have founded more than 20 publications on college campuses.

Now Campus Progress has started supporting campus publications. The organization has given grants, ranging from $500 to $3,000, to 14 student publications at colleges across the country, including the University and Dartmouth College.

Providing networking opportunities such as this month's conference is an important goal of Campus Progress.

"I think something is happening here." Halperin said. "Something more than the free food and President Clinton."

Armstrong wins; competition look for training wheels

Lance Armstrong won his seventh consecutive Tour de Farce, er, France Sunday with a casual ride down the Champs-Elysses into Paris.

Sunday with a casual ride down the Champs-Elysses into Paris.
Race officials stopped the clock on the final stage yesterday, saying Armstrong had officially won with eight laps around the Champs-Elysses to go, because of wet conditions in the French capital. Armstrong retired after the race as the winningest Tour rider in history.

It isn't often we see someone who beats a game that shouldn't be able to be beaten, and the fact that he has had to overcome testicular cancer to do it will be fodder for motivating young cyclists for the rest of eternity.

The sports world owes a debt of gratitude to Armstrong's grit and determination. The fact that this year's win was one of his largest margins of victory
