Lexington attorney Bill Allison was among four people who took part last night in a forum on the draft. Others who participated were Col. Taylor L. Davidson, state Selective Service director, Don Pratt and Jerry Devedon. The forum was sponsored by Student Government's cabinet on Student Affairs and the University Senate Advisory Committee (USAC).

Draft Forum

Consider 1-A, Says Col. Davidson;
Pratt Says Women Should Go, Too

By JANICE S. FRANCIS
Kernel Staff Writer
Col. Taylor L. Davidson, state Selective Service director and former UK student Don Pratt, who has a draft evasion case on appeal before the Supreme Court, were two of the persons brought together at the Student Government's Student Affairs draft forum Wednesday night.

Col. Davidson opened the discussion by explaining the Selective Service System and his reason for attending the forum.

"I prefer not to discuss the Southeast Asian war," he said. "I have no more answers than you. I am not an expert on the Selective Service System. My aim is to see that the system is applied fairly, honestly and effectively in Kentucky. I would like to see every student counseled on the draft. My position is that as long as they are counseled as they should be, that's fine."

It was Col. Davidson's contention that student deferments are the most misunderstood element of today's Selective Service System. On January 1, 1970, when the random selection method was inaugurated, the nation had more manpower than was necessary, according to Davidson. Under the previous system, issuing deferments was the only way to get rid of the overload.

Now the emphasis has shifted. "If we don't need everybody, why should we draft them?" asked Davidson. "If a person has a high number, why should he have to go? I advocate that he legally not go however—not that he refrain from going on some trumped-up charge."

In order to relieve the mounting numbers of eligible draftees, as well as to lessen students' tension as to their draft status, Col. Davidson added that "if you can legally acquire a 1-A at the close of the year, it is possibly the best thing to do."

According to Davidson, at midnight Dec. 31 each local board makes a tally of the numbers it has not drawn out. Those will then be placed in the second priority system and probably will never be called. The highest number reached in Kentucky thus far is 170. The probability is that anyone with a 1-A classification and a draft number higher than that, or anyone over the age of 26, will never be called.

The problem then becomes how to get rid of student deferments (2-S) and get into the draft - eligible category (1-A). "The law states that every man that is a student in satisfactory standing at the university, working toward his bachelor's degree, must be granted a student deferment," stated Davidson.

"There is no way to say, 'I don't want that 2-S'. The only thing you can do, legally, is to go to the registrar and say, 'Do not send my local board a 109 (notice of satisfactory school attendance)'. In that way your board cannot grant you a student deferment, and will automatically place you in the 1-A category."

Former UK student Don Pratt followed Col. Davidson. He claimed:

"We are at this point fighting a war with the draft, involuntary servitude and slavery. For anyone who supports the draft, I say 'Is it fair for you to be drafted when others who don't have the money to go to college and obtain a student deferment, or who are deprived educationally from obtaining such a deferment, are drafted and sent to Vietnam?'"

Combs Criticizes National Guard Use

By FRANK COOTS
and
RON HAWKINS

Former Kentucky governor Bert Combs visited UK Wednesday as part of his campaign for governor in the 1971 election.

Combs was due to speak at a Phi Delta Kappa luncheon, but showed up an hour early to talk to students in the Student Center Grille.

Since Combs positioned himself at one table, he could not have talked to more than 15 students. After going through such perfunctory political rites as introducing himself and asking where everyone was born, he started quizzing the students on such issues as the Student Coalition, last spring's demonstrations and the possibility of future demonstrations.

Eventually some of the students turned the tables and started pumping Combs with some questions of their own.

Guard 'Unnecessary'

Asked what role the state should play with regard to campus demonstrations, Combs said he believed "the state has to protect lives and property."

He went on to condemn the use of "excessive force" in quelling disturbances, however, and said the use of the National Guard on campus last spring was "unnecessary."

Commenting on academic issues, Combs said he thought publish-or-perish policy for faculty members is "a damn silly rule." However, he implied there was a need for research and publishing at a university, partly so it could compete with other universities in attracting competent faculty members.

Combs, a Democrat, also got in a few digs at the Republicans. He said they were well financed in the upcoming elections and tagged President Richard Nixon's and Vice President Spiro Agnew's intervention in the campaign as "demagoguery of the worst sort." He did not elaborate.

Playing Footsie

Combs claimed Gov. Louie Nunn "is playing footsie with the coal operators." He cited the state's refusal to halt overweight coal trucks from using the highways as an example of this. He said Nunn was permitting this because coal operators contribute to the Republican campaign fund. Combs said individual and local efforts are not as effective as statewide laws in handling strip mining. Combs later spoke to Phi Delta Kappa in the President's Room of the Student Center. UK President Otis A. Singletary also attended.

Combs told the group, "we needed to do several basic things" during the last decade.

Combs claimed some success was gained by developing a "modern four-lane" highway system, improvement of education with the enactment of a sales tax, modern industrial development and the building of local airports.

Combs said Kentucky faces other problems in this decade.

He added that the problem of environment was a particularly important one. Combs then commented that a state environmental control agency should be developed.

Should Education Be Examined?

Combs said he thought education in Kentucky should be examined "from top to bottom." He added educators should only expect a "modest increase" in funds.

Asked about the possibility of future taxes, Combs said he had "no recommendations," although he added he had spent some time thinking about it. He concluded that "Taxes shouldn't be in a political campaign... They (taxes) are better left for the future."

Bert Combs, former governor and candidate for governor in the 1971 election, addressed the Phi Delta Kappa (FDK) luncheon after talking with students in the Student Center Grille. Combs told his audience in the Grille that the calling in of the National Guard on the UK campus last spring by Gov. Louie B. Nunn was "unjustified." Combs also said that he felt education in Kentucky needs to be "examined from top to bottom."

Chicken Controversy Continues

Judge Says Chandler Violated Federal Law

The Associated Press
A U.S. District Judge has held that UK trustee A. B. (Happy) Chandler, two of his sons and three other men violated federal securities laws and has issued an injunction to stop further violations.

The injunction, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court here, came in a civil suit filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission against Chandler and the others.

No criminal charges have been filed against any of the men.

The SEC suit involved their dealings with the Daniel Boone Fried Chicken Corp., and the Commonwealth Security Investors, Inc., in which all six were officers or major stockholders.

Judge Timothy Hogan, in a 33-page recitation, held that one or more of the defendants violated sections of the Investment Company Act and the Exchange Act.

Sons Too

Defendants with the former governor were his sons, J. Daniel Chandler, and Albert Chandler Jr.; Leonard K. Nave, a Versailles lawyer; and James R. Spence and Murray A. Morguelan, both of Louisville.

The injunction issued by the judge forbids:

▶ The former governor, his son Dan, and Nave from taking part in any transaction with CSI or any affiliate of it.

▶ The same three men from accepting any compensation, other than normal salary, from CSI or any company it controls.

▶ The same three men from soliciting proxy votes in any investment firm unless they file a copy of their solicitation with the SEC.

▶ Daniel Chandler from offering for sale or purchase common stock of the Daniel Boone firm by employing fraudulent devices or untrue statements.

No injunction was issued against A.B. Chandler Jr., Spence or Morguelan, but they were mentioned in the judge's findings as aiding the other defendants in some of the law violation.

The judge wrote in his findings of fact that CSI was incorporated in April 1965, and was controlled by the Chandlers. It merged with Daniel Boone last year.

The merged firm since has been declared insolvent and placed in receivership by a state court. It also has applied for bankruptcy in federal court.

The Daniel Boone firm was incorporated in February, 1968, and the judge said "it turned out to be a 'jet' corporation—it sent up as fast as a jet and came down just as fast."

The firm, the judge added, "apparently proposed to associate the old, such as Daniel Boone, with the new, such as Sammy Davis Jr. whom this record indicates was mentioned at least as a possible board chairman or some such."

"The record does not indicate Daniel Boone's reaction, if any, to the association," the judge wrote.

Records Behind

The Daniel Boone firm's records were not kept up to date, the judge said, and the company "never knew whence it was coming from, where it was, or where it was going."

A.B. Chandler Sr., has said he sold his CSI stock in 1968 before the merger and resigned as chairman of its board, but the judge said testimony presented to him shows no such resignation. "We are told that the resignation was expressed in a letter. We are not told to whom the letter was delivered, nor are we told what happened after the letter was delivered, nor are we shown the letter or a copy of it," the judge said.

In addition, he noted that CSI minutes of a board meeting in 1969 reflect Chandler acting as chairman.

Chandler Chairman

During merger of CSI and Daniel Boone, the judge continued, Chandler was chairman of CSI and an employee of Daniel Boone, at a salary reported to be $25,000 a year.

At that time, too, the judge said, 4,000 - 5,000 shares of Daniel Boone stock were given to Chandler and "there was no monetary consideration paid..."

Also in 1969, 4,000 shares of Daniel Boone stock were given to Nave, the judge said. "The claim is that it was a loan," but nothing in the court case reflects this, he added.

At about the same time, 4,000 shares of Daniel Boone went to Daniel Chandler... "Again no note, no letter, nothing in writing to evidence why," the judge said.

$28,000 Borrowed

Daniel Chandler also borrowed $28,000 from the Daniel Boone firm - or its parent organization - a month later. "This time there was a note given. There was no security," the judge said.

And, finally, 300,000 shares of Daniel Boone stock were turned over last year to a firm headed by Nave, who the judge said acted as attorney for CSI.

Before the merger of CSI and Daniel Boone, the judge said CSI stockholders were told, "The prospects for the Daniel Boone Fried Chicken Corp. are very good."

In fact, he added, a more correct statement would have been that no one knew the prospects of the Daniel Boone firm at that time.

He noted that $60,000 has been spent on accountants fees and, after nine months of work, Daniel Boone's books still are not up to date.

Combs Campaigns On University Campus

Singletary told Combs he thought "there is not a wide or clear impact of the community colleges. I think they are going to be the mechanism" for educating qualified young people in the future.

Combs noted that the community college program was enacted when he was governor and that some people had found fault with having all the community colleges under one large university, but said that he would not like to see it changed.

"I'm pleased to hear that," said Singletary.

Film Adaptation Subverts 'Virgin and Gypsy'

"The Virgin and the Gypsy," starring Joanna Shimkus and Franco Nero is presently playing at the Downtown Cinema.

By DALE MATTHEWS
Kernel Staff Writer

In recent years we have seen a dramatic change in the nature of film. Early films, with a few exceptions such as "Gone with the Wind," were superficial, pseudo-romantic and, generally, recognizable as mediocre.

Lately we have seen film explore and develop personality and character as in "Easy Rider" or "Medium Cool." Film has become a socially significant media dealing with the individual's problems as related to society's ills.

Unfortunately, Franco Nero took a story from D. H. Lawrence which also promised to be a social commentary of this kind, and produced "The Virgin and the Gypsy" in a manner belonging to the yesteryear of mediocrity.

Lawrence's story concerned a young lady, Evette, who was faced with a decision between the security of her home life and the unknown joys and hardships which she saw in any possible relationship with the gypsy. This conflict, its effect on Evette, and her decision-making process were essential to the story and they were almost ignored in the movie.

Nero's screen version of the story presents Evette, portrayed by Joanna Shimkus, as a martyr figure thrust into an unreasonable turn-of-the-century household which is unbearable. While out on a Sunday drive with her sister, a girl friend and two of the local men folk, she sees the gypsy, Dimitri De Gruwald, for the first time.

Throughout the rest of the flick, Evette sees the gypsy a few more times and daydreams about how wonderful it would have been if he had . . .

The plot is almost thickened by an unfortunate suitor who knows in his heart that Evette will one day be his. She doesn't see it that way and never did.

The major fault in the film is the absence of any decision from Evette. As fate would have it, there is a flood, and the gypsy saves Evette by taking her to the third floor of her own house. Need I say more? The next morning the virgin isn't, and her only regret is that the gypsy has gone.

The tragedy of this lies in the realization that Evette had little to do with anything. She had no choice to make in the movie, but her inner conflict and the resolution of that conflict, which were handily sidestepped in the film, were important parts of the story.

Thus a good novel which could have been a great film was destroyed, despite the superb acting and photography, by poor screen adaptation. "You should have seen the one that got away . . ."

Law School to Adopt Admissions Service

The University of Kentucky is modifying its law school admissions procedure to help process an overwhelming number of applications.

UK has subscribed to a service called Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS). It is administered by the Educational Testing Service (ETS) of Paterson, N.J., the same agency that administers the Graduate Record Examination (GRE).

The use of the LSDAS will necessitate some modifications in the law school admissions procedure. Students seeking admission to the UK college must secure an LSDAS registration form either from the law school, the Testing and Counseling Service or from ETS. The registration form must be completed and returned to ETS, along with a transcript of undergraduate grades.

Once LSDAS has compiled an applicant's record, a print-out containing the students record is sent to five law schools listed by the applicant.

Two weeks after ETS receives the raw data from an applicant, the print-out is in the hands of the various admissions officers.

With the use of a standard converted grade-point average score, applicants from all over the country will be competing for admission on an equal basis despite differences in grading systems and differences in the relative prestige of the institutions.

The Law School Admission Test, compiled by the LSAT Council, composed of law school admissions officers, will be given on October 17, and December 19, 1970; February 13; April 10, and July 31, 1971. Since many schools select their freshman classes in the spring, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised to take the October, December, or February tests. Registration for the test does not constitute application for admission to law school. Such applications must be made by filing appropriate papers with the institutions involved.

In addition to registering for the LSAT test, candidates who wish to be considered for admission to the UK College of Law for the 1971 Fall Semester must file their application for admission before January 15, 1971, with the UK Admissions Office.

Candidates for the test should obtain a copy of the Bulletin of Information, which includes the LSAT Registration Form and sample questions. The Registration Form and fees must reach ETS at least three weeks before the desired test date.

For a copy of the registration form and announcement, applicants are advised to write the Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, N.J. (08540) or obtain a set of the materials from Prof. W. Carrett Flickinger, Room 227 Law Building, UK, or from Mrs. Margaret Morgan, Room 202 Paterson Office Tower, UK.

On Justice and Frustration

The ever-growing power of the federal government is enough to make any concerned citizen quake; however, recent vigilante-type actions at the local governmental level have given ample evidence why the repressed portions of our population have come to expect relief only from officials at the federal level. The special state grand jury to investigate the Kent State murders brought national attention to the typical attitude of community members regarding political dissenters. The Ohio grand jury report is by no means exceptional, it reads much like a similar report issued this summer by the Fayette County grand jury, and probably dozens of comparable reports nationwide.

A severe emotional over-reaction was apparent in the jury report as it analyzed the Kent State slayings. The jury seemed much more concerned about the slang of the student body than about the obvious and unjustified murders they should have studied. The language, the report said "represented a level of obscenity and vulgarity which we have never before witnessed! The epithets directed at guardsmen . . . by male and female rioters alike would have been unbelievable . . . It is hard to accept the fact that the language of the gutter has become the common vernacular of many persons posing as students in search of a higher education."

Perhaps the jury could have better reported on the pornography problem, except the conclusions they reached represented the grossest level of obscenity. After what was undoubtedly an objective and impartial search for justice the hangman's jury decided to indict several students and faculty members for participating in the May demonstrations, while exonerating completely the National Guardsmen who murdered the four students. The comments of the parents of the slain students provide the most appropriate analysis of the report. "They were throwing abuse, not bullets," one parent remarked. Another said the report was "legalized bull."

The asininity of the jury report removes yet another bit of faith which skeptical youth has been holding to with desperation. We can no longer expect our community leaders to do anything other than ride the tide of emotionalism sweeping the nation.

This realization has forced us as never before to appreciate the unresponsiveness which is built into the federal system of government. At least until the reactionaries succeed in changing the orientation of the Supreme Court and the few other institutions we half-heartedly trust, we can hope for some relief at the most elite level of government.

The Unradical Radicals

My anger demands I reply to Ron Hale's October 14th puke, so I can set him and most of the other students straight.

President Hale's little essay is the purest example I've seen recently of the "black skin privilege" tactic in black organizations. This tactic is based on "white skin guilt," a quality held mainly by rich lily-white liberals.

The BSU is trying to cultivate and take advantage of this attitude by pushing the following line: (1) All us black radicals are cool, mean, militant, and together; (2) All white students, and especially radicals, ain't for shit except for what they can do for us blacks.

Let's look at the way it is, Massah Hale: In the past three years the most militant thing the BSU has done has been to expropriate six tables in the Student Center Grille. Unless you count the '67-'68 season when BSU's main topic was seducing white freak chicks who dug the "black stud" myth. The BSU is still at those same six tables, passing the time looking cool in shades and dashiki's, black berets and leather jackets, jiving and jerking on soul music from the jukebox. Not to mention the attempt by three members to burn the Geology annex in May '69. They had to get so drunk to have the guts to try, that they couldn't pull it off—they forgot matches.

Now let's look at what the white radical-libs have done in the last three years: (1) a poor people's conference (2) the SDS National Council (3) the CARSA police brutality demonstrations (4) the mother-may-I-revolution (5) the three moratoriums (6) the Student Strike (7) the J-Board Defenses (8) the Rock festival (9) the Crossen march. All with significant black support. In fact the BSU was a hindrance to the Zoo's efforts by not coming through on a lot of promises and by hassling Peck Kennamer with their Black Skin Privilege.

In other words, BSU's stance of 'militancy' is phoner than Nixon's Black capitalism program. And speaking of unmitigated hypocrisy, when are you going to put that $15,000 back on Otis Singletary's desk, Massah Hale?

Most of Mr. Hale's demands and statements are patently absurd, e.g. "No one is qualified to teach Black History but Black People." That's like saying no one can teach theology but an angel. And you would find it just as hard to find enough good black Black History teachers as you would have finding angels to teach theology.

But the insinuation that's the greatest insult to human intelligence is that black students deserve reparations. For one thing, there isn't enough money to do it. For another thing, today's blacks don't deserve it! Show me a 400-year-old black man!

The black students have it easier than whites because if he gets a Ph.D. he can get what he wants from a college whose administrators have had their white skin guilt ripped off by other BSU's demanding black faculty, while there's thousands of white Ph.D.'s driving trucks because they're a glut on the market.

I just wanted to point out that the BSU and their ancestors don't have and never had a corner on human suffering and misery. The BSU doesn't even have a corner on arrogance. But they're sure as hell trying.

A Child's Story

To the Editor:

The eccentric five-year-old son of an affluent family was spoiled; and, with the purchase of a motor-driven hobbyhorse his odd behavior became bizarre. He refused to leave the saddle, taking his meals there and sleeping in an upright position. Family doctors were unable to budge him. In desperation a psychologist was called.

The specialist put a fatherly hand on the boy's shoulder, whispered gently into his ear, and the boy leaped from the horse. After the fee was paid and the family was alone the boy's mother said, "You refused to obey the doctors, me, your father, or your tutors. What did the man say that made you obey?"

The boy refused to divulge the information unless he was promised a new motorboat. A check was drawn, placed in his hand, and again the mother asked: "Now, what did he say?"

"Well, mother," the child confided. He said, "Get the hell off that lousy horse or I'll break every bone in your body."

Perhaps now the time has come to tell Steve Bright to get off his high horse and start acting like a student government president.

Best Wishes, Mr. Fox

To the Editor:

We're the lucky ones this year, folks, out of all the schools in the United States, Terrence Stanley Fox picked this one. You know Stanley, famous leader of the red, white, and blue apple pie, and mother we love you outfit—Student Coalition.

Stanley is the one who talks ever so smoothly when he thinks he can recruit another follower, but is rude and sarcastic to those who don't believe in him. It will probably be a shocking realization to his following of faithful workers that Stanley has a problem with his vocabulary when he is outside the confines of those who are so devoted to that fine power-play that he is so successfully pulling off right in front of their adoring eyes. I find that his most notable words are "I" and "me" with an occasional little quote on the number of members he has working for his organization.

The best way to hurt Stanley's cause is to ignore him, and even though he is hard to ignore, he too will pass away—it may just take longer. Let's wish Stanley a speedy Ph.D.

A Practical Suggestion

To the Editor:

This university needs a good system of symbols to aid students in finding their destination. My assertion comes about after having searched an hour for the Margaret King Library, and on asking for directions, being told, "It's thataway."

As to my proposal, legends for the symbols could be placed in central locations. Various colored arrows, and so forth, could allude to the library, and other buildings.

I think it would greatly aid the flow of student traffic, especially at the semester's beginning.

I am unequivocally opposed to the SG sponsored student's Teacher Evaluation Survey $1500, and so by God are the American People!

I am also against the Kernel bleeding heart liberal staff taking all the dirty words out of my letters. Like Patton, I believe in "giving it to them straight and dirty, that way they'll remember it."

As Football Season Nears End

University Official Says ID Misuse Ending

The University official in charge of individual student discipline said yesterday that the problem of misuse of student ID cards at football games may be clearing up.

"Things have gone very well since the homecoming game, and we expect things to stabilize for the rest of the season," said Walter F. Maguire of the Office of the Dean of Students.

Maguire said he had talked to several students who had been caught misusing ID cards, and that they had been disciplined "according to the severity of the abuse."

A bigger problem, he said, was the abuse of group seating privileges extended to campus organizations this year. Under the group seating plan, organizations can submit members'

ID's to the ticket office and receive "blocks" of seats in return.

"We've tried to improve the seating situation for students, and yet when we run into a situation where privileges are abused and this results in University students being excluded from games, then we are a little upset, to say the least," Maguire said.

The year's worst seating problem occurred at this month's homecoming game against Auburn. Over a hundred UK students, some with tickets, were turned away from the game.

Although most students caught misusing ID's have been let off with a warning, the student code provides for suspension of ID privileges for student offenders.

Maguire said that groups abusing group seating privileges "could lose their privileges for the remainder of this year and the next year." Individuals within the group could be dealt with even more severely, he added.

About five of the 42 campus organizations using the group seating plan have been warned about abuse of the privilege this year. Maguire said most of the warnings came for "obvious" misuse of the cards.

"It's a matter of the groups policing themselves," he said. "We're not trying to track down violations. We depend on voluntary compliance."

STANDARD TIME begins at 2:00 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 25. Set clocks back an hour.

Speakers at Draft Forum Urge Different Alternatives

Pratt contends that the present lottery drafts people at age 19 instead of 26 because it is easier to manipulate 19-year-olds.

"If we are to maintain the draft, we should draft women too," continued Pratt. "We shouldn't look at them as lower beings. They can do some jobs men can't do."

In addition, Pratt recommends that hardship deferments, student deferments and handicap deferments all be abolished. "If we are going to have a draft, draft everyone, not just a few," he said.

Pratt's alternative to the present draft system is the creation of a volunteer army. "Make it volunteer and cut out all the tedious tasks performed in basic training under the current auspices of obedience," he said. "Each of you should never engage in continuing your own self-suppression. If you don't believe in the war, resist."

Lexington Attorney Bill Allison, also appearing on the forum, said he believes that the most flagrant thing the selective service boards are doing is "violation" of recent Supreme Court rulings on conscientious objectors.

"Most people are trying to figure out what this new breed of animal (the CO) is."

Allison also charged that local politics come into play in draft boards in rural areas of Kentucky.

Allison agreed with Pratt that the burden of serving the country falls most heavily upon the underprivileged. "If you are not intellectual enough to go to college and get deferred, or if you are not wealthy enough to pay for a complete physical examination by a hospital, in order to get a physical deferment, you are drafted and discriminated against."

"Black men are also being discriminated against," added Allison. "There are no draft centers in the black community to counsel those men. Putting black men not in clerical jobs, but on the front lines, is discrimination, and legally we have an obligation to discuss whether this is right or wrong."

Jerry Cevedon, UK draft counseling organizer, was also a member of the forum.

He said the counseling service can direct students to other sources for legal information and can answer questions on the draft, but cannot offer legal advice.

Col. Davidson suggested that anyone who is not getting satisfaction from a local board should go higher. "It's your right as a citizen to gather all the information pertaining to your specific case, and to get answers. You want answers, you should have them."

The UK soccer team fails to score on this shot against Murray Saturday. They were successful on two shots as they earned a 2-2 tie, following a 4-2 victory over the University of Louisville. This weekend, the squad travels to Carbondals, Ill. to play Southern Illinois.

UK Water Polo Team Now 7-2

The University of Kentucky water polo team boosted its record to 7-2 by winning three games in four attempts at the University of Michigan last weekend.

The Wildcats defeated Michigan State, 13-5, Loyola University, 9-6, and Michigan, 5-4. The victory over the host Wolverines avenged a defeat earlier this season.

NCAA swimming champion Indiana, led by Olympic Gold Medal winner Gary Hall, dealt UK its second loss of the season. IU broke open a tight game with a successful penalty shot in the final quarter.

"Our loss to Indiana came in our fourth game of the weekend," said Ron Huebner, coach of the squad. "Our men were tired, but they stayed in the game all the way, even though three players fouled out and two others had four fouls each."

"The win over Michigan was a big lift for the team," Huebner added. "They have an exceptionally big team, and they can overpower you with sheer strength."

The Wildcats next meet is Oct. 30, 31, at Indiana University. The team will play games with Illinois and Ohio State.

Kittens Invade VPI

By SAM CHANDLER
Kernel Staff Writer

UK's unbeaten Freshman football team will receive a stern test Friday afternoon when they travel to Blacksburg Va. to take on the young Gobblers of Virginia Tech.

Thus far the Kittens have shown an array of talent in their come-from-behind victory over Tennessee's Baby Vols, and their 40-14 thrashing of Marshall.

After leading 12-0 at halftime against Marshall, the UK Frosh exploded in the third period with 28 points, led by quarterback Mike Fanuzzi and speedster Doug Kotar.

"We were pleased with the second half effort but not with the overall performance," said Head Coach Carroll Huntress. "They still have not played up to their full potential."

Coch Huntress was pleased, however, with the play of the offensive line.

"We were worried about the offensive line at the start of the season, but it has come along real well. If some of the linemen get hurt, we may have to play some boys both ways," he said, referring to the lack of depth on the line.

Huntress also noted that the frosh have been hampered by having to run the plays of the varsity's opponents in practice.

"We never really get to work on our own plays very much," he said. "But this is the case with all freshman teams."

The Kittens may find VPI to be one of the toughest foes they will face.

"They've got a big line that averages about 6-foot-4 and about 240 to 250 pounds," he said. "They've got a good pair of backs in Randy McDowell and a boy named Campana."

"In their last game, they were trailing VMI, 20-0, at the half and came back to win, 35-20."

"Virginia Tech teams are always noted for their strong, rugged defenses," he concluded.

In regard to injuries, Huntress said that the young Cats had the usual "cuts and bruises," but nothing serious.

"Harvey Sword (defensive lineman) and Fanuzzi are not up to par, but they'll play," he said, adding that Ron Steele, the team's kicker, is steadily improving from an early leg injury.

Huntress is confident that the entire team will play well.

"The boys have a good attitude," he said, "and they are hard workers. All of them work equally hard for a starting position, and all of them will see action."

Interview your interviewer.

Interviewing isn't just a chance to display your talents. It's a chance to get information about employers. Don't waste it. Ask questions. To help you, we've listed some things that could affect how much you enjoy your future job. And finding work you enjoy is what it's all about.

- 1 Do you have a training program? Describe it.
- 2 What specific responsibilities are trainees given?
- 3 What percentage of your management . . . are products of a training program? come from a specific area or school? hold graduate degrees?
- 4 What percentage of your management openings are filled from within?
- 5 If I join your firm and decide to change fields, can it be done within your firm?
- 6 What's the cost of living and the housing situation where I'd be employed?
- 7 Does your company have any additional benefits such as cost of living adjustments, employee group life and medical insurance, company-paid retirement plan?
- 8 How does your company's size and growth compare with others in your industry?
- 9 What is your company doing in the way of public service?
- 10 How does your employee turnover rate compare with other companies?
- 11 There must be some negative aspects of the job you're offering. What are they?

Interviewing the interviewer is an important step in selecting your career. And because we're one of the world's largest insurers, a State Farm interview is a good way to investigate a number of career fields. Right now we have opportunities in accounting, actuarial science, claims, electronic data processing, investments, law, management and underwriting. Our recruiter will be on your campus October 28, 1970. Arrange an interview through your Placement Office. Then bring your questions.

GOP Chairman Plans to Renominate Agnew

BALTIMORE (AP)—Republican National Chairman Rogers C. B. Morton says he plans to renominate Spiro T. Agnew for vice president in 1972 and "I intend to nominate him for the presidency" four years later.

Morton also told several hundred Republicans at a fund raising dinner Tuesday night that "you will never find a Republican who has done more for the United States" than Agnew.

The GOP chairman and Maryland congressman made the comments as Agnew, a former Maryland governor, sat by his side. They were appearing in behalf of this state's underdog Republican candidates for governor and U.S. senator.

"I have to keep my options open, Rog, as a 'functionary' of the Nixon administration," responded Agnew.

Three weeks ago Agnew called

Morton a "party functionary" for supporting the re-election campaign of Sen. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y. Agnew had said Goodell was a radical liberal who had no place in the party.

Earlier Tuesday, Agnew, asked by a television interviewer in Chicago if he had any presidential ambitions, had said he "just wants to be the best possible vice president."

When pressed about whether he would rule out a White House try, Agnew said, however, "I'm not ruling out anything."

President Nixon's latest comments on the matter, made several weeks ago, were that it was premature to talk about even the vice presidency in 1972.

Agnew also said his controversial nationwide campaign travels had stirred criticism from free spending liberals because he caught them "red handed in the open field making off with Uncle Sam's watermelons."

During his television interview in Chicago Agnew suggested it would be "interesting" to have news commentators appear voluntarily on a panel show and be quizzed by elected public officials about the broadcasters' opinions on subjects in the news.

ABC Commentator Frank Reynolds, whom Agnew named as a prominent commentator that might be interviewed, said in New York that the suggestion was ridiculous.

Sevareid Defends Self

NEW YORK (AP)—Eric Sevareid, the network television commentator, said Wednesday night that his general outlook, and that of other broadcasters like him, is well known by now. But he suggested that "the glare of public scrutiny" might better be turned on Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's ghost writers—"that stable of anonymity."

Sevareid, on the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite, spoke in response to the vice president's statement Tuesday that it would be interesting to have news commentators appear voluntarily on a panel show and be quizzed by elected public officials about the broadcasters' opinions on subjects in the news.

Agnew mentioned Sevareid's name and also Frank Reynolds and Howard K. Smith of ABC News.

Sevareid said: "If, after some 30 years and thousands of broadcasts, hundreds of articles and lectures and a few books, one's general cast of mind, warts and all, remain a mystery, then we're licked, and we fail to see how a few more minutes of examination by government types would solve the supposed riddle."

"Mr. Agnew wants to know where we stand. We stand—or rather sit—right here, in the full glare."

Reynolds had commented Tuesday night that "the Agnew suggestion is ridiculous. I think the vice president makes his points and I make mine on the air."

Smith said, "I suggest the vice president is merely trying to destroy the credibility of people who are obliged to report news that is not always favorable to him or the administration he represents."

'Miss Dohrn': In Exile in Algeria

ALGIERS (AP)—Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver said Thursday a "Miss Dohrn" had joined him and Dr. Timothy Leary in exile here but refused to say if she was Bernardine Dohrn, the student radical on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted persons.

He said he would explain everything at a news conference later in the day but would not say whether the Miss Dohrn was Bernardine or—as reports outside Algeria said—her sister Jenifer.

A newsman talking to Cleaver by telephone Wednesday understood him to refer to Bernardine Dohrn. But when he was contacted later, Cleaver said: "I talked about Miss Dohrn. Everything will be explained at the press conference."

In the first conversation Cleaver had spoken of the flight to Algiers of "Miss Dohrn" as "a blow to American imperialism" and as showing FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and his organization "as the paper tigers they are."

Rumors had been circulating for several days that Bernardine Dohrn, 28, who replaced Black Panther militant Angela Davis on the FBI list after Miss Davis was arrested last week, had arrived in this haven for top political refugees.

The official Algerian news agency announced Tuesday that Leary, who escaped last month from jail in San Luis Obispo, Calif., had arrived here and the Algerian government had granted him political asylum. Leary was serving a term on a narcotics conviction.

SMC Elects Five

The Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) elected a new steering committee at its Wednesday meeting. The five-member committee consists of Ron Hawkins, Rossalind Lobred, Katie Sternberg, Dan Mahn, Margaret McCabe and Ben Smith.

The election resulted from the resignation of the former five-member committee last Wednesday, Oct. 14.

Free Tickets

The University again this year has a number of free tickets for UK students who wish to attend the Friday night concerts of the Philharmonic series at Memorial Hall.

These tickets are available at the Music Department Office, Room 18, Fine Arts Building, starting Tuesday morning of the week of each concert. Students can obtain tickets by showing their ID cards.

The first concert will be at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Lili Kraus, pianist, is the guest artist.

Rowan Sees 'Police State'

Carl Rowan, former director of the United States Information Agency (USIA) and former deputy assistant for public affairs in the Department of State, told a Central Kentucky Concert and Lecture Series audience last night that the United States has definite possibilities of becoming a "police state."

Rowan, now a columnist, said that the U.S. is moving to the far right with "law and order" as a main theme in elections. "Violence and repression," added Rowan, "go together like a chicken and an egg." He pointed to the "no-knock act" in Washington and the use of martial law in Canada as examples of loss of personal liberties.

Formerly an ambassador to Finland, Rowan said that the war in Vietnam is "big enough to divide Americans, but not big enough to unite them."

He concluded by saying that the salvation of the country lies in the efforts of all to get away from self-righteousness and arrogance.

STUDENT INFORMATION TEAM

The Student Information Team is a Student Government sponsored organization which carries the story of the University of Kentucky to high school seniors or community college students. SIT derives its existence from the concept that by a University of Kentucky student returning to his or her native area this gives the high school or community college student an idea of University of Kentucky life from the student's point of view.
