checked before the concert and picked up afterwards, free of charge.

Rupp Arena officials try to search for unwanted objects in the least offensive manner and "the American Civil Liberties Union is satisfied," Minter claims. "We are looking for a better way to do it, but so far this is the most effective way."

This "search and seizure," as many as many concerts goers call it, is not just defined to alcoholic beverages. The inspection is designated to turn up any potentially harmful objects and ban them from the arena.

"No law enforcement officers are used and there has not been a single arrest made from these visual inspections," Minter said. "It is administrative action for everyone's safety and we are trying not to inconvenience people anymore than we have to."

Concert fans should not feel discriminated against, every event is visually inspected, including UK basketball games.

These visual searches at Rupp Arena, as well as in any similar facility, are in danger of violating civil rights. At one concert hall a patron sued because the searches were random, therefore claiming discrimination. Although the patron won the suit, no damages were awarded. "We inspect everyone coming through the doors," Minter said. "We have no police engaged in the search and we give warnings well in advance that we will inspect the patron's person, purses and parcels."

These visual inspections are not always successful as was evident at the Bob Seger concert last year when over 700 empty bottles were picked up after the show. "I get three times as many letters saying we're not doing enough rather than saying there is too much harassment," said Rick Reno, director of operations and manager of Rupp Arena.

This does not mean Rolling Stones fans shouldn't expect a slack in security on June 29. The right to inspect for prohibited objects is one that officials at Rupp Arena have and they make it understood. The refusal of inspection results in a refusal of admittance.

UK can do without football dorm

In the past week and a half Gov. Julian Carroll has acknowledged his support for the building of a dorm for UK's football players.

Not only has he decided to support the project, but he has volunteered $1 million in state funds — read tax dollars — to build the facility... or palace, if it resembles its basketball counterpart.

It was also announced this week that over 1,000 UK students have been informed they must be content with a position on the University housing waiting list. If — and this is a big if — UK were Never, Never Land and all the students who wanted it had University housing and all the departments could provide all the necessities and luxuries of modern education, then maybe all the arguments we hear now would not have the valid ground they have now.

However, today is today and the University is one of the needy.

It's incomprehensible how the Governor can favor the state footing a $1 million bill to give the UK football team a place to sleep, while other UK students must depend on an appeal by the Dean of Students for Lexingtonians to open their homes to students.

Carroll is not the only culprit in this incident. A share of the criticism must be directed closer to home. Head Football Coach Fran Curci, UK President Otis Singletary and a few members of the Board of Trustees, all pushed for the dorm.

Understandably, the football program feels left out after UK supporters helped build the basketball team a lodge. But the difference is, no state funds were used in that project, just some great promotional work by Coach Joe B. Hall. If Curci feels the need for the dorm, we are sure he could mount the same sort of campaign as Hall and find his money elsewhere. The problem here may be that funds needed to house some 100 football players will be well in excess of the amount needed for the 11 basketball players. But the major problem lies not with the funding, or with the Governor's support, or with the housing shortage, but with the basic concept of athletic dorms. A certain mystique looms about UK athletes, as at most other schools, and to give each team its own hideaway only heightens the feelings that these young men are somehow above the rest of the student population.

Athletes are not superhumans. They have trouble with classes, drive cars and get dressed in the morning just like other students. So why set them apart from the student body? It is nice for the students, all students, to be able and sit down in a dorm room and find out something about the guy down the hall.

But it is a little difficult when "the guy down the hall" lives in a palace down the street.

Basically, our point is, football players, basketball players and all other athletes have one thing in common with other students. They are students and need the same chance to be just that.

Welcome to the summer Kernel

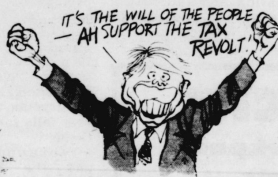

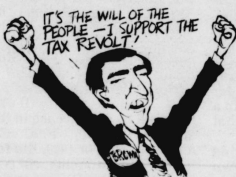

This issue marks the beginning of the summer Kernel's. We hope you, the reader, enjoy the product we produce and find some information in it that will give you a better understanding of the University community of which we are a part.

Eight editions will be published throughout the summer session, one every Thursday. In each issue the Kernel staff will attempt to examine some of the issues facing students and faculty today and report our findings accordingly. But to be successful in touching all the bases, we will need your help.

If you hear of anything that you feel would make a good story or if the University is giving you the run around on a problem, let us know. We aren't miracle workers, but we try.

Letters to the Editor should be no more than 200 words. Each must be signed with name, address and phone number. Commentaries should not exceed 800 words. We reserve the right to edit letters and commentaries for space purposes.

UK building projects promise new space for cramped colleges

By THOMAS CLARK
Editor

With the rising student population and increasing demands on educational facilities, UK faces extensive amounts of construction to keep abreast of the University community's needs.

The University spends an average of $25-$45 million each year on construction, said Jack Blanton, vice president of business affairs. He pointed out that this figure changes from year to year, but the total dollar figures for construction contracts let in a year falls somewhere in that range.

Two new buildings, Nursing and the Sanders-Brown Geriatric Research Center, will be opening to students and faculty by the beginning of the fall semester. A year later, a 200-unit apartment complex will open in an attempt to ease the housing shortage. And finally, the new Fine Arts Building, will begin entertaining the public by the spring of 1980.

But on the drawing board are several projects, most in early planning stages, that will help improve areas of education and student life that have been lacking in recent years.

Student Center Addition

Leading the list of buildings to be constructed on campus is an addition to the Student Center. First proposed in the spring of 1977, the building has reached the planning stage.

Blanton said an architect has been appointed to design the building and the University is in the process of picking a site for the addition. There are two possibilities; north of the Student Center in the "A" parking lot between the center and Euclid Avenue, and across the sidewalk to the east of the present structure in the parking lot and Old Stoll Field.

The project is budgeted for $4.3 million and will be financed by an increase in the Student Activity Fee. Effective in Fall of 1979, the fee for full-time students will rise from $12 to $22. Payments by part-time students will also rise according to the number of credit hours being taken.

At the time of the proposal, Blanton's office surveyed students to determine if they would support the expansion and what type of features should be included in the facility.

The survey showed 76.5 percent of those interviewed approved of the addition and their suggestions, along with those of SC officials, were used to formulate a list of priorities for the new building.

Heading that list was the need for a new cinema, additional meeting rooms, organization space and bookstore space, a new grill and a student lounge.

Apartment Complex

The housing complex will provide space for an additional 650 students in 200 apartments. The preliminary breakdown of space for the building, said Blanton, has 50 units reserved for married students and 150 units for undergraduate students with four in each apartment.

Funding for the $5.3 million dollar project, which will be built near Shawneetown, was approved by the Board of Trustees and the Public Higher Education Council this spring. The price of the package includes furnishings for each apartment.

Architecture Building

For the past few years, accreditation teams reviewing the College of Architecture have sounded ominous warnings about the lack of space available to architecture students at UK. Students are now spread out in two of the oldest buildings on campus, Pence and Miller halls, and neither building offers adequate space for classrooms and studios.

The University has recently received approval from the PHEC for funding of a new Architecture building. An architect has been appointed for the $6.6 million project, which will be financed by consolidated education bonds. The process of site location has begun.

Blanton said he hopes to place the building as near central campus as possible. The parking lot on the corner of Rose Street and Columbia Avenue is one site under consideration for the building, as is the area behind Memorial Hall.

Blanton said the building "is at least three years away," and should be ready for occupancy sometime in 1981.

Pharmacy Building

Another problem area dealing with accreditation teams is that the School of Pharmacy has outgrown its present structure on Washington Avenue. PHEC also approved funds for this project, $6.6 million, during the recent meeting of the legislature.

The structure, which will also open sometime in 1981, will be similar in design to the Nursing Building. It will be located on Rose Street between the Nursing and Hunt-Morgan Biological Sciences buildings.

College of Medicine and Medical Center

Three projects are being planned that will increase the educational and patient facilities for the College of Medicine and the Medical Center. The projects could cost as much as $34 million dollars and will drastically increase the size of the medical complex on the south side of campus.

The first will be an addition to the Medical School that will be devoted to medical research. This project will receive more than $6 million in funding and will be complete in 1981.

The Medical Research addition will be one of two additions on the Medical Center. The other is a hospital addition that will extend off the south end of the present building. Funding for this facility will be raised through patient receipts and the sale of revenue bonds.

Blanton said the addition would "address a number of problems at the Medical Center, including such things as neonatal care, psychiatric treatment, and emergency room facilities." He said the addition would be finished "in 1982 or 1983, if we're lucky. We are shooting for '82, though."

Other projects

During the last legislature, monies were approved for several other projects concerning UK. One of the largest was a $10 million grant from PHEC to senior universities for implementing the 504 Project for Handicapped Improvements. This money will be used to make physical improvements on campus buildings to make them accessible to the handicapped.

The Animal Disease Diagnostic Center, a part of the College of Agriculture, received an $800,000 state appropriation for the installation of equine pathology equipment. And the University received $5 million for unspecified projects at the various community colleges.

The eye towards UK expansion does not necessarily center on the drawing board. At least three buildings and an addition are under construction at this time.

After years of being shuffled around the Medical Center, the College of Nursing finally has a place it can call home. By the end of summer, furnishings will be unloaded and room numbers hung throughout the new facility in preparation for this fall's students.

The Nursing Building (photo at left) is located on Rose Street, directly across from the Medical Center. A pedestrian walkway connects the two building and allows easy access between the two. The facility cost the University $7 million and is part of a block of new buildings between Washington Avenue and the intersection of Rose and Limestone streets.

It is in the same block that a second building will open this fall. The Sanders-Brown Geriatrics Research Center will begin its work in late summer. The building carries a $2 million price tag and was built in a style similar to the Nursing facility.

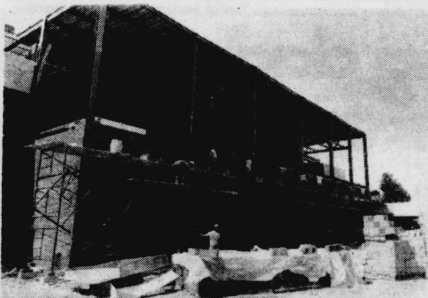

Across campus, at the corner of Rose Street and Euclid Avenue, rises the new Fine Arts Building (photos center and below left). A $6.2 million project, it is being built to relieve some of the performance inadequacies of the present Fine Arts Building and Memorial Hall.

The building, which is 50 percent complete, will house a 1500-seat concert hall, a 300-seat recital hall and an art gallery. Vice President of Business Affairs Jack Blanton said the concert hall will be equipped with a new organ, an instrument he called "the greatest organ in this part of the world."

The Fine Arts Building has been the victim of rising construction costs. A bridge between the old and new buildings, said Blanton, "was zapped because of construction costs." The bridge was to have been lined with offices separately needed by the overcrowded departments in the College of Fine Arts.

The building has a tentative opening date of spring, 1980. The final construction project is an addition for the Law Building. A $1.9 million project, it will add offices and classrooms that accreditation teams have found lacking in the present facility. The new wing, being added on the rear of the building along Limestone Street, will be ready for occupancy in the summer of 1980.

The Kentucky Summer Sounds '78 concert series continues tonight with organist Gerre Hancock, who will perform at 7:30 in Memorial Hall.

Also in the coming week, four more concerts in the series are scheduled. Included are the Guarneri String Quartet on Monday (June 19); Gerard Schwartz, trumpet player with the New York Philharmonic on Wednesday (June 21); the UK String Ensemble Orchestra with Schwartz conducting on Thursday (June 22); and Fredrick Fennell conducting the Kentucky Summer Wind Ensemble on Friday (June 23).

All concerts will be performed at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Tickets for all concerts in the Summer Sounds '78 series are $4 per concert and $2.50 for children and UK students with ID cards. Tickets may be purchased at the box office in the lobby of the Fine Arts Building and at the door. For more information call 258-2680.

Stones roll into Lexington

By WALTER TUNIS
Entertainment Editor

Who would have thought two years ago that on June 29, 1978 Lexington would be playing host to one of the most popular rock groups in the world?

Well its true. The Rolling Stones, one of the oldest and most established rock groups, in what many say will be their final tour, will be performing in Rupp Arena on that date. Needless to say, tickets have sold out.

With what will be the largest concert audience Rupp Arena has seen so far, there will be a few minor differences in the set-up procedure for the concert.

Originally, the group requested general admission tickets to be sold throughout the house, but this did not comply with Rupp's past policy of strictly reserved seating, so general admission tickets were sold only for the floor area of the arena. The remainder of the seats will be reserved.

According to Tom Minter, general manager of Lexington Center, having general admission tickets on sale for all these seats would have encouraged a huge amount of people to arrive early for the show.

In terms of security, Minter said the inside number of security assistants will be stepped up to account for the size of the crowd, and a few officials will be stationed outside the arena to keep away those without tickets.

"We observed at the time of tickets sales, that the patrons were probably an average of 25 years of age and we observed that they were very orderly. We don't anticipate any problems."

The Rolling Stones are only part of a massive line-up of concerts playing in town. Only four days before, June 25, Rupp will be hosting the area premiere of The Alice Cooper Show, in what will no doubt be one of the more elaborate rock theatre presentations this area has seen.

On this tour and in the Lexington performance, Cooper will be enlisting the aid of bass player Dee Murray and guitarist Davey Johnstone, both old allies of Elton John's band.

Kentucky Theatre now blends vintage films with the new

The Louisville moviehouse was a huge hit. If the first week of sales is any indication, the new Kentucky Theatre format may prove to be equally as successful. In fact, it is Sussman who organizes the schedule for Kentucky and the Vogue.

The Kentucky has tried a number of formats in past years. "Our business was dragging with what we were showing," says Kentucky Theatre manager Fred Mills. "Downtown Lexington is changing. Different people are coming downtown and with the University so close, we wanted to do something different."

Moviegoers certainly can't complain about any lack of variety of the films that are being presented.

Mills plans to keep the repertory schedule going indefinitely. And that means moviegoers can sail on the Bounty, wait in Casablanca and go Bananas all year long.

A look at what's new

DAVID SANBORN: Heart to Heart (Warners) — One of today's finest young alto sax players has made expert use of some of New York's finest sessionmen. The result is an instrumental jazz tour-de-force. Great stuff. Best tracks: "Solo," "Short Visit," "Sunrise Gospel."

BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN: Darkness on the Edge of Town (Columbia) — Three years later, the "future of rock and roll" is back meaner and rawer than before. This is no Born to Run, but a worthy successor. Best tracks: "Streets on Fire," "Badlands," "Adam Raised a Cain." —W.T.

UK asks community help in housing 1,000 students

UK officials have asked the Lexington community to aid them in finding housing for nearly 1,000 people who are at the University dorm waiting list.

Dean of Students Joe Burch has asked people to consider opening up their empty rooms to UK students who are without a place to stay in the fall semester.

"The competition for low-cost housing appears stronger than ever this year," said Burch.

The appeal is similar to one made last August which brought some 150 responses, said Burch. The appeal is earlier this year to establish a list of available rooms so new students can contact landlords while in Lexington during the July advising conferences.

Burch said the waiting list is longer than it was last year at this time.

"Compared to the time of the year, it is a heavier demand. But we feel that people have heard about the housing shortage in Lexington and at the University and have put in their applications earlier."
