Condoms in machines get varying reactions

By THOMAS J. SULLIVAN
News Editor

Candy machines in UK's residence halls were stocked with condoms Friday. And while the supply was sufficient for most dormitories, it wasn't for Keeneland Hall.

Sometime between Friday and yesterday afternoon, Keeneland Hall's candy machine sold out of condoms. A survey of all UK residence halls showed that they were the only one that was sold out.

Allen Rieman, director of UK auxiliary services, said he wasn't surprised by Keeneland's situation. UK expected "that the sales of condoms the first couple weeks would be heavy just because of the uniqueness," Rieman said.

Ned Benson, hall director of Keeneland Hall (a coed hall), also said he thought that the high sales were due to the novelty of the condoms.

"I wouldn't go so far to say that we are more sexually active (than other halls)," Benson said. Rather, Benson said he attributed the popularity to residents who wanted to purchase one of the first condoms that were installed in UK's candy machines as collector's items.

But while some Keeneland residents are collecting them, other campus residents are opposing their location.

"I would think it would be more logical to put them in the rest rooms," said Brent Curtis, a marketing senior. "That way they wouldn't be out in the open."

Curtis said that he doesn't think the condoms should be hidden, "just not in the candy machines." Paul Miller Jr., a telecommunications junior, said that his main concern was the visibility. "I feel they should put them in the rest room; I think it's tacky (having condoms in the candy machines). You got parents going through here and they notice that."

Steve Schroering, Holmes Hall director, said that the objection by some students to their location is unwarranted.

"If they're old enough to use them, they're old enough to get over that (condoms are in the candy machines)," he said. Bernard Vonderheide, director of UK public relations, said that the issue of condoms being in the candy machines is a "non-issue."

"I think the objective was, not to put them in candy machines," but to make them readily available, Vonderheide said.

"I think it's gone very well . . . to the credit of the student leaders who were involved with it from the start," Vonderheide said. One of those student leaders, though, understands why students may be offended.

Student Government Association

Condoms made their way into basement candy machines of all but one UK dormitory Friday.

President Cyndi Weaver said SGA's recommendation to the University was to put (condom) vending machines in bathrooms.

The SGA proposal stated that condoms should be made accessible while "offending the least number of people possible," Weaver said.

"Putting them in basement bathrooms would offend the least number of people possible."

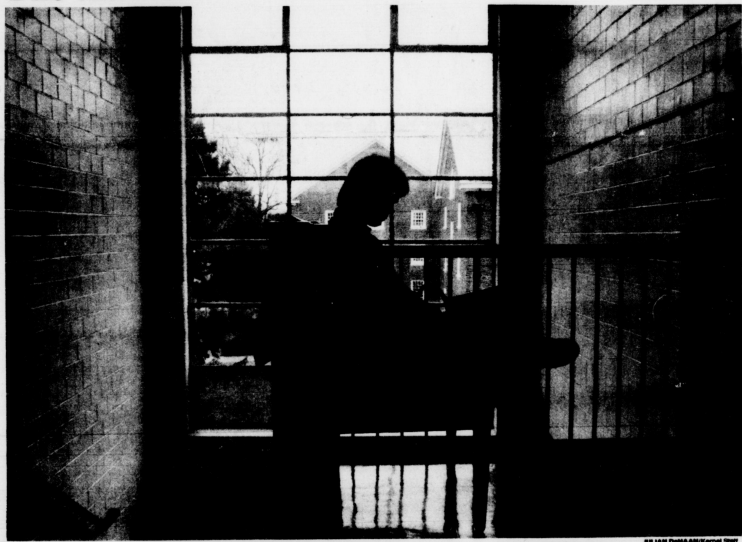

But in the candy machines, condoms are "the tackiest thing you could see," said Hank White, an animal science senior.

Fam Mitchell, an advertising freshman, said she doesn't like to see the condoms in the candy machines either.

"It's just kind of stupid," Mitchell said. "When I went to Keeneland, I got a bag of potato chips by accident, can you imagine getting a condom by mistake?"

New entertainment coming to market

By HEIDI PROBST
Staff Writer

Lexington's Festival Market is trying to live up to its name by adding new entertainment to its market and restaurant fare.

In addition to existing entertainment at the market, the Festival Market is adding a group of five members called "The Troupe," who will perform song-and-dance routines for customers.

Only nine other retail properties in the United States are involved in similar activities, according to Becky Smith, the market's entertainment director.

"It's a brand new thing," said Smith, who is responsible for organizing and handling all entertainment at the market.

Smith, a UK theater graduate, said they are going through a series of programs to maintain entertainment at the market.

"With the new troupe, Smith said she wants to fill the market's stage with a new kind of entertainment. Dave Brown, the market's marketing manager, said the "in-house troupe" seemed to be the best entertainment to have perform at the market.

Brown said the Festival Market players will be similar to the entertainers at Kings Island or Disney World.

"We want to control the quality of entertainment. We want to form our own troupe," said Smith. "This is a big deal across the country."

Auditions for performers were held yesterday and today. Smith and the market's music director, John Cole, judged potential troupers on their ability to sing and dance.

Smith said she was looking for acting skills and personality as well.

Smith said the paid performers will entertain 20 hours a week at 20 minutes a performance.

She said this was an attempt to draw more customers to the market and is another form of public relations.

But most importantly Smith is excited to give the already peppy atmosphere at Festival Market some life — "especially give it some soul."

"We hope to pioneer an avenue of entertainment," Smith said.

CAE attracting students through phone-a-thon

By HEIDI PROBST
Staff Writer

Colleagues for Academic Excellence is recruiting academic achievers by sponsoring a phone-a-thon this week.

"We hope to attract academically qualified students," said Lynn Zarembo, CAE's campus liaison director. "If the student has their choice narrowed down to two schools we might be able to get them to come here."

Zarembo said the phone-a-thon, which runs tonight from 6:15-8:30 p.m. and continues through Thursday, is designed to recruit students with a special touch.

"The students we have chosen to call are generally upper-level achievers who said they were interested in UK and scored well on the American College Test (ACT)," said Tommy Wade, CAE academic recruitment director.

Zarembo said CAE contacted more than 500 potential students last year, and Wade said they hope to reach about 400-500 this year.

Zarembo said collegians are matched up with high school seniors who indicated an interest in the major they study.

"With this match the students can ask the CAE member questions about their major and what it involves," she said.

During the phone call CAE members can get a student's point of view and will try to make needed adjustments to ease their anxieties and fears, Zarembo said.

"We hope to attract these students and relieve their anxieties," Zarembo said.

Wade said it was a "good-will call" to potential students as well as an influencing factor in getting academically inclined students to UK.

"I think this is a good way of making UK more well-known and gives it a more small-town college image," Zarembo said.

Fitness of the heart object of program

By DAVE ROGERS
Contributing Writer

A UK fitness program tailors itself to the individual to help increase cardiovascular fitness.

The 5-year-old program uses a protocol to measure the percent of body fat a person has and a submaximal fitness test, which indicates how efficiently the heart and lungs are using the oxygen they take in.

"After we know the fitness level of a person coming into the program, we can prescribe the intensity and duration of the exercise program needed to achieve the target heart rate for that individual," said John Hall, the chairman of the department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

"The same tests will be given at the end of the semester to see what the benefits of the program were."

Hall said an exercise program that achieves this target heart rate and can sustain it for the recommended time limit would increase cardiovascular fitness.

"A person may not lose weight in the program," he said, "but lose fat and gain lean muscle tissue, keeping their weight the same."

Participants in the program may choose from classes in swimming, walking/jogging and aerobic dance as ways to get the exercise they need.

The classes are taught three times a week by graduate students specializing in different areas of physical education and exercise.

Mary Cheesman, the aerobic dance instructor for the program, said that for many of the people in her class, the goal is not only physical fitness, but stress reduction.

"A lot of the people in my class are type A, high-stress individuals, like doctors, professors, and research graduates," Cheesman said.

Train wreck kills 90; Chinese deaths continue

By CHARLENE L. FU
Associated Press

BEIJING — An express train derailed early yesterday in the mountains of southern China and 90 people were killed and 66 others seriously injured, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

It was China's sixth major transportation accident in a month. A total of 314 people have been killed.

The No. 80 Kunming-Shanghai express derailed and overturned at 1:35 a.m. as it traveled between Qiuwu and Dengjiacuo stations, 220 miles from Kunming, capital of Yunnan province, Xinhua quoted the Ministry of Railways as saying.

The cause of the derailment was not known, Xinhua said. The report did not say how many

"For them, the ultimate goal is relaxation."

Cheesman, a graduate student in exercise physiology, said that while some of her group . . . just want to be able to eat what they want, for a lot of people it's a good method of stress reduction, and a chance to get in a different atmosphere and get out of competition for a while."

"When you work full time in an office, you don't get much of a chance to exercise," said Penni Dugger, a UK employee and graduate student in business administration. "Go to school on top of all that, and you can see why it's so important."

Dugger, who has been a member of the aerobic dance class for all five years, first joined to get some exercise and try to keep her weight down. "Now, it's also for relaxation," she said.

While Hall agreed that exercise and physical fitness could help in reducing stress and decreasing heart problems, he was quick to point out that exercise is not a cure-all.

"Some people who were notoriously fit have also died of heart attacks," Hall said. He explained that people like world-famous runner Jim Fixx and basketball star "Pistol" Pete Maravich had undetected heart problems that probably would have killed them much earlier if they had not been in such good shape.

"An active lifestyle is very beneficial," he said, "but it doesn't preclude that you won't have a heart attack."

"We hope to teach the people in this program enough about their own fitness prescription that they can carry on their own programs at the end of the semester," Hall said. "We want to achieve a change in lifestyle, not just a one-semester exercise program."

cars derailed, how many passengers were on the train or in which direction the train was going. It was not immediately known whether any foreigners were among the dead or injured.

Acting Premier Li Peng ordered army and police to the scene to maintain order. Army units and local medical workers took the injured to hospitals.

The accident took place in Yunnan close to its border with Guizhou province. The remote region is among China's least developed areas.

Xinhua said officials of both provinces rushed to the scene and Yunnan Gov. He Zhiqiang and two other officials were appointed to head an investigation.

And I wonder still I wonder

Bill Cosby once asked his father why he is there air. His father said to blow up basketballs. Sounds logical.

Too bad the logic of other sports questions is so elusive. So much doesn't make sense. Sports tempts my curiosity and yet leaves me teased with no answers. Why?

Why is ABC televising more than 100 hours of the Winter Olympics? Why is there a Winter Olympics? Let's look at a couple of events.

First, the ski jump. What possesses a man to catapult down an icy incline and launch himself into the air like a wingless bird? How does one practice the ski jump? It seems to me you are either very good the first time or you break your legs.

Why is figure skating an Olympic sport — or a sport at all. Ball-room dancing isn't. Any sport where a man wears sequins shouldn't be either.

Why is basketball in the summer Olympics? The luge isn't.

Besides $3 million, why did Larry Holmes allow Mike Tyson to tap-dance on his head? Why would anyone fight Mike Tyson?

If Rob Lock took the time to go to the World Wrestling Matches at Rupp Arena Saturday, why didn't he climb into the ring? After all, he held his own against Jose Vargas. And where is Jose from? I'm not buying the Dominican Republic.

Speaking of LSU, where does Ricky Blanton get his hair cut? Who taught Dale Brown to use his middle finger?

Why doesn't Dick Vitale shut up? Does he run on batteries? Have they cloned him for every time zone? Does his wife like having him away so much?

UK freshman forward John Peiphrey is being red shirted this season. Why does he wear a knee-brace during the games? Pregame layups are tough but medical records show they result in few knee blow-outs.

How much does Melvin Turpin weigh? OK, without the butcher's thumb on the scale.

Why did only one UK pitcher bother to show up for Tom Seaver's speech at the Kentucky baseball clinic last week? Seaver is headed for the Hall of Fame. He won 311 games. The Cats had a staff ERA of 4.61 last spring.

Hey Eddie Sutton, just how soft are Mike Scott's paws?

Why would any UK student want to pay five bucks for a Wildcat tennis exhibition when they can see Kentucky basketball for free?

Why is Oscar Combs on TV? What happened to Earl Cox's wig? Why does the Cats' Pause have a subscription campaign entitled "Big Blue Penetration"? Sounds a little like ... never mind.

Is there a candy machine in Wildcat Lodge? If so, will condoms be installed?

Did Jimmy the Greek own any slaves or did he just breast them? He got fired. He deserved to. But Jesse Jackson once called New York "Hymie town." He's running for president. Why?

Why does a UK cheerleader have to grab a Mr. Microphone before the game and instruct the crowd how to cheer? Isn't that insensitive?

Getting rowdy at a basketball game is great. But why throw objects at a player or coach? What if Rex Chapman slipped on that piece of ice and ripped his knee up? And isn't this sports? Why have a cardiac arrest over a bad call?

Why does Tennessee basketball coach Don Devove moan about the terrible officiating when his team committed 23 turnovers and was thumped by 18 points?

Why has Jim McMahon made more TV commercials than he's played games?

Why does WKYT-TV continue to run commercials for "The Eddie Sutton Show" and not tell what time it's on? WLEX-TV proudly announce "The Sharon Fanning Show" begins at 12:30 Sunday night.

How did Bobby Knight get promoted to the rank of General? Why?

Why am I sounding like Andy Rooney? Why did you waste your professor's time reading this in class?

UK victory at LSU wasn't pretty but it was a win

AP and Staff reports

BATON ROUGE, La. — It wasn't the prettiest win he's ever seen, but after two home losses, Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton wasn't fussy.

The Cats downed Louisiana State University Saturday afternoon 76-61 at Baton Rouge.

"We were pleased to be able to win this one, after losing two at home," Sutton said. "It was a big win for us, but it wasn't a thing of beauty for either team."

The win boosts UK's record to 13-2 overall, 6-2 in the Southeastern Conference.

The Tigers, who were tied for the conference lead with Florida going into Saturday's game, dropped to 9-5 on the season and 4-2 in the conference.

UK got off to a slow start with LSU taking an 11-6 lead. Then the Cats ran off nine unanswered points to go up 15-11 and they never trailed again.

UK went into the half holding a 31-25 lead.

Then, guard Rex Chapman and senior forward Winston Bennett led a 10-3 surge over a three-minute span early in the second half that broke the game open.

Kentucky led 33-30 when LSU's Bernard Woodside, the Tigers' best defensive player, picked up his fourth personal foul and had to sit down.

Woodside had been covering Bennett, when LSU was in its man-to-man defense, and sluffing off to help on Chapman.

Bennett, who finished with 18 points, got six over the next three minutes.

Chapman, who also had 18 points, got four in the Kentucky surge that put the Wildcats ahead 43-33 with 14:28 left in the game.

"When we got that lead, we went into a zone to stop their inside game," Chapman said. "We had to take advantage of their poor outside shooting. I think that's what did them in."

The official scorer gave Bennett credit for a free-throw that apparently bounced astray.

Although others at the scorer's table pointed out that it was a miss, the scorer was adamant. The missed shot was credited to Bennett's total and the final score.

LSU hit three of 17 shots from three-point range. Kentucky hit three of seven three-point shots.

Ed Davender led Kentucky scorers with 21 points.

Ricky Blanton led LSU with 16 points. Woodside had 13, while Wayne Sims and Fess Irvin added 10 each.

Sutton said that when LSU center Jose Vargas got in foul trouble, he made a decision to go right at him.

"When they went to a man-to-man in the second half, we made the decision to go inside to Bennett and spread the floor," he said.

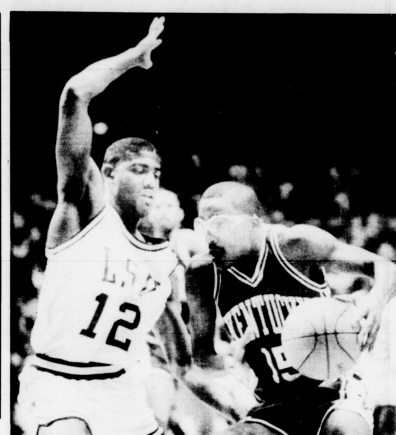

"Winston hasn't played down low much this year, but we just brought our center out and let Winston run free," Sutton said.

Four LSU players and one Wildcat fouled out of the game. For the Tigers, Vargas, Woodside, Sims and Irvin exited early. UK senior center

LSU coach Dale Brown also gave UK a hand at the free-throw line by getting slapped with two technical fouls within 38 seconds of each other.

Brown didn't like what he saw from both teams in the game.

"I just thought they played better than we did," he said. "We played bad worse. They played better worse."

Brown said he felt Blanton and Woodside played hard and well, however.

"They played their hearts out," he said. "We'll have some conversations with some of the others."

Cool Cats let win slip away

By TOM SPALDING

For two long periods and 36 hard-fought minutes Saturday night, the UK hockey club was well on its way to a victory over Georgia.

As the two teams skated off the ice after two periods of play, Kentucky was comfortably ahead, 6-1.

So comfortable, in fact, that two-thirds of the estimated 300 in attendance left, thinking that UK had a sure win. It even looked that way to the UK players, resting in their locker room before the third period would start.

"We were up 6-1 and then something happened to us," UK left wing Craig Penn said. "We came back out and we were cocky and lackadaisical. After that they just jumped us."

A UK fan reached over the boards and smacked a Georgia player on the helmet, resulting in a penalty against UK. That set up a power-play situation.

After holding the Bulldogs to just one score over 2½ periods, UK goalie Curt Roberts allowed a Georgia player to go past him with the puck for the score.

That goal, which came with 7:50 left, cut UK's lead to 6-2. And before anyone could say "comeback," the Bulldogs did, scoring two more times in 50 seconds. Suddenly the easy UK victory turned into a white-knuckler.

"When you get a goal and the momentum late in the game, it just kind of snowballs," UK right wing freshman Jim Padgett said.

"You have to give them credit for coming back," Padgett said.

Georgia finished off its improbable run, tying the score at six with just four minutes to play. Still, it was anybody's game. Down to the wire it went. UK called time with 15 seconds left to set up the last play.

"Our game plan was to push it forward and have everyone go for it," Penn said. "And then hopefully push it past the (Georgia) lineman and get a shot on goal."

The shot, however, wasn't on target. The puck was scooped up by a Bulldog player who headed for UK's goal with less than five seconds to go.

Above, UK hockey player John Beauregard goes for the puck against a Georgia defender in a game Saturday night. At right, two Georgia players check a Cool Cat into the boards.

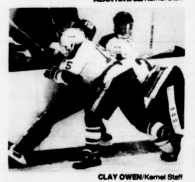

He took the shot, but Roberts slashed the puck away as time expired, and the game ended in a tie.

Earlier in the game it was UK who was driving. Just 10 minutes into the game, Penn slid around the goal and slapped in UK's first score. The Cats put two more pucks into the net, giving them a first-period 3-0 lead.

"They've been playing pretty well," first-year UK coach Phil Davenport said. "These guys have had to shift gears with a coaching change. I'm not disappointed."

Three minutes into the second period the Cool Cats responded again. This time it was Keith Kocan, who was tied with Penn for the team high in goals scored (2) and assists (1). The shot put UK up 4-0.

"We had such a big lead and then we just played sloppily,"

Padgett said, "We should have won, but they had the determination to stick it to us. They weren't very good, but they made up in drive what they lacked in talent."

The Cool Cats travel next to North Carolina-Greensboro at the end of January.

UK's next home game will be Saturday, Feb. 20, at the Lexington Ice Center against Purdue.

Eight now, however, the only thing on the players' minds is the victory that slipped out of their grasp.

"It was pretty much a victory for them," Penn said.

Lady Kats lose 68-64 to Florida

The UK Lady Kats, seeking their first Southeastern Conference victory of the season, lost Saturday afternoon to Florida, 68-64.

UK, 9-7 overall and 0-3 in the SEC, jumped out to an early first-half lead and led 33-32 when they went into the locker room.

But Florida came back behind Lisa Borr's 10-11 shooting. The Gators outscored UK 22-10 and took their biggest lead of the game, 54-43.

"I was pleased overall with the first half," UK coach Sharon Fanning said. "Both teams played very evenly."

But Florida, 5-11 and 1-3 in the SEC, shot 61 percent in the second half to build the big lead. UK, on the other hand, shot only 37 percent for the game, on 27 of 73 attempts.

"More important than that was their 61 percent shooting the second half," Fanning said. "Allowing 61 percent is more of a concern to me."

UK fought back late in the game with a 21-12 run that put them within 66-64 of the Gators.

After Florida's Cassandra Washington missed the front end of a bonus free throw with 18 seconds left, UK's Jodie Whitaker rebounded and threw a long pass to teammate Bebe Croley. Croley felt, however, and Florida came up with the loose ball.

"Bebe went up with the ball and came down and it got knocked onto the floor," Fanning said. "I couldn't tell if it was a foul or not. They could have made any call in the book on that one."

UK forward Pam Shrum, who led UK with 17 points and eight rebounds, then fouled Camille Hatledge with nine seconds left and she hit both shots to seal the victory.

Gymnast breaks school record in weekend meet

Staff reports

The UK gymnastics team traveled to Florida last Friday and brought home a second-place finish and a new school record as souvents.

Florida won WILD-CAT the tri-meet with WILD-CAT WRAP-UP a score of 186.15.

UK finished with a score of 178.75 to place second, ahead of Georgia College with 166.80.

Aaron Aldrich set a new UK record on the balance beam with a score of 9.50. The freshman from Hanibal, New York, won the event and teammate Susie Seaman placed third with a 9.45.

Kentucky senior Robin Leggett finished third in the vault with a score of 9.35 and senior Kendall Lucas placed third in the all-around competition with a 38.20.

UK's next meet is Saturday at the Arizona Invitational in Tucson, Ariz.

'Bama splashes UK

Alabama was a rude guest Saturday, defeating UK in both the men's and women's dual swim meets at the Memorial Coliseum pool.

The Crimson Tide women dined Kentucky 136-81. But according to UK sports information student assistant Don Deluca, the "meet was much closer than the score indicates."

Mary Jane Brown won both the 200-meter individual medley and the 200-meter breaststroke.

In the men's meet, Alabama led just 37 seconds but went on to post a 133-79 victory. UK's Chris Budvitus finished first in the 50-meter freestyle and second in the 200-meter butterfly. Kentucky sophomore Ed Weckwert won the 200-meter individual medley.

3 Cats take tape

Three Wildcat track runners finished in first place in events at the Indiana TAC meet.

Junior Joey Taylor won the 400-meter race with a time of 48.47. Freshman Robin Grim finished first at 1:37.01 in the 600-meter. Coletti Ellison took the 200-meter dash with a 22.75.

Kentucky will split its squad this weekend for the Florida Classic and the Mason Dixon Games.

Knowing my team, they'll probably go out and party afterwards. But they're not dumb. They'll invite the opposing teams so if there are any hangovers, both teams will have them.

Laughter just what the doctor ordered in 'The Couch Trip'

By ERIK REECE
Arts Editor

"There are worse things than being crazy," Dan Aykroyd tells Walter Matthau at the end of "The Couch Trip" as the two zoom out of town on a motorcycle. There are also worse things than frivolous comedy.

"The Couch Trip" is a pleasant distraction that parodies modern psychotherapy without burdening its audience with moral dilemmas and obscure psychological theory. Rather, the film's thematic scope stays narrow and focused, concentrating on the inherent humor of the subject matter. What results is a light-hearted version of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" with all of the rebellious comedy and none of the serious indictments of modern treatment of the mentally ill.

Aykroyd is a criminal who weasels his way out of a jail term by convincing a "bleeding-heart warden" that he belongs in a hospital for the mentally ill. However, he proves a constant thorn in the side of one Dr. Baird, the hospital's head psychiatrist, who decides to turn him over to the same people who disconnected Jack Nicholson's brain in "Cuckoo's Nest."

While all of this is going on in Chicago, a Beverly Hills pop psychologist is being driven insane by patients who have problems coping with their maids. He "needs space." So he takes off on a sabbatical while his attorney arranges for Dr. Baird in Chicago to take over his practice and his call-in radio show.

However, the Dr. Baird that shows up in Hollywood is not Baird at all, but Aykroyd — fresh out of a strait-jacket and still in his regulation prison uniform. He manages to convince Donna Dixon and the rest of the California psychological world that he is the real Baird, but he doesn't fool the socially maladjusted Walter Matthau.

("The Couch Trip") is a light-hearted version of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" with all of the rebellious comedy and none of the serious indictments of modern treatment of the mentally ill.

To keep Matthau quiet, Aykroyd assumes custody of him as one of his many patients (he treats California's sexual disorder patients in Dodger Stadium, free of charge). Aykroyd is in a race against time to leave the country before his identity is disclosed. Matthau doesn't want to be left behind and he will go to all ends to foil Aykroyd's plan, including a suicide threat from the top of the HOLLYWOOD "W." Add to this the real Dr. Baird's attempt to prove his identity and expose the impostor, and "The Couch Trip" becomes a fast-paced comedy where identity is merely a question of proximity.

The only unexplored area of the movie (permitting the Freudian slip) is the romantic involvement between Aykroyd's and Dixon's characters. The spark is started and then abandoned, leaving the audience with no means to sublimate the sexual stimulus ignited by Dixon.

None of these roles are terribly tough, nor need they be. Aykroyd runs through his patent comic personas while Matthau maintains his effective misfit role. All told, the movie runs like an extended Saturday Night Live skit.

In the end, "The Couch Trip" raises the same question Joe Orton raised in his satirical play, "What The Butler Saw": Where do you draw the line between normality and abnormality? "The Couch Trip" inverts the common perspective of "normality" by putting the psychiatrists in padded cells and the patients behind the couch. And society is no worse for it.

Williams alone carries burdensome 'Vietnam'

By WESLEY MILLER
Senior Staff Critic

There are damn few comedians on this planet who can stay with Robin Williams when his unique style of zany, improvisational humor is allowed to come through.

For that reason, Williams was the only logical choice to play Adrian Cronauer, real-life radio disc jockey during the Vietnam War, in "Good Morning Vietnam."

Williams' ability to commit himself totally to his off-the-wall characterizations without losing control has made him one of the most popular entertainers of the '80s, dating back to his star-making television debut in "Mork & Mindy."

The advantage that Williams has over most other comedians, however, is his ability to act in serious situations, as he proved in the more serious-edged "The World According to Garp" and "Moscow on the Hudson."

This versatility, the producers of "Good Morning Vietnam" must have hoped, would be essential to carry out the task of portraying a free-willed, irreverent radio personality caught in the infinitely more irreverent horrors of the war around him.

Williams is, happily, up to the task. His scenes in the radio broadcasting studio are priceless, with Williams at his improvisational best.

spouting sequences of hilarious off-color monologue concerning the humid Vietnam weather and, through comedic interviews with fictional soldiers, how much it sucks to be in Vietnam during wartime.

Mitch Mankowitz's script and Barry Levinson's direction, unhappily, fail to satisfy when the story turns unexpectedly serious. A favorite local hangout is blown up only seconds after Cronauer leaves the establishment, and the disc jockey finds himself thrust into the Vietnam conflict when his efforts to report on the terrorist incident are silenced by government censors.

There is no sense of urgency or suspense in the dramatic sequences of the film, and oftentimes the events lack the credibility to make this an effective look at the Vietnam War through the eyes of the non-military personnel in Armed Forces radio.

If you go to the film simply for laughs, for a chance to see Robin Williams going wild on the big screen, then "Good Morning Vietnam" will probably provide an entertaining night at the movies, because, to be quite honest, Robin Williams carries the entire load.

If you are expecting anything more, then the result will be a bit of a disappointment.

Cher bases her roles on fear

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A good script is important and the character should be interesting, but one of the keys in picking a role, according to Cher, is fear.

"That's why I took 'Moonstruck,' the singer-actress says of her latest movie. "I was afraid to do it because I was on kind of a roll and I thought, 'Maybe people won't like this movie.'"

"I heard myself saying that and I thought, 'Remember that you want to be an artist and you should do it because you are afraid.'"

Cher, interviewed in the February issue of Life, said she was devastated when her performance in "Mask" didn't win an Oscar nomination.

"I was crushed, but it was a good thing," she said. "It made me realize that the body of my work can't be based on being accepted..."

The derailment came six days after a domestic airliner with engine trouble crashed near Chengqing, killing 106 people. Two trains collided head-on in northeast China's Heilongjiang province Jan. 17, killing 19, and 34 people died when a passenger train caught fire on a bridge over a stream in coastal Zhejiang province Jan. 18, killing 14 people. Forty-nine people died Dec. 30 when an overcrowded bus tumbled off a bridge into a dry river bed in southwestern Sichuan province.

A bus fell into a stream in coastal Zhejiang province Jan. 18, killing 14 people. Forty-nine people died Dec. 30 when an overcrowded bus tumbled off a bridge into a dry river bed in southwestern Sichuan province.

On Friday, Li issued an emergency directive calling on transportation authorities to increase safety measures.

"Every railway worker should foster the idea of 'safety first,'" the directive said. It called for an immediate check of equipment.

Xinhua said Railways Minister Ding Guangen went to the site and apologized to the public for the disaster, which he said indicated there were defects in railway work. The news agency did not elaborate.

In three weeks, China will celebrate its biggest holiday, Spring Festival or Lunar New Year, during which 750 million people are expected to travel to hometowns for the festivities.

Trains and buses are the main mode of long-distance travel for most Chinese, who cannot afford to fly and do not own cars.

Xinhua reported the train derailment with unusual speed, about 21 hours after it occurred. It issued a story on Monday's plane crash about 12 hours after it took place, but it followed a report from Japan's Foreign Ministry.

In the past, China's state-run media often has taken days or even weeks to report accidents.

Contra supply plane reportedly shot down

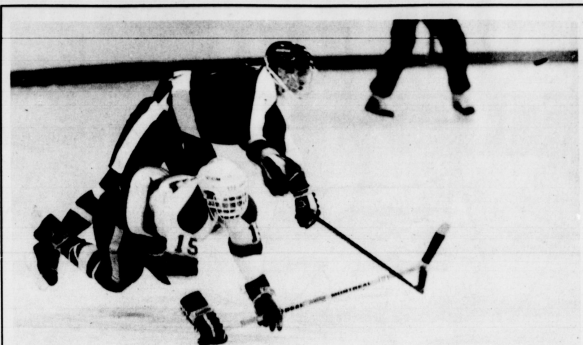

By RODOLFO GARCIA Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Sandinista troops shot down a supply plane of the U.S.-backed rebels in southeastern Nicaragua, a Defense Ministry source said yesterday.

A rebel spokeswoman said the craft was a DC-6 and 11 crew members were killed. No Americans were aboard, the spokeswoman said.

Members of the Pedro Altamirano battalion downed the plane about 10 p.m. (11 p.m. EST) Saturday near Acopya in Chontales province, 115 miles southeast of Managua, the Defense Ministry source said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Sandinista army troops were searching the area yesterday for the wreckage and possible survivors, he said.

Kemp calls self populist candidate

By SANDY JOHNSON Associated Press

Rep. Jack Kemp portrayed himself yesterday as a populist and GOP presidential front-runner George Bush and Bob Dole as the "old guard of the Republican Party" while a new poll threw the Democratic race in Iowa up for grabs.

Kemp complained that Bush and Dole would "definitely be a step back from what Ronald Reagan started in 1980."

"Bush and Dole represent the old guard of the Republican Party," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation," ignoring his own 18 years in Congress.

"I would like to see the Republican Party have a populist as its candidate, not an elitist," Kemp said, adding that the GOP should look beyond the "country clubs ... and Fortune 500 companies" to the poor, minorities and elderly.

The seven Democrats met in New Hampshire in debate — the second in a three-day string — as the poll published in yesterday's Des Moines Register underscored the uncertainty of their race in the final two weeks before Iowa's crucial caucuses.

"It is taking a while to get to know this generation of leaders," Iowa Democratic chairman Bonnie Campbell said.

The poll showed Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis bunched tightly together — Gephardt at 19 percent, Dukakis at 18 percent and Simon at 17 percent. Hot on their heels were Jesse Jackson with 11 percent and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt at 10 percent.

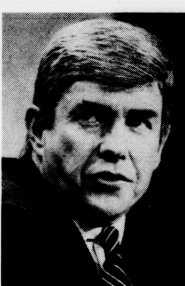

Former Sen. Gary Hart's support among Iowa Democrats dropped off dramatically; the poll put him at 13 percent, half his support of a few weeks ago. Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. trailed far behind.

As the Democrats debated in New Hampshire, site of the leadoff Feb. 16 primary, a new poll in the state showed Dukakis maintaining a comfortable lead among his neighbors. Dukakis was the choice of 37 percent of the New Hampshire Democrats surveyed by the Los Angeles Times, followed by Simon at 19 percent and Babbitt at 13 percent. The other Democrats registered in the single digits; again Hart was the big loser, falling to 6 percent support.

The New Hampshire poll held encouraging news for Kemp, who was the choice of 18 percent of the Republicans surveyed, right behind Dole's 22 percent. Bush led all six Republicans with 35 percent.

Dukakis joined Kemp on the NBC talk show, and criticized the Reagan administration's continued support of the Nicaraguan Contras.

Israeli minister says he's ready to meet with Arab leaders

By MASHA HAMILTON Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told visiting U.S. Jewish leaders yesterday he was ready to meet Arab leaders "openly or secretly" but persisted in his opposition to an international Middle East peace conference.

In the occupied West Bank city of Ramallah, hundreds of Palestinian youths clashed with Israeli soldiers and one Arab was seriously wounded, the army said. But a fragile calm held in other parts of the occupied territories, seized by Israel during the 1967 Middle East war.

Theodore Mann, the president of the American Jewish Congress, and Henry Siegman, the group's executive director, brought Shamir messages from Jordan's King Hussein and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

Shamir's spokesman, Avi Pazner, said the two Arab leaders urged Shamir to endorse an international conference. Mubarak proposed that before the talks, the Palestinians pledge to refrain from anti-Israeli violence for six months and the Israelis promise to stop building settlements in occupied territory, Pazner said.

Shamir did not respond directly to the messages but explained his opposition to the idea of an international conference, said Pazner.

Pazner quoted the prime minister as saying he wanted to meet Muba-arak and Hussein "face to face, openly or secretly, formally or informally, to discuss peace with them."

Shamir has said accepting an international conference would be tantamount to agreeing to a Palestinian state and Israeli withdrawal from occupied lands, which his right-wing Likud Bloc opposes.

Shamir also told the delegation that Israel did not have a policy of beating Palestinians.

"All we do is quell violent manifestations. We don't have a policy of deliberately beating people," Pazner quoted Shamir as saying.

Last week, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin announced that Israeli soldiers would beat Palestinian protesters, rather than shoot them.

According to United Nations figures, 38 Palestinians have been killed in more than six weeks of unrest in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israel Radio said Shamir was dispatching a top aide, Cabinet Secretary Elyakim Rubinstein, to the United States to provide details on Shamir's response to recent peace initiatives, including Mubarak's plan.

"We want American involvement, but no American pressure," said Yossi Ben-Aharon, another Shamir aide.

He said it was important to start talking about a timetable for Palestinian autonomy in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Utah police are baffled by clan's silent refusal

By BILL BEECHAM Associated Press

MARION, Utah — Authorities said yesterday they may order an armed polygamist family to surrender, admitting they were frustrated by the clan's refusal to talk since holding up at its farm following the Jan. 16 bombing of a nearby Mormon chapel.

However, authorities said, pressuring the clan to surrender was just one of several options under consideration. And they said they weren't ready to back up any surrender order with the threat of storming the compound.

FBI negotiations experts and psychological advisers couldn't explain why the 15-member clan had held out nine days without answering police pleas to peacefully settle the standoff, said Doug Bodrero, the deputy Utah public safety commissioner.

"In normal situations in cases they've been involved in ... communication has been established long before this," Bodrero said.

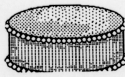

"The psychological people who are advising are a little baffled at the determination of those inside and it's something that they have frankly not encountered heretofore."

An Army helicopter buzzed the compound yesterday for about a half-hour beginning at 11:40 a.m.

Flashes of light were seen coming from the window of the compound's main house for 10 minutes late yesterday morning, a resumption of crude Morse code sent Thursday. The message was decoded by a Morse code expert as "Cop shut off water, not creek," and later it was repeated on a sign held up to the window.

UK shouldn't close its doors on holiday honoring King Jr.

UK has had some great basketball players in its history. So great that the UK Athletics Association has retired their jerseys.

Note that it did not retire the players' numbers. Common sense would tell you that if the number of every great player in history was retired, players today would be forced to wear numbers like 78, 92, 103, or, many years from now, 1,123.

Common sense would also tell you that if the nation closed its offices and universities closed their classes on the anniversary of the birth of every great man or woman who influenced the course of United States' history, the working season would last about one week.

Martin Luther King Jr. dedicated his life to pursuing equal rights for black Americans. Nobody and no argument can lessen the dedication, leadership and beauty of King's life. For these, he should be remembered as a great man.

And the nation should commemorate the anniversary of his birthday by staging marches, giving lectures and holding celebrations in his honor.

But the nation — including universities — should not shut down for the day.

UK's Student Government Association will consider a resolution at its Wednesday meeting calling for the University to close on the anniversary of King's birthday.

We urge them to realize King's struggle in carrying out his dreams of a world of brotherhood and peace. And reject the resolution.

This is not a racist view. This is not an apathetic view. It's simply common sense.

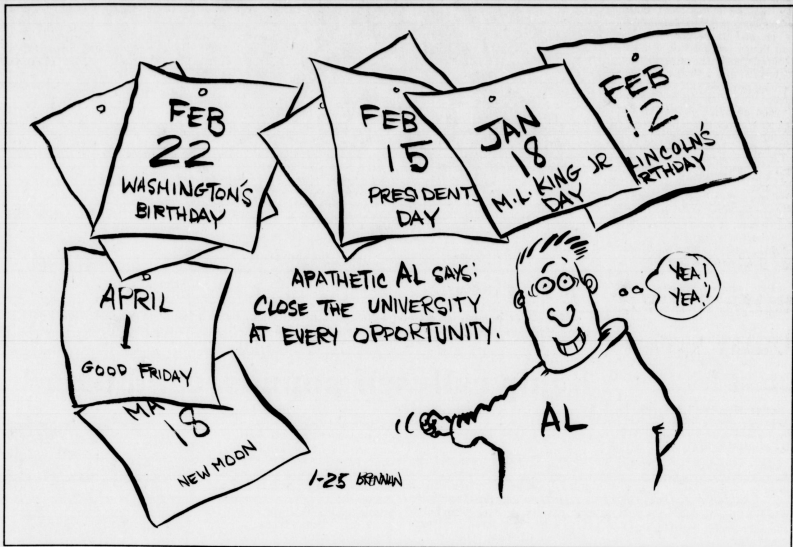

George Washington's leadership helped to create this nation. People like Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, George Washington Carver, Abraham Lincoln, Eleanor Roosevelt and W.E.B. Du Bois also helped to bring it along.

The fact that UK doesn't close in their honor doesn't lessen their achievements.

Closing a day in these people's names would not make us anymore appreciative of their accomplishments.

Nor would closing a day in Martin Luther King Jr.'s honor make us respect the man anymore or even make us think more about King's achievements and life.

A holiday in honor of King would just be a good excuse to sleep in for a few more hours.

All for three

Kentuckians must work for one cause, not for self-interests

Wednesday, Gov. Wallace Wilkinson says he will announce how he thinks he has solved the state's budget crisis without raising any taxes.

The state faces a projected budget shortfall of more than $53 million for the current fiscal year, and special interest groups across the state are already expecting the worst as they lobby to receive what little funding the state has to give them.

As gloomy as the financial outlook for the commonwealth might be, the state's 33rd chief executive faces a much more complex task than that that simply involves debits and credits.

Gov. Wilkinson's real challenge is one that almost all of his predecessors have faced — make Kentuckians feel like they belong to one state, rather than three very distinct and separate regions. To any passer-by who would want to put his car through the punishment of traveling the length of the state by way of U.S. 60, he might make the mistake of thinking he had traveled through three different states.

U.S. 60 begins in Boyd County where coal has been the staple crop for many generations. Poverty, black lung disease, teen-age pregnancies, political corruption and illiteracy are only a few of the qualities the area is beset with.

Coal provides the region with an enormous amount of wealth, but few of its citizens ever receive the benefits as many out-of-state companies extract the coal and little is given back to the region in return.

The 31 counties of the Appalachian region are also plagued by provincial politics that has leaders preoccupied with self-interest and pork-barrel politics.

Dr. Grady Stumbo, who served in Gov. John Y. Brown's administration and mounted two unsuccessful gubernatorial campaigns, once made the comment, "Give a mountain county a chance to shoot itself in the foot and it will."

There have been times when a leader has risen above the petty arguments of the area, such as when Bert Combs made it to the governor's mansion, but for the most part, eastern Kentucky has received little more than hand-downs from leaders in Frankfort.

Western Kentucky is also treated much like a stepchild of Frankfort. Kentucky's third largest city, Owensboro, has no major interstate within 30 minutes of it, forcing people to use parkways or state highways.

The land in western Kentucky is quite a bit flatter than it is in the east and the ground is better for tobacco or corn, but the employment figures are not much brighter than they are in the east.

C.A. Duane BONIFER

However, the one part of the state where Kentuckians are fairly well off is within an area known as the "Golden Triangle," which encompasses the area between northern Kentucky, Louisville and Lexington. Those who live outside the triangle have claimed many times about how they are routinely excluded by the state from receiving any major projects.

When former Gov. Martha Layne Collins announced that she had persuaded Toyota to build a plant in Scott County, several people outside the triangle cried "foul" when they learned about the incentives the Japanese automaker had been offered.

The feeling of neglect was so strong among some, that much of the early rhetoric of Wallace Wilkinson's gubernatorial campaign was spent bashing the Toyota deal and pledging to help all 120 counties in the state, rather than only one.

Although there is a great deal of resentment harbored toward those living in the "Golden Triangle," there is even more toward those who inhabit Kentucky's largest city — Louisville.

At one time, Louisville was one of the largest cities west of the Appalachian Mountains, but because of short-sightedness by some of its leaders, the city failed to keep pace with the changing times.

Today, Louisville is a far cry from competing with an Atlanta, Cincinnati or even an Indianapolis, but it is the closest thing Kentucky has to sophistication.

Those who are not fortunate enough to live in the River City are often sneered at for their uncouth ways that are indigenous to the east of the "Beverly Hills." Nevertheless, the rest of the state would do well to imitate Louisville when it comes to the arts and some of the other finer aspects of society.

About four million of the state's residents were not blessed with being born within the greater Louisville area, but they don't seem to mind.

Ask a Kentuckian living outside of Louisville to name some of the things he hates the most, and Louisville, along with Bobby Knight, government, Tennessee and communists, will most likely be one of his responses.

During the Kentucky high school state basketball tournament each March, the animosity between Louisville and the rest of the state reaches a zenith when the fans from 14 of the state's regions pull together to cheer against the Jefferson County teams from the sixth and seventh regions.

During Breton Jones' bid for lieutenant governor, he said one of the keys for Kentucky to compete with the rest of the world is if "we all join together" to solve the state's economic, social and educational problems.

The thought of all-for-one sounded nice, and most of the voters applauded the idea.

But last week at the UK Board of Trustees meeting, former Kentucky Gov. A.B. "Happy" Chandler showed everyone how far Kentuckians have to go before they can call this place one state.

During one of his long-winded stories — which usually always glorifies the past and himself — Chandler led everyone know what he thinks of the University of Louisville.

"Ever since they came in, they've been sucking the hind tit, and that's not my fault," Chandler said.

The state has a long way to go. Editorial Editor C.A. Duane Bonifer is a journalist and political science sophomore and a Kernel columnist.

The Soapbox

Park It!

Former UK basketball coach Adolph Rupp once said all he wanted from God was an NCAA championship and a parking space on this campus.

The Baron got four championship trophies over his 42-year career, but he probably had a more difficult time finding a place to park his car.

Each year, students, faculty and staff increasingly complain about the lack of parking spaces on UK's campus.

A quick check of the parking lots around campus would probably reveal that many cars are parked illegally because the drivers could not find anywhere else to park it.

Nevertheless, many of the illegally parked vehicles are open season for either a parking ticket or even worse, a tow truck.

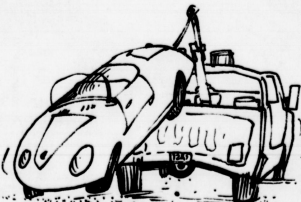

What do you think should be done about the parking problem? Should more parking lots or parking structures be built? Or should the University find some other alternative?

GLOBAL REPORTS

Health officials plan global assault on AIDS

By ROBERT GLASS Associated Press LONDON — Health officials from 145 countries are gathering in London this week for a world AIDS summit at which they will plan a global assault on the deadly epidemic.

The U.N. agency, based in Geneva, and the British government are co-sponsoring the event. "The conference, we believe, is going to mark another critical turning point in the global mobilization against AIDS," Dr. Jonathan Mann, the American director of WHO's Special Program on AIDS, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

World Summit of Ministers of Health on Programs for AIDS Prevention. Princess Anne, the daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, will deliver the opening speech. Attending from the United States will be Surgeon General C. Everett Koop; Dr. Robert E. Windom, the No. 2 official at the Department of Health and Human Services; Dr. Gary Noble, deputy director of the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control in charge of AIDS activity; and Dr. Peter J. Fischinger, AIDS coordinator for the Public Health Service. Unlike conferences involving medical experts working on vaccines and treatments for AIDS, this summit deals mainly with government efforts to control the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Its stated aims are: • present WHO guidelines for AIDS prevention and control and consider how they can be used as part of a global strategy. • provide an update on the global AIDS situation, including its social and economic impact. • review national policies for slowing the spread of AIDS, with emphasis on public education campaigns. Since AIDS was first identified in 1981, the disease has spread throughout the world, with the number of reported cases doubling roughly each year.

WHO has recorded 75,392 AIDS cases as of Jan. 12. But the organization estimates the actual worldwide toll is twice that, because many cases are not reported. The United States leads the world with 51,361 confirmed cases of AIDS as of Jan. 4. Of that number, 28,683 people have died. AIDS destroys the body's natural immunity to disease, leaving victims defenseless against a variety of infections and cancers.

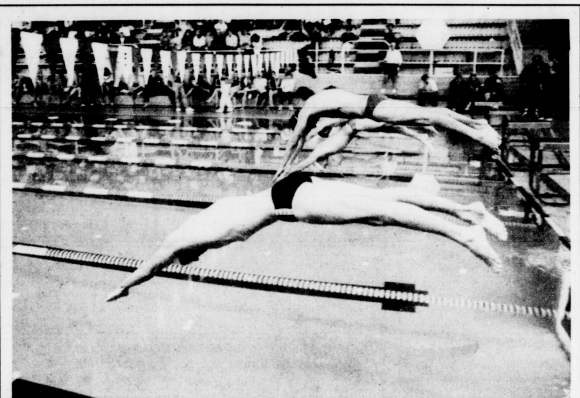

President appeals for baby girl

PITTSBURGH — President Reagan's appeal on behalf of Tabatha Foster, a toddler recovering from a rare five-organ transplant, will help everyone involved with transplant surgery, an attorney for her family said.

"It's clearly going to help Tabatha specifically, but I think it's going to help the whole transplant community generally," Joseph K. Williams said. During his weekly radio address to the nation, broadcast Saturday from Camp David, Md., President Reagan asked Americans to pray for Tabatha, who was in serious condition at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

The 3½-year-old Madisonville, Ky., girl received a new liver, pancreas, small intestine and parts of a stomach and colon during an operation that ended Nov. 1. She suffered from a severe birth defect. "It will take time and money, as much as $1 million, to return Tabatha to full health. Her parents have exhausted their medical insurance, so a Tabatha Foster fund has been set up in Pittsburgh to help them, the president said.

"I know you join me in praying that Tabatha will someday be able to lead a normal life," he said. Tabatha's family was surprised by the appeal. "All I can say is that Entry level UK and Alabama swimmers dive off the blocks during their dual meet Saturday in Memorial Coliseum pool. The Wildcats lost both the boys and men's meets.

I'm very pleased and grateful," the girl's mother, Sandra Foster, said Saturday.

The little girl has been improving slowly, according to the hospital. Her condition was upgraded from critical to serious condition in December, when she was moved from the hospital's intensive care unit to a private room.

About $115,000 has been raised to help pay Tabatha's medical care, said Williams, trustee of the Foster fund.

Hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon declined to comment on how much the family owes the hospital, saying Tabatha's bills are confidential.

The family had received a hospital bill for $325,000, but many items were omitted from it, Williams said.

Junta-run Haiti election a sham, opposition says

By PIERRE-YVES GLASS Associated Press PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — University professor Leslie Manigat won 50 percent of the vote, election officials said.

Opposition leaders said the election run by the ruling junta was a sham. Manigat garnered 50.3 percent, or 534,860 votes out of a total of 1,062,016 votes cast in the Jan. 17 election, according to results released by the government-appointed Electoral Council.

The junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy has promised to turn over power to an elected president on Feb. 7. The three-man junta has ruled this impoverished Caribbean nation since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France in February 1986.

The government scheduled the Jan. 17 balloting after an independently-run presidential election last Nov. 29 was canceled due to widespread violence. Thugs gunned down at least 34 people, and witnesses said soldiers either joined in the violence or ignored it.

The leading candidates in that election refused to take part in the junta-run balloting. Final results from last week's vote showed sociologist Hubert DeFonseca came in second with 210,526 votes, agronomist Gerard Philippe Auguste placed third with 151,391 and attorney Gireoire Eugene was fourth with 97,556.

Seven other candidates split the remaining 68,463 votes. Mayors and members of the National Assembly also were chosen in the balloting.

Election officials said 35 percent of 3 million eligible voters took part in the election, but opposition leaders charged double voting and other irregularities inflated the totals. "Everything was counted in secret; nobody can guarantee the figures," said Gerard Bissantien, political coordinator for the Front for Concerted Action, a coalition that organized a series of anti-government strikes last summer.

Seventy-five percent of the electorate registered for the independently run elections on Nov. 29. After they were canceled, the junta scrapped the independent Electoral Council and appointed one of its own.

The top candidates in that election blamed the ruling junta for the violence, saying it was intended to prevent the election of a president the army might not be able to control.

The four leading candidates in the November elections — Gerard Gourgue, Marc Bazin, Louis Deljean and Sylvio Claude — estimated in a statement that the turnout for this month's election was only 5 percent. "All the figures... were absolutely scandalous," said DeFonseca. In a telephone interview yesterday, DeFonseca called the election results "rotten."

"There was no real count, there was no real election. Elections with fraud at every level — how could you call them credible?," he said.

Governor's budget looms in legislature's week

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — The eagerly awaited executive branch budget, which Gov. Wallace Wilkinson promised would be "austere" and "tough," lands on the General Assembly's doorstep this week. No one has stood still for the first three weeks of the 1988 session, but legislators have in a sense been holding their collective breath until now.

"I'm real pleased with our progress to date," said House Speaker Don Blandford. "There's only so much you can do prior to the budget."

Wilkinson will deliver his budget Wednesday, his constitutional deadline, and address a joint session of the House and Senate for the second time in six days. The budget document itself is likely to be introduced in the House and Senate on Thursday.

In his State of the Commonwealth address to legislators last Thursday, Wilkinson said the state was "broke, busted, tapped out," but that his proposed budget would preserve essential services without a tax increase.

He also said it would "cause severe belt tightening and will call for all in state government to make necessary sacrifices."

"I think the budget address will be more memorable than the State of the Commonwealth address," said Senate President Pro Tem John "Eck" Rose of Winchester.

A House committee plans to begin work today on changes in Kentucky's Unified Juvenile Code, parts of which have been attacked by prosecutors and other law-enforcement officials.

Rep. Dottie Priddy, chairman of the Judiciary-Criminal Committee, set a hearing today on a stack of juvenile-code bills. Priddy, D-Louisville, has said she wants to meld everything into a single bill to present to the House.

Critics say major changes are needed to make it easier for counties to hold juveniles and for prosecutors to try juveniles as adults for murder and other serious crimes.

The measure would allow 55 percent of the voters in an annexation referendum to defeat the takeover bid. Present law requires an annexation vote equal to 75 percent of the total voter registration in the affected area.

Critics say that requirement was calculated to make annexation virtually impossible.

Cincinnati closes taps to river as fuel spill passes down Ohio

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — City water officials expect a diesel fuel slick on the Ohio River that arrived here yesterday to pass by tomorrow, or sooner if rain swells the river.

Louise Kedziora, surveillance program manager of the Ohio River Sanitation Commission, told an afternoon news conference that the diluted million-gallon spill would move faster if it rains, but only a chance of snow was forecast for the area, according to the National Weather Service.

Crews were on the river yesterday to survey the slick's leading edge and to determine the oil's concentration level, she said. Crews that draw water from the Ohio River to supply some 850,000 people in the city and its suburbs were closed Saturday as the spill made its way down the river, but officials expected no shortages.

Kedziora said valves were closed at 10 p.m. on Saturday because the oil slick was expected about four hours later. However, she said, water works officials periodically checked the river water and did not detect oil contamination until about 8 a.m. yesterday.

Water reserves were sufficient to allow customers Hamilton, Butler and Warren counties to use water for five days with no need to conserve water, said Dennis Davis, administrative supervisor at the water works.

Although officials say the spill will cause no problems in the area, grocers in Cincinnati and suburbs across the river in northern Kentucky had stocked their shelves with bottled water in response to customers' worries about water quality.

"I bet we sold 100 cases already," said Clyde Reynolds, who owns a grocery store in suburban Bellevue, Ky. He said his store increased its weekly order of bottled water from the normal 200 cases to 500 cases this week and plans to order 800 cases next week.

The slick was caused when an Ashland Oil Co. tank near Pittsburgh collapsed on Jan. 2 and 1 million gallons of diesel fuel spilled over a containment dyke and into the Monongahela River.

Officials say the spill has begun to dilute to less harmful levels as a result of rains in the Ohio Valley.
