Christian Peterson, Famous Sculptor, Secured To Take Charge Of Work

LOBBY OF LIBRARY WILL HOLD PLAQUE
Dean Boyd Elected Chairman Of Committee On Arrangements

Under the leadership of Omicron Delta Kappa, assisted by faculty members and alumni, plans are being completed for the purchase of a bronze plaque to be placed in the library in honor of President Frank L. McVey.

The plaque, which will be approximately 6 feet by 4 feet, will be designed by Christian Peterson, of Ames, Ia., nationally known sculptor, who will come to Lexington as soon as arrangements have been completed. Dr. McVey has agreed to sit for the sculptor in the preparation of the design for the bronze relief plaque.

Bearing a suitable legend expressing appreciation of the high service which President McVey has given the Commonwealth through his leadership at the University, the plaque will be unveiled next fall, according to present plans. It will be placed on the first floor of the library in the niche directly opposite the main entrance.

Dean P. P. Boyd, faculty member of Omicron Delta Kappa, is chairman and treasurer of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the plaque. Berkeley Bennis is president of the chapter. Funds for the plaque are being raised by popular subscription, faculty, student and alumni being offered the opportunity to assist.

Resident Courses Will Be Offered For Spring Term

With the introduction of two resident courses in the department of administrative business during the spring semester, an unusual opportunity for students interested in new phases of vocational education has developed.

This department is inaugurating a pioneering project in distributive education. Individuals entering the distribution occupations of retailing, wholesaling, jobbing, and mercantile buying selling and various other merchandising activities will have an opportunity of training under teachers with practical as well as teacher-training experience.

To the courses to be offered at the beginning of the second semester are strictly teacher-training courses and have as their primary objective business experience. Academic training is also preferred as a background for the courses. This is the first time that work offered at the University in this field.

Teachers who go into this new phase of work will be selected from those who have had special training. The department of distributive occupations is under the direction of Prof. W. Marshall Baker and he has announced that he will keep office hours for consultation purposes on Wednesdays and Thursdays, and Saturday mornings.

One course, Education 112, "Determining Teaching Content in the Curriculum of the Commercial Department," is a credit course planned to meet the needs of persons engaged in administrative occupations in the field of distributive occupations. It will cover the analysis and course construction in the field of distributive occupations.

The other course, Education 116, "Problems of the Commercial Department," has as its purpose the discussion of the problems facing the coordinator as he acts in the capacity of intermediary between the school and the business world. Problems in placing students in stores, problems in teaching methods, problems in store contacts, and problems in securing the cooperation of personnel management, will be discussed.

Large Audience Hears McChesney On Vesper Series

Noted Lyric Tenor Presents Perfectly Sung Musical In Memorial Hall

By JAMES TREADWAY
Ernest McChesney, brilliant American-born lyric tenor, presented a perfectly sung musical in an attentive audience which completely filled Memorial hall Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied at the piano by Charles Ruetz.

McChesney displayed a superb tone quality and a perfect understanding of all types of music and perfect diction in German, French, Italian, and English. His voice showed the undeniable effects of continuing and conscientious application. To the great liking of the audience was the strong personality, which he loved him to inject genuine humor and feeling into the dramatic effect of the more serious compositions.

The well balanced program consisted of four parts and included a good representation in classical and lighter music. McChesney's opening selection was "Quando l'rivero," by Donizetti, which was received with the warmest of enthusiasm. However, Handel's "Lasciatevi sedurre" from "Judas Maccabeus," was so filled with reverence and determination that it was admirably done.

Three numbers in German and two in French were sung in the second group of selections. Gritz's "Letzer Puhling" not only served to illustrate the tenor's ability, but also enabled the audience to appreciate the excellence of Ruetz's accompaniment. In many ways the best rendition of the part of Dr. Rudolf Bingen, a University professor, John Lansing portrayed the part of Dr. Bingen's wife, Mrs. Bingen, who played the part of Bertha Maller, a cousin of Gabriel.

After the play German songs were sung and games were played. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Moir Tallies Twenty Points In Foul Fest; Thompson Leads Wildcats With Fifteen

A struggling Kentucky five fighting desperately to end its losing streak, was vanquished for the third consecutive time when it fell before Notre Dame's fighting Irish, 47 to 37, at South Bend on Saturday night.

The Wildcats, playing one of their best games of the season, deserved a kinder fate. The fray was tough throughout, with 23 personal fouls being called. Grats, too, rather than field goals, chiefly decided the outcome as the Irish sank 15 to the Cats' 9.

Johnny Moir, the All-American forward who the Ruppys had been cautioned to stick to like glue, proved too slippery for his guards who completed 20 fouls. Tub Thompson showed the finest form of his collegiate career, making 15 points and holding Newark, All-American center, to a lone field goal.

With Kentucky shooting everything it had, the lead seceded throughout the first half. Midway through the second half, the Irish led by a 11-9 lead and then raked up several points in succession to take what proved to be a commanding advantage. The Cats, having their only hot streak of the night, then cut the lead to 23-29 at the rest period.

At one time the Ruppys came within two points, 25-23, of the closing session. Then Moir and the Irish closed by shooting a basket, connected from all angles to gain a safe lead. In the last five minutes the Irish, who had managed to free the ball as Kentucky fought recklessly, rose, in the final period, to lead the game on personals.

Gridmen's Draft, Constructed Under Faculty Supervision, Represents First Step Towards Shake-Up

STATE-WIDE ALUMNI GROUPS TO CONVENE

Meetings To Be Held In Ashland, Covington, Louisville, Paducah And Pineville

A plan, outlining steps toward reforming the University's Athletic association, will be presented to the Reorganization committee today by three members of the football team.

Drawn up by L. Col. B. E. Brewer, James S. Shropshire, and Bernie Shively, who acted as advisory advisors, and Sherman Hinkley, J. Vincent Robinson, and Lawrence Garland, varsity gridmen who instigated the proposed improvement, the new athletic constitution is the product of intensive study and thought.

"When the players' plan is placed before the committee, it will represent the first thrust at reorganizing the University's administration of sports. From the supply of aroused interest, prevailing, the pickup draft is the leader of what is to be a sea of suggestions.

Alumni meetings, to discuss the potential athletic shake-up, will be held in various cities in the state. It was decided at a recent session of the executive committee of the Alumni association in the Lafayette hotel Sunday night. Marcus Rowland, alumni chairman, presided.

Prof. M. E. Ligon, president of the Reorganization committee, will sit in at each of these convocations. He will hear all ideas and reform motions aimed at the athletic program.

Within the next few days meetings will be held in Louisville, Paducah, Pineville, Ashland, and Covington.

YW Senior Cabinet Resolution Flays Campus Politics

Politics on the University campus were discussed at the meeting of the Y. W. C. A. senior cabinet, which formulated one resolution.

Bureau Requests Alumni Assistance

Group Of Material Needed To Assist In Completing History Of University

The Bureau of Source Materials in Higher Education, under the direction of Prof. Ezra R. Gillis, is seeking from the alumni of the University assistance in locating and returning to the University group of materials which will complete the history of the University.

These materials include copies of the "State College Cadet," "The Transit," a civil engineering publication, and "The Idea," the student newspaper which preceded the Kernel. Particularly desired are all copies of the "State College Cadet," "The Transit," and copies of the "Idea" for 1909-10, September 20, 1910, and May 29, 1911. Various copies of alumni publications which are lacking in the University files are also being sought by Professor Gillis.

Individual publications of alumni of the University are also requested, as well as pictures of the University buildings, faculty and students; and biographical sketches of faculty and outstanding alumni and former students.

The Bureau of Source Materials in Higher Education was organized to provide a research laboratory in the field of higher education for graduate students by acquiring and preserving source materials, and by locating and listing all other available material in this field.

Our Educational System

ALWAYS appears during the last week of a school semester is a discussion of the educational system. Always, after weighing relevant factors carefully, it is only possible to reach one definite conclusion: something is wrong with the system and the fault lies either with the educator or student—or both.

When one studies the entire system, one must necessarily take into consideration two major factors: what educators set out to accomplish; and what they do accomplish. It is somewhere along the process of reaching this set goal that the educator and the student reach a difference of opinion as to what is best for society.

In the opinions of many scholars of today, the most unfortunate part of our educational system is the prevalent trend of preparing a student, not to think of everyday problems with a view toward improvement of general conditions, but preparing a student to earn a living. Many educators believe that the more technical training one has, the more money he will be able to earn, and consequently provide better for himself.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of Chicago University, and one of the leading scholars of today, not so long ago remarked that the American educational system enables one "to acquire a great mass of knowledge about many things, but this knowledge is not correlated." In further commenting on the system, Doctor Hutchins stated that "the American people are unable to apply their knowledge to their everyday problems."

It can be construed from President Hutchins' statements that the system today puts no emphasis on genuine culture. Culture, naturally, cannot be obtained from technical training. Before one can obtain culture, one must understand what it is, and must have some background for retaining it. There is no better background for culture than proper classical and historical reading.

An early seventeenth century superstition was that "raw cow's milk causes bovine characteristics in infants and children," which may cause the average taxpayer to speculate as to whether or not he was raised on goat's milk.

Student Advice Desired

AN STUDENT of the University of Kentucky has been invited by Prof. M. E. Ligon, chairman of the Reorganization committee, to present his views on the situation to the committee or any of its members.

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the athletic council. If you have opposed some of the council's actions, the coaching system, alumni assistance (or lack of it), and the financial complications, Professor Ligon wants you, as a friend of the University, to submit your ideas for consideration by the Reorganization committee.

The student body, instead of confining its opinions to street corner discussion, can now lend its aid to the rebuilding of the University's Athletic association.

Scrap Irony

PEOPLE who eat in cafes invariably fall into one of two distinct categories. There are those who can attract waiters, and there are those who cannot attract waiters. Somehow, we seem to belong in the latter group. It's distressing really, because there are times in every man's life when it becomes absolutely necessary that he attract a waiter, and that he do it with a certain amount of finesse. Of course, anyone can whistle at a waiter. That's not the idea. That's plebeian. Its those fellows who can lift an eyebrow and have a waiter at their elbow that we envy. In spite of what the psychologists say, we believe that this trait, this ability to attract waiters, it totally unlearned. There's no way to learn how to attract a waiter, we know!

The waiters know it too. They can tell a waiter-attractor just like they can tell a tipper. You feel it the minute you step into a cafe. You just know that the waiters are going to ignore you until you start shouting or something. They probably have a resolution in the waiter's union that forbids their paying any attention to non-waiter-attractors. This is unjust! Un-American in its essence. Something should be done.

We've heard of college men fighting over grades. We've heard of college men fighting over college women, and we've heard of college men fighting over ideals. But we've never heard of them fighting over balloons like they did Saturday night at the Delt formal. It was such a futile fight too. The balloons would burst every time someone managed to capture one. Either that or someone could casually have a cigar against the thing and it would pop. They kept on fighting for them though, barbarians in full dress battling among themselves for miserable baubles that vanished at their very touch. It was a pretty significant demonstration of what modern education will do for a society. It was pretty profound. More in Mr. Irvine's line however.

A paragraph which appeared in this column a few weeks ago about Morehead State Teachers College has had reverberations in the newspaper at that school. We still think their slang is antiquated, but we won't make an issue of it. We have had enough trouble with Mr. Hatfield to last us for a while. Why do we get into all these arguments? We mean well, really.

Mr. Buckley is at it again. This time the quiet dignified Canadian has put his foot into it—or rather his fork. That is to say, he wasn't able to get his fork into it. You see the ATO's had veal steak the other day and when the fellow finished saying Grace, why, Buckley didn't have his fork in the air, and in consequence of that deficiency he was unable to obtain any veal steak. He is sullen all day and wouldn't speak to anybody. Said he didn't like veal steak anyway.

Miss Nellie Rasm, analyzing our style in feature writing class yesterday, said that "Mr. Williams sounds like a smart person trying to write like a dumb person would write if he were smart." This statement may sound a little involved, in fact, it is a little involved, but we are inclined to agree with Miss Rasm. Yes, she definitely has something there, we don't know exactly what it is, but she has something!

Term papers always turn out to be dull. We wrote one the other day for a philosophy course that we are taking and in spite of all we could do, it was dull. It must be horrible to have to read them all and grade them according to their contents. They're so mundane. All that writing wasted. We handed ours to a friend to read and after finishing it, he said simply, "It stinks."

There is a no-smoking rule at Ohio State University and this is the note the janitor put on the blackboard of the Commerce building. "I am going to tell the President on anybody I catch smoking in this room. This means you. I am not fooling. I'm good and mad." The Janitor

SIDESHOW

YOU'RE sat in the bleachers at a dance. You know the faintly superior sensation it gives you to be above everyone else, able to see all that goes on below. A kind of social omnipotence. A thousand little incidents take place before your eyes and you can figure out the idiosyncrasies of each person's style of dancing. Power Prichard moves in swift, even circles; Bob Yates uses a long, swooping stride; Jim McConnell and so on. You can see the manner each girl uses in greeting the fellows who break their, and can watch the stags over by the bandstand help direct the orchestra.

The Delt dance was excellent. From the vantage point of the bleachers you could tell that people were enjoying themselves. The packed crowd moved and stirred within itself with the fluid elasticity of molten metal; and raised a steady roar of talk above which occasionally came the high notes of feminine laughter. Nothing was visible but an expanse of arms, framed against the predominant black of formal clothing.

Down on the dance floor, Ben Williams and Ann Law Lyons were telling everyone that they were engaged, exhibiting a diamond ring on the Kappa's most significant finger. Harry Williams wondered why no one ever thought to cut the Delt's D.T.'s. Jack Evans unceremoniously nudged Del Hillery Meyer, who came to the dance with Delt J. B. Faulconer. Martha Hume swore what there was of that famous blue dress of hers. Overhead from the stag pew, "See Virgins Richy?" That's about the best girl in school. "Non-Delt's set special, among them are Jean McLaughlin and Caroline Allen, who for some reason had on a pair of sun-glasses. The silliness of that life-and-death struggle for balloons. Betty Elliott complained that she did not like not being in love, with spring coming on and all. Said George Kerler to Opal Hobbs, "Too many people. I love Arizona."

On the night of the Delt dance, as the soft consciousness of good music filled the Alumni gymnasium, a Mrs. Edith Cummings lay dying of a bullet wound in a ravine outside Detroit; a man named Bartley began a term of life imprisonment for the murder of his sweetheart; two Bourbon county farmers died in a motorcycle smash at Shanty on the river; a Chinaman and Adolf Hitler slept quietly through the European dance. Senator Barkley was nominated for President of the United States at a meeting of the Alfalfa Club in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Albert Jones had a baby.

Just at present all of us are sitting in the bleachers, with our eyes on the crowd. The flux and motion of the mob are simply a visual preoccupation for us, a puppet show in which we do not perform. But some day, some day soon, we must go down to the dance floor and join the others. What will happen then and where we shall end up in a magic secret of the future. Perhaps our futures do not extend very far; only to the next bend of the road, or until Standard Oil declares war on Japan. It is a tantalizing process to speculate on what lies ahead, a mystery that is eternally interesting. Life or death, happiness or unhappiness, success or failure, are just up the way. Which shall it be? The answer will come in a voice of years, and until it whippers out to us there is naught to do but work and wonder.

THE dream of Charlie Gaston finally came true Saturday night. He had been going quite steady with Mary Neal Waldon until she was graduated last June, and he has been a very sorry looking person all semester, except when Mary came back on visits. Saturday night he simplified matters by jeweling the dress of the former co-ed with his Alpha Gamma Rho pin.

At the Delta Zeta house the other evening, Nancy Nobb was sitting on the sofa with her date when the pledges were upstairs listening and didn't like the boy's line. So they brought matters to an end by pouring a bucket of water over the stairs on the sofa. Said pledges didn't get out of the house that evening.

A certain blond from Cincinnati visited in Lexington this week-end and made quite a hit with Kibby Vogt and Jimmy Wathen. Jimmy took her to the Delt formal Saturday and Kibby kept her out Sunday until mid-rite. She was a right fair blonde, as blondes go.

Letelle Stephenson has been sick in bed for the past two weeks, but there are pictures of 27 girls in his

Noble Cain Will Direct High School Music Festival

The all-state high school concert, directed this year by Noble Cain, Chicago, Illinois, choral director of the National Broadcasting Company, will be the closing feature of the vocal session of the fourteenth annual Kentucky High School Music Festival to be held at the University of Kentucky April 29 and 30. All public and private high schools in the state are eligible for participation.

The all-state high school concert last year was under the direction of Dr. Hollis Dann, and was given by about 300 high school students representing 40 schools. The feature which started last year was so well received that arrangements have been made to repeat it this year with Mr. Cain as director, and it will probably become a permanent part of the program each year.

This year it is expected to have voices from 10 or more schools. A bulletin giving rules and regulations of the festival and other information will be distributed to the high schools about the first of January.

Reports Given At History Sessions

Reporting on the bi-annual convention of Phi Alpha Theta, honorary history fraternity, held in Philadelphia December 27-28, Henry Adams, student representative from the local chapter, spoke at the Tuesday meeting of the organization in the Woman's building.

Harvey Leech, Drug Store Cowboy of Durn's, amused himself at the dance by unloading the piano player's shoe strings during the no-breaks, much to the chagrin of the ivory tickler.

Chlo Polly Hoyle received a box of stationery for a Christmas present and has used more than half of it already. It was only yesterday that she found out that it has the crest of Delta Zeta on it.

Saturday was the hardest day of the New Year for Claude Terrell. First he lost all of his money on the horses in the afternoon (causing those who followed his selections to do the same), then at the dance the same night he entered into quite a heated argument with Betty Bakhaus, from which he came out the loser. And then there were his Phi Tau brothers who kidded him about his bad luck.

Completes Fortieth Year
The following story concerning Judge Richard C. Stoll, 36, a life member of the association, living at 444 West Third street, Lexington, Kentucky, appeared in the Herald-Leader January 2.

Forty years ago Gov. W. O. Bradley appointed a youthful Lexington resident and law school graduate as a member of the board of trustees of the University of Kentucky. Today, January 2, this appointee, Judge Richard C. Stoll, prominent member of the Lexington bar, will complete his 40th year of service as a member of the school administrative organization. During his term of membership on the board, Judge Stoll has served with many of the most prominent citizens of the state.

A native of Lexington, Judge Stoll attended Allegan Academy before graduating from the University of Kentucky. He attended the law college at Yale University for two years and in 1897 hung out his shingle as a practicing lawyer in Lexington. It was in the following year that he was appointed to membership on the board of trustees of the University of Kentucky.

Judge Stoll is vice chairman of the board of trustees and a member of the executive committee of the board of trustees. At present he is a member of the law firm of Stoll, Muir, Townsend and Park. Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of Kentucky, is con-

THE athleticque rumbling over the campus offers every amateur orator and reformer a chance to spatter his ideas and purifying advice at the Reorganization committee, five gentlemen whose duties are (1) collect all opinions relative to the situation and (2) present them to the Athletic Council for consideration.

No longer is it necessary for Willie Wildcat to stomp around Kinkaid hall bellowing to the wallpaper about the inefficiency of the team, lack of money and players, and "pep" talks from the trolley tracks. No longer is it necessary for Willie to thunder his advice at a helpless roommate who might be interested in your whinings about "Can These Things Be," "Short-Cut-To-The-Rose-Bowl, and Pumps, Passes, and Profits. Now, when a committee is begging for your counsel, let you voice your out. They're asking for it—give it to 'em.

If you wish your arguments be studied, we recommend that you write them out and present them to any of the following organizers — Chairman Ligon, President McVey, Deans Finkhouse and Boyd, and Student Dave Pettus. And you can believe also that the entire athletic council is in favor of reorganization. That point should guarantee a rejuvenation of Blue and White athletics. Now, when you can perform the University a good turn and unload some of your wrath, don't let indifference or timidly forfeit your right to a hearing. Perhaps if you feel that you have had something to do in rectifying the problem, you'll sit in the stool bleachers next fall and root for, rather than hoot at, your team. After all, it's still your football club. Your mother loves you, though her reasons might be at a minimum.

When Notre Dame (synonym — John Moré) rapped the Ruppis last Saturday night, it marked the third consecutive whipping Adolph's boys have absorbed in eight days. It's the longest losing streak Rupp has ever suffered at Kentucky, but we're not complaining. Too much travel and tough competition compounded to knock the 'Cats' record to date down at four wins and three losses. Outside of rubbing bridges, all the Blues could rave about was Moré's masterful exhibition. During the Christmas holidays a wave of jealousy and intra-team intrigue spread through the Irish cages and before they squared things up, they lost two ball games. But in Pennsylvania recently the Notre Dames hit the rim again and started to win. Against Kentucky, Moré & Company hit on all five and there it was, 47-37, with the irrepressible Moré bagging twenty points.

Would the story have been different if Walter Hodge had been trailing Moré? Next on the net menu is Tennessee Saturday night in Rupp's arena. The game will register Kentucky in the Southeastern loop for the first time this semester. Right now U. of Mississippi and Miss State lead the league with records of 4-1, 3-1.

aria entitled "E lucevan le stelle," from Giacomo Puccini's "La Tosca." This number was a slow moving, reminiscent song which at times sounded a plaintive note. As an encore to this part of the program, McChesney sang "Chanson a Danseur," a popular French song which was requested by a member of the audience.

Four light songs in English comprised the last group, which seemed to be the most popular with the audience. Rachmanninoff's dreamy "In the Silent Night" and the delightfully comic "Old Mother Hubbard," by Hely-Hutchinson, held an unmistakable appeal to the jovial listeners.

For the remainder of the program the theme of love held sway.

"Blue Are Her Eyes," by Watts, and "Love Went A-Riding," by Ridge, were well liked by the audience. "When I Look Upon the Maidens," by Michael Head, the first encore to the final group, was widely applauded not only because it was excellently presented, but also because of the embarrassment smile which accompanied McChesney's announcement of the song. Outstanding in its reception by the audience was the familiar "Play Gypsies, Dance Gypsies," which McChesney declared to be his favorite song from operetta. John Lewis will direct the University concert band in the next vesper program, which will be given Sunday, January 23.
