who has come into
your life in passing.
And never will I forget it nor cease to be grateful.

Let me beg of you
to come and
spend the winter with
us, and it may be that you can urge Mrs. Mas-
field to come also. She can tell you what accommodations I can give you, and whether

Aug 2 - 1905

My Dearest "Mother"
I want to write you
and hardly know how to begin - isn't that
rather pathetic? you
see I am only just
beginning to realize,
now that I am in my
right mind, what it really was that I sensed when I telegraphed Mrs

impression it made
on me and how deep
and sincere grateful
I am to you both for
so unhesitatingly and
unselfishly making
yourselves partners in
what must have been
contrary to all your
tenets and traditions,
to give comfort and
happiness to one who,
when all is said and
done, is but a stranger

Mr. Max fired and,
in consequence, I am
somewhat, acido, perhaps rather tardily,
alarmed at the sacrifice I asked her to make and the risk
I caused her to undergo.

As far as she is concerned, she knows
what I think of her for coming - but I want to tell both you and Aunt Lily what a strong

Beautiful gratitude,
I am, as ever, your Fritz.

P. Remember I am looking anxiously
for you ~~later about~~

or not you would be satisfied. If you will come I'll wait on you
and let you pull my ear and beat me to
your heart's content -
if you'll only come. I am, I assure you,
fully prepared to make any concession to get you here. - and if you'll
me I'll go back with you in the spring and

it, so that if there is
a chance of your
coming I may have
that to look forward
to. And if you think you could come, let me know about what
time of the year you
would be apt to get here.

Please remember me
to all - and with my love to yourself and Aunt Lily, and my

spend the summer
with you. How is that for self-invitation.
I know the winter
here would do you
ever so much good,
and I assure you
I shall feel bitterly
disappointed if you
do not come, as my guests, and share the
joys of my hunk & a low with me. Please let me know, seriously,
what you think about
