

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE.

He was a man; take him for all in all, I shall not look upon his like again.

The news of the death of John C. Breckinridge has at the time we write reached the uttermost parts of the earth. The press has been filled with tributes to his genius. Friend and foe have united to do him honor. No tongue has spoken in slander against him. The quiet dignity of his life commanded universal respect. It is not our purpose to pronounce a eulogy to his memory. No words of ours can swell the measure of his fame. In common with all Kentuckians we lament the untimely death of the state's greatest son, and bring to his grave the last tribute of friendship—our tears.

OBITUARY.

Died—Sept. 28th, at two o'clock, P. M., at the residence of Col. J. J. Robinson, in this county, Mrs. Katie Hathaway, wife of Samuel F. Embry.

The deceased was born in Montgomery county, Sept. 20, 1849, and only a few brief months since she came into our midst a happy bride. Truly, sorrow follows in the foot-steps of joy, and just when life seemed brightest her pure young spirit has been called to its Heavenly rest.

She leaves many friends to mourn her loss, but on him who has thus early been bereft of a loved wife falls the heaviest sorrow. May "He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" give him strength to bear this the greatest of all sorrows.

A Tribute of Respect.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Exchange Bank of Kentucky, held at their office on Tuesday, August 28, 1877, the following resolutions were introduced and adopted:

Resolved, That in the death of David B. Jones, President of the Exchange Bank of Kentucky, the bank has lost a faithful, diligent and upright officer; the Directors a laborious co-worker, a prudent adviser and a steadfast friend; his family an affectionate father and brother; the community a useful and careful man of business; society an ornament, and the State an honored citizen. It will be long before we shall look upon his like again. The elements were so mixed up in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, "This was a man." His high moral worth and the memory of his many virtues will never cease to be cherished with tender remembrance by all who knew him.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the bank, printed in the Mt. Sterling DEMOCRAT, and that a copy thereof be furnished by the Cashier to the family of the deceased.
