*To His Excellency, James B. McCreary,
Governor of Kentucky, Frankfort.*

Sir:

I have the honor to submit the following report from this office, in conformity with a resolution of the General Assembly, approved March 27, 1902, which reads as follows:

"That the Adjutant General of the State of Kentucky is hereby directed to gather all the data obtainable concerning the different organizations who enlisted or served in the army of the Confederate States in the War of the Rebellion, compiling the same by regiment, battery, troops and company in the usual form of reports of the Adjutant General made heretofore in this Commonwealth in regard to other similar organizations, and adding thereto such other information as he may deem best, and he will enter same upon a book to be kept in his office, as a public record, giving regiments, etc., in their consecutive number, and he will cause same to be printed in a book to be well bound in cloth and furnish one copy to each County Clerk of this Commonwealth and one copy to each Adjutant General of the several Commonwealths of the United States, preserve a reasonable number for his office and the State Library and cause a suitable number to be printed and placed with the State Librarian for sale at a price to be agreed upon by and between the said Adjutant General and Librarian."

It is greatly to be regretted that the historical records of the brave men who followed the Confederate flag and gave their lives to the cause they loved, are so incomplete, owing to the fact that the Commanding Officers of Regiments and Companies have neglected to make proper reports, etc. There must be many hundreds of names not found on the returns, so carelessly were the records kept, or were lost by capture. Frequently companies were attached to several regiments under different company letters, and regiments were also numbered variously.

Whilst the greatest care has been given this work, I feel that it is far from being perfect, and only those who fought to the end and know the irregularities of the life of a Confederate Soldier can appreciate and understand the difficulties of this work.

Respectfully,

J. Tandy Ellis,

The Adjutant General.

Roll dated Camp Bartow, near Manassas Junction, Va., August 31, 1861—"Left Richmond, Va., on 8th of August, 1861, for Manassas and met with a severe smashup on the Central Railroad, but none of my men seriously injured. We lost by the accident several guns, knapsacks, etc., which have in due time been replaced and the company is improving rapidly in efficiency and discipline."

Roll dated Camp near Centreville, Virginia, September 1, 1861—"October 20th, 1861, marched as an advance guard to Chantilly House on Little River Turnpike, about 3 miles from Centreville; October 23d returned to camp; November 8th, marched as an advance guard to outpost No. 7; Returned to camp November 28th; December 8th, five companies of the regiment detailed as an advance guard to outpost No. 8 from Centreville; returned to camp December 11th; December 20th marched to General J. E. B. Stuart's Headquarters, joined three other regiments and proceeded as a guard to foraging wagons. When near Dranesville encountered the enemy about 10,000 strong, battle ensued which lasted two and one-half hours, when our forces fell back in good order after slaying many of the enemy, loss being very small (Company "G" losing no men). Our troops behaved well during the fight, exhibited great coolness; returned to camp the same night very much worn and fatigued from a hard day's travel."

posed to a heavy fire to which we cheerfully responded. Considering the position we occupied and the great strength of the Yankee forces, the men fought well. William Nelson, private, was wounded and is missing. Patrick Burham was slightly wounded. Many of the men lost their blankets and overcoats in retiring. Were engaged 3 hours, and marched 30 miles during the day."—Signed by William E. Jones, 1st Lieutenant.

FIRST REGIMENT KENTUCKY INFANTRY.

The First Regiment Kentucky Infantry was among the very first organizations from Kentucky to join the cause of the seceding Southern States. The regiment was made up from the merger of the 1st Battalion of Kentucky Infantry commanded by Lieut. Col. Blanton Duncan, and a battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. Thomas H. Taylor, and enlisted for twelve months' service. Companies "A", "B", "C", "D", and "H", were organized at Louisville, Ky.; Company "E" at the rendezvous at Nashville, Tennessee, by enlistments from Southwestern Kentucky and the towns of Hickman and Clinton. Company "F" from Murray, Ky., and Company "G" from Owensboro, Ky.; Company "I" from New Orleans, La., and Company "K" from Keysburg, Ky. The companies rendezvoused at Nashville, Tennessee, and were sent at once to Lynchburg, Va., and thence to Harper's Ferry, Va., Maryland Heights and Winchester, Va., becoming an active component part of the Army of the Potomac (The Confederate Army under General P. G. T. Beauregard at that time being designated as the "Army of the Potomac"; sub tered thirteen regiments of the enemy, with heavy artillery, under General McCall. We sustained a fierce and galling fire for more than two hours, but finally drove the Pennsylvanians from their position. Two of the company were wounded, viz.: Joshua B. West, in left breast and thigh, severely, and R. W. Leonard, by shell, in left side. Returned to camp same night, having fought the enemy and marched 36 miles in 20 hours. Received orders on Christmas day to go into winter quarters at junction of Rocky and Cub Runs.

sequently the Federal Army became designated as the "Army of the Potomac" and the Confederate Army as the "Army of Northern Virginia).

The companies of the regiment were engaged in outpost duty along the northern border of Virginia and almost daily had skirmishes with the enemy, the Confederate lines being drawn within a short distance from the Potomac River and Washington, D. C. On December 20, 1861, while on a foraging expedition as a part of General J. E. B. Stuart's command, this regiment was heavily engaged at Dranesville, Va., meeting the enemy in large force and after an engagement of nearly three hours was forced to retire in front of heavy odds. The regiment was in winter quarters near Centreville, Va. and in early spring was withdrawn to Orange C. H., Va., and remained there several weeks. The term of enlistment having expired, a re-organization of the command and re-election of officers took place April 30, 1862. Early in May, 1862, the regiment was ordered to Richmond, Va., and on 13th and 14th of May, 1862, was mustered out of service by order of the Secretary of War.

(Orphan) Brigade.

REMARKS.

1. Was soon after promoted to Brigadier General and assigned to duty elsewhere. In the Spring of 1862 he commanded First Brigade of Breckinridge's Division at Corinth, Mississippi for a short time; but was transferred to the Trans-Mississippi Department some time during the Summer and continued to serve there during the war.
2. See Roster of General Officers.
3. Was appointed Lieutenant Colonel, July 17, 1861, and promoted to Colonel, December 13, 1862. He was assigned to temporary duty with the Ninth Regiment in the Autumn of 1861 and fought with it at Shiloh, April 6 and 7, 1862. He rejoined his own regiment after it was exchanged and afterward resigned, October 19, 1863.
4. Was Captain of Company "C"; shortly after the battle of Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863, he was promoted to Major and on November 5, 1863, promoted to Lieutenant Colonel; he was painfully wounded at Resaca, Georgia on May 14, 1864, and received a slight wound at Dallas, Georgia, on May 28, 1864. On the fall of Colonel Moss at Jonesboro, Georgia, August 31, 1864, he was promoted to Colonel and commanded the Second Regiment until the close of the war.
5. Was Captain of Company "A"; on December 13, 1862 was promoted to Major and fought in that capacity at Stone River, Jackson and Chickamauga. After the fall of Lieut. Colonel Hewitt, September 20, 1863, he was promoted to Lieut. Colonelcy, and a little later on the resignation of Colonel Johnson, to Colonel, October 19, 1863. He commanded the regiment in every subsequent battle up to August 31, 1864, when endeavoring to press forward upon the enemy's works, under their withering fire, he had an arm shattered and having been previously greatly debilitated by ill health, he directly became so weakened from loss of blood and excruciating pain that he could not drag himself away, nor could the infirm detail reach him without the almost certain loss of many lives; so he fell into the hands of the enemy and was carried to Marietta, Ga., where he suffered amputation and shortly afterwards died.
6. Was a Captain in a New York regiment when the Civil War commenced. He resigned his commission, however, with that regiment and on July 17, 1861, was elected a Major of Second Kentucky Infantry. He was promoted to the Lieutenant Colonelcy on December 13, 1862, and commanded the regiment at Stone River, Jackson and Chickamauga; at Stone River he was wounded, though not seriously; he fell at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863. The following mention is from the report of that battle: "Lieut. Colonel James W. Hewitt in advance of his regiment and showing a devotion and daring entitled to the highest commendation, was killed."
7. He recruited Company "F" Second Regiment Infantry and was its first Captain; was promoted to Major after the battle of Chickamauga, September 20, 1863 and promoted to Lieutenant Colonel after the battle of Jonesboro, Georgia, August 31, 1864. The following is said of him in Green's Historic Families of Kentucky: "In prison, in camp, on the march, in the hottest fights of the bloody war; in victory and defeat, always uncomplaining, calm, energetic and daring, he exhibited the best qualities of a soldier."
8. Was appointed Captain and Assistant Quartermaster July, 1861, and served some time with this regiment, but was promoted to Major and Assistant Quartermaster in the Autumn and assigned to duty elsewhere.
9. Promoted from Company "H."
10. Appointed Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence, July, 1861; served a short time with this regiment, after which he was assigned to the Staff of General S. B. Buckner and promoted to the rank of Major.
11. Served with the regiment until July 17, 1863, when he was assigned to duty as Chief Commissary of the Brigade; served in this capacity until after the death of General Ben Hardin Helm, when he entered upon post duty in Southwest Georgia. In the Winter of 1863-64 was made Chief Commissary on the Staff of General Lewis; was in the battle of Chickamauga as Volunteer Aide to General Ben Hardin Helm.
12. Resigned October 17, 1862 to command Graves' Battery of Artillery; was promoted to Major and Chief of Artillery, General John C. Breckinridge's Division; captured at Fort Donelson; wounded at Murfreesboro; killed at Chickamauga, September 20, 1863; honorable mention in general orders.
13. When Graves was transferred to the Artillery, he was succeeded by Lieut. Thomas E. Stake, of Company "B" as Acting Adjutant and on promotion of General Hanson, Lieut. Hake was appointed on his staff and Thomas E. Moss was commissioned as First Lieutenant and Adjutant, serving in that capacity to the end of the war.
14. Dr. Wible was a native of Nelson County, Ky., and was the first Surgeon of this regiment, joining the command at the beginning of the war. After serving with it for some time, he was ordered to assume charge of the Hess Hospital at Bowling Green, Ky., and in a short time was made Medical Director for the Central Army of Kentucky, in which capacity he acted some time; was again in charge of the wounded of the Second Regiment; was Post Surgeon at Huntsville, Alabama; assisted at battle of Shiloh; was Medical Inspector of the army and in early Winter of 1864, he relieved Surgeon Nichol on duty at Cuthbert, Georgia, where he remained until close of the war.
15. On the return of the Second Regiment from prison, Sept., 1862, he was appointed Surgeon, made vacant by the transfer of Dr. Steele.
16. Resigned in 1861.
17. Served with the Second Regiment until the trip to Rochester, when he was taken ill and after recovery was assigned to duty elsewhere.
18. Was on duty at Shiloh. While engaged in the rear of the line he learned that there was need of surgical care on the ground where his Battery (Byrne's) was in action, and thither he went under heavy fire and composedly took up the work. Shortly after this battle he was transferred to the Third Kentucky Infantry; subsequently to Cobb's Battery; next (October 1862) he was assigned to Second Kentucky and on 27th of November, 1862 was commissioned Assistant Surgeon.
19. Was on duty as Assistant Surgeon during last year of the war.
20. Resigned Sept. 20, 1862. (See Company "E," this regiment.)
21. Having joined the army in this capacity, he was found more than once pressing forward in the heat of battle sharing the hot exposure for the sake of the soldiers who fell. His friends remonstrated with him, but his response was: "Those who need my services first and most are those who fall first in the battles of my country. There are messages to mothers on the dying soldiers lips that would never be conveyed were I to wait until the shock was over." Finally his health became so bad he was forced to resign and quit the field.

INFANTRY, CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY.

the actions at Resaca, Dallas, Kennesaw Mountain, Stony Creek, Intrenchment Creek, Peach Tree Creek and Jonesboro. The Regiment was mounted at Barnesville, Ga., and was constantly engaged with the rear guard of Gen. W. T. Sherman's Army "during his march to the sea." Was thereafter continuously marching and engaging the enemy in Georgia and South Carolina until the closing days of the war, and was finally surrendered at Washington, Ga., on the 6th of May, 1865. A splendid record of devotion to duty and conspicuous gallantry on many bloody fields.

NOTE.—This company served as Company "F", 22d Tennessee Infantry, but being composed of Kentuckians, was by S. O. 41, "Army of the Mississippi", May 15, 1862, transferred to the 3d Kentucky Infantry as Company "M".

Roll from September 30, 1862 to January 1, 1863—The company left camp near the mouth of Tippoh Creek, Dec. 1, 1862, and after a five days march, reached this station, Grenada, Mississippi, a distance of sixty miles.

Roll from June 30, 1863 to August 31, 1863—Marched from Camp near Canton, Mississippi to Big Creek, a distance of twenty miles, from Big Creek to Jackson, where was engaged and present during the siege of Jackson; marched on retreat from Jackson to Newton Station, Mississippi, distance about sixty miles; from Newton by rail to Morton, Mississippi.

THE THIRD REGIMENT INFANTRY, KENTUCKY

(SERVED AS MOUNTED INFANTRY)

The Third Kentucky was organized at Camp Boone, Montgomery County, Tennessee, about the 20th of July, 1861, with the following officers: Lloyd Tilghman, Colonel; Albert P. Thompson, Lieutenant Colonel; Ben Anderson, Major; Captain Alfred Boyd, Assistant Quartermaster; Captain J. S. Byers, Assistant Commissary; Doctor J. W. Thompson, Surgeon; Doctor J. B. Sanders, Assistant Surgeon. Colonel Tilghman was promoted to Brigadier General shortly after the organization and Thompson became Colonel and Anderson Lieutenant-Colonel; Captain Johnson became Major. They had been partially supplied with Belgian rifles, but owing to the scarcity of any kind of arms, numbers of them had to use the old flint-lock musket; they retained these arms up to and including the battle of Shiloh. The cartridge consisted of powder, one large ball about an ounce in weight, and three buck-shot; this proved to be a very efficient ammunition, as was demonstrated at Shiloh.

The Third was organized into a brigade with the Second, Fourth and Ninth Kentucky, and at first was under the immediate command of General S. B. Buckner.

This regiment was organized as an infantry regiment July 5th, 1861, at Camp Boone, Tenn., in which branch of the service it remained until about the 10th of March, 1864, when it was mounted by order of the Secretary of War.

VOLUNTEERS, CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY.

(AFTER MARCH 10, 1864.)

After the regiment left Bowling Green, it was with that part of the brigade which was not at Fort Donelson, but fought with General Breckinridge at Shiloh where it suffered severely, losing one hundred and seventy-four of its number, including all the regimental officers who were engaged in the battle. The Third was with the army at Corinth, then moved to Coffeeville; was at Vicksburg during the naval bombardment, participating in the battle of Baton Rouge, returning to Vicksburg, fought at Chickasaw Bayou; served in Buford's Brigade, Loring's division during Grant's campaign in May, 1863, taking part in the battles of Champion's Hill, Baker's Creek, and being there cut off from Pemberton's command, participated in General J. E. Johnston's operations, for the relief of Vicksburg. The brigade was soon mounted and assigned to duty under Forrest, with whom the Third Regiment was actively engaged during the remainder of the war, participating in the attack on Paducah, the capture of Fort Pillow, the victory at Brice's Cross Roads and the great capture of Federal stores at Johnsonville, as well as many other famous deeds and the battles of Hood's Nashville campaign.

In the earlier dates of promotions, elections, discharges, etc., of officers, there may be many inaccuracies, as all the records of the regiment and companies were lost at Baker's Creek, Miss., May 16, 1863.

ROLL OF COMPANY B, FOURTH REGIMENT INFANTRY,

The following extract from E. Porter Thompson's History of the Orphan Brigade, is an explanatory and proper prefix to the roll of Company B:

COMPANY "B", FOURTH REGIMENT.

It will be seen that most of this company were engaged at Donelson, which is accounted for by the fact that in December, 1861, they were detached from the regiment to serve in the field battery of Capt. Graves. Only a few escaped capture at that place, and as there was no exchange until the following September, none of them were engaged at Shiloh, Vicksburg, and Baton Rouge, except those few. Some of them escaped from prison, and attached themselves to cavalry commands, with which they afterwards served. After the exchange, the company remained in charge of Capt. Graves, until the arrival at Murfreesboro, when it was returned to the regiment, and served with it during the remainder of the war. At Jackson, these men aided in serving the guns of a battery; and at Chickamauga, during the second day's engagement, they turned a captured battery of the enemy upon them, which contributed materially to Confederate success on that part of the line.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT TO ROSTER OF FOURTH KENTUCKY

The regiment was organized on the 13th of September, 1861, at Camp Burnett, Montgomery County, Tennessee; remained in Camp of Instruction until the latter part of September, 1861, when it was ordered to Nashville for the purpose of being properly equipped; was ordered then to Bowling Green, Kentucky, to join the force of General Buckner at that place. Detachments from several commands then organizing at Camp Boone and Camp Burnett were ordered to proceed to Rochester and Hopkinsville, Kentucky, to disperse a force of the enemy thought to be organizing at that place; finding no enemy at either place, returned to Bowling Green. The Regiment remained in the vicinity of Bowling Green until the 12th of February, 1862, when it commenced the march to Burnsville, Mississippi, via Decatur, Alabama; remained at Burnsville, Mississippi, until the 3d of April, 1862, when it was ordered to march in the direction of the enemy's camp on the Tennessee River; participated in the Battle of Shiloh, and with the remainder of the Brigade, covered the retreat from that place to Corinth, Mississippi. Loss in the battle of Shiloh, killed and wounded, 213. The Regiment remained in the vicinity of Corinth until June, 1862, when it was ordered to Tupelo, Mississippi, and thence to Vicksburg, Mississippi. Remained at Vicksburg until the day of July, 1862, when it was ordered to Baton Rouge, Louisiana; arrived in the rear of Baton Rouge on the night of the 4th of August, 1862; participating in the engagement at that place on the 5th of August, with the loss of forty-eight (48), killed and wounded. Moved from that place to Port Hudson, Louisiana, where the Regiment remained a short time and was then ordered to join the forces of General Bragg in Kentucky; moved in that direction to within forty (40) miles of Cumberland Gap; met the retreating army of General Bragg and moved back to Knoxville, Tennessee.

In the latter part of October, 1862, the Regiment moved to Murfreesboro, Tennessee; participated in the engagement at that place; killed and wounded at that battle, seventy-two (72). Assisted in bringing up the rear from that place to Tullahoma, Tennessee; moved thence to Manchester and then to Beech Grove, Tennessee. On the 24th day of May, 1863, the Regiment was ordered to Jackson, Mississippi; remained there until the 1st of July, when ordered to move in the direction of Vicksburg; advanced as far as Midway on the Vicksburg and Jackson Railroad; then, ordered to return to Jackson, and assigned to position in the intrenchments around Jackson, but was not engaged in the battle. With the remainder of the Brigade, covered the retreat of the army from that place to Morton, Mississippi. Remained at the last named place one month and then moved by rail to Chattanooga, Tennessee. Marched to Lafayette, Georgia, and then to Chickamauga River; was engaged in the Battle of Chickamauga—Loss, killed and wounded, sixty (60). Marched to Tyner's Station and remained in camp until the 24th of November, 1863. The Regiment moved to Missionary Ridge and was but partly engaged. Covered the retreat from that place to Ringgold, Georgia; moved on to Dalton, Georgia. Moved to the front once to meet the enemy, taking position on Rocky Face Ridge in the front of Dalton, Georgia, losing one man killed; removed back to Dalton. Left Dalton, Georgia, May 7th, 1864, covering the retreat of General Jos. E. Johnston from Dalton to Atlanta. Was continuously engaged with the enemy until September 3d. This was what is known as the one hundred days' battle of the "Orphan Brigade", the main battles being Resaca, Adairville, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Intrenchment Creek, Utoy Creek and Jonesboro. This regiment was mounted September 19th, 1864, at Barnsville, Georgia, and was engaged in the rear of General Sherman, until his army reached Savannah, Georgia. This regiment fired the last shot for the Confederacy, east of the Mississippi River. On the 29th day of April, 1865, five companies of this regiment, under command of Captain John H. Weller, then Acting Lieutenant-Colonel, were engaged with the rear guard of Potter's Division, when a courier brought them the news that General Joseph E. Johnston had surrendered them on April 26th. The regiment then proceeded to Washington, Georgia, where they were paroled May 6th, 1865.

EXTRACT FROM MEMORANDRUM OF COLONEL HIRAM HAWKINS, COLONEL FIFTH

The ten companies first named, commencing with "A" were organized in 1861 and mustered into Provisional Army Confederate States for twelve months, though parts of several were enlisted for three years, or the war, to-wit:

In Co. "A," 21st October, 1861, sixty men;

In Co. "C," 19th of October, 1861, thirty-five men;

Same day, a good portion of Company "D."

At organization, John S. Williams was appointed Colonel, and on recommendation of the Captains of Companies and Colonel Williams, A. J. May and Hiram Hawkins, Captains of Companies "A" and "C," respectively, were assigned to duty as Lieutenant-Colonel and Major of the Regiment on the 17th of November, 1861.

The regiment refused to reorganize under the act which took effect on the 16th of April, 1862, to reorganize the army, etc.—with the exception of Co. "K," which company reorganized.

On the retreat from Kentucky of the Confederate forces, October 20th, 1862, at Hazel Green, Kentucky, General Marshall mustered out all the 12 months' men in Companies "A," "B," "C," "D," "E," "G" and "I" and relieved all the officers, except REGIMENT INFANTRY, KENTUCKY VOLUNTEERS, CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY.

Captain Mynheir and Lieutenant Nickell of Co. "A"; Lieutenant Chenoweth Co. "B"; Captain Diamond and Lieutenant Swimm (Acting Adjutant) of Co. "C"; Captain Casey, Co. "D"; Lieutenant Swango, Co. "I". On the 22d of October, 1862, he mustered out Co. "H" and relieved officers.

Captain Bliven's Company "K", when the command was encamped at Salyersville, Kentucky, October, 1862, went home, some with and some without permission. The command continued to retreat and they were left in the enemies' lines and have not rejoined their command.

"Doubtless, quite a number deserted, but allowance should be made, as many left the command without leave, to join mounted commands. The entire regiment of one thousand and twenty-seven men for duty in Kentucky, in September, 1862, proposed to enlist for the war, if permitted to furnish their own horses and serve as a mounted regiment. This request was refused by our commanding General Marshall.

HIRAM HAWKINS,

Colonel, 5th Regiment Infantry, Ky. Volunteers, C. S. A.

FIFTH KENTUCKY INFANTRY,

In preparing a brief history of the Fifth Kentucky Infantry Regiment, C. S. A., the author deems it proper to refer to some historical facts and incidents directly connected with, and leading up to, the organization of the regiment.

At the beginning of the war between the States the people of Kentucky, though divided into two great parties, the leaders, many of them, having widely different views, but the masses of her people were practically one in sentiment opposed to the war, and especially to any coercive measures by the Federal Government, as abundantly shown by the action of both these great parties in state conventions assembled in Louisville in 1861. The Union party on the anniversary of Jackson's great victory in New Orleans, January 8th, adopted resolutions in strong terms for state neutrality and opposed to coercion. The States Rights Party assembled on the anniversary of Washington's birthday, February 22d, and adopted practically the same policy for State neutrality, but utterly opposed to the indicated policy of coercion by the Federal Government. These public declarations and the refusal of the governor to furnish troops at the call of Secretary Cameron, and the declaration of the Legislature in April, 1861, "Kentucky will not sever her connection with the General Government, and not take up arms for either belligerent party, but will arm herself for the preservation of peace within her borders." Practically endorsing the neutrality policy, all of which had the effect of quieting the people, for a time, as thousands of whom were willing to abide by the policy if adhered to by the State. This quiet, however, was not of long duration—"a calm before the pending storm." In the state election for members of the Legislature in August, 1861, a majority was said to be in favor of, and instructed for State Neutrality, but when the Legislature met and organized early in September, the situation was quickly changed, the neutrality theory had exploded, by formal act. The return of all arms and equipments of the State Guard was demanded, Home Guards, so-called, were organized, and armed; Federal soldiers and Federal marshals occupied the State. The rigors of a military despotism was soon rigorously felt. Some arrests were made and parties hurried across the Ohio River; no choice was left those who had shown active sympathy for the South against the coercive policy of the Federal Government but to make their way out of the State as speedily as practicable.

Early in the afternoon of a September day, 1861, a messenger came in haste to inform Colonel Hawkins that troops had been sent to Bath County and that Federal Marshals were to arrest him the next day. Hurriedly he summoned a few young men of his company; this small party at twelve o'clock, midnight, that evening armed and equipped, bade farewell to home and friends and rode away to battle for home, Country and Constitutional Liberty, the next day arriving at West Liberty, many people were assembled and a company was being organized. Col. Hawkins had a conference with the leaders of the movement and proposed that they all should go into camp at Prestonsburg and hold the way open as an outlet for hundreds of others, all of which was readily concurred in. Col. Hawkins and his little band of seventeen were the first to stop and go into camp at Prestonsburg; many had passed out that way to join the Confederate forces.

The next day the company from Morgan County arrived, A. J. May, Captain. In a few days several hundred recruits arrived, including Capt. G. W. Connor and his company from Bath County. A mass meeting was held in the Courthouse. Judge W. H. Burns, a citizen of Prestonsburg, then Circuit Court Judge for that District, joined with the party. A committee was appointed to report on the situation and it was resolved to organize, arm and prepare for war, and hold the way open and await the arrival of all who might wish to join the Confederate forces. A leader was needed to organize and direct affairs at the camp, and by common consent Colonel Hawkins was unanimously chosen for this responsible position.

Judge Burns was appointed Commissary in charge of the entire supply department. Recruits continued to arrive, among them a battalion of mounted rifles and five companies from the Blue Grass counties, commanded respectively by Captains Shawhan, Cameron, Thomas, Clay and Holiday. On the arrival of Col. John S. Williams ("Cerro Gordo") he was sent as a delegate to Richmond, Va., to procure arms and equipments and authority to organize and muster the recruits into service.

There being a full regiment of federal troops, Col. Moore, ex-member of Congress from that district in command, at Louisa, forty miles below Prestonsburg at the confluence of the West Fork with the Big Sandy, and the river being navigable to Prestonsburg, immediate organization and preparations for defense, scout, guard and picket duty, and every means available for protection was necessary. Prestonsburg was therefore practically a military camp of instruction for nearly a month before the recruits were mustered into service. The river being well guarded day and night miles below Prestonsburg, the Commandant selected in charge of the river picket was a sterling patriotic pioneer of that county, known as Capt. Jack Harris, the famous deer hunter, acquainted with all the roads and by-ways, and every curve of the river. He said if a boat came up the river at point selected, with troops on board, he would shoot the pilot and the boat would stove against the cliff of rocks on the opposite shore. Scouting parties were on the alert. On one occasion the writer was in charge of a scouting party to the next county town below Prestonsburg when a steamboat came up to the landing, the scouts immediately boarded the steamer and finding no Federal or contraband on board, no arrests were made. That Federal regiment at Louisa behaved very quietly and made no demonstrations towards the Confederate camp at Prestonsburg. When the Federals moved against that camp it was with an army of six thousand infantry and artillery, which to them proved to be a costly affair. Col. Williams returned to Prestonsburg about the middle of October. The organization of the regiment, though not complete, was reported October 22, 1861, and when completed was as follows: Company "A," May; Company "B," Hunter; Company "C," Hawkins; Company "D," Elliott; Company "E," Worsham; Company "F," Caudill; Company "G," Cary; Company "H," Connor; Company "I," Swango; Company "K," Blevins.

Field and Staff Officers: John S. Williams, Clark County, Col.; A. J. May, Morgan County, Lt. Col.; Hiram Hawkins, Bath County, Major; R. T. Daniel, Richmond, Va., Adjutant; H. Rutherford, Bath County, Surgeon; Basil Duke, Mason County, Assistant Surgeon; W. S. Rogers, Bourbon County, A. Q. M.; W. H. Burns, Floyd County, A. C. S.; Thomas S. Page, Sergeant Major.

In the winter of 1861, Col. Williams was promoted to Brigadier General, afterwards to Major General of Cavalry and served throughout the war; after the war was United States Senator from Kentucky.

On Williams' promotion, May and Hawkins were promoted to Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel, respectively, but did not receive their appointment from the war department until 18th day of April, 1862. At that time Captain George W. Connor, being the Senior Captain, though a prisoner in the hands of the enemy (being sick in Prestonsburg, unable to be removed when Marshall retreated out of the State in February, 1862) was promoted and made Major of the Regiment, and was promoted and made Lieutenant Colonel, November, 1862, and rejoined his regiment at Green's Cut, Ga., January, 1865, and served with distinction as a gallant soldier (was in command of the regiment at Jonesboro and severely wounded.) As an officer, fearless in the discharge of duty during the war, after the war he served his State with distinction as State Senator for four years. Adjutant Daniel, being at Richmond on leave of absence when the battle of Seven Pines occurred, took part in that engagement and was badly wounded. On his recovery he was promoted to Captain, A. A. G. and assigned to duty on the staff of General Pegram, after which officers of the line acted as adjutant until July 12, 1863, when Second Lieutenant Thomas B. Cook of Captain White's company was promoted to First Lieutenant and Adjutant of the regiment, in which capacity he served faithfully as a gallant and fearless soldier until the close of the war, except during his absence on account of wound received in the battle of Resaca.

Dr. Rutherford served the regiment as surgeon until November, 1863, when at his own request was assigned to hospital duty, being unable on account of falling health for further field service.

Dr. Duke was made Brigade Surgeon when General Humphrey Marshall assumed command. Captain Rogers resigned his position as A. Q. M. soon after his appointment. Lieutenant W. W. Cox, of the line, acted in that capacity until December, 1862, when William Wells was appointed to that position. Captain Burns served as A. C. S. until by act of Congress, commissioned officers, A. C. S. Department, were relieved from duty with regiments.

Sergeant Major Page gave up his position soon after the regiment was organized, and was succeeded by Asa M. Swimm, of Fleming County, who was assassinated by bushwhackers in Kentucky in 1862, when William Wallace Hawkins, of Company "C," was promoted to that office, and after having fought in the battle of Middle Creek, Kentucky, and in the charge by the regiment at Princeton, Va., died of fever in camp at Holstern Springs, Va. at the age of nineteen.

When Colonel Williams arrived at Richmond, the government could furnish no arms or equipments for the troops he was authorized to organize. Governor Letcher, of Virginia, however, furnished him six hundred old army flint lock muskets. All this caused delay in Williams' return to Prestonsburg.

During Colonel Williams' absence, Colonel Hawkins seeing he had no company and probably would have no command when Williams returned, called a public meeting at the court house and resigned his position as commandant and recommended Hon. John Fickland of Connor's company as his successor. Fickland was chosen without dissent. Colonel Hawkins organized a company of seventy men for cavalry service, preferring that arm, if he could be permitted to report only to the colonel commanding. Upon this condition he tendered the services of his company as soon as Col. Williams returned to Prestonsburg. Williams refused to accept the company as mounted rangers, whereupon Hawkins called his men together and told them that he preferred the infantry rather than be placed in the battalion of mounted men. The company thereupon was disbanded, and together with thirty of his men he was mustered in as a private soldier. He soon organized a company of one hundred and fifteen men for the regiment and was mustered in as Captain of Company "C." Nine companies were hurriedly organized and mustered in as twelve months' men, but before the regiment could be fully organized General Nelson was on his way from Mount Sterling, Kentucky, to Prestonsburg, with an army of six thousand men of all arms.

Colonel Williams, seeing he would be compelled to retreat across the mountains into Virginia, retired from Prestonsburg to Piketon with the Fifth Kentucky Regiment and the mounted battalion, some twelve hundred men.

The Federals soon occupied Prestonsburg. Early in November, General Nelson with his whole force, in two columns, moved against Piketon, three thousand troops under his personal command moving directly up the river, the other column by way of John's Creek. Colonel Williams determined, if possible, to surprise and check the force under the personal command of Nelson and thus gain time to move his baggage and supplies across the mountains into Virginia. For this duty he directed Captains May and Hawkins, with a force of two hundred and fifty men, with orders to cross the river by ferry boat at Piketon and move, under cover of night, fifteen miles down the river to Ivey Mountain and there await the approach of the Federals. May being the senior officer took his position at the head of the narrows; Hawkins having charge of the main force posted his men some distance from May in single file, so as to cover as much of enemies flank as possible and create the impression of strength, taking every advantage of protection and shelter the position offered. These dispositions having been made the men were ordered to keep perfect silence and not fire a gun until the Federal column should reach the head of the narrows, when the firing should commence by May's rifles. It was near two p. m. when the enemy, three thousand strong, came moving briskly in column of fours. The mounted vidette some distance in advance of the main body, on reaching the narrows discovered and fired at May. The fire was quickly returned and instantly the advance regiment of the enemy received a deadly volley which caused it to fall back in great disorder, not firing a gun. Troops not demoralized were brought up promptly and in a few minutes a piece of artillery began to play upon the little band confronting them, but firing wild, shells exploded in the high mountain in their rear, disturbing no one and creating no confusion in their ranks. These young heroes, though this being their first engagement, kept up a brisk and continuous fire with the coolness and steadiness of veterans. General Nelson, finding it impossible to remove them by direct assault, ordered a regiment to ascend the mountain some half mile or more below the Confederate position and by flank movement gain their rear, thus placing the Confederates between it and the river. The movement was detected and the Confederates withdrew in good order, Hawkins ordering his men to rally at the bridge spanning Ivey Creek at the head of the narrows, but not until they had held their position with squirrel rifles, shot guns and flint lock muskets against twelve times their number of well organized and well armed troops for an hour and twenty minutes and after having killed and wounded more men than they themselves had in the engagement. Confederate loss in the engagement, fourteen killed, wounded and missing. Among the killed was the gallant Rusk, acting with the Fifth Kentucky. The Federals kept this battleground guarded for three days, allowing no one to pass, using flats and steamers to convey the dead and wounded down the river.

The check thus given Nelson enabled Williams to move his supplies and effects. The advance column of the Federals moving by way of John's Creek, appeared on the heights overlooking Piketon, just in time to witness Williams' mounted rear guard retire, a few shots at long range slightly wounding one man and one horse. Colonel Williams moved leisurely out through Pound Gap, and went into camp south of the mountain. The regimental organization was here completed, active movements having precluded its perfection while in Kentucky. Here Colonel Williams remained in camp for some time for military drill and discipline. Major Hawkins was made drill master of the regiment.

In November, 1861, the regiment was brigaded with the following other troops under command of General Humphrey Marshall: The mounted battalion, Kentucky Rifles, under command of Major John Shawhan; the Twenty-ninth Regiment Virginia Infantry, Colonel Moore; the Fifty-fourth Virginia Infantry, Colonel Trigg, and Jeffery's Battery, and participated with these troops in all the operations of General Marshall's command in Eastern Kentucky and Western Virginia during the next eighteen months. General Marshall's campaign in southeastern Kentucky in January, 1862, gave his command an arduous introduction of warfare. A winter campaign often in chilling rains, piercing winds and drifting snows, told disastrously upon the Fifth Kentucky.

The scourge of measles broke out in the regiment on the first days of March. During this campaign in Kentucky the regiment participated in the battle of Middle Creek in February, 1862, on Marshall's retreat out of the State through Pound Gap and went into camp the first week in March. During our six weeks' stay in this camp, owing to the dreadful exposure during the winter campaign, made those who had been afflicted with the measles, an easy prey to fever and other ills resulting in the death of many of the Fifth Kentucky Regiment.

In May, General Marshall moved near Jeffersonville and defeated General Cox at Princeton, Virginia. General Williams, since his promotion as Brigadier General, still remaining with Marshall's command, had charge of the advance column, the "mounted rifles, Twenty-ninth Virginia and Fifth Kentucky." The mounted rifles in the advance drove the federal outposts. The mounted troops, the Twenty-ninth Virginia and the Fifth Kentucky followed at double quick for some miles until the Federal infantry were developed.

Colonel Williams ordered a halt and directed the Fifth Kentucky to advance to the front (the 29th Virginia being in front in the order of march) thus giving his old regiment the post of honor and danger. Two companies were formed on the left of the road, Colonel May directing the two thus formed. The remaining companies, under the command of Colonel Hawkins, formed on the right, confronting the enemy's main force in timber, having the advantage of this protection, Colonel Hawkins immediately ordered his men to charge, and drove the enemy from every position in such rapid succession that the Twenty-ninth Virginia did not have a chance to fire a gun.

When General Marshall was ordered into Kentucky to cooperate with General Bragg, Colonel Hawkins was ordered, with five companies of the Fifth Kentucky, two weeks in advance of Marshall's main body, to disperse the home guards and establish a depot of supplies at Piketon, this at such a time where the home guards were well armed and where confederates had been shot by bushwhackers. This movement, though hazardous, was certainly most important and necessary.

As shown on one occasion while on the lookout in this home guard infested country, about thirty of these so-called home guards lay in ambush on the opposite side of a creek running parallel with the road on which these five companies were advancing, and discharged their pieces at the head of the column. Colonel Hawkins dashed to the front and ordered his men to charge. The charge was executed with so much spirit, dashing into the creek, moving upon the concealment and a well directed fire, that the home guards fled precipitately, abandoning their wounded, losing three prisoners. Colonel Hawkins had one wounded. After some days scouring the country, these hostile bands, to save themselves from annihilation or capture, got together and made their escape by fleeing from the country. When General Marshall with his command arrived at Piketon, a depot of supplies awaited him and many additions had been made to the ranks of the regiment, and as they advanced constant accessions were made. One full company was organized and when the command reached Mount Sterling the Fifth Kentucky numbered one thousand and twenty-seven men for duty.

Colonel May in September had retired on leave before the command reached Mount Sterling and was not again connected with the regiment. It is proper to make record as an historic incident that the good and patriotic women of Colonel Hawkins' home county and also the home of one company of the regiment, during their short encampment at Mount Sterling, made a beautiful Confederate flag for the regiment, of which fact Colonel Hawkins had not been informed until he happened to visit Owingsville, the county seat, when one of the charming young ladies in the court house packed with patriotic men and lovely women, presented to him the beautiful Confederate flag for the gallant Fifth Kentucky Regiment.

Marshall's command moved on from Mount Sterling by way of Paris and Lexington and when in vicinity of Dick Robinson, was in hearing of the artillery at Perryville, after which we were soon sadly on our way back to Virginia. It is deemed proper as an act of justice that honorable mention should be made and due honor given the twelve months' men of the regiment for their heroic devotion to the Confederate cause. Having seen much arduous service marching and counter marching on the borders of Kentucky and West Virginia from Princeton, Virginia, to Bristol, Tennessee, generally making the same daily marches as the mounted battalion, and sometimes forced marches at double quick for miles, guarding mountain passes and salt works against raiders, recognized and called Marshall's foot cavalry. Nearing the time for re-enlistment or mustering out of service, it was but natural that these men should prefer the mounted service. While in Kentucky and before the retreat these soldiers made application through their commanding officer, and proposed to re-enlist for the war (and some of them could furnish their own mounts) provided they were permitted to go into the mounted service, all of the regiment were willing to join in this movement. Colonel Hawkins favored the movement, believing this was the only means by which the twelve months' men could be induced to remain in the regiment. He submitted the matter to General Marshall, stating that the twelve months' men would demand to be mustered out unless their request was granted. General Marshall refused to give the matter his approval, assigning as the only reason that we had too many mounted men already to the proportion of infantry. General Marshall, on the retreat out of the State back to Virginia, passing by the homes of the six hundred tried soldiers as well as the four hundred new recruits, all radiant with hope a short while before, expecting the army to meet and drive the enemy from their homes and native land, but now how sadly different the situation—ourselves driven out of the State, retreating, hundreds desiring to visit their homes.

Many of the twelve months' men demanding to be mustered out, under these circumstances the demoralization was great. When the command arrived at Salyersville, October, 1862, it remained there in camp for several days. General Marshall seeing the discontent, ordered the formation of the regiment, addressing a few words to the regiment directed that all of the twelve months' men who desired to be mustered out to step to the front, when three hundred and forty-three stepped out in line and were mustered out of the service. During our stay in this section of the State quite a number of others were, at their request, transferred to other commands and many had permission to visit their homes.

On the 20th of October, 1862, as shown by Roster of the regiment marked "B", Captains W. P. Connor, James T. Young and Robert Wells, with their companies were added to the Fifth Kentucky Regiment, and on the 24th day of October, 1862, the companies of Capt. W. T. B. South, A. C. Cope, Lykins, Colvin's and Robertson's, by order of General Marshall, by whose order they were recruited, were added to the regiment. On the 14th day of November, 1862, General Marshall issued an order directing Colonel Hawkins to consolidate and re-organize the Companies of his regiment. The regiment being then some forty miles from brigade headquarters, the order was not received for two or three days and was executed on the 18th day of November, which resulted in the consolidation of Colvin's with Cope's Company, and Connor's, Wells', Lykins', and Robertson's with Henry's Company.

Note.—The Regiment was not reorganized; the companies of the Fifth Kentucky were consolidated and reorganized by order of General Marshall, as above stated. The statement in history of the Orphan Brigade, page 402 (that the regiment was reorganized) was a mistake.

The regiment was not reorganized. Colonel Hawkins was elected Major, when the regiment was organized in 1861 and was appointed Lieutenant Colonel and then Colonel by the President, in the regular line of promotion, the Lieutenant and Major following in the same regular order of promotion long before the companies of the regiment were consolidated. The appointment of Col. Hawkins as Colonel was made July 24th, 1863, to rank as Colonel from November 14th, 1862. This appointment was confirmed by the Senate, notwithstanding his right to that position was challenged by the Colonel of another regiment, with statement made to the War Department that Col. Hawkins was in command of only six companies (after the companies of his regiment had been consolidated; Roster "B" of the regiment shows that eight companies (organized in 1862) were added to the regiment in October 1862. Roster "C" shows that five other companies were added to the regiment after the consolidation of companies. Three of these, in December, 1862, and two in August, 1863, making a total of twenty-three companies that were mustered into the 5th Kentucky Infantry Regiment, ten being twelve months' men, thirteen for the war. Five of these were merged in other companies in the consolidation, two lost in the retreat out of Kentucky in 1862, eight companies present for the war, commanded respectively in the battle at Chickamauga by Captains W. T. B. South, T. J. Henry, Jos. Desha, A. C. Cope, J. T. Gaines, James M. White, John Calvert, John H. Mitchell (successor to Roberts, promoted.) Gaines commanding Acton's company.

These companies covered themselves with a mantle of glory in this great battle—as gallant as any heroes that ever stood in line of battle.

Richmond, November 5, 1864.

Colonel:—

The Secretary of War directs me to inform you that the question as to your rank, which has been off some time under consideration of the War Department, has been decided. Your nomination by the President, as Colonel, having been confirmed by the Senate, in February, 1864, you are recognized by this department as holding that rank from November 14, 1862.

Very respectfully, Colonel,
Your obedient servant,

JNO. BLAIR HODGE,
Major and A. A. G.

Col. Hiram Hawkins,
Commanding 5th Ky. Regt., Lewis' Brigade.

Captain Colvin was retained on duty with recruiting orders; Lieutenant H. Ferguson was assigned to duty in Cope's company; Lieutenant McGuire by consent was transferred as First Lieutenant in Henry's Company, taking with him twenty-six men to Henry's Company. The remaining officers of these companies were relieved from duty by said order. Be it said to their honor, that many of them, as well as the twelve months' men (mustered out) joined the mounted commands and did faithful service. Captain James T. Young died in Charleston, Tenn., Oct. 2, 1863; Capt. Connor and Lieut. Miller were both killed while in the service. Captains Roberts*, Calvert and White, with their companies, were added to the Fifth Kentucky Regiment on the 15th day of December, 1862, and were lettered same day with the other companies, according to rank of Captains—Companies "I" and "K"—Jos. Desha and D. W. Acton. On 22d day of August, 1863, were added to the regiment by order of General Preston and continued as part of the regiment to the close of the war. Again giving the regiment ten companies, eight present, Ratcliff and Candill absent. Ratcliff and his company were captured in Pike County, Kentucky, October 26th, 1862. The Captain and few of his men made their escape. In 1863 the Captain was again captured and this time paroled in Kentucky, some of his men

*Captain Roberts resigned June 30, 1863, and was not again connected with the Regiment and his name was dropped, and should not again appear on the roster as he was not in the service with the Regiment after June 30, 1863.

reaching the command were assigned to duty with other companies.

Captain Caudill remained in Kentucky and was said to be acting with the mounted infantry when the army retreated out of Kentucky.

Captain Blevins was captured and paroled in Kentucky in 1862. many had leave of absence, numbering in all, including those mustered out, more than five hundred. So many men being absent from their command, Colonel Hawkins obtained permission to remain in Kentucky for a few weeks with the remnant of his regiment and a small battalion of mounted men under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Johnson, of Kentucky, and including a train of wagons and equipment of a full regiment to care for. Collecting what recruits he could and being on his way out, encamped for a few days about nine miles below Piketon on the east bank of the river, intending to move to Piketon the next day, but this was not to be, as a federal force by flank movement occupied Piketon that day, blockading the only known way of escape for Colonel Hawkins and his command, as there was no ferry except at Piketon and no known crossing at any other point in that vicinity. But Colonel Hawkins being on the alert, had information of the movement of the enemy, and was equal to the emergency. He had information that there was a shoal in the river half a mile below his camp, but no ford or crossing had ever been made. Knowing that his only safety depended upon crossing the river before dawn the next day, as the Federals were to attack his camp the next morning, a force was quietly organized and the river banks were cut down and a road made for crossing before the sun set that day. It had been understood that the command was to move to Piketon that evening, so all things were made ready for breaking camp. Late in the afternoon the force of the camp was lined up in marching order on the public highway, the mounted battalion in front as though going to Piketon, about dusk. Instead of going to Piketon, the movement was to the new ford, wagon train in front, mounted battalion in rear, safely crossed the river, guide in front, marched all that night by the light of the moon. At the dawn of day the little Confederate force entered safely the public highway, fifteen miles south of Piketon, and the Federals were at the deserted camp where they expected to gobble up the Confederates at the crack of day.

Colonel Hawkins moved leisurely out through Pound Gap into Virginia and joined Marshall's command; continued under General Marshall's command on the frontiers of Kentucky and Virginia, often making forced marches to protect the interior and the salt works from parties of raiders, from Bristol, Tenn. to the salt works in western Virginia, sometimes from fifty to seventy-five miles from brigade headquarters, and compelled a great portion of the time to subsist off the country through which they passed. "History has made mention of the honorable record of these soldiers, subjected to the temptations incident to this precarious mode of living, that they were respected most where longest camped and best known."

In May, 1863, General William Preston succeeded General Marshall in command with headquarters at Abbington, Virginia. The Fifth Kentucky Regiment, under the command of General Preston, marched and counter marched same field of operations, guarding the mountain passes and salt works from the invasions of the enemy until August, 1863, when General Preston with infantry of his command, was ordered to Knoxville, Tennessee, by General Buckner. Preston's Division was organized by General Buckner, consisting of three brigades, commanded respectively by General Gracie, Colonel Trigg, and Colonel John H. Kelly. Kelly's Brigade, the Fifth Kentucky; Colonel Hawkins; Sixty-third Virginia, Major French; Fifty-eighth North Carolina, Colonel J. B. Palmer, and the Sixty-fifth Georgia Volunteers, Col. Moore. Buckner's Corps marched from Knoxville by way of Loudon and Stevenson and joined General Bragg in good time for the pending great battle of Chickamauga, September 19th and 20th, 1863.

The position of the Fifth Kentucky on the 19th of September, 1863, the first day of the battle, was on the left of Kelly's Brigade, in line of battle ready for action, but held in reserve. On Sunday the 20th, in the afternoon, the brigade was ordered to the front, and went into action on the left of Gen. Gracie's Brigade; the 5th Kentucky on the left of Kelly.

The Federals were in strong position on wooded range of hills, where General Thomas had massed his troops for desperate and final resistance. The reserve corps of General Granger had come to the relief of Gen. Thomas and lined the heights. McLaws and Hindman had failed to dislodge these fresh troops. Gen. Preston, with two brigades, Gracie's and Kelly's, was ordered to their support. The 5th Kentucky held the double quick in line on the battlefield, frequently in range of the enemies' guns.

When these lines met the clash of arms was terrific. The 5th Kentucky advancing on the enemy rushed forward, reserving their fire until within very close range, gave the rebel yell, charged and drove the enemy before them and crossed the ridge some eighty yards in advance of the brigade.

When the 7th Mississippi rallied and drove the enemy from his left, Col. Hawkins moved the 5th Kentucky by the right flank and rejoined the brigade. These two brigades were desperately engaged and their ammunition was nearly exhausted before support arrived. General Preston had sent his staff officers with orders to bring Trigg's brigade forward rapidly to their support. When these officers reached Trigg's headquarters, Trigg with Col. Bullock and 7th Florida was one and a half miles away after supposed mounted enemy. Finley, his ranking Colonel, received the order and with the 8th Florida and 54th Virginia moved with haste, and when he passed the pickets thrown in front of Gracie and Kelly, Kelly moved the 58th North Carolina from the right to the left of his brigade and moved the brigade forward. A line of battle was soon discovered in our front, at first supposed to be Confederates. Col. Hawkins, on foot, in front of the regiment, demanded to know whose troops they were. They cried, friends. A soldier of the 5th Kentucky, nearer the enemy, shouted they are Yanks, they.

An officer stepped to the front and cried "We surrender;" and immediately stepped back between his lines and fired a volley into our ranks, killing Lieut. Yates, mortally wounding Captain Calvert and others seriously.

Col. Kelly, on foot with the 58th North Carolina regiment in line on the left of the 5th Kentucky, says in his official report: The enemy cried out, we surrender, we surrender, but instead of laying down their arms, poured a terrific fire on the brigade, which for the instant on account of its suddenness, threw the brigade into some confusion, from which it soon rallied. When Col. Trigg received the orders from General Preston, he moved at once from where he was overtaken by the staff officer, in the Lafayette road, and on his way met with Col. Kelly (who was on his way to division headquarters). Had consultation with Kelly, at the south base of the ridge on which Col. Hawkins, with the 5th Kentucky, was driving the enemy. He then moved on up to the summit of the ridge with the 7th Florida by flank movement; met with Col. Hawkins after he had driven the enemy from the ridge. Had short conference. Col. Hawkins informed him that the 63d Virginia, Maj. French, was on the right of the 5th Kentucky, in his command. Col. Trigg then passed across the left of the 5th Kentucky, going down the slope with the 7th Florida, by flank movement in the direction Hawkins pointed out the enemy had retired.

The 5th Kentucky, hastily procuring ammunition from the boxes of the dead and wounded, moved forward, looking out for the enemy, when Col. Trigg's mounted orderly came galloping from Col. Trigg, with a message to Col. Hawkins, that he had found the enemy, and that if he would move up with his two regiments we would capture them. Col. Hawkins returned answer by the courier to Col. Trigg to move at once, and the 5th Kentucky and 65th Virginia moved rapidly to form junction with Col. Trigg. In the meantime Col. Finley with the 6th Florida and 54th Virginia, having passed further to the right as stated by Col. Finley in his official report, says: "After passing the pickets in front of General Gracie, he opened fire upon the enemy, and continued to advance steadily and constantly until he swept the heights," and swept around the Snodgrass Hill, gained the rear of the enemy driven by Kelly's regiment. At this juncture, says Col. Finley, the brigade commander, Col. Trigg, arrives with the 7th Florida, which Col. Trigg forms on the left of the 54th Virginia, which with the 6th Florida was already formed on the left of Kelly's Brigade. The prisoners were then captured (says Finley), and as stated by Col. Hawkins in his official report, which reads: "My men recovering from the temporary surprise, caused by the treacherous firing on the brigade (referred to in the official reports of Kelly and Hawkins), reformed and with fixed bayonets advanced on the enemy, joined by Maj. French, then by Col. Palmer, in conjunction with Col. Trigg, and captured two regiments, "the 89th Ohio and 22d Michigan" and part of the 21st Ohio regiment. Trigg's brigade in the rear, Kelly's regiments in front. Corroborated and shown by inscription on tablet marking 4th position of Kelly's brigade, describing the closing scenes of the battle, which shows "that Kelly's brigade was assaulting on the front at 6:30 p. m. That Trigg had crossed to the ridge to the left of Kelly and gained the rear of the troops in front of Kelly. * * * At dusk Kelly charged and drove three Union regiments * * * and most of them were captured between the lines of Kelly and Trigg. Kelly was next fired upon by the troops on the right of Branno's division, and after a volley from them and a response by Kelly the battle ended."

The above inscription is substantially correct, but Trigg had but one of his regiments with him when he crossed the ridge. Finley with the 6th Florida and 54th Virginia had passed to the right, as shown in his official report, continuing to advance after passing in front of Gracie's pickets until he swept the heights as stated, and had formed on the left of Kelly's brigade just before Trigg arrived with the 7th Florida.

Col. Trigg being the senior officer and mounted, the surrender was made to him. It then being night fall Trigg's command was fired upon, mortally wounding his mounted orderly, creating confusion in his ranks, his brigade moved off with the prisoners he had captured. The 5th Kentucky had charged up against the immediate front of the enemy; the three field officers referred to by General Preston in his official report, were all mounted, standing at the head of the line of company officers and men. The 5th Kentucky by direction of Col. Hawkins opened ranks, and by his orders the two Colonels, the Lieut. Colonel and two hundred and forty-nine prisoners moved promptly in between the lines of the regiment. The last gun had been fired, the battle ended, the victory won, the enemy not killed or captured in full retreat from the battlefield.

The 5th Kentucky retiring with the prisoners met Col. Kelly returning from division headquarters to the brigade. He rode in between the lines of the regiment, and recognized and greeted Col. Carlton of the 89th Ohio.

By direction of Col. Kelly, the field officers were sent to division headquarters, the other prisoners turned over to the 54th Virginia. Lieut. Colonel Wade had charge of the prisoners captured by Col. Trigg. The 5th Kentucky having had orders to remain on the battlefield, pickets were thrown out in front. The next morning Generals Buckner and Preston rode out on the battlefield and came to the 5th Kentucky. Col. Hawkins reported to them that his men had picked up 1,000 new Enfield rifles on the ground over which they fought.

Colonel Kelly was not with the brigade during the closing scenes of the battle. Col. Kelly having been summoned to division headquarters, soon after the parley and treacherous firing on the brigade (referred to in his official report) prevented him from being present with the brigade during the closing scenes of the battle. Col. Hawkins, the senior officer in Kelly's absence, was in command during the charge and capture of the prisoners referred to by Gen. Preston in his official report.

Gracie in his history of the battle of Chickamauga, gives the following thrilling incident in speaking of the gallantry and heroic conduct of the 21st Ohio regiment. Vol. 1, pages 232-281. He incidentally pays high tribute to the gallantry and prowess of the Fifth Kentucky Infantry. He says: "The subject is fully corroborated by the record that at 5:30 p. m. the 21st Ohio made its sacrificial charge, up the hill in a desperate attempt to retake the position from which the 35th Ohio and the 2d Minnesota regiments had just been driven pell-mell by the 5th Kentucky Infantry of Kelly's Brigade."

The 21st Ohio in this desperate attempt, as indicated, was repulsed and part of the regiment captured at the close of the battle, and that part not killed or captured made their escape under fire.

The conspicuous gallantry and heroic conduct of the 5th Kentucky Infantry at Chickamauga, won the admiration of its superior officers as tersely told in the official records of that great battle, and the recommendation of the Colonel, who commanded it, for promotion in complimentary terms by the Corps Commander, as follows:

To Hon. James A. Seddon, Secretary of War.

Sir:—Colonel Hiram Hawkins, Fifth Kentucky Volunteer

Infantry, served a number of months in Preston's division of my command. The official reports of General Preston, and the well established reputation of Col. Hawkins as an officer of zeal, intelligence, gallantry, and ability, show him to be worthy of advancement. I take pleasure in commending him, in this form, to the favorable notice of the Government, for promotion to the grade of Brigadier General.

Respectfully your obedient servant,

S. B. BUCKNER,

Major General.

Confederate Military History, Vol. 9, page 180: "Preston's Report"—"The charge of Trigg and Kelly was a bloody and effective work, resulting in the complete rout of the enemy, the capture of the 89th Ohio, 22d Michigan and part of the 21st Ohio regiments. This bold and decisive stroke, which closed the battle as the sun set, was one of the most gallant affairs of the war. The 5th Kentucky, Col. Hawkins, was conspicuous for gallantry in this fight."

Government Record, Vol. 30, Serial 51, page 417:—"In the last attack made by Trigg and Kelly, was the last fire of the day, and closed the battle. Colonel Hawkins of the Fifth Kentucky, a brave and skillful officer of Kelly's Brigade, captured two Colonels, one Lieut. Colonel, a number of company officers and 249 prisoners."

"The enemy was beaten at every point."

The army went into camp near Chattanooga, Sept. 24th. Here we spent a monotonous and disagreeable period of two months, on rations generally of the poorest quality, and often very scant. On November 5, 1863, the 5th Kentucky Infantry was transferred from Kelly's Brigade, Buckner's Corps, to Lewis' Brigade, Hardie's Corps. The brigade historian referring to the transfer, makes historic record, "That the officers and men of the 5th Kentucky at Chickamauga behaved like heroes of a hundred fights. The brigade veterans gladly welcomed them into full fellowship as a member of the Kentucky brigade."

From this time on until the close of the war, the Fifth Kentucky Infantry took an active part in all the operations and battles as part of the famous Orphan Brigade, which was to the Tennessee Army what Stonewall Jackson's Brigade was to the Virginia Army. In the battle of Missionary Ridge the Fifth Kentucky was held in reserve in support of a battery on the front.

The next day was in line of the brigade covering the retreat of the army. At Ringold after crossing the railroad in the rear of the brigade the 5th Kentucky was halted, drawn up in line immediately in the rear and in support of Gen. Cleburn, where he so gallantly repulsed and drove the enemy. At Dalton went into winter quarters, where it remained until the 7th of May, when the brigade marched out to take part in the engagement and maneuvers at "Rocky Face Gap," against the Federal army. The last position Gen. Bates Division in this engagement was at the front, on the ridge high up to the left of the gap. From the position of the 5th Kentucky we could see the battle raging in the valley some two hundred and fifty or three hundred yards to our right, the Federals charging and recharging our lines. Gen. Bate was further up on the ridge to the left of Lewis' brigade, when the Federals in great force appeared in view in front. He rode down his line and requested a regiment of Gen. Lewis' to occupy an important position—where he anticipated the enemy would attack—the 5th Kentucky was designated. Gen. Bate gave the order (in person) to Col. Hawkins, stating "that seventeen Federal regiments had just passed round in my front. I want you to take your regiment down to the timber in front of this position, where you will find some temporary works, a picket line in front. I will send you a company of sappers and miners and you must prepare to take care of yourself. I cannot help you when you are attacked, as I cannot depress my cannon to fire on that position (in your front.)" In passing down the declivity the sharpshooters of the enemy wounded one man, when near the temporary works. The picket line in front having discovered the army of blue-coats in their front, came rushing back and tumbled over the little works. Col. Hawkins ordered them back to the front. No, sir, said they, unless you will send some of your men with us. Col. Hawkins directed Capt. South, a brave and gallant officer, to deploy his company and take these men back and establish the picket line in front. The order was promptly executed. The company of sappers and miners promised failed to appear, and perhaps fortunate for the 5th Kentucky that these regiments were not hurled against its front, where they would have been killed or captured if they failed to repulse the enemy, as their position was a perilous one and to retreat under fire would be certain destruction.

At Resaca the Fifth Kentucky Infantry had the good fortune to occupy good works and a clear open front for about one hundred yards to timber, where the Federals were massed in force. Col. Hawkins had given orders to his men to reserve their fire and not fire a shot until he gave the order. The historic record says: "About noon five lines of battle emerged from the timber, banners flying, front line firing as they came charging, officers mounted with drawn swords. The 5th Kentucky when within close range, opened fire with rapid and well directed volleys hurled them back to timber, every horse that went back went riderless. The enemy soon rallied and charged with three lines and were in like manner repulsed. The 5th Kentucky had but one man killed and the Adjutant painfully wounded, while running up and down behind the men in the trenches when the enemy was charging, waving his sword high over head, shouting 'Give it to 'em boys,' 'Give it to 'em boys'—when a minnie ball tore his thumb entirely from his hand and knocked his sword twenty feet high over the works."

At Dalton, May 28th, the 5th Kentucky Infantry suffered terribly and uselessly, being rushed upon the enemy with reckless and undue haste.

A short while before the battle, General Bate had consultation with the officers of his division, assembled at division headquarters. (The writer was present on this occasion.) General Bate gave the information that he had orders to develop the enemy and ascertain his strength and position, that it was believed that he was not in force. That he (Bate) had information which concurred with his own belief that the main force of the enemy had been withdrawn from his front (some women from the rear of the enemy had circulated this report.) That he had given orders to his cavalry to develop the enemy and ascertain if he was in force in his front. That the cavalry would advance at a signal to be fired at station on the left of his division; that as soon as he ascertained that the enemy was not in force in his front, a second signal would be fired for the advance of the infantry. Personal instructions were given for the execution of orders. The 5th Kentucky being on the extreme right of the division, without support on its right except a skirmish line, Col. Hawkins was directed that as soon as he crossed the enemies' works, to wheel his regiment to the right, sweep the enemy down the line and when he came to the position of the 9th Kentucky Infantry it would join with his command. So confident was General Bate that the enemy was not in force in his front and in this event so anxious to capture him and to prevent his escape after the charge of the cavalry, the infantry must rush upon him at the fire of a signal gun (instead of waiting a few minutes for orders to advance after the position of the enemy was ascertained.) Taking no thought of the certainty that the enemy if in force, his artillery would fire on the cavalry assaulting him and the terrible disaster that would result should this fire of the enemy be mistaken by the infantry for the signal to advance. At the designated signal the cavalry advanced, found the enemy strongly entrenched and in force. Gen. Bate, as soon as he received this information "hurried his staff officers and couriers with orders to the brigade commander to remain in their works, and not advance, that the enemy was strongly entrenched and in force in his front." (The records show that five divisions of the enemy were entrenched in front with artillery at intervals all along their line of works.) The order not to advance came too late to correct the unfortunate mistake, to advance at the firing of a signal under the circumstances so liable to be mistaken as it was in this instance. Two brigades (the Florida and Kentucky) were under fire before the orders could reach them.

The Tennessee Brigade, being near the station, did not advance, as it knew the signal to advance had not been fired. The Kentucky Brigade on the right of the division, rushed forward assailed by a literal storm of shot and shell. The 5th Kentucky advancing more rapidly than the regiment on its left, charged upon the battery in its immediate front and by well directed volleys soon drove the gunners to shelter, silenced its fire, continuing steadily to advance when within twenty yards of the enemy's entrenched lines that swarmed with riflemen many times its force. Col. Hawkins discovered the regiment on his left, some distance to the rear, retiring. The 5th Kentucky having no support on its right, now none on its left and having received no orders to retire, steadily advancing to destruction oblivious of its perilous position. The incessant roar of battle precluding any orders to retire, at this critical moment, to save his regiment from annihilation, Col. Hawkins rushed to the colors, seized the bearer, faced him about and started the colors to the rear. All the men not killed or seriously wounded returned with the colors and formed in their works.

The brigade historian makes record of this "heroic and desperate charge, well illustrating the dashing, yet steady and unflinching courage of Kentuckians—the indomitable will that makes them maintain unequal conflict and brave destruction rather than falter or flee."

"Estimated loss in this short interval of time, fifty-one per cent."

In the battle of Intrenchment Creek, July 22, the disaster to the 5th Kentucky was little, if any, less than at Dallas. The Kentucky Brigade, on the right of Hardie's Corps, when nearing the position of the enemy, General Bate having some information to support his belief that the enemy was not aware of our approach, came riding down the line of the brigade, hat in hand, saying "At 'em! At 'em! At 'em! The enemy knows nothing of our approach." The artillery with the division had been hurried up, but before it could be brought into position, the brigade was rushed forward some distance in advance of the troops on our left (mill pond and other obstructions in this way), and having no support on our right (Wheeler, who was to form on our right, being a mile away) pressing forward through the open woods, soon brought us to the edge of open ground in front of the 5th Kentucky. The enemy some eighty yards across this opening, instead of being surprised at our approach, were behind their works, waiting our advance. As soon as the 5th Kentucky was in plain view, the enemy from our right, our left and front, poured a terrific fire upon our lines. In the short time of a few seconds one-third of the 5th Kentucky was shot down, killed or severely wounded, including half the color company, the lieutenant commanding it mortally wounded. Colors of the regiment lost. Colonel Hawkins at the front with his men, with eight holes shot through his coat, one ball from the right through his sword belt, another through the breast of his coat, when one from the left tore through his left hip, knocking him to the ground, fortunately not striking a vital point. He immediately rose to his feet, when not a man on foot was to be seen, all who were able to do so had retired. Col. Hawkins, to prevent being captured, made his way out. This battle, much like that at Dallas, was most unfortunate. If the proper precaution had been taken the brigade could have been sheltered from any of the enemy's guns in less than 200 yards of his position, until the artillery, Wheeler and the troops on the left could have taken position, when by the simultaneous dash of this formidable force of infantry and cavalry following in the wake of shot and shell by the artillery, the strong probability is that we would have captured the enemy, or certainly have driven him back on Sherman's rear, instead of the fruitless sacrifice of so many lives that might have been avoided.

In the battle of Jonesboro, the 5th Kentucky with the other regiments suffered seriously, charging upon the enemy fortified in his works. Lieut. Colonel Connor, as has been shown, was seriously wounded. On the 7th of September, just four months from the time the brigade marched out from Dalton, General Lewis having received orders, moved the brigade to Barnesville, to be mounted. From this time on until the close of the war, the brigade operated as mounted infantry in Wheeler's Corps. The 5th Kentucky with the brigade, now attached to Iverson's division, was constantly engaged in scout and picket duty until the 15th of November, when at Stockbridge, eighteen miles south of Atlanta, Col. Hawkins was ordered with a detachment from the brigade, including 100 men on foot (not yet having received their mounts) with part of his regiment to proceed upon Yellow Rivre, east of Atlanta, to operate against foraging parties the enemy was expecting to continue sending out in that section (and if possible capture mounts for the men on foot.) While out on this duty Sherman's army passed down the country between his detachment and Iverson's division. Being cut off from his command, he moved on the enemy's flank two days, picking up stragglers and preventing the spread of the scourge in that direction. Meeting with a company of Texas Rangers, the rangers and the detachment co-operated while they were together. The following day the rangers dashed forward some distance in advance, ran upon and captured 400 of the enemy, demanding them to lay down their arms instantly (or the regiment would immediately fire on them.) Col. Hawkins now crossed in the rear of the enemy to Macon (on the way captured thirty large Tennessee or Kentucky beeves and delivered them to the Commissary at Macon) where he found that the enemy was still between him and the brigade. Leaving all his men not mounted, with his force now of seventy, he attempted to reach his command by passing in front of Sherman, but this was not to be, until Sherman got to the sea. Being headed off, he moved on down to Liberty County, where he found much important work demanding all his force, energy and ability, the county being over-run by marauding parties of the enemy. Negroes, all demoralized, quit work, congregated about on the plantations, appropriating whatever they desired for their own use. Col. Hawkins sent couriers to report to the brigade commander, and received orders, Dec. 27, from the division commander, Gen. Iverson, to remain and take charge of all the mounted troops in that section "and not obey the orders of his brigade commander to move until he heard from General Wheeler." Taking in the situation, Col. Hawkins made a sweep through the county, striking a large foraging party at Hinesville, the county town, capturing some of the enemy and a few horses, stampeding the enemy from the county. Not a white man was to be seen on his premises. On the first of January, Col. Hawkins was on his way with his command (under orders) to division headquarters. On his arrival, he was given his entire regiment, and sent back with "orders from General Iverson to establish himself in command on a line extending from the Agechee River ferry, to the Altamaha, down to Darien on the coast." On his return with the 5th Kentucky regiment the men won the warmest approval of the citizens for their good conduct, and for the real immunity which they were enabled to enjoy from the marauding parties of the enemy in their foraging depredations, carrying off provisions and anything else they could use or desired, terrorizing the women of the country.

Col. Hawkins, with the 5th Kentucky, promptly reported to Gen. Lewis, and the 5th Kentucky was with the brigade marching and skirmishing with the enemy until the surrender of Lee and Johnston, when the brigade, at Washington, Georgia, on the afternoon of Saturday, May 6th, 1865, laid by their arms. Paroles were received and the First Kentucky Brigade as an organization, was no more.

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT, KENTUCKY INFANTRY (AFTER

The Seventh Kentucky Infantry was organized at Camp Burnett, about two miles west of Clinton, in Hickman County, Kentucky, some time in September, 1861. Charles Wickliffe was elected Colonel; W. D. Lannom, Lieutenant Colonel; W. J. N. Welborn, Major; T. F. Clardy, Surgeon; J. P. Humphries, Assistant Surgeon; A. Ragsdale, Chaplain; Edward K. Warren, Assistant Quartermaster; Thomas S. Burnett, Adjutant; R. A. Browder, Sergeant-Major. The companies were made up in Western Kentucky, in what is known as the "Purchase Counties."

Camp Burnett was only about eight miles from Columbus, Ky., where General Leonidas Polk was located with what was the Confederate Army occupying Western Kentucky. The 7th Kentucky was moved up to Columbus on November 7th and went into camp on the edge of town, constructing log houses for winter quarters. On March 1st, 1862, after the fall of Fort Donelson, and the retirement of the Confederate Army under General Albert Sidney Johnston, from Bowling Green, Kentucky, the Confederates at Columbus were compelled to move South. Leaving Columbus on the first of March, General Polk moved to Jordan and State Line Station, from which point his command was moved on the cars of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad to Humboldt, Tenn., and went into camp. The Seventh Kentucky Infantry was moved to Corinth, Miss., and then back to Bethel Station, and from there to the front of the Federal army at Pittsburg Landing, arriving on the 5th of April. On the morning of the 6th, the regiment was prepared for the coming engagement of the battle of Shiloh. It was brigaded with the First, Sixth and Ninth Tennessee Infantry and with Smith's Battery, field artillery, attached. The brigade was commanded temporarily by Colonel W. H. Stephens, and by Colonel George Maney, of the First Tennessee. In B. F. Cheatham's Division, Leonidas Polk's corps. The regiment suffered severely in the engagement, losing, mortally wounded on the first day, Major Welborn, and on the second day, Colonel Charles Wickliffe, mortally wounded; both these officers dying a few days after at Corinth, Mississippi. On the morning of the first day, at Shiloh, Captain James G. Pirtle, of Company "A," was wounded by the explosion of a shell near the head of the column, being the first casualty to overtake the regiment—soon to be decimated by the withering fire of the enemy, front and flank. The 7th was under fire almost constantly on Monday, the 7th of April, until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when they received orders to fall back. They never had been driven from a position, nor did they, at any time, show any signs of demoralization.

WARDS MOUNTED), CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY.

Arriving at Corinth, Mississippi, the Seventh Kentucky was brigaded with the Third and Sixth Kentucky, the Thirty-fifth Alabama, and Cobb's Battery of Artillery, and placed under command of General William Preston. About May 10th, at Corinth, Mississippi, under a general order of reorganization, and the death of Colonel Wickliffe and Major Welborn and the retirement of Lieutenant Colonel Lannom, an election of field officers was ordered. Edward Crossland, formerly Lieutenant Colonel of the First Kentucky Infantry, one-year enlistment, having been mustered out at Richmond, Va., on May 2d, was elected Colonel of the Seventh; L. J. Sherrill, Captain of Company "F," Lieutenant Colonel, and Henry S. Hale, Captain of Company "H," Major. The Confederates retired from Corinth towards Baldwin, Miss., and left Baldwin, June 6th, and arrived at Tupelo, June 8th. Leaving Tupelo, the "Reserve Corps"—Breckinridge's—under command of General Wm. Preston, moved westward and about June 25th boarded train at Abbeville for Vicksburg, by way of Jackson, Miss. The subsequent history of the Seventh Kentucky is identified with the operations of General Breckinridge's division and Preston's brigade. Upon the fields of Shiloh, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, Port Hudson, Murfreesboro, Corinth, Baker's Creek, Davis' Mill, Hatchie Bridge, Holly Springs, Bolivar, Coffeeville, Jackson, Raymond, Paducah, Brice's Cross Roads, Harrisburg, Old Town Creek, Athens, Sulphur Trestle, Pulaski, Columbia, second Fort Hinman, Johnsonville, Franklin, Nashville, Montevallo, Abenezzer Church, Johnsonville, Lawrenceburg, Shoal Creek, Campbellsville, Spring Hill, Plantersville, Selma, and many others, these Kentuckians, under Breckinridge and the heroic Nathan Bedford Forrest, maintained for Kentucky her martial renown, from Shiloh to the closing days of the war, for the maintenance of the equality of the States and the rights of the Constitution.

On March 1st, 1864, the command was mounted and hence forward followed the fortunes of the cavalry under Forrest.

In the list of battles enumerated, many were fought under that redoubtable leader, and with the closing scenes of the affairs around Selma, Alabama, the Kentuckians of the Seventh were surrendered at Columbus, Mississippi, on May 6th, 1865, and as soon as paroled and permitted, returned to Kentucky.

We are indebted to the excellent history of the "3d, 7th, 8th and 12th Kentucky, C. S. A.," by Honorable Henry George, for the foundation of this brief history of the 7th Kentucky infantry, afterwards mounted, and from March 1st, 1864, under the command of General Abe. Buford, as a part of Forrest's Cavalry Corps.

THE EIGHTH REGIMENT INFANTRY, KENTUCKY VOLUNTEERS

From memoranda left by Colonel A. R. Shacklett and Adjutant James H. Bemiss of the Regiment, the writer has undertaken to furnish a brief and concise sketch of the 8th Regiment, Kentucky Volunteers (afterwards mounted), C. S. A., as an appendix to the published roster of this command.

The 8th Regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry (afterwards mounted), was organized at Hopkinsville, Kentucky, in the month of October, 1861, and on the 11th of November, 1861, elected Henry C. Burnett, Colonel; R. R. Ross, Lieutenant-Colonel and R. W. Henry, Major. Colonel Burnett was a member of the Confederate States Congress, and never assumed command. Lieutenant-Colonel Ross was assigned to command of artillery at Fort Donelson, and on February 3, 1862, Hylan B. Lyon was elected Lieutenant-Colonel of the 8th Kentucky Infantry, from the Captaincy of Lyon's afterwards Cobb's battery of artillery.

The Regiment encamped near Hopkinsville, Kentucky, until February 6, 1862, when it was ordered to Fort Donelson, marching from Hopkinsville to Clarksville, Tennessee, and by boat to Fort Donelson, arriving on the 10th inst. Colonel Burnett was present at Fort Donelson, but never assumed command of the Regiment and resigned on February 10, 1862. He escaped capture, leaving the Fort in company with General John B. Floyd. The command devolved upon Lieutenant-Colonel Lyon, who commanded the Regiment throughout the engagement at Fort Donelson on the 13th, 14th and 15th of February, and surrendered with the command on the capitulation of the Fort on the 16th inst., 1862. Among the captured was the gallant and conspicuously brave, Major R. W. Henry, who died a prisoner at Camp Morton, Indiana, on March 1, 1862. He was especially commended for gallantry on the field in the official report of his commanding officer.

The captured officers and men of the Regiment, were exchanged at Vicksburg on September 13, 1862, and rendezvoused at Jackson, Mississippi, for re-organization. The Regiment was re-organized on September 25, 1862, and elected Lieutenant-Colonel Hylan B. Lyon to be Colonel; A. R. Shacklett to be Lieutenant-Colonel, and Jabez Bingham as Major. After the re-organization, the Regiment was moved up into northern Mississippi, and encamped in the vicinity of Holly Springs and Coldwater. Retiring from northern Mississippi, the enemy was met and engaged at Coffeyville and other places, until encamped at Grenada.

The brigade to which the Eighth Regiment, Kentucky Infantry, was assigned in the spring of 1863, consisted of the 3d Regiment, Kentucky Infantry, Col. A. P. Thompson, commanding; the 7th Regiment, Kentucky Infantry, Col. Edward Crossland; the 8th Regiment, Kentucky Infantry, Col. Hylan B. Lyon; the 35th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, Col. Ed. Goodwin, and the 12th Regiment, Louisiana Infantry, Col. Thomas M. Scott. On the eve of the battle of Champion Hill, or Baker's Creek, there were added to the brigade the 9th Regiment, Arkansas Infantry, Col. I. L. Dunlop; the 54th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, Col. Alpheus Baker; the 25th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, Col. James Jackson; and Snodgrass' Alabama Regiment, Col. John Snodgrass, making in all something over three thousand availables, and placed under command of Brigadier-General Abram Buford, in W. W. Loring's Division of General John C. Pemberton's Corps. Part of the Eighth Kentucky was temporarily mounted to serve as escort and couriers for Generals Buford, Adams, Tilghman and Featherstone. In this command the Regiment was engaged with the enemy at Champion Hill, or Baker's Creek, Big Black Bridge, and Edward's Depot, Mississippi, and marched with Loring's Division from Champion Hill to the rear of Grant's Army on the Big Black River, Col. Lyon, of the Eighth Kentucky, served temporarily on the staff of General John C. Pemberton in the engagement at Champion Hill, and he and Col. Shacklett with about four or five hundred men from General Buford's brigade went into Vicksburg with that part of the army retreating in that direction. Soon after, Col. Lyon and such as desired to take the risk of going with him, were mounted and cut their way through the Federal lines and rejoined the brigade in the rear of Grant's Army, and became part of General Joseph E. Johnston's Army at Jackson, Miss. The Eighth Kentucky was of those who suffered severe losses at Jackson, on the 11th of July, 1863, and was in all the engagements of that army on its retreat from Jackson to Meridian, Mississippi.

In November, 1863, went into log house winter quarters at Canton, Mississippi, for much needed rest and recuperation. Left Canton in January, 1864, and moved to Meridian, thence to Demopolis, whence the Third, Seventh and Eighth Kentucky were taken from the Infantry and sent to Gainesville, Alabama, to be mounted and equipped as cavalry. After being mounted and equipped, the Regiment was ordered to report to General N. B. Forrest, whose command was then at Tibbee Station, Mississippi, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. The Regiment was then brigaded with the Third and Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Mounted, and the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, and placed under command of Colonel A. P. Thompson, and with Bell's Tennessee Brigade formed the division under command of General Abe Buford.

The future of the Eighth Kentucky Infantry, Mounted, is associated with the operations of the famous cavalry under the heroic Nathan Bedford Forrest, and starting early in its career with Forrest's raid into Tennessee and Kentucky, and the capture of Union City, Tennessee, with 1,200 Federal prisoners and a battery of artillery, the movement on Paducah, and the battle of March 25, 1864, in which the gallant Colonel A. P. Thompson was killed leading the Kentuckians against the enemy's fortifications. The command subsequently devolved upon Colonel Ed. Crossland, of the Seventh Kentucky, and who soon after was severely wounded. The Eighth Kentucky during this engagement was advanced as skirmishers, covering practically the front of the whole brigade. After the wounding of Colonel Crossland, Lieutenant-Colonel A. R. Shacklett of the Eighth, succeeded to the command, and renewing the attack held the ground until ordered by General Forrest to retire.

On the 14th of June, 1864, Colonel Hylan B. Lyon was commissioned a Brigadier-General and assigned to the command of the Third Brigade, Buford's Division of Forrest's Cavalry, and henceforth under the skillful leadership of General Lyon, the Eighth Kentucky as a part of the Third Brigade, took part in the brilliant engagement at Tishimingo Creek, or Brice's Cross Roads, Tupelo, Verona, Old Town Creek, Harrisburg, the raid upon Johnsonville, and the engagements at Sulphur Trestle, and others.

After these affairs, Forrest's Cavalry joined Hood's Army at Tusculum, Alabama, some time in November, 1864, and took part in the disastrous Nashville campaign. The Eighth Kentucky was in front of Hood's Army from the time that army crossed the Tennessee River until it reached Block House No. 2, about two miles from Nashville.

When the Confederate Army was forced to retreat by overwhelming numbers, the Eighth Kentucky covered the retreat until the beaten army re-crossed the Tennessee River. During that campaign, the Eighth Kentucky participated in twenty-eight engagements, including such bloody fields as Franklin, Murfreesboro, Spring Hill, Columbia, Maury's Mills, and others.

After Hood's unsuccessful campaign, the Regiment was encamped near West Point, Mississippi, to rest men and horses, and from the decimated Regiments of the brigade, an order for the consolidation of the Eighth and Twelfth Kentucky and the battalion of Lieutenant-Colonel Lee Sybert, into one Regiment.

In the consolidation, many of the gallant officers of the Eighth Kentucky were displaced. Colonel A. R. Shacklett was retained as Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel Lee Sybert made Lieutenant-Colonel, and Captain G. W. Clanton, of Company C, Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, was promoted to Major of the consolidated Eighth and Twelfth Kentucky.

On March 22, 1865, the Federal Cavalry, about fourteen thousand in numbers, under General Wilson, started its incursion into Tennessee and North Alabama, and the Kentucky Brigade was ordered from Waverly, Mississippi, to Montevallo, Alabama, to meet the raiders. This small force under Colonel Edward Crossland engaged the Federal Cavalry from Montevallo to Selma. At Ebenezer Church, or Bogler's Creek, a few miles north of Selma, General Forrest made an heroic stand with a small command of less than three thousand men in front of the overwhelming Federal force. The Kentucky Brigade was on the left of General Forrest's command and repulsed all efforts of the enemy to break their line, and held their position until the rest of General Forrest's small force was swept from the field. In the attempt to remount in the face of the enemy and under fire, the Kentuckians became divided, the larger part remaining with Colonel Crossland, the brigade commander, the enemy reaching a position between the Kentuckians and Selma. Something less than four hundred, however, reached Selma on the 2d of April, and were organized into four companies under Major John C. Horne of the Third Kentucky, Captain Henry A. Tyler of the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry and Lieutenant James H. Bemiss of the Eighth Kentucky, and attempted to assist in the defense of Selma.

For two days Crossland's small brigade stood up gamely in front of overwhelming numbers, and with skill and courage held the enemy in check while General Forrest was putting forth every effort to gather together the brigades of Jackson and Chalmers, to resist the heavy force of Federal Cavalry.

With a comparatively small improvised army of militia, and the Kentuckians under Crossland, General Forrest undertook to withstand the attack of Wilson's force, and finding that his efforts were in vain, fought his way through the Federal lines and closed the last engagement in which any of Forrest's men participated. The Eighth Kentucky, with the other Kentuckians, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, where they were paroled under the agreement of General Richard Taylor, of the Confederate, and General Canby, of the United States Army.

NOTE.—This company was organized at Jefferson, Texas, September 15, 1861, and reported for service in the Confederate States Army at Bowling Green, Kentucky. By special order No. 247, Headquarters, Western Department, Confederate States Army, December 1, 1861, it was attached to the regiment being organized by Colonel Thomas H. Hunt, then known as the 5th Regiment and subsequently as the 9th Regiment Infantry, Kentucky Volunteers. At the reorganization of the Confederate Army of the Western Department at Corinth, Mississippi, this company was on April 25, 1862, consolidated with and became a part of Captain Christian Bosche's Company "H." Most of the Texans were subsequently retransferred, May, 1863, to Texas organizations.

HISTORY OF NINTH REGIMENT INFANTRY, KENTUCKY

The following account of the action of the Confederate Congress has reference to the change of the 5th Kentucky Regiment to be the 9th Regiment Kentucky Infantry:

A joint resolution to correct the records of the War Department concerning the 9th Kentucky Regiment of Infantry:

Whereas the excellent regiment of infantry organized at Bowling Green, Ky., in September, 1861, by its Colonel Thomas H. Hunt, served with distinction at Shiloh, at Vicksburg, during the siege of 1862, and at Baton Rouge, as the 5th Kentucky Regiment of Volunteers, and is so mentioned in the records of the War Department, and

Whereas the War Department has since decided that another regiment is properly the 5th, and the regiment so organized and commanded by Col. Hunt the 9th; therefore, be it Resolved, by the Congress of the Confederate States, that the Secretary of War is hereby instructed to alter all records in his department wherein the 9th Kentucky Regiment of Infantry is mentioned as the 5th Regiment, that due credit may be given, and justice done, to that gallant and skillful officer, Col. Hunt, and the brave and heroic officers and men of said regiment.

(H. R., by H. W. Bruce. Read 1st and 2d time; reported back; engrossed; read three times and passed.)

The preliminary organization of the Fifth, afterwards the Ninth Regiment Infantry, Kentucky Volunteers, Confederate States Army, took place at Camp Boone, Tennessee, and completed after assembling with the forces gathered at Bowling Green, Ky., under Generals Albert Sidney Johnston and Simon Bolivar Buckner. The regiment was organized from recruits as they could escape through the Federal lines, and not under any State auspices.

The companies were recruited during September and October, 1861.

The notes supplied by the regimental rolls furnish in part, a concise history of the operations of the regiment as one of the First Kentucky (Orphan) Brigade.

Roll of Dec. 31, 1861. Oakland—On the 5th of October the regiment went into Camp at Camp Warren, near Bowling Green; moved thence by railroad to Russellville, on November 2; thence by way of Dripping Springs and Merry Oaks to Oakland Station. On the night of the 5th a guard from this regiment stationed at Whippoorwill Bridge, on the M. C. & L. R. R., had a battle with the Federals.

Roll of April 30, 1862, near Corinth, Miss.—Left Camp Clear Water, February 12, 1862, by way of Nashville, Murfreesboro, Huntsville, Decatur, Burnsville; thence to Shiloh, where we participated in the battle of April 6th and 7th, and marched to Corinth.

NOTE.—The officers of this command having failed to furnish muster rolls or any memorandum or official history of the marches and battles in which it was engaged, a more extended notice cannot be given. The following extract is taken from Capt. Ed. Porter Thompson's "History of the Orphan Brigade."

When it was announced that South Carolina had passed the ordinance of secession, Edward P. Byrne, a native of Kentucky, but residing at that time in Washington Co., Miss., determined to recruit and organize a Company of Light Artillery. He repaired to Memphis and contracted with Quinly & Robinson for the manufacture of six brass field pieces and with Street & Hangerford for carriages and caissons. This was the first battery manufactured in Memphis and was furnished to Captain Byrne and contributed to the service, by the citizens of Washington County, Miss. The guns were four six-pounders and two twelve-pound howitzers. The Company was composed of a fine body of better class of young men—Kentuckians and Missisippians—the horses were excellent and largely in excess of what was actually demanded for officers and for draught, and the whole was thoroughly and handsomely equipped. He reported to Col. Robert A. Johnson, then commanding at Camp Boone, early in August and entered upon the necessary drill and other disciplinary measures to secure order and efficiency. He was well supplied with blankets, tents and transportation for the comfort of his men, but he found the new recruits who had gathered there destitute of blankets. He communicated this fact to the ladies of Greenville, when they contributed 500 pairs of fine blankets for the battery and 2d Kentucky Regiment.

When General Buckner advanced into Kentucky, Captain Byrne's Artillery was sent forward with the 2d Regiment to Green River, capturing at Bowling Green a six-pound gun, which was added to the battery. The battery was engaged at Shiloh with distinguished gallantry. After the battle, when the re-organization of the Reserve Corps took place, Byrne and his Lieutenants deeming themselves so seriously aggrieved by the manner in which favors were distributed as to make service in another command more agreeable, resigned, and the battery was broken up, the pieces and appurtenances thereto being turned over to the Department of Ordnance and the horses to the Quartermaster's Department, while the men were assigned, some to Hoxton's Battery Light Artillery and some to Cobb's Battery, but their conduct in that first terrible field had been such as to win the warmest encomiums of the General and other officers who witnessed it. They were selected by General Beauregard to cover the retreat, arriving in Corinth three days after the main artillery force engaged had reached that place.

After his resignation, Captain Byrne repaired to Richmond, Va., and was nominated Colonel of Cavalry, with orders to report to General Bragg as he was moving into Kentucky. After the return of the army to Murfreesboro, he was offered the command of all Kentucky troops not regularly brigaded with troops of their own State, but preferred the command of a battalion of horse artillery with General John H. Morgan, with the rank of Major, before his nomination as Colonel had been acted on by the Senate. It was agreed that he should name his own officers and he selected those who had served with him in the old battery. Among them were Elias D. Lawrence, John Joyes, Jr., and Frank Peak, Lieutenants, and A. G. Talbott, who was Sergeant Major. Other worthy names of the old Company found impossible to procure, except those of some who were non-commissioned officers and gunners. They were Gantry, McGrath, Johnson and Vieaveland, of Washington County, Miss., and Wheatley and House, of Kentucky. Two gunners of the old battery were Hawes, of Kentucky and Cleary, of Chicot County, Ark. A gunner by name of Wilson is also remembered; Johnson was shot through both hips at Shiloh and Gunner Wilson distinguished himself greatly; while working his piece he had his right hand shot off, but refused to leave his post. Major Byrne was detached from General Morgan's command and fought with Breckenridge's Division at Stone River. When General Morgan returned from his Kentucky campaign, he rejoined him and with his battalion, took part in the subsequent operations of that officer.

NOTE.—This Battery was first known as "The Williams Guns," in honor of the inventor, McWilliams, who lived in Covington, Ky., and later in Lynchburg, Va.; also as the "Little Battery," or 1st Ky. Battery, but was better known as the Schoolfield Battery. It was commanded by Lieutenant J. J. Schoolfield until disbanded in 1864. The battery was composed of six breechloading guns, firing a 1-16 ball and was served by 2 men—one to load, one to cap, and one to shoot. The gun was mounted on buggy wheels and drawn by one horse and was very accurate at from 500 to 1,000 yards when using good ammunition. Only two of the guns are new in existence; one is in the War Department at Washington, D. C., and one in the possession of the

REMARKS.

34. Drowned while Battery was crossing Nola Chuck Creek in Tennessee.

Patrick family in Morgan County, Ky. There is no mention of the engagements in which this command participated or the execution of this breechloading gun. Lieutenant Schoolfield writes, "that one gun was loaned to Col. Tom Johnson on his raid into Kentucky, when it was lost or captured. The story of Col. Johnson winning the gun in a game of cards is mere nonsense. I do not think Col. Johnson knew one card from another, and no one connected with the battery ever thought of such a thing. The names found on the rolls of this Company belonged to the best families in Kentucky and were as gallant men as were ever in any army at any time in any country."

NOTE.—After the one year companies were mustered out, Captain W. J. Taylor's Company "A," and Captain Murray Brown's company, were attached to General N. B. Forrest's command. These companies were with General Forrest in all his raids in middle Tennessee prior to General Bragg's movement into Kentucky. On July 13, 1862, General Forrest attacked and captured the Federal forces at Murfreesboro, Tenn. This was one of the most brilliant cavalry engagements of the war. In

ROLL OF COMPANY G, FIRST REGIMENT CAVALRY,

This company organized in October, 1861; commanded by Captain M. D. Wilcox; was stationed at Hopkinsville, and actively engaged in picketing and scouting for several months. On February 8th, 1862, was ordered to report to Col. N. B. Forrest, and served under him for a few weeks during the investment of Fort Donelson, participating in the various engagements occurring during the week, and on Sunday morning, February 16th, 1862, while endeavoring to escape, were cut off and forced to surrender, many men, however, effecting their escape. Those not captured went to Nashville, Tenn., and there were attached to Company "K," 1st Kentucky Cavalry, commanded by Captain James K. Huey, and served with that company and regiment till their term of enlistment expired, which was for one year, when they were mustered out of service. The 1st Kentucky Cavalry was then re-enlisted and reorganized to serve during the war. The members of this company who were captured at Fort Donelson, were exchanged at Vicksburg, Miss., in August, 1862, and were sent to Jackson, Miss., and put into camp, and about September 24, 1862, were reorganized and attached to the 8th Kentucky Infantry. The officers elected by the company at this time were: Ben D. Terry, Captain; W. H. Green, First Lieutenant; F. P. Langston, Second Lieutenant; and Thomas B. Copeland, Third Lieutenant and W. J. Stone, First Sergeant. At the expiration of the year for which they had enlisted, several of the men were unwilling to serve in infantry and declined to re-enlist, but most of them did re-enlist to serve during the war. Those who did not re-enlist are erroneously reported "Deserted," between October 15th and December 1st, 1862. This company served with the 8th Kentucky Infantry during the North Mississippi campaign, during the winter of 1862 and spring of 1863 when the 8th Kentucky Regiment of Infantry was ordered to Baton Rouge, La., and were loaded in freight cars at Grenada, Miss., and at Jackson, Miss., were unloaded and put into camp at that point. Gen. Loring's headquarters were at Jackson. On the morning after the regiment went into camp at Jackson, Gen. Loring learned that this company had been enlisted as a cavalry company and was serving as infantry against the earnest protest of the men, and he requiring a cavalry escort ordered the company to report to him for that duty. The company was put into camp just east of the State House at Jackson, Miss., and was kept on duty there about one month. In the meantime, the men being anxious to be in active field service, made application to the Secretary of War, through Honorable H. C. Burnett, who was with this regiment in the various battles and skirmishes during the week and on Sunday morning, February 16, 1862, while endeavoring to escape, was cut off by the enemy and surrendered.

NOTE 3.—The rolls on file of this company are dated: November 1, 1861, to July 31, 1862, July 31, 1862, to October 31, 1862, July 31, 1862, to December 31, 1862.

KENTUCKY VOLUNTEERS, CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY

a brother-in-law of Captain B. D. Terry, for a transfer to General John H. Morgan's command of cavalry. The order came and the company reported to General Morgan in May, 1863, and was attached to the 5th Kentucky Cavalry, commanded by Col. D. Howard Smith. When Gen. Morgan started on the raid into Indiana and Ohio in July, 1863, all of the men of his command who had become dismounted by loss of horses becoming unfit for service together with all the men who were physically unfit to make that trip, were left in what was called a "convalescent camp." Part of this company was thus left behind. Those of the company who went on the raid and escaped capture at Buffington Island and those left behind and several new recruits who joined the company, became Company "C," of Kirkpatrick's Battalion of what was known as "Morgan's men," and served in this battalion till the close of the war. This command—known as "Morgan's Men"—was composed of the remnants of the various companies and regiments of Morgan's Division who were not captured in the Ohio raid. This company was never reorganized nor had new officers after the reorganization above referred to in September, 1862, at Jackson, Miss. Many of the men of whom this company was originally composed were killed, others died of disease, and others wounded. The company was mustered into service with 111 men, and came out with 18 men fit for duty.

At Cynthiana, Ky., on the 11th and 12th days of June, 1864, Morgan's men fought two battles with the enemy. On the 11th they whipped and captured General E. H. Hobson and his entire command of 2,500 men, besides a regiment of unattached Ohio infantry. On the afternoon of the 11th General Morgan issued a special order promoting the First Sergeant of Captain Terry's company, W. J. Stone, to the rank of Captain for gallantry on the field and for the manner in which he handled the company and the execution of a most difficult and dangerous order given him that day. On the morning of the 12th General Burbridge, of the Federal Army, attacked Morgan's command with overwhelming numbers and drove it from the field, killing, wounding, and capturing many of them. Just after sunrise on that morning a Spencer rifle ball passed through Captain Stone's right thigh, shattering the bone terribly, totally disabling him for further military service. His leg was amputated, and he was kept in hospital until May 16th, 1865, when he was paroled and allowed to return to his home, having made a splendid record for gallantry and devotion to duty and with the love and confidence of all his comrades.

Col. Ben Hardin Helm appointed Brig. Gen., March, 1862, was mortally wounded in action at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 20, 1863, greatly lamented by his comrades of the First Cavalry. On the evacuation of Bowling Green, the First Regiment covered the retreat of Gen. Johnson's army, arriving at Nashville, was employed guarding stores. Ordered to Decatur, Ala., guarding bridges of Memphis & Charleston Railroad; joined Gen. Forrest in his advance into Kentucky, in 1862. Assigned to General Wheeler's command, Sept. 14, 1862. Engaged in action at Perryville, Ky. The 12 months' men were mustered out at Knoxville, Tenn.; Regiment assigned to Gen. Buford's command, in January, 1863, under Gen. Wheeler's command at capture of LaVergne; engaged in actions at Hower's Gap, Chattanooga, McMinnville, Hill's Gap, Missionary Ridge, covering retreat of army; suffered heavy losses at Charleston, Tenn., Dec. 28, 1863; engaged at Ringgold Gap, Jan., 1864; camped at Oxford, Ala., Mar., 1864; The Regiment was constantly engaged opposing Sherman's advance to Atlanta; engaged at Dalton, Dry Gap, New Hope Church, Noonday Creek, Kennesaw Mountain, Pine Mountain Lost Mountain and Intrenchment Creek. In pursuit and capture of Sherman's raiders in Georgia; then ordered to Saltville, Va.; thence to Asheville, N. C.; rejoining Wheeler's command. After Gen. Lee's surrender, was selected by Gen. Breckinridge, Secretary of War, as escort for President Davis, and after his capture, the regiment surrendered and was paroled at Washington, Ga., on May 10, 1865, closing a long and splendid record of duty.

NOTE.—I am always glad to think and write about the gallant old First Kentucky Cavalry. It was as brave a body of men as any officer had the good fortune to command. If I sent them into action oftener than I should have done, it was because I knew they would be equal to any heroic duty which might be imposed upon them.

(Signed) LIEUT. GEN'L. JOSEPH WHEELER, C. S. A

Tennessee River, near Corinth, to the banks of the Ohio River, at Augusta, Ky., unsupported by the army, marching during this time nearly 5,000 miles with but little rest. There have been about 50 commissioned officers appointed from this company, ranking from Lieutenant to Brigadier General. The company records have been repeatedly lost or destroyed on forced marches in the enemy's country. This will account for omission of dates, etc., under remarks, and also for failure to name all those killed in action or wounded.

SECOND REGIMENT CAVALRY,

The organization of the 2d Kentucky Cavalry, C. S. A., virtually began at Bowling Green, Ky., October, 1861, when three companies of cavalry were united under the command of Captain John H. Morgan, constituting what was known as "Morgan's Squadron." These three companies, commanded respectively by Captains John H. Morgan, Thos. B. Allen and James W. Bowles, became subsequently companies "A," "B," and "C," of the Regiment, Basil W. Duke, 1st Lieutenant of Co. "A," was detailed to perform the duties of Acting Adjutant.

Soon after the battle of Shiloh another company commanded by Captain Brown was added to the Squadron; and John H. Morgan having been commissioned as Colonel, April 4th, 1862, proceeded to organize the regiment at Chattanooga in June, 1862. Three additional companies were quickly enlisted and the seven were commanded respectively by Jacob T. Cassell, Captain of Co. "A"; John Allen, Captain of Co. "B"; James W. Bowles, Captain of Co. "C"; John B. Castleman, Captain of Co. "D" (Captain Brown having been killed); John B. Hutchinson, Captain of Co. "E"; Thos. B. Webber, Captain of Co. "F"; and Robert McFarland, Captain of Co. "G."

The Field and Staff were John H. Morgan, Colonel; Basil W. Duke, Lieutenant-Colonel; G. W. Morgan, Major; Gordon E. Niles, Adjutant; Thos. B. Allen (previously Captain of Co. "B") Surgeon; James B. Edelen, Assistant Surgeon; D. W. Llewellyn, Quartermaster; and Hiram Reese, Commissary.

The organization of the regiment was completed during the summer and ensuing autumn, finally numbering twelve companies. The five additional were commanded respectively by: Gabe S. Alexander, Co. "H"; Wm. C. P. Breckinridge (subsequently Colonel of the 9th Ky., C. S. A.), Co. "I"; William Jennings, Co. "K"; Joseph Desha (subsequently transferred to the 5th Ky. Infantry, C. S. A.), Co. "L"; and W. H. Jones, Co. "M."

Company "I," commanded by Captain Breckinridge, was transferred to the 9th Kentucky, upon the organization of that regiment, and was replaced by another, lettered similarly, recruited in September, 1862, and commanded by Captain Samuel D. Morgan.

Many changes of course occurred in the roster of the officers of the 2d Kentucky Cavalry during the period of its service, by promotions, deaths and resignation. Its service really began when the Army under General Albert Sidney Johnston was stationed at and around Bowling Green. The squadron, which was its nucleus, was constantly engaged in scouting and picketing the front of the army while it remained in Kentucky, and after its retreat consequent upon the fall of Forts Henry and Donelson, and its march southward from Nashville. Colonel Morgan remained in the vicinity of Nashville for several weeks, in the immediate presence of the enemy, and constantly skirmishing with and harassing him; withdrawing, however, in time to take part in the battle of Shiloh, in which battle several men of the squadron were killed and wounded in a charge made upon the extreme Confederate left.

Shortly after the battle, Colonel Morgan undertook an expedition into Middle Tennessee, which was at first successful. He encountered and defeated the enemy in the vicinity of Columbia and Pulaski and other points, taking many more prisoners than his own command numbered; but on the 6th of May, 1862, was himself attacked and defeated with considerable loss by a brigade of Federal Cavalry at Lebanon, Tennessee. He, however, immediately entered Kentucky with his depleted command and successfully attacked a force of Federal Infantry at Cave City, making a number prisoners.

After the partial reorganization of the regiment at Chattanooga, in the following June, it proceeded upon the first Kentucky raid—as the expedition was termed—defeating the enemy at Lebanon, Tompkinsville, Cynthiana and other points, capturing nearly twelve hundred prisoners and destroying an immense amount of stores and supplies.

Upon its return from Kentucky, the regiment was actively employed for several weeks in the vicinity of Nashville, then the headquarters of the Federal Army commanded by General Buell. During this period, Morgan defeated many detachments of the enemy, taking more than a thousand prisoners; and finally almost totally destroyed a numerically superior and select body of cavalry sent under Brigadier General R. W. Johnson especially in search for him. He met this force at Gallatin, killed and wounded nearly two hundred and captured several hundred, including General Johnson himself and a number of other officers.

August 29th, the regiment marched into Kentucky, under

NOTE.—For Roster and Rolls of Gano's 3d Regiment, see Roster and Rolls of the 7th Kentucky Regiment Cavalry, C. S. A. Gano's Regiment was a part of 1st Brigade (Duke's) Morgan's Division and was known as the 3d Regiment throughout the war—Richard Gano, Colonel; E. L. Hoffman, Lieut. Colonel—but it seems there was some one who was operating in South-orders to report to General Kirby Smith, whose command formed part of the army then entering Kentucky under General Bragg. It was constantly and actively in service during that campaign; fighting in the mountains, where a part of it was engaged in obstructing the march of the Federal General George Morgan from Cumberland Gap to the Ohio river, while the remainder was observing the enemy in the vicinity of Covington, engaging in several sharp combats at Augusta and other points. Upon the conclusion of the campaign and when General Bragg was retiring from Kentucky the 2d Kentucky Cavalry assisted in covering the retreat of the army for several days, having frequent collisions during that time with the enemy. When released from this duty, Morgan was permitted to traverse Central and Western Kentucky on his way back to Tennessee. He made a dash on Lexington, defeating and capturing the 4th Ohio Cavalry, U. S. A., and a small body of infantry; and in his subsequent march through the state captured many trains loaded with stores and several hundred prisoners. The 2d Kentucky Cavalry participated actively in all of these operations.

During the month of November, 1862, the 2d Kentucky Cavalry was engaged with other regiments of Morgan's Brigade in very arduous and hazardous service; striving after Rosecrans had reached Nashville and before Bragg had arrived at Murfreesboro, to repel the Federal detachments sent towards the latter place.

On the 22d of December, 1862, the 2d Kentucky Cavalry proceeded with Morgan's command, then increased to seven regiments, upon the expedition known as the December raid into Kentucky. It took part in all of the engagements with the enemy—except one—of this expedition, and performed its full share of duty.

It was employed in very active and arduous service during the spring and early summer of 1863; taking part in the combats of Woodbury, Bradyville, Milton, Snow's Hill, Horse Shoe Bottom and numerous minor engagements.

It was one of the regiments which accompanied Morgan on the Ohio raid when he invaded Indiana and Ohio. It took part in nearly all of the combats occurring during the march across Kentucky, after Morgan had crossed the Cumberland and until he reached the Ohio at Brandenburg; and was engaged in the daily skirmishes with the Indiana and Ohio Home Guards after crossing that Ohio, and until Morgan's defeat by overwhelming odds at Buffington Island where he attempted to recross the river.

During this raid, and in the many months of constant and wearing service preceding it, the 2d Ky. Cavalry was greatly depleted in numbers. The greater part of the regiment was captured at Buffington's Island, only a few escaping; and it was never again reorganized, although a number of the officers and men who had not been made prisoners served in later improvised companies until the close of the war.

The almost ceaseless activity of this regiment made it difficult to carefully and accurately prepare and preserve its rolls, and those made out the latest were lost at the date of the Ohio raid; so that it is impossible to furnish its history in such form as would be desirable and proper. A full and correct roster of neither Field and Staff, nor of Line Officers can be furnished.

Upon the promotion of Colonel John H. Morgan to the rank of Brigadier General, Basil W. Duke became Colonel and John B. Hutchinson Lieutenant Colonel; and upon the death of Major G. W. Morgan, Captain James W. Bowles succeeded him as Major. The same officer became Lieutenant Colonel after the death of John B. Hutchinson and was succeeded as Major by Captain Thomas B. Webber. Colonel Bowles also succeeded Basil W. Duke as Colonel upon the promotion of the latter.

Gordon E. Niles was succeeded as Adjutant of the Regiment by P. H. Thorpe and by Charles Allen.

The 2d Kentucky Cavalry suffered its fair share of casualties. Two of its Colonels and one Lieutenant Colonel were wounded; one Lieutenant Colonel, one Major and one Adjutant killed. Six captains and fifteen lieutenants were killed and many of the other line officers wounded. There was a proportionate loss of killed and wounded among the privates, but because of the defective preservation of the rolls before mentioned, it is impossible to state what that was, even approximately.

NOTE.—Allowance should be made for those reported "Deserted." Many left to join other commands without waiting for regular transfers. Others were absent without leave and later on returned to duty, while others were cut off in the enemy's lines and could not rejoin their command and were erroneously reported "deserted" in consequence.

FOURTH REGIMENT CAVALRY,

The officers of this regiment having failed to furnish any history or official memoranda of its operations, the following statement is gathered from records on file in this office:

The companies which formed the nucleus of the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry, C. S. A., were four, and were organized about a mile beyond Owenton, Ky., on the 10th of September, 1862, by the election of Henry L. Giltner, Moses T. Pryor, William R. Ray and J. T. Alexander as Captains. Near Salyersville, Magoffin County, Henry L. Giltner was made Colonel of the regiment, which was numbered and called the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry. Moses T. Pryor was made Lieutenant-Colonel and Nathan Parker was made Major. The regiment, when the ten companies were finally organized, was as follows:

Company "A," Trimble Co., Captain Wm. R. Ray.

Company "B," Carroll and Owen Counties, Captain J. G. Scott.

Company "C," Owen Co., Captain J. T. Alexander.

Company "D," Pendleton Co., Captain T. E. Moore.

Company "E," Trimble and Carroll Counties, Captain Samuel Duncan.

Company "F," Carroll Co., Captain T. M. Barrett.

Company "G," Grant and Owen Counties, Captain J. T. Willis.

Company "H," Oldham and Henry Counties, Captain R. O. Gathright.

Company "I," Henry and Carroll Counties, Captain John Marshall.

Company "K," Various localities, Captain E. D. Whitaker.

On the death of Major Parker, at Wythville, Va., May 10, 1864, Captain Ray became Major, and Benjamin Duncan, 1st Lieutenant, became Captain of Company "A." On the death of Captain Marshall, in Virginia, in the spring of 1865, Lieutenant H. S. Chilton became Captain of Company "I," and when Captain Samuel Duncan was captured at Rheatown, Tennessee, Lieutenant H. H. Adcock succeeded to the command of Company "E," retaining command until the close of the war.

The first active service the regiment saw, and that was before it was fully organized, was in the fall of 1862 in connection with Marshall's and Morgan's brigades, obstructing the retreat of the Federal General, George H. Morgan, in his retreat from Cumberland Gap.

The regiment was involved in forty-three engagements with the enemy, besides numerous skirmishes, and including one winter's service under General Longstreet, when he was in East Tennessee, and when engaged in the siege of Knoxville. It was first under General Humphrey Marshall and finally under General John H. Morgan, until his death at Greenville, Tennessee, in November, 1864. After the death of General Morgan, Col. Henry L. Giltner became and was until the surrender, acting Brigadier General. The last fight in which the regiment was engaged was at Marion, Virginia, after the surrender of General R. E. Lee. It surrendered at Mt. Sterling, Ky., to General Hobson, U. S. A., on the 30th of April, 1865, the men being paroled and allowed to return home, there to remain until exchanged as prisoners of war. The officers were allowed to retain their side arms.

NOTE.—Allowance should be made for those reported as "Deserters." Many left their command to join other commands without waiting for regular transfers, others were absent without leave and later returned to duty, while others were cut off in the enemy's lines and could not rejoin their command and were erroneously reported as having deserted.

NOTE.—There are no rolls of this company on file; the company became detached from the regiment in the retreat of General Bragg's army from Kentucky, in October, 1862, and has never reported back to the regiment. Names and dates of appointment of officers not remembered.

There is an error in the above statement. The company was mustered into service at Camp Reed near Danville, Ky., as Company "E," of the 6th Kentucky Cavalry, C. S. A. A few days before the battle of Perryville, Ky., which was fought Oct. 8, 1862, this company was, by Col. Grigsby commanding the 6th Ky. Cavalry, sent to the counties of Green and Taylor to recruit. While it was thus engaged, the battle of Perryville was fought, the result being that Gen. Bragg's army began to retreat from Kentucky. This left the company behind the enemy's line. Captain Edwards then moved his company to Murfreesboro, Tenn., where he reported to Major Gen. Breckinridge. As the 6th Ky. Cavalry was then in East Tennessee, Gen. Breckinridge assigned the company to Colonel Gano's Regiment temporarily. It acted with that regiment until July, 1863, being designated as Co. "C" of that regiment. In July, 1863, it reported back to and again became an active part of the 6th Ky. Cavalry and served with it to the end.

Signed: J. W. ALCORN,
Adjutant 6th Ky. Cavalry.

NOTE.—The only muster roll ever returned to the regiment of this company was lost. While the company was serving with Colonel Gano's Regiment, it was borne on the rolls of that regiment as Co. "C." See that roll.

Signed: J. W. ALCORN, Adjutant.

Roll dated February 28, 1863, at Fairfield, Tennessee.—This company was partly organized in Wayne County, Ky., on January 18, 1862, and took part in battle of Fishing Creek. Organization was completed at Livingston, Tennessee. Was first commanded by Captain Shelby Coffey, who died of wounds received January 16, 1862, in Clinton County, Ky. The company reorganized and re-enlisted for the war at Burnsville, Miss., with Napoleon B. Stone as Captain. Participated in battle of Shiloh, April 6th and 7th, 1862. May 21, Captain Stone resigned and B. E. Roberts was chosen to command. Participated in battle of Murfreesboro, acting as couriers and patrols during the engagement.

(Signed)

B. E. ROBERTS,
Captain Commanding Company.

NOTE.—The "Old Roster" 6th Kentucky Cavalry calls this Company "H," the rolls on file are marked Company "B." The correct letter is "H."

 84. Transferred to Company "B," Malone's 14th Battalion, Alabama, Feb. 1, 1863.
 85. Died January 16, 1863.

NOTE.—The nucleus of this company was a body of about 15 men recruited in Wayne County, Ky., in September, 1861, by B. E. Roberts and James M. Saufley. In a skirmish with a company of Wolford's Cavalry in Fentress County, Tennessee, 29th of September, 1861, Saufley was killed. Roberts took the remainder to the independent company of Captain Scott Bledsoe and acted with it under the general command of Col. McNairy, of Nashville, all under the command of General Zollicoffer, while Zollicoffer was at Mill Spring. Roberts and Coffey completed the enlistment—the number reaching about 160 men. The company was transferred from one command to another, until it was finally assigned to the 6th Ky. Cavalry, J. Warren Grigsby, Colonel. The foregoing roll, with only a few exceptions as to officers, contains the names only of those who were members at the time of the assignment to the 6th Cavalry.

On account of the many casualties of war, this company which was originally very strong numerically, was reduced to the number of men whose names are here given. The names of many others are not now within my memory. At this date, Samuel N. Cowan, presently of Bozeman, Montana, and the writer, are the only surviving commissioned officers. It is probable that not exceeding ten members of the company are now living.

Roll dated February, 1863.—December 2, 1862, skirmished at Antioch, under Gen. Wheeler; was in battle of Murfreesboro under same commander. No complete roll of the company has ever been made out and furnished to the department.

SKETCH OF THE SIXTH REGIMENT CAVALRY,

The recruiting and organization of this regiment was begun at Stanford, Kentucky, on the 8th day of September, 1862.

When the regiment was organized Colonel J. Warren Grigsby, of Lincoln County, Ky., was made Colonel, Thomas W. Napier, of Lincoln County, Kentucky, Lieutenant Colonel, and William G. Bullitt, of Paducah, Major. The regimental staff was as follows: E. T. Rochester, Captain and A. Q. M., John S. Hughes, Lieutenant and A. C. S., J. W. Alcorn, Lieutenant and Adjutant, James W. Schooling, Sergeant and Major, John O'Neal, Quartermaster Sergeant, and Smith Hansford, Ordnance Sergeant. The Captains of the respective companies were (A) Robert D. Logan, (B) Thomas H. Shanks, (C) M. B. Perkins, (D) W. W. Cleaver, (E) W. S. Edwards, (F) William Campbell, (G) Thomas W. Gray, (H) B. E. Roberts, (I) Captain Jewett, (K) Captain Ireland.

The regiment was first assigned to the brigade of Brigadier General Buford and composed a part of that brigade from September, 1862, until March, 1863. While with that brigade it took part in the battle of Perryville and in various skirmishes incident to Bragg's retreat from Kentucky. It also actively participated in the battle of Murfreesboro, and for its conduct during that engagement received honorable mention from the brigade commander for gallantry and efficiency.

In the first days of March, 1863, Brigadier General Buford was assigned to the "Mississippi Department," and this regiment and the Fifth Kentucky Cavalry were then transferred to the command of Brigadier General John H. Morgan, with which it continued in service until nearly the whole of the regiment was captured during the last days of Morgan's Ohio raid. Soon after its assignment to Morgan's command the regiment took part in a severe engagement at Milton, Tennessee, in which Colonel Grigsby was severely wounded and Lieutenant Colonel Napier was so severely wounded that he was permanently disabled for active service.

When Morgan's command in the closing days of the Ohio raid was nearing the Ohio River it was frequently, each day, attacked by commands of Ohio militia. The Sixth Kentucky was, on the 18th of July, assigned as the advance of the command and was frequently attacked that day both by militia and regular troops. In every instance, when attacked, it dispersed the enemy so quickly that the march of the rear of the column was not, at any time, seriously impeded. Colonel Grigsby, although suffering from the wounds which he had received at Milton, Tennessee, took active command of the regiment that day. Morgan's command reached "Buffington Ford" of the Ohio River after night fall on the 18th day of

18th day of

July. There General Morgan ascertained that a body of the enemy occupied some earth works in position to control the ford at which he had expected to cross. Owing to the darkness of the night, he postponed, until next morning, an attack on the earth works. During that night his command rested in column, each man being required to hold his horse by the bridle reins so as to be ready to move at any time. Just before day break the Sixth Kentucky, and the regiment immediately in its rear, received orders from General Duke to move down the river to the earth works and carry them by assault as quickly as possible. In execution of that order the two regiments moved down the river in line perpendicular to the river. It was so intensely dark that a man could not have been discerned ten feet away. After the regiments had moved in this way some six or seven hundred yards, the left of the Sixth Kentucky ran into the earth works and found them abandoned. Word to that effect was passed up the line. The movement of the two regiments was halted for orders, and, while so halted, a considerable force of cavalry was heard moving along about one hundred yards in front and towards the river. It was soon found to be a body of the enemy, and the Sixth promptly moved forward and began firing. The enemy retreated in confusion. From prisoners captured it was ascertained that the force which had been attacked was the escort and a part of the command of Brigadier General Judah, U. S. A. They fell back to the main body of their force about a mile down the river and very soon began a forward movement with artillery and cavalry. The Sixth attacked that body, and, after capturing its artillery, drove the enemy back on its infantry supports. While the enemy was then held in check the sick and disabled men, including Colonel Grigsby, were sent across the river at the ford. By that time two gunboats appeared, coming up the river and throwing shells at rapid intervals. Owing to the smallness of our force it was deemed advisable to fall back for support. The Sixth fell back and formed a new line in the river bottom and remained in that position until ordered to retire from it. While it was in that position we could see the cavalry of the enemy overpowering and driving back our supports on the right, and we could also see a considerable body of infantry advancing directly on our front. The gunboats became more active and attempted to shell the ground upon which we were located. When ordered to retire from its position the regiment slowly retreated several hundred yards to the rear, and there formed to protect the retirement of a large force of our command which was still immediately in our rear. The regiment formed with its right flank confronting the cavalry, its center confronting the infantry, and its left flank confronting the gunboats. Of the conduct of the regiment on that occasion General Duke, in his "History of Morgan's Cavalry," says: "The Sixth Kentucky was almost surrounded. This regiment behaved nobly. It stood the heavy attack of the enemy like a bastion." It remained in that position until the men in our rear had left the field; then it began a hasty retreat, the objective point being a ford about two miles up the river. When we reached that ford General Morgan and his staff and a number of the soldiers had plunged into the river for the purpose of crossing. In obedience to orders to that effect the regiment did not attempt to cross, but remained in formation on the river bank watching the others who did cross. About the time that General Morgan had reached the east bank of the river the gunboats had crossed the range of the crossing and commenced throwing shells into the river at the ford. Seeing that a large part of his force was left on the west bank of the river, General Morgan dashed back into the river and returned to us. His face was as placid as if he were on parade. As he passed the line he called out "Follow me, boys," and with a cheer every man turned and followed him. After going up the river two or three miles he turned to the left almost at right angles to the river and after going several miles, halted to rest his command. About nd crossed over the mountain he turned to the left on a road hich ran parallel to and down the river. The march was t up all night long and until about three o'clock in the fternoon of the next day, when a considerable pursuing force the enemy appeared in sight. The Sixth Regiment was the ar guard of the column and by repeated skirmishes kept he enemy in check until we came near the town of Cheshire, the banks of the Ohio River. By that time the advance ith General Morgan was several miles away. We hoped he was safe. Our aim had been to afford him a chance to get out of reach of the pursuing enemy. We then made our last stand but were run over and captured by the superior force of the enemy. We were, of course, taken to prison and the greater part of the regiment was kept in prison until March, 1865, when a large portion of the enlisted men was taken around to Richmond on exchange. The officers, with a few exceptions, were kept in prison until the close of the war. The regiment, as a regiment, did not after the Ohio raid participate in any of the subsequent engagements of Morgan's command.

NOTE.—This company was recruited in August and September, 1862, and in September, 1862, was sworn into service at Camp Reed, near Danville, Ky., and joined and became a part of the 6th Kentucky Cavalry as Company "E," Colonel J. Warren Grigsby commanding. Just before the battle of Perryville, Colonel Grigsby detailed to go to Green and Taylor Counties, Kentucky, for the purpose of getting recruits. While there on that duty the advance of Buell's Army to Perryville, cut it off from communicating with the regiment and for that reason Capt. Edwards marched the company to middle Tennessee, and on arrival at Murfreesboro, not finding the regiment or learning of its whereabouts, Capt. Edwards reported to Major General Breckinridge, then in command at Murfreesboro, who ordered the company to report to General Morgan

 110. Forrest's command.

114. From 20th Tenn. Regt.; arrested and returned to his regiment.
 115. Missing in Kentucky.
 116. Missing in Kentucky.

at Hartsville, Tenn. This was done, and by his direction the company acted as a part of Colonel Gano's Regiment, 7th Kentucky Cavalry, in which it was designated Co. "C." In July, 1863, General Morgan ordered it to report back to and become again a part of the 6th Kentucky Cavalry. That was done and from that time until the capture of nearly all of the regiment at Cheshire, Ohio, July 20, 1863, it continuously served with and acted as a part of the regiment.

(Signed)

J. W. ALCORN,

Late Adjutant 6th Ky. Cavalry.
