Dear Sir:-

Your favor of yesterday just received. We are pleased to know that you are thinking of coming this way and believe that your stable will cut quite a figure here, as we do not anticipate a very high-class lot of horses as most of the great stables will be at Detroit during our meeting.

You say that you have six possible starters and are willing to pay on what you start, but want to enter with the privilege of not paying anything if you do not start.

This hardly seems like a reasonable proposition; and besides, we could not accept such conditions according to rule.

However, we will be glad to receive your entries and will charge you with all you make and credit your account with the difference between ^{entrances on} the horses you start and the ones you enter, if you will guarantee to either start three or more, or
