The Whirlwind By Ed Barnes. WELL REMEMBER IT. SUB SHOULD COMBINE WITH SGA.

As one bird to another—or who gets the worm this time—most of us boys would starve to death if our eating depended upon our early rising.

With all the social events for three quarters being crowded into a three-week period, sleep is something to sing about...

With initiations, dinner-dances, farewell parties, and nights courting coming together quicker than points do for Great Lakes we might be just a little inclined to pass off the significance of another gathering...

It'll be in it, yes, along with several hundred others who will soon leave the campus to fight anyone, anywhere, who says that we don't have the right to pursue an education at the University of Kentucky in a democratic nation of peace.

That's what his historic convocation is for on Friday. It has come to my attention that girls, faculty, and townspeople DO care about our going, and they intend to prove it by turning out in unison to give us enthusiastic recognition.

All I can say, with a lump in my throat as I say it, is that we'll be appreciative, and we'll carry the memory of our school waving us on to victory to the heart of Africa, to the middle of Japan, and to the dark dirty waters of death.

Upon interviewing Son Reed and a few other prominent SGAs, I have been convinced that the student legislature and the Student Union board should be combined.

They don't wish to take away an ounce of the sweet life they have now. They are usually freshmen, as they have but one year in which to accomplish their purpose.

These problem children are the dumb young things that flock to colleges every fall intent upon getting an education, but upon getting a man.

They are usually freshmen, as they have but one year in which to accomplish their purpose. Either the sophomore slump or the flunk notice from the registrar's office is bound to catch up with them.

And so they transfer to another college and start all over again. Few make more than two attempts. By that time they are afflicted with too eager tactics or the stop sign from the keeper of the family money-bags.

In peacetime the coverings of these dew-eyed creatures was amusing. They acquired the reputation of being "hot numbers" and the Post Hall lounge overflowed with draped shapes.

During the past two years thousands of college men and women from all parts of the country have made a contribution to the Red Cross of which they may well be proud.

Remember The War Fund?

When March comes around next year, we hope the editor of The Kernel will not have to look over the record for 1942 and write...

In another editorial, the failure to make any important contribution to the nation's war effort was blamed on the absence of any organization to coordinate the various small campus drives and campaigns.

A proposal was made in the article for a Student War Fund into which contributions of various groups on the campus would go.

This was not only to mean a contribution to the war effort but the placing of a large fund of money in defense bonds, but was to mean a great deal to the University and its prospective students after the war.

The War Fund was not to put on a drive for donations from reluctant students. Instead of organizations giving affairs for some vague cause, they were to give them for the War Fund.

A committee was to be organized by the Student Government association to direct the fund. It was to be composed of representatives from the SGA legislature, ODK, Mortar Board, YMCA, YWCA, Saksy, Covens, Lances, Keys, Lamp and Cross, and the Student Union Board.

The editorial received a warm reception. It was widely read and commented upon. It was generally thought a splendid idea by which the University students could make a definite, concerted contribution to the war effort.

A bill embodying the features of the plan was presented to the SGA at its next meeting. The legislature was powerless to act in the absence of a quorum.

The University Falls In Line

Word comes that the University administration has worked out a plan by which soldier trainees, who will soon be taking work on the campus, may receive college credit.

Although the government has made no specific requests to colleges and universities that such a plan be carried out, institutions all over the country are falling in line.

The action comes as a welcome note to the many University men faced with the almost certain probability of call to duty before graduation. Many of these men in the enlisted reserve corps are but a few credits away from graduation now.

Some criticized the students and said that we seemed to be looking down on them. They said that we seemed to resent their being here. And that hit where it hurt.

Now it's almost spring (even though you can't judge by the weather). We've walked by their day after day on the campus, watched them stand out in the snow and rain making their drawings, become used to getting out "look" in the Book Store early because the Army liked them too.

Some criticized the students and said that we seemed to be looking down on them. They said that we seemed to resent their being here. And that hit where it hurt.

Perhaps the problem has been solved best by the entertainment of the soldiers at open houses and dances. There have been how many times these khaki-clad engineers really are.

Some criticized the students and said that we seemed to be looking down on them. They said that we seemed to resent their being here. And that hit where it hurt.

'Students In School For No Reason Should Get War Jobs' Speaker Says

"Students who are in school just because they have nothing better to do, should not be there; but should go out and get jobs to help the war effort," Dr. Helen Constance White, professor of English at the University of Wisconsin, told field-convocations and faculty members at convocation Friday morning.

But if students really belong in college, really are doing their work, they should stay there by all means, she said. Even industrialists who are out searching for good field work in their factories said that if students are doing well in college, they can stay there, that is where they should stay, the speaker added.

Even the army, so desperately in need of men, is sending them back to college for training, and is also sending men to be trained who have not had opportunities to start their college careers, Dr. White stated.

Ag Students Are Now Eligible For Marketing Jobs

All agriculture students with three years of experience, college training, or a combination of the two, in marketing agriculture products are eligible to apply for positions as marketing specialists in the civilian war service, it was announced recently by the Civil Service commission. They are needed to work with marketing problems as affected by Lent-Lease, food distribution, and other war activities.

"There is no more the idea that women are especially adapted to one kind of work and men to another," Dr. White stated. "Women are going to find that a great many of them are capable of filling many more types of jobs than they thought, and also many more in the field that they had not considered," she said.

"You women are going to have to work for what you get, and you will not be having some man smooth the way because of your good looks, or your use of the 'wearing in his shoulder' technique," Dr. White went on to say.

"Stability and flexibility are the factors needed in the working world of today," she said.

Another thing that is needed for a successful life in these times is the ability to keep growing until one reaches the grave, the speaker told the audience. Those who have talent will not get anywhere unless they have the urge to make the most of that talent, she added.

"Your greatest interest may be to be a side-line, it may even have to be put aside for your spare time, but do not throw away that talent, even in the press of war times," Dr. White urged.

A liberal education is needed just as badly now as it was in the past, and will be needed very badly in the future, she said.

"Hard rigorous lives can be grasped, as you in Kentucky know better than most people, don't let that graciousness go, for those of the future will need it even more than they need it today," Dr. White concluded.

Bettye Fraysure, Frankfort, has been elected president of Xi chapter of Alpha Xi Delta.

Davis-Durham

Miss Mary Olive Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace N. Davis, Lexington, became the bride of Lieut. Butler H. Durham, United States Air Corps, Seaman Field, Monroe, La., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Claude Durham, Danville, at 4:30 o'clock March 3 at the bride's home on the old Frankfort pike.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis, Jr., was the bride's only attendant and Alvin Lee Chambers, Jr., served as best man.

Leutenant and Mrs. Durham left for a wedding trip through the South. They will make their home in Monroe, La., where the bridegroom is a second lieutenant and pilot in the United States Army Air Corps. Lieutenant Durham was graduated February 16 from the pilot training school at Columbus, Miss. The bride attends the Centre college and the University.

Griffin-Woodruff

The wedding of Miss Mildred Marshall Griffin, daughter of Mrs. Robert Hollin Griffin, Lexington, and Ensign Wallace Jack Woodruff, Jacksonville, Fla., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace G. Woodruff, was solemnized at 8:30 o'clock March 1 in the First Baptist church in Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Phyllis Nippert, St. Petersburg, Fla., was the bride's only attendant and Robert Champ Griffin, member of the bride, served as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Henry Day high school and attended the University. The bridegroom attended the University and Northwestern western university. He recently received his wings and commission as Corporal in the United States Army Air Corps stationed at Jacksonville, Fla.

Information Will Be Shared Donovan Says

Calendar Not To Be Changed To Shorten Term

"Don't pay any attention to rumors. The very day that I get definite information about the soldiers to be trained at the University, I will share that information with the civilian students," President Donovan stated.

No more is known now regarding the number of enlisted men to be stationed here or the courses they are to take than was known a month ago, he said.

"Plans have not been approved to take over any part of the women's residence halls, nor is it probable that such plans will be made during the current school year," he continued. "This could happen in the future, as anything can happen," he stated.

The University calendar will not be changed to shorten this quarter. The only change that has been made in the calendar since it was set up over a year ago was made in accordance with the request of the Office of Defense Transportation that students not travel on weekends. President Donovan remarked that at that time a committee of students and faculty met with the president to make the decision to lengthen Christmas vacation and abolish spring vacation.

Donovan said that the University had been selected for engineering training of soldiers as previously announced. He continued that it is not known yet whether this will be basic or advanced engineering training, but it is likely to be for both. If basic engineering courses are given, these will include mathematics, physics, English, and history, to be taught by University professors.

"It might become a military necessity at some later date to take over the women's residence facilities for the army," Donovan commented, "but no plans have been made for such action." Some speculation as to the numbers that could be housed there have been made, he said.

National fees of fraternities and sororities in the United States have been estimated at $2,838,800.—(ACP)

'Cat Fencers Are Defeated By Boyne Tech

By RAYNE PRIDE

A battle of champions is to be the bill of fare dished out at Alumni gym tonight when the K-Club, winners of the Independent league diadem, and Alpha Gamma Rho, which captured the Fraternity league A crown, mix it up for the Intramural championship.

The K-Club, which was defeated twice during the Intramural season, knocked over the Western Thunderbirds last week in the finals to win the Independent league title.

Alpha Gamma Rho's quietest dropped only two regular season games, then defeated Phi Kappa Tau in the fraternity league A finals to earn the privilege of playing in the championship game.

Both clubs display a capable array of men and both play a steady floor game; however the K-Club hoopers have an advantage in height which may prove to be a deciding factor in the outcome. The K-Club's Bill Griffin and Charley Kuhn, both above six feet, delight in tipping the ball out of opponents' fingers, but they should find plenty of opposition in Roy Hunt and V. T. Jones, top AGR point-getters.

The annual all-ag basketball tournament was scheduled to begin last night with six quarters entered in the competition.

First and second round games will be played in the Gym annex Monday and Tuesday nights. The two semi-final winners will battle in Alumni gym Wednesday night for the title.

Kentucky's fencers completed their season Saturday afternoon in Alumni gym, where they were defeated, 9-8, in a hard fought match by Georgia Tech's swordmen.

The visitors bested the Wildcats in fols. 5-4. In the epee and sabre departments, the 'Cat fencers matched the Trechmen point for point.

John Swift and Prebert Thompson each lost two bouts in epee matches while winning one epee, Hubbard broke even with one win and one loss, and Dee Akers won one and lost one in this division.

In epee, the Cats tied three and took one. Akers tied two and Seymour Pading won one. In the sabre ranks, Bill Carroll and John Hubbard split even, each winning one and losing one.

Kentucky's loss to Tech was the second this season. The Yellow Jackets beat the 'Cats a fortnight ago in Atlanta. With two wins over the University of Cincinnati to their credit and their two losses to Georgia Tech, Dr. Charles M. Knapp's charges finished with a 3-0 average for the season.

Maybe Or Maybe Not

Decision on Kentucky's sponsoring baseball and track squads will be made at the completion of the current quarter. Bernie Shively, athletic director, has announced. As in the case of football, teams will be sponsored if enough boys are available, he added.

Should the University be represented in these pastimes, new coaches will be seen at the head of each outfit. As Kivian, football mentor, will tutor the cinder aspirants, while Shively will coach the diamond candidates. Joe Rupert last year's track skipper has accepted another position, and Frank Moseley, baseball maestro last spring, is now in the Navy.

The Sporting Way

By BAXTER MELTON

Another basketball season goes into the records, as 'Cat cage tots are moth-balled for another year. How long the net fencers will lie in state, no one knows—that's chiefly a matter with which Messrs. Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini play a major role.

Quite a season, this 1942-43 campaign was. Off to a living start, the 'Cat machine faltered in the middle, but sped to the front on the last turn, before injuries caused it to slow down in the stretch.

Kentucky-Western Squabble

During the season we watched the squabble over a Kentucky-Western get-together reach a climax. The winner is still to be decided in verbal battles, however, as full schedules prevented the contest again this year. As pressure is applied to both camps, via the press and other means, there comes the reasonable explanation that "Kentucky has two great teams, why not leave it that way." Coach Ed Diddle was reported in the Hillopper, Western's student newspaper, as saying that he had never asked for a game, didn't want one.

Our greatest joy? Without a doubt, 'twas that 60-55 trimming of Notre Dame's Irish while the 'Cats were at their best. Running a close second is the 55-20 rout of Tennessee's Vols in Alumni gym. On the other hand, our biggest disappointment was that artificial 33-30 triumph the Mauremen scored in the Southeastern Conference finale exactly two weeks later, when Coach Adolph Rupp's players were better cases for hospital play than basketball coveting.

Baron's 13th Year

We're superstitious, but here's food for thought—this year was the Baron's 13th as director of Wildcat hardwood destinies. The rotund gentleman took a quintet of three veterans and two unseasoned sophomores, nursed them into a potent, dangerous outfit, only to see them crumble after an injury-itis hit the squad.

It wasn't enough for the genial maestro to lose one center, Ed Lander, with a broken leg, and another pivot-man, Carl Althaus, to the Air corps. No, one week before the big show, Mel Brewer tore a muscle in his right arm, perhaps so things would be a little more even. Then in the semi-finals, Kenny Rollins hurt his leg, and the loopy trooper was returned to Knoxville on a victory as thin as leather will be on rationed shoes a few months from now. Even Coach Johnny Mauer, himself, said that he "was lucky to win, wouldn't have it Kentucky had been in shape."

This last edition of Rupp Riveters clawed the opposition for 770 points in 19 scheduled games, held the foe to a combined total of 649. Thus the Kentuckians averaged something like 40 points per start, while the enemy was tallying 34.

Lost-Won Ledger

On the won-lost ledger is found 14 games to Kentucky's credit, five on the debit side. In conference competition the Baron's "poor lil mountain boys" triumphed in eight of nine starts, losing only to Alabama, 41-32, at Tuscaloosa in January.

Were it not for the certain exit of players to what Coach Rupp so often refers to as the "big game," Kentucky chances in net warfare next year are as bright as a tropical noon-tide. Only three players will receive sheepskins in June—Milt Tico, Brewer, Marvin Akers.

Aside from the games won and lost, the outstanding-favorite-for-the-tournament, and all that, probably the major happenings of the year were Rupp's development of sophomores Muff Davis and Rollins, together with freshman Paul Noel. After only one year of collegiate experience, and that in frosh tots, Davis and Rollins stepped into varsity roles in a commendable manner. Rollins sparked the team throughout the tourney until his injury in the semis. Davis was a point-getter deluxe always.

As For Noel—

As for Noel, the manner in which the Midway freshman jumped from high school basketball onto one of the nation's top net teams needs no elaboration here. Court fans herabouts are very familiar with the first year man's performances.

Not to be overlooked is the well-earned recognition Coach Rupp received as "one of the greatest coaches of all time," by the Helms Athletic Foundation in its report, after a research of several years. Many former Kentucky players were also listed in the publication.

As the door is closed on basketball for awhile, 't'would be well to mention Paul McBrayer, assistant coach. The red-faced Irishman seldom receives much publicity, but is regarded as one of the major reasons Kentucky keeps its place at the top of the cage heap.

Kentucky Suffers Defeat; Great Lakes Wins 53-39

Naval Clan Registers 34th Win In 36 Tries

By BAXTER MELTON

KERNEL SPORTS EDITOR

Kentucky played a great game Saturday night, but Great Lakes turned in even a better performance, as the Bluejackets achieved a 53-39 triumph before 4,000 fans in Louisville's Jefferson county Armory, astounding accuracy from all angles of the floor enabled Lt. Tony Hinkle's clan to register its 34th win in 36 tries.

Being low man on the totem pole was no disgrace for the 'Cats in their last game. The challenge of the Mid-West visitors was not to be denied. In the first half they executed a clever double-block play that netted points aplenty. Bluejackets were continually shaken loose on set plays for easy shots near the hoop, and that's all they asked—the next item was a job for the scorekeeper. Ability to obtain more shots than Coach Adolph Rupp's Blues is one of the biggest stories behind Great Lakes' success. The winners got many more heaves than the Kentuckians, and what's more, their aim was unerring. Clever ball handling and aggressiveness also contributed to the victory.

Substitutes Potent

Not to be overlooked in analyzing the game's outcome is Great Lakes' potent array of substitutes. Lt. Hinkle had 12 men, one of whom was as good as the other. He'd send in one outfit as a sort of shock troop, then rush in another five to finish the job. Picking out the best of the bunch would be as factious as predicting a German victory in the current Russian theatre of war—there just weren't any. When a group of former All-Americans get together, 'tis a hard job indeed to be the big wig in the wigwag in a scoring sort of way.

Rebounding for Kentucky was noticeably poor. Maybe Mel Brewer's back injury kept the New Albany pivotman from playing up to par, but whatever the cause, 'Cat play on the boards was mediocre. Several times Great Lakes hoopers would grab the ball without a Kentucky eager being in 10 feet of the basket.

Former Male Star

Wilbur Schumacher, former Louisville Male high school netter and later a star at Butler University, led all scorers with a 12-point total. Bob Davies, the Bluejackets' top offensive threat, and Anderson tallied eight each. For Kentucky the boards were mediated from George Glamaek's foul into a point for his mates, but Hamburg broke his own scoring ice on a one-bander from the foul circle, and Great Lakes led, 18-11.

"Big Train" Akers revived waning 'Cat hopes by making his first long shot of the evening, and Brewer added a gratis toss. Eddie Hiska sent the Bluejackets into a 20-14 lead on a rebound and tossed in a fielder, but Schumacher nullified this with another of his sensational long attempts. Brewer turned George Glamaek's foul into a point for his mates, but Hamburg broke his own scoring ice on a one-bander from the foul circle, and Great Lakes led, 18-11.

George Sobek bagged a long one to give the Navy boys their first lead, 8-6, but Ace Parker narrowed this to 8-7 with a free throw. Schumacher arched in another long shot, and Parker made good another foul. Klein got away from his guard to sink a easy basket, and Schumacher upped the tally to 14-8 on a long heave, after stealing the ball from a Kentucky dribbler.

BOB DAVIES . . .

... didn't cause much trouble offensively, but playing a stellar year game as his Great Lakes mates gave Kentucky its worst licking of the year, 53-39.

tributed a two-pointed to Great Lakes' effort, and Kentucky took its first time out. Kenny Rollins, Westville sophomore who had been held out of the starting lineup with a leg injury, replaced Akers at a guard post. Noel greeted Rollins' entry with a one-bander from the foul circle, but Hamburg and Hiska dulled the enthusiasm after this with fielders of their own. The Baron sent Akers back in the game for Parker, and the "Train" responded with a crisp while Davies and Anderson tallied for Great Lakes just before the gun sounded.

Kentucky again took the tip-off as the second half got under way, but 'twas Great Lakes who scored first, when Anderson faked his guard and sank an easy crisp. Rollins dropped in a long one from the center circle, then scored on a rebound to cut the lead to 32-25. Davies made a long before Klein entered the action at center, replacing Glamaek.

and with 11 minutes and 50 seconds remaining in the contest, Kentucky still held a better-than-average chance of winning. Brewer and Akers converted personals, and Akers threw in a long for Kentucky in the next two minutes of action, while Davies and Anderson were counting fielders for the Jackets.

Navy Shoves Off

'Twas now that the Naval hardwoodmen began to edge away, however, as Riska dropped in a couple of two-pointers and Anderson contributed one, while Kentucky's only score came on a long shot by Rollins. Tico raised some hope in Kentucky followers with a four-point barrage, and Brewer pitched in a foul shot, and with seven minutes left to go, Great Lakes took time out.

Forrest Sprowl, who had just been sent in, tallied on an overhead effort, and Schumacher stole the ball from Tico, who was dribbling, and gave Great Lakes an 11-point lead, 47-36. Brewer sank a charity toss, Noel tipped in a rebound. Davies, Sprowl and Schumacher made fielders for the Jackets just before the game ended. Brewer fouled out with about a minute to go, was replaced by Clyde Barlow.
