DO YOU WANT ACTION?

Some time ago an editorial appeared in this section of The Kernel concerning the matter of co-ed's smoking. Not to be youthful impatient, but simply desirous of becoming acquainted with the sentiments of the students and faculty members, especially the women of these two bodies, The Kernel is asking that if the university women are sincerely interested in acquiring a suitable and safe smoking room in some central building on the campus, we may have some definite declaration upon which to work.

Insofar as the Board of Trustees, executives and faculty members have thus far been lenient and have been agreeable to reasonable changes in accordance with the earnestly expressed tradition, towards this question of smoking, The Kernel believes that they will again indicate practical terms. If the students so indicate that their wish is to be allowed smoking privileges on the campus, which they are not at the present, The Kernel will start a petition to go before the proper authorities for hearing.

If, however, a petition is to be signed, it is to be remembered that in the case of the granting of such privilege care should be taken not to misuse or abuse the consideration of the university officials. Smoking should be limited to certain fireproof places, used with care. Smoking in cars on the campus is opposed because such acts are the very ones which give bad impressions to visitors and parents and cause the widespread complaints about our generation. Why be indiscreet enough to offend?

INTRAMURAL SPORTS AND THE FRATERNITIES

Tournaments and more tournaments have been the substance of a great deal of news this semester. Tournaments are excellent things to stimulate action on the part of individual organizations, but intramural tournaments were not created with the primary aim of encouraging fraternal organizations to be active. The real purpose is to supply some kind of athletic sporting competition for those who do not have the opportunity to compete in varsity athletics.

Complaints have been made by some fraternities to the effect that the average fraternity freshman is so busy holding up the intramural record of his organization, that he does not have the necessary time to spend on his scholastic work. We can easily see how this can be true if it is an unquestioned fact that each organization has some men who are more successful all-round athletes than others. It is these boys who are literally forced into all intramural sports. The freshmen are then compelled to fill out the gaps in the teams. This is defeating the primary purpose of intramural activities of giving an opportunity to the average student to go out for sports.

The athletic incline that opportunity throughout the year without a special department being formed to permit him to further his natural inclinations. Intramural sports were developed to fill a need and organizations are making it impossible for it to do that as they are merely looking out for the good of the fraternity, instead of the good of the University. If a points system, governing participation in intramural athletics, were to be put into effect the situation would be remedied. It would enable men to participate in sports who otherwise are being crowded out by professional intramurals; it would take a certain amount of strain from the freshmen who are being compelled to enter into everything. Intramural sport was created for sports' sake, and should uphold its standard without allowing fraternity greediness to interfere by forcing the same men into every competition merely to assure their organization of a few points.

TANGIBLE AWARDS FOR 'A' STUDENTS

As the end of the school year nears, grades, often neglected the subjects of conversation. Seniors seem to be the only students who are receiving any tangible recognition for making high grades. It has been more or less a custom for professors to excuse seniors from their examinations if they have a good average class standing. This is one of the most revered customs of the university. Seniors appreciate the recognition that is tendered them for their four years patient work.

Upperclassmen are given no recognition for making exceptionally good grades. There is no stimulus for them to raise that high B to an A. Family pride is all that offers any stimulus to raise the C to a B, and even then just so a standing is made is really all that is necessary to satisfy the average faculty.

Many institutions of higher learning are beginning either to recognize the utter futility of grades or else to offer some tangible award to stimulate the student to better efforts. Many people will say that no stimulus should be necessary, that if a student worked hard and made a high grade or he will not, according to his mental capacity. We think they are wrong. There is a general feeling among the student body that grades are unnecessary, that if a standing is made that is enough. In many ways we agree with them for, after all, there is truly little recognition given those who make good grades. There are honorary scholastic fraternities who recognize the highest of the high students, but those who just miss the mark are not recognized. We think that if grades are to be one of the highest aims of college that some tangible award should be made so that more students will work for them.

The Kernel suggests that the A students be exempt from their examinations. Professors will say that if they are A students the examinations will be played for them. In other words, that examinations are a mere gesture of formality as far as the A student is concerned. This is not a courteous attitude to take toward the student. If he has worked hard and made consistent A grades, if he has attended class regularly as an A student must do, he should be tendered some reward for his work. We think that if this little courtesy were offered there would be more excellent students. The Kernel, as the voice of student opinion, thinks that it would be appreciated and that it would be beneficial to the general student attitude.

THE DAPPER LITTLE MAN

The following article was written by Miss Lewellyn Jones, who graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1926. Miss Jones was a member of The Kernel staff and since her graduation has been editor of "Stoppit," a weekly paper of the Stevens hotel in Chicago. She wrote this article on the occasion of Dean Anderson's stay at this hotel when stopping in Chicago on the senior engineering trip.

"The dapper little man who walks with the agility of a cocked and shaves such neat geometric patterns with his cane is no other than Dean F. Paul Anderson of the University of Kentucky.

The dean, who was here for a committee meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, of which he is a past president, had just come in from Dr. Vernon Hill's laboratory looking rather crestfallen. We discovered later that he had been too late for "the experiment," in other words, the alluring model from the Art Institute had just emerged from the glass cabinet and wrapped the drapery of her couch about her and was cutting into the dean's stepped in. Then, of course, what did he care about knowing the amount of energy she had consumed in the mere act of breathing.

But the dean is optimistic. He is all bubbling over with enthusiasm over the possibility of recapturing some of Cleopatra's satiny raptures. Whether by radio or some other intricate device he has covered into substance, he doesn't know, but he believes that the time will come when we shall be able to tune in to electro-magnet waves that originated hundreds of years ago. He bases his prediction on the well known theory that all energy ever created is still in existence. Who knows but what some day just after Hoover has pressed a button, Caesar will exclaim, "Et tu, Brute!" The dean has been at the head of the College of Engineering at the University of Kentucky for the past forty years having formerly been a director of the Research Laboratory of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers in Pittsburgh. No other member of the entire university faculty occupies the same pedestal with the dean. He is perhaps the most singularly interesting and best liked man on the campus. And don't think for a minute that he isn't attuned to the tempo of the time or that he takes a delight in berating the impishness of his generation. No, indeed, he is the dean. He revels in seeing young people enjoy life, getting perhaps a bigger kick out of being a spectator than those in the pageant itself. And so let's drink to the dean, but remember it'll have to be a mint julep!

They call the football player horse because he takes after his fodder.

Y. W. C. A. AND Y. M. C. A. RETREAT

Members of the university Young Women's and Young Men's Christian associations will hold their retreat at a camp on the Kentucky river during the coming week-end. The retreat is held for the purpose of formulating plans for the work the organizations hope to accomplish during the following school year and is attended by all the members of the local Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. State officers of the organization speak to the unity members at this time and students and officers collaborate in mapping out the most advisable course of activity to be followed during the next two semesters.

Not only does the retreat enable the members to have an enjoyable outing at the most delightful time of the year but it also makes possible intelligent consideration of the problems with which the associations are confronted. Without outside distraction and with the cooperation and aid of older members of the organizations, it is possible to plan wisely and completely for the coming school year.

The Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. are important features in the lives of many students at the university and The Kernel believes that the retreat would be well worthwhile if it did nothing more than to bring the members of the organization into a closer and more companionable relationship for one week-end during the year.

SENIOR ATTENDANCE

Three hundred and eighty seats; sixty seats filled! That was the situation at the May Day convocation Friday when a large number of seats in the front of the Memorial auditorium were set aside for seniors, who did not show up.

As was previously announced, the convocation was primarily for the purpose of honoring the seniors of the university. The members of the graduating class were to wear caps and gowns and march to the assembly in a body to fill the seats which were reserved in the place of honor at the front of the auditorium. When the time came to march to convocation only sixty seniors appeared. Only three rows were filled and a glaring vacancy of twenty full rows of empty seats remained.

It is deplorable that students cannot be depended on to cooperate with university plans even when the plans are primarily for their own good. Many of the senior class members were to be honored. They were unsupported even by their own classmates. When the university attempts to publicly recognize and honor the senior class for the last time before graduation, it seems fitting that the class as well as the university representatives should be present for the occasion.

BAND CONCERTS

Every Thursday evening the University of Kentucky's concert band presents a program in the amphitheater in back of Memorial hall. This band gives six spring concerts for the benefit of music lovers of Lexington. Kentucky's concert band is recognized as one of the best in the state and is sought after for radio programs and party concerts.

We have noticed that many people have been attending these concerts. This is the first time that The Kernel has not been forced to plead for attendance at any university activity project. It is reassuring to think that there are some people who do not have to be urged to attend programs sponsored by the university.

These band concerts have not been advertised as much as the customary programs. The attendance has not been strikingly large but it has been sympathetic. The usual university crowd merely attends free functions for curiosity's sake and has the discourteous habit of straggling out whenever its curiosity is satisfied. The crowd which has been attending the band concerts is a group of people interested in and appreciative of music; it is an audience that is worth playing for.

The Kernel wishes to commend these people on their choice of entertainment and to say that we feel sure that it is a pleasure for the concert band to play for them. We hope that in the future there will be more sincere audiences for university functions and this one example proves the value of past statements made in this column to the effect that it is possible.

LITERARY SECTION

YOUTH AND TWILIGHT
I look afar to the hills, black and dim,
Silhouetted against the sky.
Where dark clouds hover
Like some huge sorrow
In the distance.

My eyes glance from them to the soft,
Roxy aftermath of winter's sunset;
And my heart is comforted
By the sweet, balmy night.

Winds blow gently, yet fresh and cool;
Stars creep out of the deep sky;
And I, in my meditation
Trit to things unknown
Save by the dreaming heart of youth.

RAIN IN AN OLD HOUSE
I like to hear the rain when I am in an old house—
I like to hear the rain drip from the eaves.
The splash of it among the stones below—
The little ripples running from the gutters.
The tiny holes the drops here in the ground.
All seem so curious to me—
They make me wonder.
The patter on the roof
Sounds like someone
Knocking up there.
From the window all seems clean and fresh;
The earth has a dreamy, hazy look.
The song sparrow in the huge oak oak
Sings poems to the rain.

- E. L. HARTWELL

"City Lights"
It's a simple matter to determine the best attraction along the current riato with Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights" at the Strand. The fact that the picture has little, if any, formidable competition should guarantee a healthy week's business. "City Lights" must be seen. It is one of those all too rare screen masterpieces in which a mere recitation of the plot would be futile. "City Lights" has a plot, of course, and a very obvious one but that plot is of slight importance compared to the artistry in acting and directing displayed by that master of pantomime, the star. The picture is filled with brilliant details which you will want to see again. There's the prize fight sequence which is the scene of hilarious comedy. The laughable sorrow that Chaplin has made famous is there again. We urge you to see "City Lights." Despite the fact that it is a silent picture, its are so great that we overheard a young woman arguing with her boy friend that it was a talker. Rena adds that you won't notice the silence after the first few minutes.

"Ladies' Man"
"Ladies' Man," a Paramount picture starring William Powell and adapted from the best-seller by Rupert Hughes, is on its last day at the Kentucky. It is recommended for Powell fans only. Although the production is handsomely mounted and splendidly acted, it moves far too slowly to hold interest. Powell is seen in a rather unsympathetic role of a worthless fellow who preys upon society for a living. He eventually falls in love but his reformation comes too late for he is killed in a fight with Gilbert Emery, enacting the role of a cheated husband. Mr. Emery's performance is the best in the picture.

The Kentucky is making a gesture toward the good old days of living entertainment by bringing Salt and Peanuts, popular radio team of WLW, here beginning tomorrow for personal appearances on the stage. Salt, before entering radio work, was in vaudeville in a male duo act which was billed Salt and Pepper.

"Fifty Million Frenchmen"
Olson and Johnson, famous stage comedians, are no good in supplies. After making a miserable debut in "On Sallor, Behave," Warner Brothers featured the boys in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," now at the Ben Ali and, despite its beautiful color.
