My Dear Husband,

It seems to me that this letter of Saunders, is of some importance, therefore I enclose it — We are getting along pretty well without Wollands. I think Theodore is going to take a pride in mending the furnace — I went out just now and found him on his way to look at the thermometer in the conservatory. George is the same old George, I had to get him some hot water and make him a mustard plaster last night — The accounts from the flood are no better this morning — I hope
