

Roosevelt Goes Into Third Year In White House

President Encounters Conditions Vastly Different, Yet Strangely Reminiscent of 1933

CONGRESS THREATENS TO GET OUT OF HAND

Senate Rebellion Against Work-Relief Bill is Foremost

Washington, March 4.—(INS)—President Roosevelt began his third year in the White House today under conditions vastly different from that which squally fourth of March two years ago—yet rather strangely reminiscent.

Now, as then, he is confronted with something of a crisis. Two years ago it was financial. He was induced into office to deal with the dire conditions of the nation's economy. Today his immediate crisis is legislative. The music for his second anniversary in the White House is the growing of a readjustment of the nation's economic structure that threatens to get out of hand on a number of issues.

Foremost is the Senate rebellion against the $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill.

Next is the readiness of congress to vote the $2,500,000,000 soldiers bonus, which would upset Mr. Roosevelt's fiscal plans, and perhaps lead to currency inflation upon which he is not yet willing to embark.

Then there is the deadlock over his social-security program, which involves old age pensions and some form of unemployment insurance, and the fact that a hostile Senate is preparing a vigorous investigation into the operations of the NRA, Keystone of the Roosevelt Recovery Program.

As for Mr. Roosevelt, philosophically starting the last half of his administration, he is determined to "stop this business of relief."

He is now convinced, after months of experience, that millions of people will not seek gainful employment so long as they are assured of hand-outs from the Federal or State governments. He recently said so, in effect, while discussing the work-relief bill with congressional advisers.

won one game out of twelve, but there is one explanation that will be given for the failure and that was because the students would not turn out to see them play. The main reason for this was that the only available playing field was Epping Park, and as you all know it is quite a distance from the campus. No university athletic team can win games without the support of the student body, and that is the basic answer for Kentucky's poor showing in the college baseball world last season.

Last year's diamond team was the first one to appear at Kentucky since 1930; consequently it is logical reasoning that it would not win the majority of its games. No team can be a success the first year out—experience being the fatal cause. The team who composed the 1934 team had not played together since 1930 when they played on the Freshman team, and the three year layoff proved to be too detrimental. When the Athletic Council installed baseball in the 1934 athletic schedule, they appropriated $600 for the cause, and as far as can be learned only about $250 of this was spent, the team using automobiles for their road trips instead of trains.

After considering this at its full value we ask if this is a waste of money to give the boys who attend the University a little pleasure in the only sport they happen to care for.

In fact, the only possibility some of them will ever have of making a college letter.

Kentucky could have a fairly successful baseball team if the football practice field could be utilized for a baseball diamond—it was once situated there and so why can't it be put there again?

We could schedule games with southern universities and colleges who do have nines, as well as schools north of the Mason and Dixon line. If the diamond were placed near the campus the students would turn out for the games, and Kentucky could have a moderately successful team.

INTERNATIONAL CONTROL

"O War, I hate you most of all for this, that you do lay your hands on the noblest elements in human character, with which we might make a heaven on earth, and you use them to make a hell on earth instead. You take even our science, the fruit of our dedicated intellect, by means of which we might build here the City of God, and, using it, you fill the earth instead with new ways of slaughtering men. You take our loyalty, our selflessness, with which we might make the earth beautiful, and you use them to make a hell on earth instead, using our most valuable qualities, you make death fall from the sky and burst up from the sea and hurtle from unseen ambuscades 60 miles away; you blast fathers in the trenches with gas while you are starving their children at home with blockades; and you so bedevil the world that 15 years after the Armistice we cannot be sure who won the war, to sink in the same disaster are victors and vanquished alike. If war were fought simply with evil things, like hate, it would be bad enough, but when one sees the deeds of war done with the loveliest faculties of the human spirit, he looks into the very pit of hell!"

—HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK.

The remarkable scheme of the United States to establish international control of the arms industry received a blunt attack by Great Britain over the proposed arms treaty last week at Geneva.

The munitions industries, apparently, have things their own way in England.

Earl Stanhope, British delegate to the Permanent Conference Committee on Arms Reduction, proposed three vital modifications to the American draft which left nothing but a system of export licenses which is already used by his country. He was certainly correct when he stated these modifications were tendered in order to "simplify" procedure—at least as far as Great Britain is concerned.

The American plan advocates the regulation of arms traffic and manufacturer, establishment of a supervisory body which would send special committees to the various countries to verify their armament reports, and the publicity of armament expenditures. Lord Stanhope's criticism of "too ambitious," in reference to the proposed supervisory body preferring a plan of nations' filing reports at Geneva, reeks of the smug suggestions and hypocritical "assistance" pompously offered by leaders of the munitions industries.

Surprisingly enough, France supported the United States in the Geneva dispute as did Poland. Italy supported Great Britain, and for the first time, America is given the responsibility of guiding an issue through debate in this historic conference city.

We might well wonder what England's attitude toward this drastic situation would be if she were to conduct a munitions inquiry in the same manner as did the Senate in Washington. The plan responsible for the Geneva dispute was precipitated by the recent Senate investigations, and it appears that only the United States has been progressive enough to procure facts to prove that the present mode of existence of the munitions industry is detrimental to the welfare of every nation in the world.

Oh, for the Life Of Willie, Who Has No Quizzes

By BELMONT RAMSEY

How would you like to change places with "Willie"?

Willie has no home-work, no quizzes to get up to meet eight o'clock classes.

Willie sleeps from dark to daylight with time off during the day for naps.

Willie's baths are administered by an attendant. His food is served promptly every day.

Willie is never called upon to discuss the economic effects of the World War, or to spell rheumatism, or execute squads right, or write a theme, or solve for x.

Willie attends class only one week out of the year.

In short, Willie leads a life of great ease, right on the University campus.

Willie is a rat. Nothing personal—he really is a rat.

Willie says in a neat wood and wire cage in the animal building next to Memorial hall. He has a host of relatives and friends in the same building so that he is never lonesome.

Once a year for one week Willie has to take in a subject psychology experiment in Neville hall. Of course those psychologists make Willie go without anything to eat for a 72-hour stretch but that isn't so bad because he eats only one meal a day anyhow.

Willie is a rat—supposed, is taking a rat—lonal view of the matter.

A poll of women students at Murray State Teachers College revealed co-eds prefer "men who are men," broad-shouldered, and of the caveman variety to any other type.

In the event that all youse mugs would like to hear a good story, harken to what betfell Delt Rocky happened last Tuesday as he sat in the corner drug, behaving himself and not looking for any kind of trouble.

It seems that there was no good reason for going over to the Ohio house, so Rocky sat there, chewing the rag with whomsoever came along, until he was called to the telephone in a rather commanding fashion.

The feminine voice at the other end of the wire anxiously inquired one of her whereabouts and asked what he had been doing all day, adding that she has tried everywhere to find him.

Rocky replied that he had been at school, but that he wasn't busy at that moment.

"Well," sighed Phoebe Ellis, the Tri-Delt pledge, "I want you to come and play with me."

Rocky told her he would drop by later!

Just a Stage Door Joey

Recently we told you Charlotte Coffman, but one of our stagecoats told us that during the presentation of the late production of "The Swan," Joe Jordan haunted the stage door on account of he knew Thelma Goodrich would come out sooner or later.

Helmeck Staff

Once again our sympathy turns to the poor freshmen who are proving to their superiors that they can take it, Sunday at the gymnasium. We saw a group of them all decked out in their red neckties... But the joke was on the members of the fraternity they were pledged to... The concert was good... And deviating for a moment, on account of speaking of the band... All we know that the nasty old John Lewis, band director, is a meanie and he can make poor little Ruth Ethon cry... It occurs to us that the KAs must have dyed those shirts that awful pink and blue... A good story in connection with Pi-Kap Holloway, who was out on his road trip comes to our mind... It seems that Holloway, finding himself out on one of the lonely country roads at midnight, and being from West Virginia, decided that he was lost... He had to bump a ride or else... Holloway elated, and asked a farmer if he could spend the night there... The good brothers wondered where he was for some time... It turned out that the farmer, true to tradition, has a good looking daughter and that's all the story we heard... Yes, we laughed too.

It's In The Family

Half the campus, including us, has watched patiently for PhiDelta Bruce Shepard to pin Tri-Delt Virginia Young. We watched them going places together—we noted that they were practically inseparable, and then, just as we felt that we had something really sizzling with news, it turns out that they're first cousins. Were we chagrined!

We quite agree that we're harping on the Dells today, but the whole chapter seems to have suddenly become rather public with their actions. For instance, take the case of Tinker Dean, who is trying to bust up one of our present combinations—you know the one that extreme end of the Sigma Chi chapter is a part of.

Add laughs, Jack Crain calls the sophisticated, serene-as-a-statue Kappa pledge, Barbara Smith, "Barby!"

We would like to ask Kappa Sig pledge, Randy Rash, who goes around inquiring as to what everybody else thinks about the far east situation and so forth, just what he thinks about the little gal from Cleveland, Betty Bewley?

CAMPUS PERSONALITIES

By CAPEL McNASH

Her name is Ann Elise Kraft and she has brown eyes, black hair, and one dimple—in her left cheek. Judges thought so much of these features that they selected her as a beauty attendant at the Kentuckian dance this year.

Ann, who is a Tridelt, was born in Louisville in 1913, and spent most of her girlhood traveling from port to port with her father, who was then a navy man. More recently she has traveled considerable in Europe. In Germany she and the Germans do, drink beer and eat saur kraut and wieners. In France she drank champagne and rode bicycles, but in Switzerland she didn't ski at all—or even yodel.

Ann can't take it when it comes to the sea and air—she gets sick. The trip by air from London to Brussels, and from Brussels to Cologne made her feel not-at-all hungry, as did the ride across the Atlantic to Europe.

She isn't superstitious. Once the Kraft family started on a trip to Canada on Friday, 13. They missed their train, which would have been had back if this same train hadn't been wrecked a little later. On the same day the Krafts missed being annihilated by a cyclone. Ann is very fond of orchids, gardenias, bicycle riding, roller skating, and tennis. She prefers men who are tall and athletic, and her favorite color is black.

Ann lives in the country near Anchorage, Ky, which isn't even on the water and has nothing to do with anchors, ships or such. She has three dogs: a dachshund, a chie and a schipperke, which is a small black, tailless dog from Belgium, where they are used as watchdogs on the canal boats.

Ann is studying medicine and hopes to be a doctor. She likes wearing a dashband, a chie and a schipperke, which is a small black, tailless dog from Belgium, where they are used as watchdogs on the canal boats.

There are good poems in the volume, but there are others which I regret the poet did not write. Three of the best, considered as to content, imagery, and form, are "On Thoughts in Harness," "The Pawn," and "The Return."

 Her head stinks of its hood, her feathers reek

 Forsake this wrist, forsake this

Wine From The Grapes
 Edna St. Vincent Millay
 Criticism of Edna St. Vincent Millay's latest book, "Wine From These Grapes," has been profuse but inadequate. It is difficult for a poet to gain an enviable reputation during his lifetime, but once he has done so critics are likely to go on judging his current performance by what has been said or at least taken a long step toward intellectual maturity. Poetically, though, she seems to have gained little if any, rather she has lost some of the ardor, the intensity that constituted one of her chief appeals.

There is nothing here to compare with "Euclid Alone Has Looked on Beauty Bare" or with some of the sonnets in "Patrol Interview."

There are good poems in the volume, but there are others which I regret the poet did not write. Three of the best, considered as to content, imagery, and form, are "On Thoughts in Harness," "The Pawn," and "The Return."

On Thoughts in Harness
 My falcon in my wrist
 Returns
 From no high air,
 I sent her toward the sun that burns
 Above the mist;
 But she has not been there.

"Spring in the Garden," the last stanza of which suffers because Miss Millay has not always found "le mot juste" to create the effect desired.

And I fear that not a root in all this heaving sea
 Or land, has nudged you where you lie,
 Patience and time to direct you, numb and stupid as you must be.

From your first winter underground,
 "Sappho Crosses the Dark River Into Hades" has nothing of Sappho in it. Some of the poems, especially II of the sonnet sequence and "Apostrophe to Man," with its "the bewildered ammonia and distracted cellulose," reveal a straining after effect that is sometimes embarrassing, sometimes unnatural.

One section of the book is devoted to individual death, and the sonnet sequence concerns the death of a man. While the latter has some good parts, as XII, it is mainly a reiteration of a few ideas. It may be out of place to criticize the beliefs of a poet, but one may at least regret the fact that Miss Millay, after forty-odd years of living and thinking, has come to such uninspiring conclusions about humanity. She can offer no consolation except a turning from man to a disinterested beauty.

From cool and aimless Beauty,—
 Your bread and comfort take,
 Beauty, that made no promise,
 And has no word to break;

Have eyes for Beauty only,
 That has no eye for you;
 Yet she admist her own inability to do so.

Desolation Dreamed Of Whom have I quitted?—I propose to my possessions do I wish to leave.
 Not one. This feigning to be asleep when wide awake is all the loneliness I shall ever achieve.

A MAJOR SPORT

The game of baseball is considered by American people as the national pastime, but at the University of Kentucky it is considered a waste of time. Why? Because a Conference of the schools in the Southeastern Conference, of which Kentucky is a member, have the idea that the diamond game is nothing but money wasted, and they figure they can not afford to spend money on a sport that does not put large profits into the cash drawer.

It is true that last year Kentucky had a baseball team and it only

You like me best because I am so mellow, rich, flavorful. She chooses me in preference to other cigarettes for another reason; because I am so mild and easy on her throat. But you both prefer me because I am made exclusively from fragrant, expensive center leaves. That's why I'm milder. That's why I taste better. No top leaves, unripe and stinging; no bottom leaves, coarse and sandy, are permitted to destroy my uniform mildness and good taste. I'm your best friend. I am your Lucky Strike.

Seen From The PRESS BOX

Next Thursday night, when Kentucky plays St. Xavier's Messengers, you will see "Big Ed" Edwards make his most desperate effort to run up a high score, for it will be his last chance to break the all-time record for individual scoring in the south during a regular basketball season.

This score is for the schools of the Southern and Southeastern conferences, since there are records in the north that exceed the 400 mark.

He scored 23 points during his last appearance against St. Xavier, so that in spite of the closer guarding he will experience, he should give the fans the experience of seeing a new record set, what with playing on his home floor before the home crowd.

If Edwards comes through he should be cinched for the position of center on the All-American team. He ran into some bad luck Saturday night, when he was forced to leave the game on personal fouts just when he was beginning to get some points. Donohue had high-point honors, by garnering 14 markers with his long, low-arching shots.

Saturday's victory gave Kentucky 11 wins and no losses in the conference. They cannot claim more than one-half championship of the conference, since Louisiana State has 12 wins and no defeats in league play.

Wanted the suggestion for a series of five games between the two with the winner of three taking the prize. He mentioned the fact that the two first games could be played at L. S. U. and the necessary reminder for both schools, besides proving a good investment financially. Perhaps Huey Long would come up in a special train?

This is the shirt that studied anatomy!

The Arrow MITOGA owes its success in life to the fact that it is based on a study of the masculine figure. Its shoulders curve the way your shoulders do... its sleeves taper with the arms... and its waist is cut in just as are the waists of the great majority of American males. The result is a better-fitting, better-looking shirt than most men have ever been privileged to wear! And MITOGA keeps its superior fit because it is Sanforized-Shrunk—the old bugaboo of shrinkage can play no tricks with the size. See our Arrow MITOGAS today. They come in a variety of smart colors, patterns and models. $2 up
