

Scholastic Santing For SGA Members Should Be 1.32

Opinions Vary From A 3 Standing To None At All

By NORMA WEATHERSPOON

Requirements ranging from the perfect three to no standing at all are advocated by University students for officers of the Student Government association as revealed by a special Kernel survey conducted with the approval of the SGA.

No one interviewed, however, felt that more than a two standing should be required for a representative to the student legislature.

The survey, in which 116 judiciously selected students were interviewed, was conducted to obtain a cross-section of student opinion regarding the requirements for officers and representatives of the Student Government.

From student answers requirements will be formulated which will be included in the revised SGA constitution now being drafted by a special committee.

According to the constitution now in effect, members of the legislature must have a 1.5 standing and officers must have 1.8. Officers must also rank among the upper 30 per cent on an examination to test the candidates' knowledge of the university.

The average standing adopted by those questioned for officers of the body was 1.72, slightly lower than the present requirement. Representatives should have at least a 1.32 standing, according to the average figure obtained through the survey.

Members of the SGA proposed an average of 1.3 for representatives and 1.6 for officers.

Jim Collier, SGA president, believes that a standing of 1.8 is adequate for both representatives and officers. His reason for having no higher requirement is typical of those advanced by all advocating a similar standing.

Others who felt that higher standards should be maintained generally stated that persons unable to maintain these standards lacked either ability, interest, or time which would enable them to be efficient workers.

Jane Kirk, women's vice-president, declared, "If the standing of the average UK student is 1.8, certainly those below average would be undesirable for representation. For the officers, I believe those selected in order to fill positions capable, should be above average. If a person has no time to gain a standing as high as 1.8, because of extra work or some other reason, then he certainly has no time to fill an SGA position efficiently."

While lowering the standing to 1.8 might open the door to some who are greatly interested in matters of SGA as such, and who therefore would make good legislators, it would also mean that many who are interested in the SGA would be excluded. It is believed that a standing of 1.32 would be a fair compromise between the two extremes.

Students In Enlisted Reserve To Be Called

The following telegram was received yesterday by Dr. Herman L. Donovan, confirming earlier announcements regarding the enlisted reserve corps. This official statement was issued by Henry Wallace, Commanding General of the Fifth Service Corps.

"War department desires you be informed college students in the enlisted reserve corps will be called to active duty at the end of the first semester, term or quarter terminating after December 31, 1942, except as follows: All medical and premedical students including dental and veterinary; approved engineering course students who are classified as sophomores, juniors or seniors; advanced course ROTC senior unit students; students in the electronic training group; and aviation cadets enlisted on deferred status under joint army-navy plan. Detailed instructions follow."

The president stated that it was probable these men would not be called until two weeks after the end of the quarter, thus allowing them ample time to go home before reporting for duty.

LT. STEPHENSON KILLED SUNDAY IN BOMBER CRASH

All Members Of The Plane's Crew Killed

First Lieut. Letelle Stephenson, who was graduated from the University in 1941, was killed Sunday morning when a four-engine Army bomber crashed a mile south of an air base at Topeka, Kan., according to word received by his parents.

The report stated that the accident occurred at 11 a. m. and that all eight members of the crew were killed. The plane was on a routine bombing mission.

Lieutenant Stephenson attended the University training school, Riverside College at Gainesville, Ga., and the College of Commerce here at the University. He was Kentucky State diving champion, diving champion of Southeastern Conference, member of the University swimming and boxing teams, and an intramural sports. A member of Pershing Rifles for three years, he was cadet ROTC captain.

He received his commission as a pilot at Victoria, Texas, in 1942 and was promoted to first lieutenant three weeks ago at Topeka.

WAR STAMP SALE REACHES $1171.20 ON THE CAMPUS

Mortar Board, Dorms, Sororities Promote Sales

A total of $1171.20 has now been reached in the war stamp sales on the campus. This figure includes the sale of three war bonds and is the result of the combined efforts of University women.

Members of Mortar board and representatives of the various sororities and dormitories have been participating in the sales. Those persons are Dorothy Angle, representing Hamilton house; Elizabeth Crapster, and Brewster Phillips, Patterson hall; Anna Garrett, Ralph and Mary Elizabeth Sigall, Boyd hall; Nell Dorsey and Olive Offenhauer, Jewel hall; Algonquin Dickson, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Virginia Baskett and Sarah Ann Hall, Delta Delta Delta; Margaret Hatcher and Frances Jenkins, Alpha Delta Phi; Mary Mason Taylor and Edith Weisenberger, Chi Omega; Norma Newinger, Kappa Delta; and Zeta Tau Alpha.

Added to this list are Shirley Thomas and Ann Papp, Alpha Gamma Delta, who will work in sales this quarter. Wanda Austin and Jeanette Quarver are Mortar board representatives in the drive.

Several sororities have not reported their sale of war bonds to the committee as yet. Zeta Tau Alpha leads with $371.30 to their credit.

These women have sold stamps the entire school year and the work will continue. Monday through Friday, from 10:00 a. m. to 2:00 p. m., there are representatives on duty at the desk in the Union building.

Beverly Griffith is chairman of the committee in charge of the sales.

Check Pictures

Heads of fraternities, sororities, and other organizations must check group pictures at the Kentuckian office today or tomorrow, Robert Kibler, editor announced. This check must be made to insure against errors on the pages, he explained.

CURTIS-WRIGHT SELECTS CADETS

Students To Enter Training Soon

Louise Wells, Bloomfield, education sophomore, and Mary Catherine Heath, Frankfort, arts and sciences junior, have been selected by the Curtis-Wright Corporation to be Engineering Cadettes under a new program recently begun by that company in an effort to obtain more engineers for its rapidly expanding war-time organization.

The two women, who were the only ones chosen from the University, will enter one of the seven-entrance school cooperatives in the program, some time between February 1 and 15.

Students to which they may be assigned are either Cornell University, Iowa State College, University of Minnesota, Pennsylvania State College, Purdue University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, or University of Texas.

To be eligible as a cadette one should be eighteen years of age or over, have successfully completed elementary college mathematics, and be enrolled at least as a sophomore in college work.

Final selections, however, will be based on such factors as the personal and school record, school recommendation as to character, result of a screening test, and an interview.

When the women are sent to the engineering schools, they are enrolled as special students and will receive special benefits available to the regular students. They will live in a special unit of the residence halls and will attend class 20 hours a week for the ten months' course.

Their tuition and cost of room and board will be furnished by the company. In addition, the Cadettes will receive a salary of $10 a week. Upon successful completion of the course, they will be assigned to a plant and to an engineering job according to their qualifications and interests. Their salary then will be dependent upon the type of work performed, between $130 and $150 per month plus time and a half for overtime.

Among the various fields that they may be placed in are drafting and design, stress analysis, experimental testing, materials laboratory, and technical analysis.

Canteen Courses May Be Offered

Tentative plans are being made for Miss Sunshine Sweeney, Lexington, who served as a canteen worker in France and Germany during World War I, to give a practical course in canteen work to University women students. Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, dean of women, reported last week that a questionnaire will be circulated to all women students this week to ascertain their interest in the course, which would include field demonstrations in mobile canteen work, discussers and war emergencies.

If sufficient interest is shown, the course will be given in Room 24 of the Union building from 3 to 4 p. m. each Tuesday and Thursday for a three-week period, beginning on Thursday, Miss Sweeney, who supervises the Lexington stopover station for service men, is an alumna of the University.

Students Report

Will the ROTC students who see the dog that bit the boy near Memorial hall Sunday afternoon please report to The Kernel editorial office in order to assist in identifying the dog. A dog has been taken up, but officers are not sure that it is the one that bit the boy.

Farm And Home Convention Will Start On Campus Today; Dr. Donovan Will Speak

Farm, Home Convention Speakers

GRACE SLOAN OVERTON

WM. ANNE SWEENEY

DR. THOMAS P. COOPER

MISS HILDA BEAL

FRANK C. ZINK

Dr. Cooper Will Address General At 10:30

Dr. Herman L. Donovan will be the first speaker at the thirty-first annual Farm and Home Convention to be held on the campus today through Thursday. He will speak on "The University in Time of War" at 9:45 this morning in Memorial hall.

Dr. Thomas P. Cooper, dean of the agriculture college, will address the general assembly at 10:30, speaking on "The Farm Family in a World at War." Dean Cooper has expressed the keynote of this year's convention in the words: "This is the year to do an extra good job of farming and homemaking to produce the enormous amounts of foodstuffs that will be needed to win the war."

"The Inter-dependence of Industry and Agriculture" will be the subject of the speech of W. W. Shoemaker, vice-president of Armour and Company, Chicago, at 11:15 this morning.

"Wartime Britain" will be discussed by Miss Hilda Beal, former-ly of the University, now in the British Information Service in New York City, at 1:45 this afternoon.

E. J. Nossis, instructor in agriculture, will speak at 2:30 p. m. on "Helping to Relieve the Labor Shortage."

Tomorrow's program will be headed by Prof. George Roberts, dean of the agronomy department, who will discuss "Soil and Security." Col. James H. Palmer, of Paducah, Ga., will take the place of Roy Hendrickson of the Food Distribution Administration, who was scheduled to speak at 10:15, but is unable to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, special agent in charge of family relations who was on the campus for the Religion in Life conference in London, will speak at 10:15 in the Chicago Club on "Normal Living in Abnormal Times" at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in Memorial Hall. Thursday at 10:15 the Chicago Club will discuss "Family Well-Being and the Permanent Peace."

Sergeant Alvin York, who captured 132 Germans single-handedly in World War I, will speak on "The Strength That is America" at 11 a. m. Sunday.

At 1:45 Wednesday afternoon Second Officer Anne Sweeney of the WAACs, will tell the general assembly "What It Means to be a WAAC."

The Oct.-November banquet held in Memorial hall at 6:20 on Friday, Francis Flood of the British Supply Council of North America as a guest of the Kentucky Club, the Chicago Civil Corp company, now a soldier in Lexington, will sing. Students who wish attend this banquet will be welcome.

Other speakers from out-of-town who will speak at the general session in Memorial hall are Frank J. Zink of the Farm Equipment Institute, Chicago, who will speak on "The Farm Equipment Situation" at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday, and Robert A. Hicks, of the Office of Defense Transportation, Washington, D. C., who will speak on "Transportation Difficulties of Farm People" at 9:45 Thursday morning.

Mrs. Ben H. Lowry of Lexington, wife of Lt. Col. Lowry, will speak on "Living Through an Air Raid and Traveling in a Convoy" at the women's session at 1:45 Thursday afternoon.

Besides the agricultural extension agents and county representatives of Homemakers clubs who attend the convention, members of the Kentucky Rural Church Council, the Aberdeen Angus association, the hobblede, guernsey, and Jersey cattle clubs, the Seed Improvement association, and associations for poultrymen, horticulturists, agronomists, and beekeepers will hold their state meetings in connection with the convention.

Dr. M. D. Ketchum Will Be Chairman Of Forum

Dr. M. D. Ketchum, professor of economics, will be chairman of the forum which will meet tomorrow to discuss "American Agriculture in Post-War Reconstruction." Dorothy Angle, senior in home economics, Dr. H. B. Price, professor of agricultural economics, and Prof. D. L. MacFarlane, professor of agricultural economics, will be the other speakers.

Mrs. Frank L. McVey and Jean Reynolds are in charge of the arrangements. The forum, which begins at 4 p. m. in the Music room, is open to the student, faculty members, and friends of the University.

Material Available For Amateur Artists

Amateur artists who have never given their talent an airing can now do so through the use of the poster room in the Union building, according to Virginia Calio, YWCA publicity chairman.

This room is open at all times to students who like to make use of their artistic tendencies but who do not have the materials with which to do so.

Any student who would like to make posters for the Y or the Union, should see Miss Rosalee Oakes in the YWCA office, and an assignment list materials will be supplied.

A definite schedule of work will be assigned students who plan to spend their time regularly at making posters. The poster room is sponsored by the publicity committee of the YWCA.

GUIGNOL NEEDS DEAD MEN

Play Held Over For Another Week

The thirteen dead men who make their appearance nightly after each performance of "Arsenic and Old Lace," the attorney filed with Federal Court Clerk A. B. Rouse an answer which asserted that the litigation had become a "most case" which could not now be decided by the court.

This change in the status of the litigation, the answer asserted, occurred when, shortly after Eubanks filed his suit, the Kentucky College for Negroes at Frankfort established freshman and sophomore year courses in civil engineering, commensurate with the same courses offered in the civil-engineering department here at the University.

The answer declared that the "established public policy of Kentucky" provided for the separation of white and colored pupils and that state laws require separate schools for whites and negroes on a basis of substantial equality and without unjust or unreasonable distinction or discrimination on account of race or color.

It was added that the University and the Kentucky State College for Negroes had been established in pursuance and complete accordance with these laws and firmly established public policy.

"The defendants state," the answer continued, "that until the present plaintiff made known his desire to pursue an undergraduate college course in civil engineering there had been no call or demand or occasion for such a special course in the mechanics arts at Kentucky State College for Negroes, and, in the absence of any such demand or occasion, or necessity, no such special course had ever theretofore been inaugurated."

Eubanks applied for admission to the civil-engineering department here at the University in the summer of 1941. The new civil-engineering courses at Kentucky State College for Negroes were established Nov. 2 of the same year.

The answer said that Eubanks received notice that the new courses were offered at Frankfort, but that he had never applied to the college for admission as a student.

EUBANKS SUIT IS POSTPONED

Wilson Asks Court To Delay Dismissal

Hearing on the suit that Charles Eubanks, 18-year-old Negro from Louisville, filed in 1941 for admission to the University as a student, has been postponed until February 13, according to Col. Samuel M. Wilson, counsel for the University.

Colonel Wilson, who previously had asked for a hearing on a defense motion to dismiss the suit, requested the court to delay action on the dismissal motion pending completion of all pleadings in the case.

After he had been granted the defense motion to dismiss the suit, the attorney filed with Federal Court Clerk A. B. Rouse an answer which asserted that the litigation had become a "most case" which could not now be decided by the court.

This change in the status of the litigation, the answer asserted, occurred when, shortly after Eubanks filed his suit, the Kentucky College for Negroes at Frankfort established freshman and sophomore year courses in civil engineering, commensurate with the same courses offered in the civil-engineering department here at the University.

Newly Naturalized Professor Reports For Armed Duty

By NORMA WEATHERSPOON

Today after being a United States citizen only 11 days, Dr. Konrad Bekker becomes a back private serving with our armed forces. The draftsman, instructor in economics before his induction, received his final citizenship papers on January 15, and is reporting to army today.

Protesting that his case was not unusual, Dr. Bekker, who was born in Berlin, Germany, explained that all persons who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens of the United States are subject to our selective service laws. These laws, he added, were passed before his country entered the war and had not been altered.

"I was drafted just like any native born citizen," he stated with only a slight accent.

The newly naturalized American lived in various parts of Germany before coming to the United States in 1936. Educated in schools in Germany and Switzerland, he received his degree at the University of Basle, Switzerland.

Upon coming to the States, Dr. Bekker entered the Brookings Institute, Washington, D. C. There he did graduate work in economics and sociology. He was one of approximately 15 students on fellowship at the Institute.

The University is the only school that he has taught.

The Whirlwind

By Ed Barnes

The SGA has received more publicity lately than Lucky Strike's green going to war. Yet the great mass of our students are no more interested in it than they are in the price of eggs in China. Many of us wondered if Norma Wetherstern's presence at the Sigma Nu-Alpha XI party would cramp Big Jim Collier's style, but outside of that, the feud between the Kernel and the student president wasn't followed by most of the readers.

WHY? Simply because few know what the Student Government is all about nor they give a damn. It is our honest opinion (my colleague and mine) that it would be unwise as well as unbecomingly to attempt to learn what goes on in SGA and to examine its purpose.

Since SGA's have been found to work successfully in many better universities throughout the nation, there is no earthly reason why it couldn't function properly on this campus. How many times have you signed a petition fully realizing that it would ever become of it? It is through such organizations as the SGA that the students may exert concentrated efforts to accomplish desired results. Whether you believe in politics or not, we believe you will admit alliances make it possible for individuals to be heard and

From a current popular magazine: "Cynthia looked up at him with coffee-colored eyes, and spoke in a soft voice. . . . In the same way completion was the color of thick cream. . . . Sounds like her mother was lifted by a rain cloud.

Litigated eyebrow department: The "Caucasian" followed a local with religious zeal, is conducting a series of forums on courtship, mating and married life. They are beginning with a lecture on the family.

The erratic weather all over the country has been causing no ends of flu, colds, and similar discomforts. If we can judge from the salutation on a letter from a friend of ours, she signs it "love and tissues."

Occasionally we regret the fact that we are not employed on the copy desk of some New York newspaper, because we are continually thinking up headlines which would go down in journalistic history. If we could only find a publisher. On some of the current news, for instance:

And then that story in one of the local dailies, telling how gas rationing was ruining the business for Fayette county's roadhouses.

What with Actress Frances Farmer jailed for six months on a drunken charge, Actress Midge Bellamy taking shots at her husband, Gene Krupa behind the bars on a narcotics charge, and Errol Flynn having his discomforts, too, we're wondering if it isn't about time that we begin to begin spelling cinema with a capital S.

Do You Graduate This Year?

What are you going to do when you graduate? Are you going to get a job along the line of major work you followed while in college or are you going to take the best you can get?

With but about two months left in this winter quarter of school this seems to be the question of the hour. Not, of course, for the eligible Army prospectives but for women graduates.

If you are struggling with that problem right now, you will have an excellent opportunity to learn what kind of work you will be best fitted for and the kind of jobs open to women graduates.

Members of the student and faculty committee have been published and these persons are questioning senior women this week to find the various fields in which the women are interested. It is necessary that you cooperate with this committee so that the conference can be handled easier, and in order that Miss Lloyd can cover as many fields as possible.

Junior women and August graduates interested in learning the opportunities available are invited to sit in on the interviews.

The fact that many graduates are not certain of what they want to do upon completing their college work is the idea behind the conference. Women will not be sitting at home to "keep the fires burning" during this war but will see to it that this is accomplished in a much different way. Work is wide open to women graduates now and their talents shall not be wasted.

Although the conservative idea that the "woman's place is in the home" is gradually becoming extinct the war is certain to bring a more definite change from this point of view than ever before. One cannot be satisfied to sit at home and read casualty lists and not be anxious to do his part any more.

The fact that women do have a definite work in the world is being recognized more and more as can be recognized on this campus. Look around you at the number of women who are holding important places in campus life. They aren't "soft" jobs either.

All in all, we can't go on living as we were. We must be ready for all changes soon.

So, senior women, if you have any doubts as to what you're going to do upon completion of your work here, be sure and attend this conference. Miss Lloyd comes here for you, and it is all possible, your problems should be "ironed out" during your talk with her. Don't miss it!

December 7-- In The Year Of 1966

Editor's note: The following article is reprinted from the VMI Cadet, where it appeared as "Apostrophe" by Peyton Thompson, editor-in-chief of the paper. We deem it worthy of student study.

"What's the date, dad?"
"December 7th, son. Today's an important anniversary. The Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor twenty-five years ago today."

"Oh, yeah. We studied about that in history. You never talk about it much. Jim's dad is always talking about it. He was among the first troops that entered Berlin."

"I'll tell you, son, Jim's dad entered the University the same year I went to VMI. The Army called him during the early part of let me see—1913. He got his Commission at an Officer's Candidate School, and they sent him right on over."

"Well, how about you? I thought you graduated from VMI that same year."

"You know, dad, that must have been a confused era of history."
"You're right, son—very confused."

"To get back to you, I still can't understand why you never got into any of the fighting. You say you graduated from college in 1913. Well, according to our history book, the war wasn't over until February of 1915. I don't get it."

"Well, you see we got out of VMI in May of that year, and by the time we got our commissions late that summer there were so many more overseas that they kept the rest of us here more-or-less for home defense."

"I'll bet you were pretty disgusted about missing all the action."
"Yep. Most of us were. The government promised they were going to send some of us over in the occupational forces, but as you've seen in your history book, we didn't do all the occupying and policing we said we were going to do after the war."

"That's another thing I don't understand. Why in the devil didn't we make Germany and Japan pay for bringing on the war?"
"The same thing happened that happened after the first world war. A lot of the women and isolationists over here started yelling about us meddling in European affairs, so we washed our hands of it all and came home to live to ourselves."

"But how about England and Russia and China?"
"The total number of Jews living in Poland at the beginning of the war, there were still in Poland only 2,000,000—600,000 having perished— but in the meantime large-scale evacuations and massacres took place so that, for instance, the ghetto of Warsaw, with a peak population of 500,000 early 1941 had but today fewer than 50,000."

"Well, I see how you feel. Maybe you'll get a chance in the one that's coming."
"Nope, it's too late now. I'm too old for actual fighting."

"Well, when we enter this one, I'll try to do enough for both of us."
"And I hope you will. Anyway, it's too late to lament something that happened way back in the 1910's. Turn on the radio. The president's supposed to speak at 9:30. Roosevelt's pretty old now, but I speak he's still good for a couple more terms."

Conference at the British Ministry of Information, on July 8, 1942, now and Random Gostep and Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, prominent Polish peasant leader and Vice-Premier of the Polish Government in London, gave the following information:

On the night of March 23-24, 1942, all Jews in the District of Lublin were driven from their homes. The sick and the disabled were killed on the spot. One hundred and eighty children, from two to nine years old, were taken from a Jewish orphanage led to the outskirts of the town, and murdered with their nurses. Two thousand five hundred people were massacred that night; the remaining 26,000 Jews were removed to concentration camps at Belzec and Trawnik.

A report from the Underground Movement in Poland corroborates Mr. Mikolajczyk's statement: "The wholesale extermination of Jews began in the General Government in February 1942. In Tarnobrzeg, the remainder having fled or remained in the territories occupied by Russia, which later were rescued by the Poles. In March, the ghetto of Lublin was purged of its inhabitants were murdered. The number of victims in the city alone was over 2,000. In addition, 25,000 Jews were taken from Lublin to 'unknown destinations.' A further 3,000 were put in barracks in the Majdanek concentration camp, a suburb of Lublin.

"There are no longer any Jews in Lublin."

"Of the 3,300,000 Jews living in Poland at the beginning of the war, there were left, following the German invasion, 1,300,000 in the General Government and 700,000 U. S.

Spring Fever, Sports, Movies

Don't think that Spring fever ever struck so early in the year before. We have gotten Spring fever in March, and even in February, but this is the first time that the bug has bitten us on January 22. And bite it did.

Of course, we may all wind up with colds in the head, but the day was lovely. The ground was thawing to a nice mush, which is perfect weather for the bug. And we saw that the daffodils had pushed up even more than they had at Christmas. All in all, it seemed as though Spring were not just around the corner, but right here.

Then we remembered that February 2 had not come around, and the ground had not had a chance to look for his shadow, much less be frightened by it. So we refrained from casting aside our winter coats, our long cotton hose, our gloves, and our red flannels, but clung to them jealously for fear that Mr. Winter might take a notion that his visit is not yet out. He is a long-suffering old cuss, but we like him a lot. All we ask is that he leave when he is supposed to, and not return before time for his annual visit.

When Saturday came and it didn't help that lay feeling one bit. Rather it aggravated it, and there probably wasn't a soul on the campus that wanted to stay indoors and study or work. At least, we didn't.

We spent our time sitting by an open window saying that we just had to get to work—and not doing a thing about it.

Wonder what will become of us when Spring really gets here?

Just for the fun of the thing, we were looking over the Orange and White of the University of Tennessee, and ran across the story and column devoted to the Cat-Vol game the other night. It was a good job of writing up a game, but the following lines made us smile a little:

"Cook had the difficult assignment of guarding Tico (sic), the sharpshooting Wildcat forward. . . . He took good care of Tico (sic) in the first half, but the Kentuckian slipped away from him in the second stanza. . . . Ted, of course, was pretty tired. . . . He played all the game with the exception of a few minutes at the last when he went out on personal furlough."

Now, we just wonder what Tico was doing all the time. Maybe he was resting during the first half so he could wear Ted out so that he could slip away from him in the second half so that he could make more shots so that he could hit more baskets so that we could win the game. We are willing to bet Cook wasn't a whole lot more worn out than Milt.

Can we help it if we are prejudiced?

Now that we have "warbled a song about spring" and taken a look at the sporting circles, we turn to the main entertainment centers of the city, namely, the motion picture houses.

Business is so good that the State Opera House, and the Ada Meade have started running full time again, if the ads in the papers are correct. You know, for a while they were open only on the week-ends.

And at the other theaters the SRO sign is up so much that it is beginning to look like a fixture instead of the usual "once-in-a-while" that it used to be. In fact, you consider yourself a lucky dog if you get a seat at all, and if you find two together, it is a miracle.

And while we are talking about the theaters we will also talk about the pictures. It has reached the place where you take it for granted that the movie will deal with the intrigues of the spy system, the thrilling dangers of the European underground, or the adventures of the men on land, in the air, and on the sea.

At first one begins to think that there is too much of this sort of thing, then one realizes that the movies depict the life of the nation. And this is the life of the nation. Each of us is vitally concerned with whether the leaders of revolts against the Nazi empire to carry on their work; it is our concern that we receive vital information from the enemy; and there is not one of us who cannot say that he has a son, a father, a brother, or very dear friend in the Army, Navy, Air Corps, or Marines.

Perhaps you walked out of "Hitler's Children" with a heart hamed for a group of people who would commit such deeds, but you also came away with a deep feeling of gladness that there are Americans who are willing to withstand anything rather than to say, "I am not an American." That is known as morale.

There have been jokes made about morale, but they are the jokes coming from people who have the deep rooted conviction that morale is something that no nation at war should be without.

Then you remember that you were certain that "Hitler's Children" was only a lot of propaganda, and not too subtle at that. . . . But you knew it was going to be propaganda when you went, and you were stirred.

Maybe you had better figure it all out this way. You go to the shows and you decide whether or not they are pure propaganda, and you are skeptical, if you wish. BUT, you keep that skepticism to yourself, because you may be able to go on and do all that you are supposed to do in the war effort, and still be a little skeptical about such things. But remember that there are people who, when they get a message that everything they hear is nothing except propaganda, will lie down on the job and say "What the hell."

And people can't do that and still expect us to win the war and the peace that follows.

Life Wasn't Ever Like This When Grandpa Was A Youth

By Dorothy Bellard

When grandpa tells you that "this young generation is soft because they don't have to undergo the hardships to get their education that his generation did," you can bet your sugar raisin book that grandpa never had to catch a bus for an eight o'clock class during war conditions.

Take this morning, for instance—after reciding my tongue with a little victory coffee, I shivered down to the corner to wait for the 7:15 bus.

Propping one eye open, I gazed hopefully up the street.

No bus, naturally.

Ten minutes later I propped the other eye open and looked again.

Still no bus.

But, having allowed myself plenty of time this morning (I thought), I remained cool and calm (respectably cool).

Fifteen minutes later the bus approached. Clutching a nickel in one hand and my books in the other, I walked to the curb with a song in my heart and a cold in my head.

The bus stopped.

The door opened two and a half inches and the driver yelled, "No more room—next bus right behind this one."

Twelve minutes and thirty-three seconds later I brushed an icicle from my nose and squeezed in the "next bus," which was a dinky, little, pre-war-looking vehicle that looked like a jeep with a retard.

I really didn't expect that man on the front row to give me his seat. I didn't even think it necessary for him to offer to hold my books, but I did have a hard time understanding why I had to ride all the way to town with his portfolio sticking in my ribs.

When the bus stopped I fought my way off, jammed my transfer in my pocket, and dashed across two green lights, barely escaping injury from a truck, two cars with "C" stickers, and a traffic cop.

You guessed it. My other bus had just pulled away.

I turned to the lady standing next to me and said in my best Sunday voice, "Oh dear, how expasperating. Then I turned to the telephone pole and said in my natural week-day voice, "Damn Hitler and buses."

When the next bus arrived it was two minutes to eight. In pure desperation I had managed to squeeze halfway onto the crowded bus when the driver suddenly decided that the vehicle had reached its capacity and shut the door.

I will always be grateful to the kind soul on the outside who shoved my other arm and foot in to me.

By the time I had walked across the United Nations center, I had covered every subject from sabotage to instruction. You don't have to be able to read to think deeply to catch their meaning.

The posters are sent through the British Information office in New Orleans. The Office of War Information, the information offices of the conquered countries, and various agencies. Some of the posters are sent by persons interested in the library or in the University.

The range from cartoons like the one of a childishly drawn Hitler on a vermillion background with a British soldier, to a picture of a plain white poster showing a strong gray flat holding a Czechoslovak flag, and bearing the appeal, "Arise Czechoslovakia!"

British posters like to depict colonial wars, particularly of the African campaign, and of sea battles. Humor is evident in a poster of a vivacious blonde holding hands with a dying officer, and the caption, "Don't tell her, she's not so dumb." Another poster needs no comment. It shows a lone seerly looking across barred wire entanglements to the sea, and the line, "England stood alone for the world for two years."

And Britain's great dominion, Canada, is represented by four posters. On a green background, a white knight on a rearing white horse is the shadow of a brown Canadian jumping a motorcycle over a hillock. He shouts, "Canada needs you for her new army." A crowned lion, carrying an unsheathed sword, striding beside a helmeted building armed with a sword fashioned from a lance is a personification of unity.

The Free French are present, too. A flaming poster showing a hammer caught in cogwheels exhorts the people, in French, to rise and aid the Allies by sabotage. A more sedate poster has the pictures of United Nations leaders in the form of a V. The cross of Lorraine, an archangel, and the tricolor decorate a poster bearing the picture of a Marine. "Aux armes citoyens, Formez vos bataillons!"

Co-ed Corner . . .

By Scott McCulloch

Hit the deck all you ladies and prepare to set sail with today's news of fashions.

Characterized coats take first place in the meet which opens the spring numbers and the weather looks like the Spring—again, and don't think that these little beauties aren't smart and snappy, cause they are. Coming in colors that a co-ed can wear with anything and everything, red, brown, green and black, you will want one for your wardrobe.

Not as expensive as some, and still better looking than most, these examples of the dressy, sex cool with the elements that were lacking in most coats are fit for the finish and ready to go West with the basketball games. You, like the Wildcats, will make a good appearance.

As a reminder that the hose you wear now, can and must last for months to come, take care that runs and snags are avoided. In case the delicate little things do decide to part company, take them to one of the various shops that mend them. These stores are good and see them in such a way that the tear cannot be noticed. However, don't expect miracles, for even expects are not able to mend a run that stretches over five strands of fabric. It takes a little time, but here comes one that I think will hit you right in the eye and stick there. It's powder blue and comes in a fabric that is exactly like net, although it isn't. The skirt is wide and swirls around your feet like a billion of blue smoke. The bodice is cut in a sweetheart neckline and has a low waistline.

Having fairly wide straps, the shoulder look exactly like that of a seagull. Rows of sequins blend from the waist and bodice down through the skirt in a floral design. The sequins aren't metal as they have been in the past, but are made from a plastic material that leaves them looking like a variety of colors and at the same time, blending with the color of your dress. Turning from blues to pinks and silvers, the effect is "out of this world."

Leaving you with your thoughts on clothes and the beautiful weather, let's make a date for Friday, Right?

Seal-It Crowd Sees Kentucky Down Irish 60-55 In See-Saw Duel

Game Was Second Win For Wildcats Over Notre Dame

By BAXTER MELTON
Kernel Sports Editor

Kentucky 60, Notre Dame 55. Behind that score lies the drama of a team that wouldn't give up, even after three starters had fouled out, and of a quintet that was determined to "win this one," if humanly possible.

For almost 40 minutes Kentucky's Wildcats and Notre Dame's Irish waged a see-saw duel that probably goes down as the greatest game ever played in Louisville's Jefferson County Armory before the 'Cats went in front to stay. The Blue success cut the Irish winning streak at six straight, and ran the Kentucky record to 9-2, with two wins in a row. It was the second Wildcat win in nine clashes with the Indians. Kentucky having topped once previously by a 19-16 count.

A sell-out crowd, estimated at close to 6,500, jammed the seats, aisle, corner, kept the rafters jingling throughout the tilt with cheers. Many Notre Dame supporters were in the stands, but, of course, the spectators were chiefly for the home-actors.

What many of the huge throng will remember is the way in which Kentucky, unable to break the Irish inner-defense, came to life from far out on the court. Mel Tico and Marvin Akers led the group of Blues who consistently tipped the net from outside the foul circle. Akers led the 'Cat point-getters with 17, Tico contributed 16, Muff Davis added 12, and Mel Brewer tallied 9, but to single out any one player for individual honors would be as foolish as endorsing Hitler's own government. All of the nine players used by action should receive equal credit for the team's success.

Bob Rensberger, Notre Dame guard, counted 17 markers, and Bob Faught, center, registered 16 to pace the leasers and equal the team punch of Akers and Tico for the 'Cats, but again, all of the Irish turned in commendable efforts. Faught's rebounding, Rensberger's floor work, Nemiera, Butler and Kuka's part in the fracas all added up to a potent offensive and defensive threat.

At one time the Notre Dame cagers led their hosts by 10 points, 37-27, soon after the second tip under way. At the intermission the Irish had vanquished the 'Cats, 33-27. One of the outstanding features of the thrill-packed struggle was the manner in which Kentucky substitutes played. The regulars had left via the foul route. 'Cat fans feared that this would be the deciding factor, that Notre Dame's huge list of reserves would mean the difference, but Clyde Barlow, Ace Parker, and Ed Lander, all sophomores, and Paul Brewer, a freshman, more than filled the bill.

In addition to the three Wildcats, two Irish were elected for committing four personals. Mel Tico, Kentucky's high scorer, Marvin Akers, co-captain and guard, and Kenny Rollins, guard, were lost to the Kentuckians. Francis Curran and John Nemiera, who were left early. As one fan remarked after Tico and Akers had both left the contest, "I bet I could pretty bad for Kentucky with 33 points sitting on the bench."

RAY KUKA - NOTRE DAME

BOB RENSBERGER - NOTRE DAME

margin to 29-24 on a long shot, and Kentucky called time out.

Akers again thinned the visitors' advantage, but Curran, sent for Nemiera, scored from the corner, and Notre Dame led, 31-25. Noel scored on Curran's personal, and Kuka tipped in two points for the Irish as the half ended.

The Kentuckians got the best of it in the first few minutes after intermission, as Tico sank two fielders, Akers, and Brewer one each, while Rensberger, Butler and Kuka were registering two pointers for the Indians. The Irish called time out again, but were greeted with Davis' one-hand push shot, and Faught rebounded. Rensberger flipped in a one-hander, added a tip-in, and Faught made a gratis shot to make the Notre Dame margin 44-37.

Rensberger's crisp and two foul shots, Akers' two fielders, and goals by Brewer, Davis, and Tico featured the next few minutes' play before Notre Dame asked for time out. Akers knotted the count at 49-49 on a shot from near the foul circle, added a charity toss before being waved to the sidelines with four personals.

Curran scored three points for Notre Dame, Brewer did likewise for Kentucky, and the Blues asked for time. Tico fouled out as play started, Brewer counted on a pivot-leave, before Rollins became the third Kentucky starter to leave on personals. After Barlow had replaced Rollins, Faught converted the miscue, but Barlow notified this by making good a foul pitch.

Rough play and erratic passes by the Irish highlighted the last few minutes, as Davis tossed in a crisp, and Brewer, Noel and Parker flipped in one-point shots, while Notre Dame's only offensive action was a two-pointer by Faught.

Eighteen fouls were called on Notre Dame, 17 on Kentucky. The 'Cats hit 10 of the 18 free throws, the Irish made 15 of 22.

KERNEL SPORTS

The Sporting Way

By BAXTER MELTON

Coach Adolph Rupp has been explaining his lack of capable reserves by the Wildcats' small list of breathers this season. And the Baron's explanation was borne out in Saturday night's success over the Irish, when Ace Parker, Paul Noel, Clyde Barlow and Ed Lander all showed that they're ready for the big time. Apparently the three-game tour down South last week did the trick, for the quartet looked a bit more sure of themselves than they did prior to that jaunt. So maybe the Man in the Brown Suit knew what he was talking about when he remarked that "We'll have subs aplenty once they've had a little experience."

Add this item to your Oddities in Sports book—Mrs. Howard Hostenstein, wife of a former Indianapolis Star sports writer, was not only an enthusiastic reader of her hubby's journalistic efforts, but a loyal helper as well.

Last week the Star wired Hostenstein, now a second lieutenant stationed at Fort Knox, to cover the "Cat-Irish clash. And there the Hostensteins were Saturday night at the press table in the Armory with wifey working alongside the lieutenant.

A darn good one-two punch, we say.

Now that the Hot Stove League has been in session for a few months, all-star teams of the exp-ite time ballplayers now in military service are an everyday topic. So we'll add our pick to the list.

Pitchers are the easiest of all, with Bob Feller, Hugh Mulcahy, Johnny Beazley and Ted Lyons heading the list. Feller was the Cleveland boy-wonder, Beazley broke into sports headlines with the Cardinals last summer. Mulcahy toiled for the lowly Philadelphia Phils, and Lyons did slab work for nearly 20 years for Chicago's White Sox.

At the first sack, we place Al Sturm, late of the New York Yankees. Creepy Crespi, St. Louis Cardinals, and Benny McCoy, former Detroit Tiger, vie for second-base honors, with Crespi getting the nod. Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, ex-Washington Senators, hold down shortstop and third respectively.

In the outfield we take Pete Reiser, Brooklyn flycatcher who made hill work a headache for National League pitchers, in left. If the middle garden goes to Terry Moore, Cardinal rover, whose fielding and stickwork have brought him the title of a "ball-player's ballplayer." Right field can be well taken care of by Enos Slaughter, another Cardinal ulmus.

Catching worries may be easily disposed of by giving the post to Mickey Cochrane, former Detroit Tiger manager and backstop. Incidentally, Cochrane piloted a mine representing the Great Lakes Naval Training Station last summer.

Campus football fans might be interested in the knce operation Clint Castleberry, Georgia Tech's star back, is to undergo this week. The pint-sized Wreck ball-carrier suffered a ligament injury in the contest with Georgia.

Of interest to basketball enthusiasts was the announcement that Florida was cancelling its inter-collegiate net schedule. The Southeastern Conference member held that its location so far south prevented its fulfilling scheduled dates without undue transportation troubles, so decided to forego its card. Plans are for a few games with service camps nearby.

Kentucky has had little success with Big Ten teams in recent years, but Saturday night the Big Blue whipped a team that has run over three Western Conference members this season, one at their twice. Notre Dame had lashed Purdue, Wisconsin one time each and Northwestern twice.

Cross Starts Career Like Ben Bernie And Jack Benny

By MYRTLE WEATHERS

Bill Cross, who will play for the Union's Mid-Winter Hop Saturday night, started his musical career like Jack Benny and Ben Bernie by studying the violin at the age of six. While attending grade school, he was left out of a brass band that the students were forming. Persistent and determined, he took lessons on the bass horn until he became proficient enough to become a member of the band.

The band was later abandoned in favor of a symphony orchestra, so the versatile Cross took up the cello and viola.

Finally he began to think of music as a profession and decided to some day form a dance orchestra. That's when he started studying the trumpet.

A native of California, Cross ignored Greeley's advice of "Go West, young man," and came to Kentucky to school. It was here that he formed his Blue and White orchestra, which has played more school and college engagements in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Ohio than any "name" band.

Now backed by the General Amusement corporation, Cross features the piano styles of Dave Parry, the novelties of Dave Mahanes, Ray Wetzel, and Jimmy Trevathan, and the songs of the Glee Club.

The dance, which will be held from 9 until 12 in the Bluegrass room of the Union building, is formal for women and optional for men. Admission is $1.

By EUGENIA BROWN
question: Are you in favor of prohibition in restricted areas near army camps?
Bern Cheek, junior: I don't indulge, but the liquor consumption should be reduced.
Robert Clark, junior: It would be a good idea—drinking is detrimental to both mortality and spiritually.
Pat Lewis, sophomore: Oh, good! Then all the bootleggers can have a chance.
Ward Barnett, senior: There should be some restrictions.

Cats Play Host To Vanderbilt Tonight In Alumni Gym For Second Home Performance

Cats Ride High On SEC Cage Standing

Riding high on the crest of a six-game win streak, Kentucky's Wildcats play host to Vanderbilt's Commodore tonight in Alumni gym before a cage-hungry crowd. No since the Fort Knox start some three weeks ago have the Kentuckians performed at home.

During that time the 'Cats have run over the better teams in Dixie, edged Notre Dame, one of the North's best, and gained absolute ownership of the Southeastern Conference's top spot, so the home folks are anxious to look over the boys and note the improvement.

Vanderbilt hasn't created any net history so far this season, but can't be taken too lightly by Coach Adolph Rupp's 'Cats. Near the middle in league standings, the Commodore has played good ball on occasions, and are capable of upsetting the Wildcats, if the Blues get too cocky.

Latest bit of Commodore work was a 48-43 success over Auburn, so the Tennessee won't be too easy a prey in the Euclid playhouse tonight. Olen, lanky center; Owen, guard, and Ray, deluxe point-maker, are reported as the big guns of the Commie attack.

Coach Rupp warned his boys not to take the Irish success to their heads in practice yesterday, told the boys that Vandy could very easily break that victory string. The Baron plans to start his "reservé" lineup of Mill Tico and Muff Davis at forwards, Mel Brewer at guards.

Friday the 'Cats depart on another Southland trek, this time visiting Alabama Saturday night, and stopping over in Nashville Monday for a tussle with the Commodores. R. M.

"An orchid, I'll bet?"
"Nope, a century plant."

SPAG'S NOTES
By Vincent Spagnuolo
It took the "Big Three," Marv, Mel, and Mel, three years, to take Kentucky nine contests which has spread out since 1916, but the never say quit basketeers of 1943 did the job. The Irish led most of the way until Akers put the 'Cats ahead 50-49 with 9 minutes to go. Two minutes later, the Irish made it 50-49 as Marv was given the thumb by the ref. Then Mel edged in two gratis tosses that took the 'Cats out front. Following this, the other "big M" rapped Bob Ransberger, Irish guard, and was ushered to the show-ers. And with only 10 minutes to go, Akers stepped one in from the post side.

All the credit doesn't go to the "Big M's" because it took five at a time, working hard, to whip the fighting Irish. And don't forget Mel Brewer's reliable, what seemed to be the starters. They came through when the chips were down, when the going was the toughest. And with only 10 minutes to go, Akers started a starting five play championship caliber type of ball.

As Noel, Parker, Landers, Barlow, and the others become more seasoned, Vandy's fresh from a 48-43 victory over Auburn Saturday night, will let the cat out of the bag to enable them to stay on the credit side of the ledger. Keep your peepers pinned on Ray, forward, Owen, guard, and Olen, pivotman, who scored 19, 10, and 9 points respectively in the Auburn tussle.

He: "My brother swallowed a box of firecrackers."
She: "Is he all right now?"
He: "I don't know. I have not heard the last report."

"I wrote a confession story once."
"No, but the editor came all the way from New York to meet me."

from Dallas, Texas: Whiskey prohibition and any life don't mix.
Jim Abel, junior: No, because the production of whiskey is a part of what I'm doing in the heart of Nelson county.
Thomas Whitaker, technical corporal from Pennsylvania: We had no experience in 1918, and you know what the results were.
Betty McLanahan, sophomore: The Robly part that would work is the bootlegging.
A. H. Sawyer, senior: There isn't any sense in it, but liquor should be controlled.
P. F. C. MacFarland, Philadelphia, Penn.: Drinking helps to cheer the boys, but it all depends on the man.

Hitting at another angle, it doesn't seem as the 'Cats will have an easy sledding as some supporters think they're going to have. It took the 'Cats an "all out effort" to edge Georgia Tech 30-28, while Alabama, last year's runners-up, outdistanced them 10 points, 35-25.

Meanwhile, down in Knoxville, the Yols were blitzing the Xavier Muskies 55-23. This didn't raise the value of "Wildcat stock" either, as the Muskies came within five points of downing the Cats.

Look for a closer game tonight is the general consensus of the campus. Vandy, fresh from a 48-43 victory over Auburn Saturday night, will let the cat out of the bag to enable them to stay on the credit side of the ledger. Keep your peepers pinned on Ray, forward, Owen, guard, and Olen, pivotman, who scored 19, 10, and 9 points respectively in the Auburn tussle.
