Shooting of U. K. Student Mystery

Harlan, Ky., Oct. 29. (INS)—Harlan county authorities today were investigating the mysterious shooting of Paul Jones, 17-year old University student, who was wounded seriously while here on a week-end vacation from the University.

The youth refused to discuss the shooting at the Harlan hospital where he was taken with a bullet wound through his right chest. He indicated, however, that he did not see his assailant.

The victim is the son of the late J. M. Jones here.

Mystery was added to the case when W. T. Jones, uncle of the youth, reported to police that someone had called the Jones' home with the warning "You'd better keep Paul at home tonight." This telephone call was traced to Margie's Sweet Shop in the Margie Grand Theater building here, but the party who made it was not dis-ports sent in by the associated high schools of the state.

The committee is composed of Professor M. E. Ligon, chairman; Dean T. A. Hendricks, Berea; Miss Juliet Jameson Pinter, principal of Science Hill; Duke Young, principal of Frankfort High School, and Mark Godman, state supervisor of high schools.

There are 38 high schools in the state which are members of the association, and ten more are making application for membership.

OUR TEAM AND TRADITION

Welcome Alumni! Welcome back to the campus where the ardent and fervent feeling of loyalty to tradition and school spirit is the best in many years.

True, we are far from an ultimate goal in this respect—but we're on our way. By next year we hope and intend to have advanced this feeling far above and beyond its present state. You may call this "going back to the good old days." We call it "going forward to better days."

Our school spirit had ebbed away almost to nothing—due we believe to two factors. One of these was loss of interest in our football team, the other, the forgetting of all our traditions.

With the advent of a new regime, interest and enthusiasm for our team has been reawakened. A number of things indicate this fact. One is the better attendance at superior sportmanship at the games. But by far the best is the absence of plain old "grifting."

It was tremendously encouraging to note that actually a better spirit of sportsmanship was being shown by the students of the University of Kentucky this year than last season.

The whole spirit of the student body as well as of the team itself is excellent, but there is one thing for which there is no excuse—the size of the squad. In an institution where there are between 1800 and 2000 men, there is no reason on earth why there should not be at least 60 capable, sturdy individuals who are only too happy for the opportunity of playing football for their school.

Certainly football is best played when the individual has a true love of the game. However, there are also many extraneous reasons why a person who is physically and mentally capable should do his best to increase the strength of the squad, and thus of the team, and often the love for the game can be instilled.

As to tradition—it is the little things, the things which we have been inclined to overlook, that contribute to form the best school spirit. Hazing of freshmen has been outmoded and is ridiculous, but for the freshmen to be required to show respect and thus to acquire admiration for upperclassmen is absolutely necessary. Freshmen really do not mind such things as the wearing of caps and the refraining from wearing of corduroy trousers—the privilege of seniors.

After all, it gives them something to look forward to—the day when they will be a more privileged group and become the teachers of the underclassmen.

If we are to gain our end—truly deep, enthusiastic school spirit—our traditions must be upheld!

WELCOME, MR. PRESIDENT

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has been extended an invitation to the Kentucky, at Harrodsburg, on November 16. If the chief executive accepts the invitation, it is hoped that he may be persuaded to address an audience at the University during his visit, and Dr. Frank L. McVey, in a telegram to the White House, has made the formal request.

As Doctor McVey pointed out in his telegram, which was sent as a message from the trustees, faculty, and students of the University, the men's gymnasium will accommodate 4,000 persons. There is no doubt but that the building would be filled to capacity should the President deliver a speech there. Now, more than at any other time, youth is seeking a broader knowledge of world affairs, and Mr. Roosevelt long since has demonstrated his ability to clearly, forcefully, and impartially enlighten a wondering nation.

The Kentucky Kernel, in its humble way, but still as the spokesman for the University student body, adds to the official invitation a sincere wish that our President will so honor us.

TAG SALES Omicron Delta Kappa, acting in accordance with the well laid plans of the Student Union building project, have started, once again, the sale of tags before each football game. All they ask is the small sum of five cents for a tag, and the success of this phase of the plans depends upon the down-to-the-last man support of the University of Kentucky.

Many students, when approached last Friday to buy a tag, casually refused to do so. These same students, on another occasion, will criticize the administrators of the Student Union building project severely for slow advancement.

If the non-supporters of this drive for funds continue to remain as such, The Kernel asks them to be men and women enough to refrain from any comments, detrimental in nature, regarding the progress of the plans as laid down for this year. To those persons backing the requests made by committees in charge of the project goes the privilege of saying what they believe to be faulty with the movements. They have obtained the right to express their beliefs by their willingness to cooperate. The distinction of the comments made by both types will not be difficult. Those who are cooperating have found little time to stand by and talk; they act.

JEST AMONG US

A c-d-ed at the University of Tennessee operates a "two-bits a date" bureau; which all goes to show what chances these college students will take.

Students must now wear overcoats to school, not necessarily on the campus, but as a precaution against the certain contraction of pneumonia in the class-room.

Kentucky has played Alabama 13 times and has only won once, but just try to get 13 to 1 betting odds on the game this week-end.

Sunny Wants A Bodyguard Our dear editor received the following epistle through the mail: "Dear Mr. Day, This is to let you know that the Whoosis Club, a freshmen organization at the University, has decided to put you on the spot for the action the Student Council has taken in making all freshmen wear freshmen caps. . . We regret this movement very much, and unless you, as president of the organization, have this rule revoked immediately, we shall be forced to take to drastic measures. We feel that this is the attitude of most of the freshmen students, so this message is NOT TO BE TAKEN LIGHTLY. If you do not comply with our requests at once, YOU WILL REGRET IT. If you notify the authorities of this communication, you may expect BODILY VIOLENCE. Sincerely Yours, —THE WHOOSIS CLUB.

Welcome Homecomers! We only hope that you can share the joy that was ours last Saturday when we trounced Auburn. Hope springs eternal, and perhaps the forthcoming Saturday will find us all celebrating another win over an Alabama team. The University of Alabama has maintained an impressive record of no defeats, and the football eyes of the nation are on her. A win over the Crimson Tide would have many far-reaching consequences. The Tide seems to take it for granted that they will win forever.

Perhaps they have a right to feel that way. Only once, in all the years that Kentucky and Alabama has met, has the Wildcat been victorious.

That was in 1922 when a great Blue team captained by the present freshman coach, Fribble, topped the Tide 7 to 0.

Kentucky again showed in Saturday's game that she has a mighty good defensive team, albeit a trifle weak in a passing attack. Their blocking in close quarters, however, needs considerable improvement. Auburn's crack ends were never out of the plays and all attempts to round them was futile. Johnson's repeated thrusts at the line brought gains only from his own drive and very seldom were the Auburn linemen taken back or out of the play. The times that Bert broke through he was alone and Kentucky's interference got there only when he was down. When he made his long dash to the one-yard line every man in the Auburn secondary was untroubled and eligible to tackle him.

Never again played a great game at tackle. The star sophomore was impregnable on defense, played a heads up game in the open field and opened great holes in his side of the line. McClurg, Nevers, and Rupert were responsible for the few times that Johnson was able to slip through.

Pritchard was dividing tackle with Nevers until his injury. His injury came at an inopportune time. The stage was all set for his flashing off-tackle runs as the Auburn team concentrating on stopping Johnson. Pritchard had not done any ball-toting and his flashing speed unexpectedly thrown at them would have speedily upset the balance in the almost even game. The fact that Hay carried out the plan so well upon being substituted showed the scoring possibilities that the inimitable Pritchard would have created had he remained in the line-up. Hay's coming through in the pinch deserves considerable praise as it was this that lit the spark that drove the Kentucky team over the resistance of Auburn.

McMillan played a fine game the second half and handled the team in the best manner possible during the windy third quarter.

While on the subject of constructive criticism, it behooves me to say a few things concerning the scoreboard. The workings of that supposedly enlightening vehicle was unusually atrocious, misinforming and pediculous. This is in some measure probably due to the operators on the platform who seemed to be of the age that is forced indoors when the curfew blows. The gentlemen of the press were unusually caustic in their remarks about the board's misinterpreted machinations during the heat of the fray and I have no doubt but that considerable of the paying public voiced the same reactions.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE GAME: The number of players whose noses effused claret, it seemed almost too frequent to be coincidental. . . . Margaret Walker losing her hat to the gale during the maneuvers. . . . the unusual fine showing of the hands. . . . the fake fight pulled off to attract the rubbernecking crowd. . . . the absence of the little interfering pooch; there was a larger dog on the sidelines, but he was sufficiently lacking in the joie d'vivre to join the boys on the field. . . . Able Ayers fighting over the ball with a teammate at the conclusion of the game. . . .

Prominent Alumnus Of University Dies

Victor Emanuel Muncy, prominent alumnus of the University, died at 8 o'clock Saturday morning at Ashland, following a long illness. Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. Sunday at Ashland, Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University, asked Mr. John Wesley Woods, Ashland alumnus of the class of '96, to represent the University, due to Doctor McVey's inability to attend the services.

V. E. Muncy came to the University from Louisa, Ky. He was graduated with a B. S. degree in 1891. In 1907, he received an M. S. degree and followed these degrees with a B. M. E. in 1908, and an M. E. in 1913.

After receiving his B. S. degree, Mr. Muncy was connected with the University until 1905 as an instructor in the Academy. After that, he took up his studies again and finally entered the field of engineering. Upon receiving his B. M. E., he went to Ohio Mechanics Institute, Cincinnati, as Dean of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering, and held this position until 1920.

In 1930 he suffered a paralytic stroke, and since that time has made his home with his sister, Mrs. A. H. Moore, Ashland.

What Future Opponents Did Saturday

Alabama 26 Georgia 6
Southwestern 7, Chattanooga 20
Tulane 20 Georgia Tech 12
Tennessee 14 Duke 6

Kentucky's three remaining major opponents scored victories over strong opposition, Saturday, and indicated the type of team that the Wildcats will be forced to battle against in their future Southeastern conference contests.

Alabama won over Georgia's Bulldogs, 26-6, without showing all the power it was capable of putting forth. The issue was never in doubt after the first few minutes, when Dixie Howell dashed 42 yards for a touchdown. The Tide-men looked more powerful against the Bulldogs than against Tennessee last week.

Tulane's Green Wave was hard pressed to overcome an inspired Georgia Tech eleven, 20-12, in a game that was much closer than the score indicates. Only the margin on a missed point after touchdown separated the teams until late in the final period, when Brownson, Greene, quarterback, intercepted one of the desperate Tech passes and galloped to a score.

Tennessee staged a great third period attack and scored enough points to overpower a valiant Duke team 14-6. The Vols, coming back from the Alabama defeat, played strong offensive ball during the sustained drive mixing a pass attack with a running game that spelled defeat for the Blue Devils.

Well, we picked them Saturday, but evidently didn't pray quite hard enough, for the final returns showed us with four losers and a tie in 20 efforts. Which, when you look over the schedule, wasn't too bad.

The defeats, unexpected or otherwise, of Fordham, Holy Cross, Iowa State, and Yale upset our forecast. Georgetown and N. Y. U. played to a scoreless deadlock. Georgetown was our choice Friday, but was omitted through an error. This is meant to inform our readers (both of them) about what happened.

Next week's selections probably will be tougher than ever, so bear with us until then.

half the sagacity of Wynne was too much for them, and although Auburn had the wind in their favor they were unable to do anything. They not only lost yardage, but it was apparent that the team's power was broken and Kentucky's Big Blue team was forging ahead and gaining confidence with every yard.

During the first half period Kentucky could do little to the stalwart Auburn line which started Patterson. Kentucky's best players during this period were Nevers and Pritchard who stopped over 50 percent of the plays at the line of scrimmage between the two of them. Then toward the end of the half Pritchard dislocated his shoulder on a terrific tackle that stopped big Mitchell at the line of play.

The loss of Pritchard was keenly felt on the defensive and especially so on the offensive as he had not yet started to carry the ball and he was expected to turn loose any moment with his matchless speed. Pritchard's injury is not permanent, however, and he is expected to be in condition for the Alabama game this week.

Hay was thrown into the breach and performed ably. He alternated with Johnson in carrying the ball and split the Plainsmen attention which eventually gave Johnson the margin he need to get away.

Kentucky threatened to score early in the first period when they drove to the Plainsmen's seven-yard line where they lost in an other fumble late in the fourth quarter when the reserves were in the lineup. They made first down on the 16-yard line and lost the ball on a fumble on the first play.

it hung limp at his side. Further examination, however, showed that it had been thrown out of place and was badly sprained. Whether or not it will be available for the Alabama game is still uncertain. Pritchard hurt his arm when making the hardest tackle of the afternoon. He drove into the Auburn ball carrier's mid-section like a pile-driver, and the player crumpled up like paper.

"Bull's" Hay, who took Pritchard's place at fullback, played the best game of his career. It was he who carried the ball over for a touchdown in the last quarter after Johnson had made his 44-yard end run. Hay's punting was excellent, and his line plunging was something of which to take close note. A by-word that started in the student section was "Put it on the wagon."

After the game several newspaper reporters asked the Plainsmen's coach, Jack Meagher, what Kentu-form a special cheering section for this and the remaining games of the season. This trained group is composed of 40 independent men, and 40 fraternity members, an equal number being appointed by each fraternity. Practices on the yell are held before each game and it is expected that by employing this method of cheering, the remainder of the student body will cooperate and in that way obtain more cooperation for the cheer-leaders.

One point for O. D. K. campus leadership fraternity, will be given to each member of this group, but if a member does not appear for a practice or a game, he forfeits his place, and another student, whose name appears on the waiting list, will be selected for membership in the group. This method is being sponsored by SuKy, the Inter-fraternity council, and O. D. K.

ky's chances were against Tulane and Alabama. He chuckled a little when he replied: "Now, now, you can't beat Tulane. There's just no comparison between the two teams. You've got a fine driving back in Johnson, but where you have one good back, Tulane has 12. They'll just overpower you, and this is not the year to hope to beat them. Forget it!" He said the same about Alabama.

A former Tulane player was in the press coop scouting the game, and after the game he said: "Wynne beat us the last two years, and we are not taking any chances on him this year. We may win, but we're not figuring on it in advance."

The Auburn players who played Saturday that were on the Plainsmen team when Chet Wynne was there are: Hill, quarterback; Whittemen, fullback; Fenton and Morris, ends; Welch and Houston, guards; and Patterson, tackle.
