Members of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity have active UK membership canceled

By MARY CHANDLER BOLIN
Staff Writer

Undergraduate students who belonged to the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity last semester have had their active memberships canceled because of several organizational problems, according to Dan Dorsett, a 1970 UK graduate and alumni chairman of the house corporation for the chapter.

However, the 31 students who had their local memberships revoked were granted "alumni status" by the national fraternity this summer.

"Right now, we're in kind of a limbo status," said Tim Kaizer, a junior math major and member of the fraternity. "We're not able to actively participate or vote, and we won't have the privileges or responsibilities of alumni until after we graduate or leave school."

Dorsett explained there are several reasons for changes in the Kentucky Alpha chapter.

During the past three years, chapter membership had not increased and the fraternity was running at a financial loss, Dorsett said. He said alumni supplied funds to pay the deficit.

Also, during the 1979-80 school year, local alumni spent $10,000 for the house. Dorsett, however, said members did not maintain the house.

Last semester, an adviser from the national headquarters stayed at the UK chapter.

"We (alumni) tried to help them, but the group just didn't seem that interested in improvement," Dorsett said. "We didn't want to see the chapter fail completely — it had a history of success and is the longest running chapter at UK. Throughout the whole matter everyone was treated with dignity, politeness and fairness."

Kaizer said the chapter didn't realize the seriousness of the situation and the expectations of local alumni. "If we had known exactly what they wanted, what needed to be done, we would have done it," he said. "I guess there just wasn't good communication."

Kaizer said he was in "total shock" when he received a letter from the national chapter saying he and the other members had been placed on alumni status.

"During spring semester we were doing well — we won the Pi Phi Spring Swing Softball Tournament, hosted the Student Government party during Little Kentucky Derby weekend, and were leading in Greek participation points," he said. "The national counselor was here, but he didn't attend chapter meetings or tell us what chapter standards we failed to meet."

Four students, who were members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon chapter at Western Kentucky University last semester, have transferred to UK this semester to help start a "new" chapter.

Ben Downing, Brett Barrett, Brian Shaw and Len Wiggins said they transferred to UK because of their majors and reestablished the chapter after the former members were placed on alumni status.

The four arrived at UK with "no big plans" for fall rush, Downing said. "We had little notice — it was sort of spur of the moment, but we still got 14 pledges," he said.

Iraqi, Iranian forces meet in 'holy war'

By STEVE K. HINDY

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—Iraqi armor and infantry pushed deeper into Iran yesterday, claiming the capture of three more towns and driving hard-pressed Iranian troops away from the border. The two Moslem enemies urged their people to fight on in a "holy war."

As a worried world watched, the "oil war" continued.

Fights of U.S.-made Iranian fighter-bombers and fleets of gunboats attacked Iraqi oil installations for a third day, and Tehran said far-ranging Iraqi warplanes had attacked Iran's giant Kharg Island oil terminal. The important Iranian refinery at Abadan was reported still burning. Two days after Iraqi warplanes and artillery began bombing it, the Persian Gulf oil-shipping facilities of both nations were reported shut down.

The war poses no immediate serious threat to U.S. oil supplies — unless the fighting widens and stops all oil trade in the Gulf.

Iranian reinforcements were being rushed to the flashpoint areas along the 300-mile waterfront, Tehran Radio said. The beleaguered defenders of the Iranian oil-refinery city of Abadan apparently were holding out doggedly against an Iraqi siege.

The Iraqis claimed to have captured at least three more Iranian towns in the central border region 350 miles southwest of Tehran. Iran's government conceded its forces had made tactical withdrawals.

The Iraqis asserted that four Americans, whom they did not identify, were captured with Iraqi soldiers in the border fighting north of Abadan. The report, which gave no further detail, could not be verified.

Official reports on total casualties in the ground fighting and the heavy air raids were not available. Each side claimed to have shot down dozens of the other's planes during the cross-border air raids.

In Baghdad, which was the target of repeated air attacks Tuesday, dependents of American diplomats were ordered evacuated by the U.S. State Department. The Baghdad airport was closed, and it was reported that some 50 Americans, including stranded businessmen, would ride by bus more than 400 miles to Jordan yesterday.

There was a flurry of diplomatic activity to try to bring about a cease-fire.

Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, arrived in Baghdad, reportedly to offer his services as a mediator. Cuban President Fidel Castro, head of the Non-Aligned Movement, dispatched his foreign minister to Baghdad in another mediation effort.

In Tehran, the Iranian prime minister, Mohammad Ali Rajai, accused the United States of "trying to invade Iran by aiding Iraq." The Soviet Communist Party daily newspaper Pravda charged that the war was a "necessary" excuse for the United States to justify its stationing of a "quick reaction force" in the Mideast.

President Carter, who has proclaimed American neutrality in the escalating conflict, met with Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and security aides to discuss its implications.

The Iraq government of President Saddam Hussein has not said what its immediate military objectives are in the fighting. But it has said its overall goals are the recovery of small parcels of disputed border territory, full Iraqi jurisdiction over a 60-mile stretch of the Shatt el-Arab waterway separating the two nations, and restoration of "Arabsovereignty" over three

Landing jobs requires aggressive action according to attorneys at Noon Forum

By JOHN HARDIN
Staff Writer

Five lawyers with experience in federal agencies told an audience of students and faculty yesterday that there is almost unlimited experience available with federal jobs, but added that it is a crowded market and requires aggressive action when vying for a position.

Lawyers Marvin Coan, Danny Owens, Wes Gersh, Joe Dawahare and his wife Sandy Dawahare all spoke at the Student Bar Association's Noon Forum in the Law Building courtroom.

"An experience in Washington as a lawyer is probably the most valuable thing you have in a legal career," said Coan, a 1973 UK Law School graduate who worked in the Civil Department of the Department of Justice.

However, he said, the road to Washington started long before he reported to work, with many letters and interviews before the actual hiring.

"You will only get a job in Washington by writing some letters," he said. Connections in Washington may also help, he said. "It's very important to find out who from UK is working at the Justice Department."

Owens, a 1974 UK Law School graduate, said that though the market is tight, "there are jobs available."

Owens worked with the Bureau of Competition, a division of the Federal Trade Commission.

He said that although UK graduates are well received and have a good reputation, a job often depends on who a person knows.

Owens said internships were available for second-year and third-year law students, but that competition was furious. Only by being early with applications and showing persistence in pursuing the internship would a student be considered, he said.

Owens said a career with a government agency offered good possibilities, and that government experience was often helpful in looking for jobs within the private sector.

"I think the FTC is highly respected within the legal community," he said.

Wes Gersh, a University of Louisville Law School graduate who worked with the Securities and Exchange Commission, said he highly recommends trying to get a job in Washington. If you want to represent big business, I thought the best place to start was the Securities and Exchange Commission," he said.

But, with perhaps hundreds of applications for each position, "You've got to be there, you've got to push. You've got to want the job more than they do," Gersh said.

Sandy Dawahare, another graduate of the UK Law School, worked for the Federal Aviation Administration, which has its headquarters in Washington and regional centers across the country.

Whether in Washington or a regional office, she said that a job with the FAA offered an impressive list of credentials to take with a lawyer to private firms.

Courtroom experience was available with the FAA, as with the other agencies, she said, and expertise was also gained in research and technical areas.

Joe Dawahare, also a UK graduate, advised prospective graduates to get a Congressional Directory listing all of the federal offices, agencies and sub-agencies in Washington and to keep in constant contact with the offices.

Dawahare worked for the FAA and also for Sen. Marlowe Cook's office. He said the pay was excellent in Washington, but that a wait is often necessary for an opening.

Psychological services offered to students

By MARY HACKWORTH
Staff Writer

The Psychological Services Center is offering free counseling services, including individual therapy, family and children services and couple or marital therapy, to UK students and other Lexington residents.

Lisa Berzins, one of the PSC's three coordinators, said, "We are most heavily used by the community, and we want students to know that we're here for them, too."

The PSC is staffed by 25 to 30 graduate students in clinical psychology training, who are supervised by licensed clinicians in UK's psychology department.

"The Center also has access to a psychiatric consultant at the Medical Center," said Berzins.

She listed some of the frequent complaints that bring people to the Center as relationship problems, (including marital or living together difficulties), personal identity problems, and deep depressions.

"But these are not the only things we help people with," she said. Other areas such as phobias, career crises and assertiveness training are all included." Therapy for personal growth is also available, she said.

The length of time for seeing a therapist at the Center ranges from three or four weeks to a year, depending on the problem, she said.

Anyone who uses the service must fill out a consent-treatment form and must consent to the audio-visual taping of his therapy sessions.

"These tapes are only to be seen by the therapist and his or her supervisor," explained Dr. Schultz, another of the Center's coordinators. Therapy sessions are confidential with this provision. Clients also sign a consent-to-research form, stating that the outcome of their therapy can be used anonymously for purposes of research. In addition, they supply background and medical history and complete a problem checklist.

PSC does not carry out much psychological testing aside from this, Berzins said.

Services PSC are free. The Center's director is Dr. Donald Ralph, an adjunct member of the psychology department.

The Center is located at 441 Pennsylvania Ave. The telephone number is 258-3323.

Iran-Iraq war cause for international concern

As fighting between Iran and Iraq intensifies, Carter administration officials are becoming increasingly concerned. And rightly so.

Three national issues of paramount importance are being affected by the all-out war being waged over the control of the Shatt al-Arab, the 125-mile-long estuary that separates Iran and Iraq at the head of the Persian Gulf.

First, the 52 Americans awaiting a decision from the Iranian Parliament concerning their fate will have to linger who knows how much longer because the Parliament said Tuesday it had "decided to freeze the hostage issue."

This is truly a depressed period for the hostages and their families because recent communications between officials in the United States and Iran had given some indication of a softened attitude in the demands and pleas from both sides.

Whether these recent reappraisals of the hostage situation were instigated out of political motives or not, it now looks as if 52 Americans will be spending their 365th day in undisclosed locations throughout Iran.

The second issue, and some government officials may feel this is the only thing to be concerned with, is the flow of precious crude from the oil-rich region.

Our country imports no oil from Iran and little from Iraq, but these two countries' continued fighting could cause shipping from other oil-producing nations to be delayed or discontinued by closing the Strait of Hormuz, the small southern entrance to the Persian Gulf.

Initially, this would have little impact here because government officials say we have enough oil on hand to withstand any changes in the market for 164 days.

However, if no settlement is agreed upon between the ancient Persian Gulf rivals within one or two months, our country, along with hundreds of others, will be confronted with increased prices at the gasoline pumps and no guarantee of where the next tank of gas will come from.

Besides the Iranian parliament's "freeze" on the resolution of the hostage crisis and the possible cutoff of oil shipping lines from the Persian Gulf region, the most serious issue at hand is possible Soviet intervention in the Iran-Iraq conflict — ultimately a threat to world peace.

Already the Soviets supply military equipment to Iraq. And although they are pressed with problems from their invasion of Afghanistan, the opportunity to enhance their influence in the critical region would be enough reason for Soviet leaders to begin contemplating a move.

United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said the widened fighting posed a "grave threat" to world peace and he called for urgent consultations by the Security Council Tuesday. This initial peacekeeping move is a logical and positive step and should be quickly supported by all U.N. member nations — especially the United States.

President Carter has urged all nations, particularly the Soviet Union, to remain neutral in the Iran-Iraq war. This is a necessary first step in this delicate situation because the United States, no matter how weakened in stature, is still a forceful leader in international issues.

Carter and other officials must remember to keep statements addressing this issue clear and pointed. Any signs of indecision should be eliminated, which Carter failed to do in the Afghanistan invasion, and details of United States and U.N. Security Council reaction to Soviet intervention in the dispute should be plainly stated.

If careful judgement is demonstrated by all parties affected by the Iran-Iraq war, the most serious outcome of this affair could be the tragedy of human lives already lost in combat and a few barrels of oil destroyed.

All we can do is wait.
And hope.

There is nothing unique about the 'new' cold war ideology

In my introductory column, I mentioned parenthetically that, for male students of registration age, filing out a Selective Service card at the post office this summer had the unsettling effect of perceiving the miasma of student life.

Here, indeed was a political act. No one registering could deny that something "out there" had been translated into an occurrence of more immediate, if ambiguous, significance.

It is with this grounding in "real life," however tenuous it may appear, that I should like to begin a discussion of the "new" Cold War — its origins, its role in American political and economic life, and its implications for us as students, potential draftees and citizens of our country.

My discussion, for reasons of space, will be somewhat artificially divided into two articles. The first will pinpoint the historical origins of the Cold War.

The second, to appear two weeks from today, will consider the recent demise of détente, and attempt to relate the resurgence of Cold War ideology to the demands of the permanent war economy, the short-comings of American liberalism and the role of instrumentalism in American foreign and military strategy.

In order to understand the "new" Cold War, a brief history of the old one seems in order.

For centuries, neither the East nor the West has ever been willing to allow Eastern Europe strength, independence or neutrality. For Russia, it has long been the buffer against the West; for Germany and France, the gateway for an invasion of Russia.

Long before the advent of Communism, the West and Russia sought hegemony over this huge area stretching from the Baltic to the Balkans. In 1919, the same year American troops fought to overthrow the Bolshevik Revolution in a little-remembered invasion of Russia, the U.S. intervened for the first time in the East Europe question as well, taking a leading role in the breaking up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and establishing Western-oriented governments. This ultimately unsuccessful move was made, in part, to check the Soviet Union.

Prior the World War II, as the threat of Hitler's fascism grew in Europe, the Soviets looked to England and France for allies. Frustrated by their refusal, and ill-prepared for a singlehanded confrontation with Germany, Stalin signed a non-aggression pact with Hitler in 1939, which divided Eastern Europe between Germany and Russia.

Steve Hirsch

In 1941, Hitler invaded all of East Europe and drove deep into Soviet territory.

For Russia, the cost of defeating this third major invasion in 150 years proved enormous. Of the 22 million Allied lives lost in World War II, an estimated 20 million were lost by the Soviet Union.

The U.S., though a crucial contributor to the war effort, lost 300,000, and suffered no damage to its home territory; whereas over 1100 Russian villages were destroyed, plundered and sometimes razed to the ground.

But the Russians emerged from the war in possession of East Europe, a condition, as always, unacceptable to the West. The United States, which had stayed out of the war as long as possible, found itself, preferring to let Russian lives substitute for American ones, found itself at war's end in a position of unparalleled power, controlling or exerting strong influence in four of the five major industrial areas of the world — West Europe, Great Britain, Japan and the United States itself. Now, with its enormous capital resources and its monopoly on the nuclear bomb, it stood ready to dictate its terms to a war-ravaged Russia in dire need of economic reconstruction.

But Stalin maintained his firm hold on East Europe, insisting that the area was vital to Soviet security. Not even the omnipresent threat of the bomb swayed this resolve.

When Russia asked the U.S. for a billion-dollar reconstruction loan in 1945, the U.S. agreed on the condition that Russia allow American goods and investment into the Soviet sphere of influence. Russia refused and announced a new five-year plan to rebuild at its own expense — and by stripping East Europe of anything that wasn't nailed down.

Stalin's refusal to budge and his brutal suppression of democracy in occupied East Europe outraged Americans, who somehow fail to take note of the American hegemony over Central and South America, enforced in most cases through military dictatorships.

This concentration on Soviet authoritarianism to the complete exclusion of its American equivalent has been a central feature of the Cold War mentality ever since.

In addition to popular moral indignation over the suppression of democracy in East Europe, American concern over control of the area was shaped by three forces:

1. The need to expand foreign markets to ward off a widely-feared postwar depression. In Western Europe, this eventually took the form of economic hegemony under the Marshall Plan and military hegemony under the North American Treaty Organization (which has continued to provide American corporations with lucrative arms contracts).

2. Official anti-Communism, the perception of Stalin as another Hitler bent on world-wide domination, and an overemphasis on the importance of Communist internationalism as the ideological determinant of Soviet foreign policy. All these contributed to the conspiracy theory of foreign policy, whereby nationalist liberation movements all over the world were perceived as Soviet plots, and every Soviet move could be seen as part of a calculated strategy for global subversion.

3. Racism, the view of America as chief defender of Western civilization, against the barbarian hordes. (This same conviction, which facilitated the nuclear obliteration of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, also surfaced in the Korean and Vietnam Wars, and is an obvious factor in contemporary attitudes toward Iran.)

On March 12, 1947, President Harry Truman addressed a joint session of Congress to announce the unprecedented giving of peacetime military aid to Greece, whose corrupt, right-wing monarchy seemed on the verge of yielding to a Communist regime, and Turkey, presumably the "next to fall" after Greece.

Speaking in terms of a universal battle between freedom and totalitarianism, he enunciated the Truman Doctrine, the foundation of the Cold War policy of containment which was given a new lease on life in Jimmy Carter's latest State of the Union address.

The aid to Greece set a precedent of propping up any government which declared itself anti-Communist, no matter how corrupt or oppressive. The aid to Turkey resulted from the Under Secretary of State Dean Acheson's formulation of what was later to be called the "Domino Theory."

The whole containment doctrine sought to encircle the Soviet Union with countries friendly to the U.S., and was given intellectual legitimacy by an enormously influential article in Foreign Affairs, entitled "The Sources of Soviet Conduct." It was published under the pseudonym of "Mr. X," and its author, George Kennan, later expressed dismay at the militaristic interpretation of containment by Truman.

In 1946, the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia led to the Marshall plan of West European containment, and the creation of the CIA, the organization which, more than any other, has helped transform America into a clandestine, undemocratic and altogether paranoid national Security State.

In January, 1950, President Truman authorized the State and Defense Departments to draft an overarching foreign policy paper to deal with such developments as the Communist victory in China, the Soviet mastery of atomic energy and the new addition to the American arsenal — the hydrogen bomb.

This policy paper, National Security Document Sixty-Eight, was largely the product of two civilian militants, Dean Acheson and Paul Nitze. It called for a large scale military buildup of U.S. and allied military forces, and thus inaugurated the permanent war economy.

For reasons of space, I will not skip 30 years and six administrations into the future. A glance at the politics of 1980 shows that time and failure have done little to challenge the basic assumptions of Cold War policy.

Since 1917, the Kremlin's principle strategy has been to put its faith in revolution, national and social, joining hands with the revolutionaries of Indochina, Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia, Algeria, Cuba and other nations.

They have made mistakes, of course, like the recent one in Afghanistan, but in general have successfully enlarged their influence.

The U.S., to pick two major examples, bypassed opportunities to support Fidel Castro and Ho Chi Minh, and has consistently supported or created reactionary governments in countries like Iran, Chile, Indonesia, South Africa and others.

It has waged costly, needless wars of containment in Korea and Vietnam, and is gearing up for far more costly energy wars in the Mideast, with the aid of its new Rapid Deployment Force.

It has continued to drain its civilian economy with orgiastic defense spending, and has perennially legitimated that spending and its own imperialism with ritualistic references to the Soviet Union.

In my next column, I will discuss America's brief flirtation with détente — what it meant in the first place, why it is now over, and why its resumption holds the only promise for a sane foreign policy.

Steve Hirsch is a senior majoring in political science and English. His column will appear every other Thursday.

State

...A Wolfe Circuit Court jury recommended yesterday that Todd Ice, 16, be sentenced to death for the murder of a 7-year-old Powell County girl.

The jury had convicted him Saturday of the murder of Donna Knox, who was stabbed numerous times at her mother's house trailer in 1978.

Commonwealth's Attorney A. Dale Bryant said, "I thought the jury was justified in bringing back a recommendation of death."

Defense attorney Clyde Simmons had told the jury, "You should find him not guilty by reason of insanity because those are the facts, he is crazy."

The mother of the victim, Mrs. Sheila Knox, testified at the trial that she was bound and beaten by Ice the day her daughter was killed, although she did not actually witness the murder.

Ice sat pale and shaken as Circuit Judge Douglas Graham read the jury's recommendation and scheduled formal sentencing for Oct. 9.

Ice was returned to Lexington's Juvenile Detention Center pending the sentencing.

...The state Energy Regulatory Commission has granted the Louisville Gas & Electric Co. a rate hike which will generate additional annual revenues of some $47.7 million.

The commission's decision came yesterday on a March request by LG&E for a $55 million revenue increase.

As a result of the rate hike, an average LG&E customer using 600 kilowatt-hours of electricity monthly from October through May will see a 16 percent increase in his or her bill.

According to commission figures, the current bill for such an average customer is $24.92 per month. That will increase to $28.93.

Higher seasonal rates are charged for the June through September period, when consumption is greater. An average customer using 900 kwh per month during that period will see an 18.4 percent increase as his or her bill rises from $39.54 to $45.64, commission figures showed.

LG&E gas customers, using an average of 12,000 cubic feet per month, will pay about 2.4 percent, or 83 cents, more.

In asking for the current rate hike, the company cited "unprecedented" increases in the costs of construction, labor, equipment and financing.

Nation

...Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson suggested yesterday that President Carter and Ronald Reagan both favor policies that inadvertently heighten the risk of nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

While Anderson said his two principal rivals have formed an "alliance of folly" in their view on nuclear warfare, GOP running mate George Bush declared that Reagan "will be the peace president. And Vice President Walter F. Mondale insisted that Reagan has suggested "willy-nilly" military interventions overseas.

Anderson, who has sharpened his attacks on both his major rivals in recent days, told the Council on Foreign Relations in New York that both Reagan and Carter favor targeting nuclear weapons toward military command centers in the Soviet Union in addition to Russian missile sites.

"Obviously, neither Mr. Carter nor Mr. Reagan is advocating nuclear war," Anderson said. "But I consider both of them to be seriously misguided in their endorsement of the so-called nuclear warfighting thesis."

...A new test shows that between 5 percent and 10 percent of infertile adults are barren because chemicals in their bodies kill sperm, but they may be able to produce babies if they take commonly available medication.

Between 10 percent and 15 percent of Americans of childbearing age are unable to produce children. Researchers had suspected that a malfunction of the body's disease-fighting system sometimes plays a role in sterility, but they were unsure how common this is.

The new test, developed by doctors at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, shows that some men and women are infertile because they produce chemicals called antibodies that destroy sperm.

But with drugs called corticosteroids, these antibodies can be suppressed long enough for pregnancy to occur.

Researchers elsewhere have shown that steroids can be used to offset sperm antibodies.

By using the test, Haas said, physicians will be able to spot people whose infertility is caused by antibodies and then treat them with steroids.

...Spot market prices for gasoline and home heating oil jumped as much as three cents a gallon yesterday because of worries that fighting between Iran and Iraq might impede oil shipments from Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf nations.

The third straight day of gains left spot market gasoline and heating oil prices about eight cents a gallon higher than they were a week ago. Traders and other sources said, however, the increases reflected buying by speculators and were not likely to affect retail prices because oil inventories are high and oil demand is weak.

Trading was said to be nearly nonexistent, meanwhile, in the spot crude oil market, the scene of feverish bidding for supplies following the Iranian revolution in late 1978 and early 1979.

"Sellers of crude oil don't want to talk to anybody right now," because they fear the conflict at the Persian Gulf's northern end could force the closing of the Strait of Hormuz to the south, the gulf's principal exit, said Marshall Thomas, market editor of Petroleum Intelligence Weekly.

Forty percent of the nonCommunist world's oil supply — from Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Iran, Kuwait and others — flows through the 20-mile-wide strait, which an oil company source said remained open yesterday.

The Persian Gulf area supplies 10 percent of the oil used in the United States, more than 50 percent of Western Europe's oil and about 75 percent of Japan's oil needs.

The United States obtains no oil from Iran and little oil from Iraq.

They want to play

Participation is a possibility for the handicapped at UK

By ROBBIN MULLINS
Reporter

Except for being a spectator, a handicapped student can feel left out of the recreation program when he or she enrolls at a university.

Stan Labanowich likes to think that isn't the case at UK. According to the Director of Handicapped Sports, there are a wide range of sports in which the handicapped student can participate.

"We have a well-structured basketball program, and the potential to have a well-structured swimming program in the spring," says the Director of Handicapped Sports. "If enough interest is shown we could have other sports for the disabled such as archery and table tennis."

The wheelchair basketball team is an example known throughout the nation for its success. The Wheelcats consist of seven students and five others who are either UK graduates or residents of Lexington. The Wheelcats play a 16-game schedule and are a member of the Bluegrass Conference consisting of teams from Louisville, Paintsville, Charleston, Knoxville.

Judy Hale, a journalism junior from Manchester, has been involved with the team since 1977. She hopes to gain the experience necessary to start a women's wheelchair basketball program.

"I've been playing since then (77), but I've only really gotten into it and played with intense desire this year," says Hale. However, she admits that there are problems in starting a new program — one being the lack of funds, the other being a lack of a women's coach.

Hale is also the one and only member of the track and field team. The competition has individual classifications based on the person's disability. She participates in the javelin and shot-put events. Both she and Dr. Labanowich hope that by this spring, others will be willing to compete.

Swimming is also a part of the program. It is open to both men and women who are severely handicapped.

"It gives the student an opportunity for regular competition in the four major strokes (backstroke, breaststroke, freestyle and butterfly) that leads to the nationals," says Dr. Labanowich. Practice started this week at the Memorial Coliseum Pool.

One problem the program has faced has been getting the handicapped student to participate. Often, they are hesitant. "Freshmen are not usually very perceptive when they first get here. But then they see the Wheelcats and all the support for the handicapped student, they get interested in the program," said Hale.

Not surprisingly, money plays an important part in the handicapped sports program. Even though Dr. Labanowich says that the Dean of Sports and Campus Recreation along with the Handicapped Student Services lend their support, money is still a problem.

Handicapped sports was one of the first programs to be reduced in Governor John Y. Brown's efforts to cut spending. This came much to the dismay of those students who utilize the program.

"Our budget was cut from $5,000 to $2,000 or $3,000," says Hale. "We pay our own transportation and furnish our own uniforms. It's really a big disappointment. But things are getting better. We're getting a better turn out of students. We're getting a lot of help from the students, such as graduate assistant helping in the swimming."

"There has been tremendous support for the Wheelcats since they have gained national recognition, which is definitely a step up for us," says Hale.

Houston loses again

ATLANTA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Biff Pocoroba delivered a two-out, two-run sixth-inning double to snap a 2-2 tie and power the Atlanta Braves to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros last night.
Pocoroba's liner to left-center field scored pitcher Doyle Alexander and Terry Harper, who both walked against Houston starter Joaquin Andujar, -7, whose eight walks finally caught up with him.
Rick Camp, who recorded his 20th save, relieved Alexander, 14-9, with one out in the eighth.

Q. What is the record for most pass completions in a single game, both in college and in the pros?

A. Both records were set in back-to-back weekends this season. California's Rich Campbell completed an NCAA record 43 passes in 53 attempts in a 41-13 loss to Florida on September 13. And last Sunday former Alabama standout Richard Todd hit on an NFL-record 42 of 59 attempts for the New York Jets in their 37-27 loss to San Francisco.

Bengals must stop Oilers' runners Sunday

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — Houston Oiler coach Bum Phillips is glad he doesn't have to devise ways to stop his backfield tandem of Earl Campbell and Rob Carpenter.

Phillips, preparing his 2-1 Oilers for an AFC Central Division clash with Cincinnati this Sunday, said it won't make much difference to his offense whether the injured Campbell or backup Carpenter starts against the Bengals.

"Carpenter is a little more elusive. Campbell is a little stronger. But I don't think it makes a doggone bit of difference," Phillips said in a conference call Wednesday with sports writers.

Campbell, the workhorse fullback, aggravated a groin strain last week in a 21-16 victory over Baltimore. Carpenter, a fifth-year back from Miami (Ohio) University, took over and ground out 114 yards in 24 carries, second-highest of his career.

Phillips expects Campbell to start Sunday, although he couldn't work out Wednesday.

Phillips didn't savor the chance to play coach Forrest Gregg's 1-2 Bengals on the heels of their 30-28 upset of the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers last Sunday.

"The lessons that Forrest has been preaching they can now believe in," Phillips said. "Any time you beat a team like Pittsburgh, it does wonders for you."

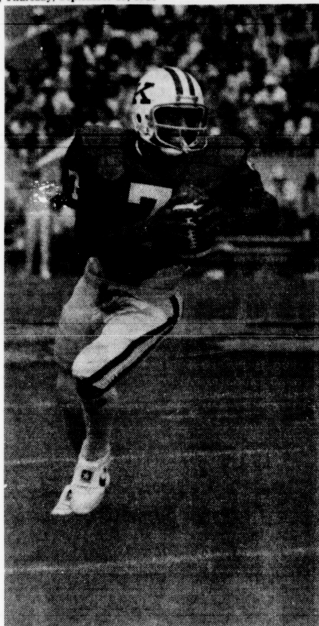

The Bengals were the doorman of the rugged AFC Central Division the last two years, finishing 4-12 while Pittsburgh, Houston and Cleveland clawed each other for playoff spots. But Phillips thinks the Bengals are better than their recent records.

"There's not as much difference as people want to believe in the division," he said.

The Bengals cashed in on six Pittsburgh turnovers for a come-from-behind victory spearheaded by back-up quarterback Jack Thompson. The second-year quarterback took over when Ken Anderson reinjured a stretched ligament in his left knee.

Oiler quarterback Ken Stabler, acquired from Oakland for Dan Pastorini, has completed 84 percent of his passes the last two games as Houston controlled the ball on both Cleveland and Baltimore. Phillips attributed that less to Stabler's presence than an overall improvement in the offense.

"I really don't think our offense has changed that much (with Stabler)," Phillips said. "We've just got a better team than we had."

UK's Terry Henry is doing double duty for the Wildcats these days. Henry is trying running back and will also continue as backup quarterback.

Moved to running back

Henry seeing double duty for Cats

(AP) — Kentucky sophomore Terry Henry, having lost the No. 1 quarterback job to strongarmed Randy Jenkins, is understudying this week at running back. Kentucky coaches called the switch a stop-gap measure prompted by attrition to the Wildcat backfield.

"We had to move Terry," said head Coach Fran Curci. "He'll still play quarterback, but we need him at running back while we're in this dilemma."

Henry declined to talk to reporters about the move, but Curci said, "Terry's a champ. He understood. He just wants to play."

"He took it, as always, as a team player," added backfield coach Charlie McCullers. "He's a class person. If you asked him to play tackle, he would."

It was speculated the Knoxville, Tenn., product would be switched to another position last year, but he emerged as the top quarterback and threw for five touchdowns.

Henry started at quarterback in the first two games this year and was the team's top rusher, but completed just 16 percent of his passes.

He did not play in last week's 36-30 loss to Indiana, during which freshman Jenkins hit 16 of 28 passes for 270 yards and four touchdowns.

Meanwhile, the Wildcats lost their last regular from the 1979 backfield when running back Chris Jones, the Southeastern Conference's seventh-leading rusher last year, suffered torn knee ligaments. He underwent surgery the following day and will be out the rest of the season.

Fullback Shawn Donigan, the SEC's No. 3 rusher in 1979, was lost before the season because of shoulder surgery and Thomas "Pete" Venable, Kentucky's top reserve back last year as a freshman, was suspended.

That left Curci with just five running backs, prompting Henry's switch. "Terry is so tough, such a dedicated guy," Curci said. "When he's in there (at quarterback), he makes things happen. But when people see him in there, they tighten up on us. Randy gives our offense much more flexibility. Randy is the best passer we've had."

Italian villagers live in fear during 14-year war

By CLARA HEMPHILL, Associated Press Writer

CIMINA, Italy — A 14-year feud in this tiny southern Italian town has claimed 16 lives — nearly one-fifth the male population — and neither the townspeople nor the police can stop the bloodshed.

Police arrest murder suspects in vain. Villagers refuse to testify, partly out of fear they will be the next victims, partly out of distrust for a government which they say has abandoned and forgotten them.

"They have their own codes, their own laws which have nothing to do with normal laws," said frustrated Police Chief Milazzo Antonini. The deaths are blamed on the "Ndrangheta," the Calabrese Mafia. The Ndrangheta is powerful all over Calabria — police report 900 murders in the region last year — but in Cimina it grips the town. Everyone has been forced to side with one of two factions to survive.

The two clans, the Romanos and Barillaris on one side and the Polifrosos and Francos on the other, want to control the markets, the patronage jobs, the protection money paid by anyone who wants to do business in town — in short, almost every aspect of town life.

The smallest transaction — even selling a chicken at market — is controlled by the Ndrangheta. "If you want to come to this town and sell two chickens for 2,000 lire (about $240) you have to give half of it to the Ndrangheta," Antonini said.

"The people accept it, not because they like it but because they are afraid," he said.

Cimina is hidden in the Calabrian hills in the tip of the Italian boot. Most who lived here 15 years ago have left, some to find work in the North, some to escape the feud, or "faida."

The population has dropped from 1,001 in 1965 to about 400 in 1980.

Half the houses are abandoned. The streets are empty and silent. No one ventures out. There are almost no cars and the only sound at night is the ringing of church bells.

The graveyard is crowded with the faida's victims, all men, most in their 20s and 30s. Graves are stacked three-deep, with the photos of the men who have died framed and attached to the granite markers.

Antonietta, a 28-year-old widow, lives with her two daughters and her parents. Her husband was killed in March as he played cards in the town's only tavern. The bartender was blinded in one eye; a young boy playing with them was paralyzed in the cross fire.

Antonietta agreed to be interviewed only if her real name and her husband's name were not used. She is dressed in traditional mourning, a black dress, black stockings and a black scarf covering her hair. She smiles as she talks, but lines in her still-young face betray her pain.

"We don't know why he was killed," she said. "He started bringing home bad company. I said he careful but he said not to worry, to be calm."

She twists her gold wedding ring around her finger. "What can you do? It is useless to become angry after someone is lost," she said.

Police believe her husband was killed because he tried to persuade his friends to release a pharmacist they had kidnapped from a nearby town. The victim had nothing to do with the kidnapping; he was killed because he opposed it.

The spiral of violence began in June 1966.

Counseling & Testing Center strives to meet student needs

By JIM CAGEY
Staff Writer

The University Counseling and Testing Center, 301 Mathews Building, offers a wide variety of "academic, vocational, and personal services for students and University employees," according to Louise Dutt, counseling psychologist and a workshop director at the center.

The center is organized under the office of Student Affairs and tries to "address a variety of student needs," Dutt said.

"The center is doing things differently this year," said Peg Payne, study skills director. "Our program is now organized in cycles through the semester, to help students with problems such as reading comprehension, test-taking strategies, note-taking and managing time."

The sessions consist of two 50-minute meetings in various campus locations, Payne said.

"The average size of a study skills group is 20 to 25 people, and we try in those two meetings to provide as many suggestions and strategies as possible to deal with the problem being discussed," she said.

The response has been enormous this year, Payne said. "Most of the people that attend the study skill sessions are highly motivated students, and teachers, who see in themselves a need to improve some part of their scholastic routine."

Sharon Brennan, a workshop director at the center, will be leading a "power reading" group beginning Wednesday, which will last several weeks and will emphasize developing comprehension skill.

Also, for the first time a developmental reading group is being offered. There is a $3 fee to participate in any part of the program, or $5 for a student to participate in the entire program.

"This fee covers our printing costs for materials used in the different workshops," Dutt said.

"There are several activities free to students, including our day-long Study Skills Derby. Here, we enlist faculty help in presenting programs on study skills in different types of subjects, student-faculty relationships and attitudes," Dutt said.

Another free activity will be the meetings of Procrastinators Anonymous, which will run on Monday at ternoons Sept. 29 through Nov. 17, Payne said.

All the workshops, according to Dutt, emphasize student attitude. In the test-taking workshop a single three-hour session is run that concentrates on stress reduction exercises, Dutt said.

"Students learn muscle-relaxation techniques; the leader reminds them in a slow, soothing manner that they all generally know what is necessary to do well in a test, but that simple nervous tension can block the memory."

Dutt also runs a "math-anxiety" workshop, using a similar approach.

The center's staff of psychologists and graduate students also offers vocational and personal counseling.

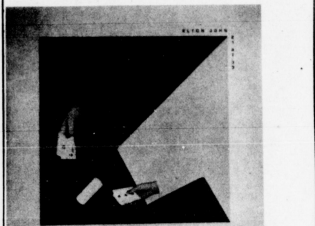

"Often, personal problems are related to unclear future goals," Dutt said. "Many clients come to find out about their own interests and aptitudes."

The Counseling and Testing Center has also been working with Continuing Education for Women on a workshop for women changing careers or returning to school. The workshop is open to UK and community people, and includes some vocational testing.

Iraqi, Iranian infantries trade blows in 'holy war'

over three islands over the southern end of the Persian Gulf.

The three islands, which control the Strait of Hormuz entranceway to the Gulf, were seized by Iran from the United Arab Emirates in 1971. Virtually all the battle reports came from the official news media of the two sides. No Western reporters were at the front.

A leader of the paramilitary reserves in Baghdad exhorted all Iraqis to do their part in the "jihad" — or holy war — against the Iranians.

In Iran, Moslem clergymen declared their readiness also to fight a "jihad," and arrangements were being made to send clergymen to the front, the state-run Iranian radio said.

In Baghdad Radio reports, the Iraq military command claimed its greatest successes on the ground in the central border area some 100 miles east of Baghdad and at the northern end of the 300-mile-long front.

It said armor-led troops completed the capture of the major border town of Qasr-e-Shirin and chased fleeing Iranian troops down the Tehran road to the town of Sar-e-Pol-e-Zahab, some 20 miles inside the border. The foothills area is 350 miles southwest of Tehran, across the 12,000-foot-high Zagros Mountains.

The Iranians acknowledged its troops had retreated in the Mehran area. Tehran Radio said the Iraqis had seized nearby Salehabad, and its defenders had withdrawn to nearby hills. The Iranian report said there were "many" civilian casualties in Qasr-e-Shirin and Mehran.

The Iraqis claimed to have captured hundreds of Iranian prisoners.

In Iran's oil-rich southwest corner, just across the Shatt al-Arab from Iraq, Iranian defenders of Abadan and the major port city of Khorramshahr apparently continued to hold out against the invaders, who reported laying siege to the two centers Tuesday.

One indication of heavy casualties in the area was appeals by the local Abadan radio for blood donors, for all medical personnel to report to duty, and for automobile owners to volunteer to deliver wounded to hospitals.
