THEATRE RUSHING

The Kernel regrets that topics such as the subject of this editorial merit the space allotted to it in the columns of this issue. Unfortunately, indeed, is it that the president of a university must, as a result of his action of a small group of students who have failed to grasp the full significance of college life, the second year in the school year has had to ask men to discontinue a practice pardonable only in youths many years their junior. President McVey has had just such an unpleasant experience, and has asked that The Kernel bring the matter to the attention of the student body.

After a recent basketball game several students took a Kentucky victory as an excuse for "rushing" local theatres, to avoid paying the price of admission. This is not a time for mincing of terms. There is no justification whatever for any student who, under the false guise of school spirit, does anything which brings discredit to the student body of the university of which he is a part. Theatre managers in Lexington have been more than friendly and cooperative in university activities. Freshman exuberance during the football season has met with complete understanding by these men. That there is a limit to such affairs, however, is certain. The incident of last week is especially regrettable because members of the group rushing the theatres were for the most part sophomores, juniors and seniors—many presumably ready to enter upon life careers.

It is neither the purpose nor the wish of The Kernel to preach or prophesy in this matter. As an organ of the student body, however, it feels that the one course open at this time is that of an expression of regret for such happenings. The Kernel realizes that the great majority of the student body joints in a pledge to President McVey to cooperate in this matter of maintaining friendships for the university, and believes that they are few indeed who do not heartily condemn this unwarranted action of the very mesager and misguided minority.

LINCOLN, THE MAN

Without further preparation than to run a large brown handkerchief over his head, Lincoln said that he was ready. The painter surveyed, then painted: a noble chin, bare and prominent; a smooth, curved mouth suppressing a giggle; two laughter lines, streaking a shaven jaw which angled toward an ear, large and conspicuous; bushy hair, pitch black and contrary; a forehead, broad with pitch black eyebrows that overhung and obscured sharp.

twinkling, merry eyes, and a nose much too salient. Lincoln 47 years old, the fighting lawyer, the determined congressman, viewed the finished product, and with his spontaneous wit probably commented something to the effect that he should never permit a praise.

Two years passed. Another artist caught a glimpse of Lincoln and gave the world still another study of the matured statesman. Here was Lincoln, wolfish eyes, with sharp, homely features, with a steel clamped jaw; a Macbeth, a Napoleon, a Paracelsus, skyward among men, outwitting them, outsparking them, outstriving them.

In 1860, during the presidential campaign, the president-elect was advised by his friends to have more suitable photographs made of himself. He must smile, they said. Lincoln smiled publicly for the first time in a year. The smile brought a change to his face and softened the tempered steel somewhat. The smile did not remain long, however. Shortly before his inaugural address, Lincoln visited Washington in order to greet his friends there, and to be entertained by his predecessor in office. His political enemies snuggled him. Edward Ward wrote him a letter of resignation as Secretary of State. The ambitious sunflower that was Lincoln turned blood-red on a stall-wart stem, faced the bloody-red setting sun, and wilted. A photograph of him at this time exemplifies a wrinkled brow, staring, pensive eyes, a drooped mouth agape above a quivering chin.

The war of the States cast a shadow of perplexity over the most important years of Lincoln's life. During the conflict he was pictured as an old man, a thinker, a futile philosopher, a kindly old gentleman with a wreath of scraggy whiskers encompassing his once ambitious chin, and obliterating the sadness of a sunken, desolate face. His chin retained the fire of the eager, fitful man that he once was. They were compelled to shine. The wool was spun; it was for him to weave it. Lincoln wove the wool. The melancholy commenced to lift like mist from a crater lake. He reincarnated himself into the merry-eyed, large-nosed, large-eared, grave-faced Lincoln of the pre-war period. In time the veil would drop at his feet. In time he would regain his individualistic spontaneity, but Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos had not ordained it so. They contrived; they screamed into the ear of a maniacal actor. We forbid, they yelled, that the world shall ever see Lincoln with a face that is not clouded by some conflicting and irritating screen. It was done. Lincoln's hair never grew white. The whiskered wear of sorrow did not give place to a snowy semblance of purity of mind. He was not born to smile like other men who smile for camera pictures and for the smiles of a plain.

"O powerful western fallen star!
 O shades of night—O moody tearful night!
 O great star disappeared—O the black mist that hides the star!
 O cruel hands that hold me powerless—
 O cruel hands that hold me powerless—
 O harsh surrounding cloud that will not free my soul!

KENTUCKIAN ELECTION

Wednesday, February 18, there will be a meeting of the Junior class for the purpose of electing the editor and business manager of the 1932 Kentuckian. At this time it will be the duty of every member of the class to attend the meeting and to vote for the person most capable of filling the position.

The position of editor of the class annual is an important one. The Kentuckian is a great memorial to the class for which it stands; it is a vital document of the achievements of those who have come here and worked toward a worthwhile end. Although real students do not work for publicity, nevertheless, it is the duty of those who know them to let others know of their merited successes and achievements.

There are many qualifications which the editor of the class annual should possess. He should understand something of printing and make-up. He should be able to get the proper effect for his publication from the literary and aesthetic point of view. He should have a thorough understanding of news value, what constitutes achievement, and a proper sense of proportion, in order that he may be able to give to each student the prominence he merits.

The business manager of the annual should be one who has had business training and is fitted to handle the innumerable details which are a part of the office. He should be capable of conducting his business transactions in the most economical and efficient manner. He should have industry, and should be willing to cooperate with the editor in the tasks of the two positions.

The importance of keeping class politics out of elections of this kind can not be stressed too much. The fact that a student is a member of this or that social fraternity has nothing to do with his ability to perform the work of a certain office. Those students who will not vote against their own fraternity brothers when they know they are not fitted for a position have not the best interests of the school or class at heart.

OLD FASHIONED

Lace bonnets, hooded skirts, shy maidenly glances, tender courtships, love letters tied together with faded ribbons, faded flowers, faded sentiments, fragile memoirs of the passing of time in this age of calculating machinery, of matter of factness, are just plainly old-fashioned. Their tenderness is still a marvel to the moderns. The sweetness of thought, the fragility, the delicacy, the sheer beauty, which even time cannot dull or cheapen, proves an inspiration to the gross materialists of today.

The delicate theory of designs, spun in fine lace, was found in the shy sentiments of old-fashioned times. There has always been something sweet and quaintly old-fashioned about St. Valentine's day; it seems to harken back to the days of styness. There is always a feeling of the fragility of sentiment attached to this day. Out of all the days in the year this seems to be the one which has been chosen to be a reincarnation of things tender and delicate, the rejuvenator of illusion. Fragility seems to be the keynote of the day. Valentines are sent from friend to friend merely as a gesture showing that materialistic, or not materialistic, we are still sentimental. They are one of the most pleasing traditions observed today. The funny ones are always a source of amusement, the frilly, sentimentally lay one out as always, shyly, though they may have a quality old-fashioned air about them, like the fragrance of a conventional garden. They have a way of bringing momentary tenderness, at least, to the most hard-hearted co-ed, and a startling weakening of the stronger sex. They work havoc with the heart and likewise with the head. Yet, they still have the tenderness of all greetings, something to bundle together and put away among your sweetest memory tokens.

ROCKING ALONG THE WALKS

Gone are the pleasant days when we used to stroll along the campus walks. Gay minutes between classes, echoing "hellos" of passerby, and smiling faces are memories which daily are called to mind by existing conditions and sighed over. They are gone but not forgotten. Hundreds of sad-faced students picking their labored courses between classes too engrossed in their momentous task to lift their heads to speak to their friends as they pass them by. Scarcely one of these transient students has nerve to hold his head high. A casual visitor, that is, unless he has tried to walk with them, might think that the students were in deep mourning, at least those of the very noble, but hopeless cause. They are in mourning and they are praying for rockless walks; furthermore, we think that it is a very noble cause, but not a hopeless one.

We ask, if the student body is a subject for experimentation? One might interpret such obstacles as those presented for the following concepts: The actual power of concentration of the average collegian; the thrill a professor gets when taking vengeance on a tardy student; the causes and the results of "athletic foot"; the effect on the logic of the average college person of pointing out the soft of the bumps along the road of life or the proof that "a rolling stone gathers no moss."

If we are not the subject of experimentation someone should contribute a friendly gravel roller to break in our walks. Even in this year of depression hundreds of shoes are more expensive than a day's service of a gravel roller. Besides, we are tired of rocking along the walks and much prefer to walk along them.

JEST AMONG US

What this country needs more than a good five-cent cigar is a good eight-cent nickel.

If some of our marriages are made in heaven it must be a helluva place.

It doesn't matter how much a man has in preferred stock, he still has a lot in common with us.

What's happen for the goose is re-hashed at the supper table.

Some professors we know have superiority complexes—they must have to give quizzes on their lectures.

Some women actually are priceless when they begin to say "Gimme!"

Dr. A. J. Barnouw Is Pan Politikon Speaker for Marcon

Yale Student Will Speak to International Relations Group

Through arrangements made by Professor Vandenberg, of the political science department, Pan Politikon, student organization for the purpose of promoting the study of international relations on the campus, has secured as the convocation speaker of next month Dr. A. J. Barnouw of Columbia University. Holland has been designated by Pan Politikon as the subject of study for this spring.

Dr. Barnouw is a native of Holland and a graduate of the University of Leiden. Later he taught there, and at the Gymnasium in The Hague. He was also the Dutch correspondent for "The Nation" for a number of years. He came to this country about eight years ago, and has since held the Queen Wilhelmina professorship of Dutch history and art at Columbia.

The two subjects which Dr. Barnouw has mentioned are among which he will speak successively in the morning and afternoon of March 10 in Memorial Hall, are "Dutch Political Parties" and "The International Position of Holland."

Dr. Barnouw visits Holland every summer, and has traveled in the East Indies. He is the author of the book "Holland Under Queen Wilhelmina" which came off the press a few years ago.

Capt. Cunningham Will Be Professor Of Military Science

Yale Student Will Speak to International Relations Group

Captain William A. Cunningham, graduate of the Vanderbilt Civil Engineering college in 1907, the University of Georgia as bachelor of laws in 1913, and the University of Michigan, as Master of laws has arrived in Lexington to assume the duties as the assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the university.

He held the position of athletic director at the University of Georgia for 10 years and when the World War was declared, he attended the Officer's Training Camp at Fort McPerson, Georgia. He was commissioned a captain in the United States Army.

Captain Cunningham commanded the 32nd machine gun battalion, 82nd division, in France until December, 1918, when he was promoted to the rank of major and appointed the divisional machine gun officer, 82nd division. He was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, the French Croix de Guerre and the Italian Croce de Guerra.

He was assigned to the 14th Infantry, Fort Davis, but for the past year he has been on detached service at Quarry Heights as Department Motion Picture officer, Librarian, athletic officer, and recreation officer. It was during this tour of duty that the army motion picture theatres were changed from silent pictures to talking pictures.

Here's a case where a warehouse was built around a conveyor, instead of the conveyor being squeezed into the warehouse... Western Electric wanted a new warehouse for telephone equipment. For the most efficient handling of material, its own distribution engineers designed a system of conveyors even before architectural details of the building were worked out... This was done after careful estimate had been made of volume and kinds of material to be stored and handled... There are many other assignments that challenge resourcefulness and imagination in making telephones and equipment for the Bell System—purchasing its supplies—acting as its distributor.

Looking Over The Magazines
By NICHOLAS WINN WILLIAMS
"Collier's Weekly" has been publishing serially a sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front." It is called "The Road Back," and it may be quoted that there is not so much blood and gore in it as was found in Remarque's first book. This time the young fellows—war weary and restless—are on their way home from the trenches. In their eagerness to get back some of them ride on the tops of overcrowded trains; part of these are knocked off upon going through a tunnel and crushed like insects when it comes to knowing soldiers are wondering if they really are a part of peace; war seems to be the only element. They are repelled by the profiteers, profiteers who are such "block-heads" when it comes to knowing anything about the war. Then there is the scene when they are in Remarque's Belgium. A shot is heard and one of their company is killed. Poor fellow! He was looking forward to obtaining revenge on his wife who had been unfaithful while he was away at war. He must content himself as he dies with the thought that his comrades will carry out the revenge in his name. That is realism. Remarque is able to catch the feelings of these half-starved German soldiers; he speaks the rhythm of their emotions.

Pep Organization Postpones Election
The election of officers of SuKv student pep organization, for the second semester, which was to have been held last Tuesday, has been postponed until next Tuesday due to a misunderstanding concerning the time of meeting. All members of the club are urged to be present next Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The present officers of the club are: secretary, Bill Young; treasurer, Bill Young; vice-president, Bill Young; and president, Bill Young.

QUIZZES BAFFLE SCHOOL FACULTY
Spectator, Columbia Student Paper, Sponsors Examination Which Many Professors Refuse to Take
A list of 40 questions, prepared by an engineer and a lawyer, were recently published in Scribner's magazine along with an article by Thomas Beer. Twenty-five college students had hunked the examination, and Mr. Beer took the occasion to comment on the ignorance of modern young people. The Spectator, student paper of Columbia, offered the same list to 53 faculty members. Of this number, only 10 would take the exam, 43 refusing outright to have anything to do with it. Only four of the 10 handed in completed answers, and the highest grade, made by Prof. C. A. Manning, teacher of Russian literature, was 55.1 per cent. Those behind him were two more English professors with grades of 54.3 and 54.2 per cent.

Oh, We Say . . .
At Centre the dear old Fiddlers-these have an Englishman who asked to join the fraternity, went to Oxford. It is surprising that anyone here ever attends classes.
Culinary at Kentucky
We are told that the engineers and a member of the English department play a little game that the former usually win. To be victorious the men of wood and iron must yell "Ya-ya-ya-ya-ya" louder than the prof can endure.
Sigma Nu
After a night of stealing horses, pushing buggies onto sorority porches, turning in fire alarms, derailing street cars, singing "John Brown's Body," they wandered into a palatial home on exclusive south Buckle and slept soundly. Several days later the owner of the home returned, found them sleeping. Having been young himself at some prehistoric date he woke the gentlemen, gave them the house and returned to Sweden. One of the boys moved out—he lived next door anyway—when he learned that a fraternity was about to be born—we mean organized.
Formerly the fraternity had two spring suits—which the brothers took turns wearing on warm days—and was regarded as the lodge for jolly, jolly college boys and fireplace athletes. It has steadily declined since the graduation of Frank (Shakespeare) Davidson, but shows promise to coming up to the zero mark again.
Assets: The house, memory of "Maje" Wiglesworth.

Without speaking disparagingly of "The Nation's Roll of Honor" for 1930, as published recently in the "Nation," one cannot help from being amused at one of its entries. Under the heading "Drama" it places on its honor roll "The creators of the animated motion picture cartoons, particularly as exemplified in the KICY MOODE and SILLY SYMPHONY series. It is hard to disagree with them at that.
Gamaeli Bradford has written a very excellent study of Theodore Roosevelt for February "Harper's." It is called "The Fury of Living." Typical of Bradford's style he remarks of Roosevelt "From birth till death he lived in a storm." Action, movement, the vivid, restless, emphatic assertion of the ego, these things mean life to him, were the pride of life, and he was uneasy and dissatisfied if any moment passed that was not filled with them." Mr. Bradford during 1930, as the readers of "Harper's" will remember, wrote a series of portraits. Among these were Lenin, Ford, and Mussolini.

At the same time, a number of students took the quiz, and although the highest grade in this group was 48, several students finished ahead of some of the faculty members.
The Spectator reporter said that the faculty members were nervous and fidgety while taking the test, and otherwise displayed signs of discomfiture, such as pulling at their collars.
That the professors tend to bluff, just as their students do, was indicated by the answer to, "Name three compositions of Brahms." The answer was, "The first, second, and third sonatas."
Some of the questions proving the greatest stumbling blocks were "Who were the Piccolomini?" and "Who was Tillman Riemenschneider?" along with "For what is Abu Simbel noted?" which question was not answered by anyone. The easier ones were such as "Name five makers of English automobiles," "Name three living American architects," "What is chromium?" was answered in many different ways.
The questionnaire was a part of the Spectator's campaign against examinations. As for the questions, the Piccolomini were an ancient royal Italian family, and chromium—well, chromium is just chromium.
Y. W. C. A. Has Vesper Services in Boyd
Vesper service of the Y. W. C. A. was held in the reading room of Boyd hall Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock with Kellena Cole acting as leader. Following the song service, a story, "The Childhood of Christ," was given by Dorothy Root, followed with a discussion of the "Masters" of John The Baptist, by Helen Dornell.
The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction. Each vesper service until Easter will be a discussion relating to the life of Christ. The public is cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Intramural Wrestling Finals To Be Held Tonight; Last Boxing Bouts Wednesday

By RALPH E. JOHNSON
 Finals in intramural wrestling will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the Euclid avenue gymnasium and boxing bouts will be held tomorrow night. As an added attraction tonight, C. W. Hackenmuth, intramural director, has arranged for an exhibition wrestling match between two well-known Russian matmen.

FINALS TONIGHT

Wrestling finals will be run off tonight in the Euclid avenue gymnasium and boxing bouts will be held at 8 o'clock. The bouts will start at 8 o'clock. Admission is 50 cents for everyone. Students books will not be accepted.

In the 125 pound class the younger Drury will meet Connie Rose for the title. This class is an unknown quantity as neither man has entered the ring to date. The decision started out with three contestants. One man had to forfeit due to a doctor's order.

Drury for the following night. Consensus of opinion was that Pete Drury would whip Chapman, but had Pete Drury quite at his mercy at the end of three rounds. As a result of his win he will meet John Drury in the finals, and John is expected to "turn on" and try to save the honor of the family.

Two of the varsity backfield stars, Richards vs Toth, meet for the 175 pound title. The match will be fast as both men use a form of tackle to affect a throw, which is natural as they have both been well trained in the art of blocking and tackling.

The heavyweight bout is by no means the only fast bout of the evening. Carraco meets Ferguson in a match that will be worth while seeing. Ferguson has drawn byes to the finals and Carraco has met two opponents.

Hoffman and Shanklin tie up in the ring and O'Bryant has shown up well in the semi-finals. Hoffman wrestles a bang-up match and so does Shanklin. In their semi-final matches they both gained full in very good time and on opponents who were not set-up.

In the 158 pound class Duff meets Lyowski. Lyowski has handed his opponents defeats in a decisive manner. Duff drew byes to the semi-finals, but in his one match he showed up so well that he is considered a worthy opponent for Lyowski.

A fast bout is expected when Price meets O'Bryant, 145 pounders. Price appears to be a ready man in the ring and O'Bryant has shown up well in the semi-finals.

Foraythe and Bryan, 145 pounders, meet after some heavy going in a tough class. Both boys have been working hard to get into shape and the bout ought to be one of the fastest bouts of the evening. The 135 pounders, Meredith and Scott, will put on a good go for the fans.

Two clever boxers meet for the 125 pound title. They are Rodas and Moffet. Both boys are boxed well in the preliminaries. Neither man is a slugger, but are inclined to be shifty and quick.

The finalists in the 115 pound class, Edwards vs C. Kelley, have not entered the ring to date. They were the only two entered in this class. C. Kelley is also a finalist in the wrestling matches.

The boxing men will be featured by many "ent" bouts, but the heavyweight scrap is expected to be the feature of the night. In the preliminary bouts John Drury met and defeated Jack Phipps in a whirlwind bout.

The officials for the wrestling matches are: referee, Shively; timekeepers, Hanson, Potter, and Jones. Boxing officials are: Hanson, referee; judges, Brownie Leach, of the Lexington Leader, Frank Hoover, of the Lexington Herald, and Ed Conboy, of the Kentucky Kernel.

Pitchers and Catchers Will Report for Duty Monday; Remainder of Baseball Squad to Begin Practice on March 1

Warehouse to Be Used by Coach Pat Devereau to Work in

SQUAD LOSES THREE STARS OF LAST YEAR

L. W. McMurray, Veteran, May Hear Brunt of Pitching Burden

By ED CONBOY

Last Monday evening in the Euclid avenue gymnasium one of the greatest basketball aggregations to play on the local floor, Georgia Tech, thrilled the 4,000 fans by their marvelous playing. There is seldom a game when both teams, racing like race horses at breakneck speed down the floor and up the floor, maintain such a dazzling playing speed, without cracking.

That is what happened when the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech tangled with the undefeated Cats Monday night. Kentucky was conceded more than an even chance to score a victory.

Three varsity stars will be lost to the varsity squad this season. They are Mauser, third baseman, Rhodes, first string pitcher, and Kellogg, star outfielder who did not return to school.

Of the veterans returning, Captain Dudley Barnes, catcher, Augustus, second baseman and utility catcher, McMurray and McBrayer will form the batteries for the Big Blue. Pat will be in dire need of pitching material as his ace Rhodes was graduated last year.

McMurray, a dependable, hard working veteran from the 1930 squad, will probably bear the brunt of the mound duty. McBrayer saw plenty of action last year, but his size and hitting ability make him very useful for the first base position.

Ellis, freshman star from the 1930 frosh, is not eligible, and whether Devereau has some promising pitcher in the offing is not known. The Kentucky coach has often approached a season with raw material and produced one or two outstanding stars, who were heretofore unknown to their ability.

Cecil Urbaniak will be back at the shortstop position again. "Urb" is a third baseman, but played at shortstop last season. The work he did in the field is not known. He is a sterling work of Elwood Kruger, who alternated at first and third base.

A sophomore who is heralded as a great player, Hogue, may win the shortstop berth, and Urbaniak may go back to his old job at third. Toth will again be battling for the second base position. He and Augustus, took turns at the keystone sack last season.

In the outfield there are four veterans. Johnny Murphy, Bill Trost, Orr and Kelly will fill in the outer gardens. Kentucky won the majority of her games last season, and faces one of the most pretentious schedules that Wildcat baseball team has ever encountered.

There are seven freshmen players who will furnish strong competition for the regular positions. Wooten, a pitcher, will be fighting for a chance to show his wares. Ellis Johnson, who is on the varsity basketball team, will be out for the team when the call for infielders is issued.

Worthington, who played first and third, was outstanding with Hogue, third baseman, and Lavin, catcher. Carney and Luther are other available freshmen stars who will make the going tough for the varsity men.

Kentucky plays 15 games this year and opens its schedule on Stoll field with Miami College of Oxford, Ohio. The Wildcats defeated the Ohio team here last year, but the Miami boys reversed scores at Oxford.

Efnosis returns to Stoll field on April 6. The Illinois lot last year before the great pitching of Rhodes. The Badgers of Wisconsin University. (Continued on Page Six)

Successful Track Season Is Seen as 12 Lettermen Sign for Spring Practice

With 12 lettermen and an abundance of brilliant sophomore material, prospects for another successful track team are promising. Lettermen who are returning this spring are, Kelly and Gibson, captains; Cavana, Heber, McLane, Williams, Weinman, Porter, Roberts, Shipley, O'Bryant, and Rutenenuter.

The Wildcats should be exceedingly strong in the field events this year. Despite the fact that several men were lost to the middle distance runs through ineeligibility, Coach Shively believes that the 1931 thinlives will be the best team ever to represent the Blue and White.

The events and men available are: Sprints: Kelly, Heber, Foster, and Longenecker. Kelly and Heber ran dead heats in practically all the meets last year, with Kelly having a slight edge at the Vanderbilt meet. Shipwreck was clocked at 9.9. Middle distance: Watts, Gibson, Evans, Rutenenuter, Yates, Farrer, Mattox, Milliken, and McGaughey. Little is known of the ability of these men in varsity competition, as the majority of them will see major work for the first time this year. However, Milliken, Gibson, Watts, and Rutenenuter turned in beautiful performances last year and should win many points this year.

Long distance: O'Bryant, Martin, and Burress. O'Bryant and Burress are in excellent condition due to their work on the cross country last year and should reach their peak by the opening meet.

High hurdles: Cavana, Shipley, Baker, Emmerich, and Skinner. Kentucky is fortunate in retaining Cavana, and Shipley. These two boys having won the majority of their races last spring.

Low hurdles: Gibson, Weinman, Williams, Emmerich, and Skinner. The Wildcats enjoyed a fair season in this department last year and much is expected of lettermen Weinman and Williams this spring.

Shot put: Epps, Adridge, Seale, and Forquer. This department was hurt somewhat when Wright failed to return to school this semester, but it is thought that his place will be taken by Epps, former intramural shot put champion.

Discus: Taylor, Gibson, and Andrews. Tuttle, as a freshman last year, had little trouble in winning over the varsity men, and great things are expected of the new comer this year.

Javelin: Cavana, McLane, Heber, and Rodgers. All the men are good in this event, with Cavana and McLane holding slight edges.

Broad jump: Kelly, McLane, and Yates. Kelly won this event in every meet but one last year and McLane enjoyed a similar success the year before but was out last year with a leg injury.

High jump: Roberts, Gibson, Porter, McLane, and Tuttle. Roberts set one time held the state record

In this event with a jump of better than six feet. Last year he failed to hit his stride but is expected to be a sure point winner for the Blue this year.

The schedule for this year is as follows:

- April 4—Georgetown at Lexington.
- April 18—Vanderbilt at Lexington.
- April 25—Tennessee at Lexington.
- May 3—Sewanee at Sewanee.
- May 9—Cincinnati at Lexington.
- Southwestern Conference meets at Birmingham.
- Southern Conference meets.

U K NET TOURNEY TO BEGIN ON MONDAY

Monday night, February 16, the first whistle signifying the opening of the long anticipated intramural basketball, will sound in the Euclid avenue gymnasium. For the past month, fraternity, independent, and R. O. T. C. teams have been busy rounding into condition, and now, with only a few more days remaining for practice, are tapering off with light work-outs in preparation for their opening games.

News comes from the intramural office that this is to be the biggest basketball year the university has known. Already approximately 28 teams are entered and late entries are coming in every day. At the present time 18 fraternity teams, five independent, and five R. O. T. C. teams are enrolled.

The season will last about a month or six weeks and in that time the winner and the runner-up will have been recorded in the files of the intramural office.

This year will see a slight change in the arrangement of the finals. Before, the end of the season has always found an uneven number of teams eligible for the finals and it has been necessary that one of these teams draw a bye, which was always unsatisfactory in the eyes of the team that failed to draw the bye. This year the managers of the five teams into three divisions: the fraternity teams, the independents, and the R. O. T. C., or Company teams. These teams will play within their own division in what further plans but suffers the loss in their percentage column. After each division has been eliminated in its division the squad with the highest percentage will be named winner of that division. This will leave the divisional winners in a deadlock for first place and a miniature tournament will be held to decide the university championship.

In the past it has been a custom for the trophy donors to give awards to the winner of each division. This year a new system will be used by which only the winner and the runner-up will receive trophies.

Six Washington Birthdays Spent Near British Lines

George Washington was permitted to celebrate but few of his birthdays in the peaceful quiet of his beloved home at Mount Vernon, especially during the latter years of his life. He lived at a time when this country was in the throes of its birth, and fate had decreed that he should take an active part in its creation. His services were needed and he was not the one to shirk when duty called him into leadership of the armies of the Nation.

During the Revolutionary War, Washington was Commander-in-Chief of the American armies, and in this capacity he faced the responsibility of defeating his country's enemies. That this was no small job he fully realized. On his shoulders rested the task of recruiting and maintaining an army composed of men who were untrained in warfare, and who only too often were without the courage and inspiration which animated the great General, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

From the beginning of the Revolution in 1775 until its close in 1783 when final articles of peace were signed, the Commander-in-Chief commanded the American troops. During this period he had eight birthdays, all of which, except the last two, were spent in winter quarters but at a short distance from the British lines and at times when he was in the midst of plans for spring campaigns.

The first of Washington's birthdays which found him at the head of the Army was in 1776, and the General was directing the American operations at the siege of Boston. A trying time it was, for his soldiers were inadequately equipped and supplied, while the army under General Howe was formidable in every respect. The following year, Washington was in winter quarters with the Army at Morristown, and from his correspondence of that time the distressing condition of the troops may be realized. The Commander-in-Chief was constantly to ask for supplies which were not always forthcoming.

Despite the terrible hardships of the following year at Valley Forge, Washington's birthday did not pass unnoted. The band from Proctor's Artillery celebrated the event by serenading their chief in front of his quarters, and the compliment was graciously received, as indicated by an item in Washington's expense book for that date. The band members of which were listed as musicians, drummers and fifers, was rewarded with a gift of one pound ten shillings in hard money. This was the first known public celebration of the event.

In 1779, General Washington was at Pluckhmin or Middlebrook on his birthday, and the year following he was again in winter quarters at Morristown. The year 1781 found him at New Windsor under the tented celebration of his natal day which was held at Newport by the French allies under Count Rochambeau. The date of this commemoration on February 12, having been postponed a day in the hopes that the man for whom it was given might be able to get there, February 11 had been selected for the fete, for the French soldiers seemed to prefer following the old style calendar. Another important event happened that year for on February 22, the date of Washington's birth according to the Georgian calendar adopted in 1752, the Marquis de Lafayette left for Virginia on the campaign which ended the war at Yorktown. A noteworthy coincidence.

After the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, it was generally believed that Washington did not propose to disband the Army or relax into a state of carelessness as long as a definitive peace had not been signed. He, therefore, urged upon his countrymen the necessity for continued preparedness. This position was concluded at Paris in 1783. In 1782 he was in Philadelphia actively engaged in maintaining the American Army at its full strength as it was possible.

The last birthday which Washington spent in the Army found him at Newburgh in 1783. His troops, especially the officers, were almost in a state of revolt which culminated in the famous Newburgh Resolutions. The affair was favoredly ended, however, in March when the Commander-in-Chief called the dissatisfied officers together and with an eloquent appeal to their patriotism averted the impending trouble. The following December, Washington resigned his commission to the Congress at Annapolis and retired to Mount Vernon for only a few years' rest from public cares before being called to the office of first President of the United States.

Baseball Practice To Begin Monday

Baseball practice will begin Monday at Newburgh, N. Y., for a doubleheader on their southern jaunt.

The team always places a good team on the field and they are generally in the first division of Western Conference teams. On the 14th of April, the third Western Conference foe, Michigan, encounters the Cats here.

It has been some years since the Wolverines played here and the fricas should be an interesting one. The locals play a return game with Kentuckians on May 1 and 2.

Returning home, the Wildcats aggregation takes on the Commodores at Newburgh on May 8 and 9. The Big Blue closes the season, May 16 with St. Xavier at Cincinnati.

Professors May Be Inferior to Students

Dr. Irma Kennedy Criticizes Teachers' Attitude Toward their Work

In an address before a science group at the University of British Columbia, Dr. Irma Kennedy expressed this opinion. The professor's mind is often 10 times better than his own," Dr. Kennedy said. "The professor is commonly criticized for being abstracted, absorbed, theoretical, impractical, selfish, careless, conceited, intolerant and unsympathetic."

"Women and men think differently," Dr. Kennedy said. "In the lecture room, a woman sometimes makes a remark which is quite original, but which is four or five years ahead of the professor's limit of thought."

"Technical learning is often detrimental to the creative nature of genius," Dr. Kennedy, "because it adds a fourth side to her intellect, namely, inquisitive intellect. Intuition is the main side of a woman's mind."

In concluding her address, Dr. Kennedy remarked that British civilization is on the decline, and that it will be necessary to look to the Orient for new culture.

SERIES OF TALKS TO BE RADIOCAST

State Officers and their Duties Is General Topic for Fifteen Addresses Beginning February 16

A new series of 15 radio talks on the general subject "State Officers and their Duties" makes its debut from the University of Kentucky studios of WHAS, the week of February 16. Each talk will be devoted to a distinct state officer or commission as far as possible the various officers of the state of Kentucky will come to the Lexington radio studios to talk about their respective offices.

The complete radio program from the university, the following schedule is as follows:

Monday, February 16: 12:45 to 1:00 p. m., "Kentucky agricultural outlook for 1931," by T. R. Bryant, assistant director of agricultural extension division; "The Business Outlook of Kentucky Agriculture," by Dr. H. B. Price, professor of agricultural economics.

Tuesday, February 17: 12:45 p. m., "Chats on Salesmanship, No. 3—Types of Customers," by R. D. McIntyre, professor of marketing; 1:00 p. m., Blaine Stone and his orchestra; 1:15 p. m., "How do you pronounce it?" by L. Dantler, head of the English department.

Wednesday, February 18: 12:45 to 1:00 p. m., "The 1931 market for Kentucky livestock," by C. D. Phillips, assistant in marketing; the tobacco outlook for 1931, by O. M. Farrington, assistant in marketing.

Thursday, February 19: 12:45 p. m., "State officers and their duties, No. 1—The Governor," by Judge Lyman Chaffey, professor of Law; 1:00 p. m., "Volin Romanes," 1:15 p. m., "Contemporary Drama, No. 6," by Frank C. Fowler, director of the university little theatre.

Friday, February 20: 12:45 to 1:00 p. m., "What farm folks are asking," by L. C. Brewer, College of Agriculture.

Sunday, February 22: 6:00 to 6:30 p. m., University Philharmonic Orchestra, and Helen Stark, pianist.

Survey Discloses Interesting Facts

In a recent survey held among the freshmen women in Syracuse University by Dr. Eugenie Leonard, interesting findings were disclosed. For example: twenty-eight per cent admitted being in love many times, while only ten per cent had been in love but once. However, thirty-five per cent insisted they had never been in love at all.

Sixty-two per cent said that their attitudes towards petting and necking. And seventy-three per cent think the college girl should know about sex. One reply was as follows: "I think that a mother should tell her daughter everything about sex before she goes away to school, instead of letting her find things out for herself. And another wrote: 'A college girl should know how to take care of herself under all conditions. She should know how to dress, how to smoke, how to drink a little, how to pet—so she won't be surprised into anything—how to keep her heart and not to fall easily, and how to get along with other girls. I believe that a girl who has not been on her own to some extent in her school years should not be allowed to go away to college.'"

Gertrude Evans Is Bulletin Editor

Within the next two weeks another new organ will appear upon the university campus. The publication of the Home Economics club Monday night, the members selected the editorial staff for the "Copper Kettle." Gertrude Evans, a named editor-in-chief; Margaret Ellis, managing editor; Jane Dyer was selected for business manager, with Caroline Brown and Dorothy Strother as advertising assistants. The "Copper Kettle" is the annual bulletin of the Home Economics club and has in the past been mimeographed for the use of all Agricultural students. This year it was definitely decided to improve the appearance of the "Kettle" by having it printed at the Kernie printing plant. The publishing expenses will be borne by advertisements which are to be sold by the club members.

Copies of the "Kettle" will be distributed to all Ag students, and probably to the alumni and to other Home Economics clubs throughout the United States. Anyone who wishes to contribute articles of news, may do so by getting in touch with Gertrude Evans, editor-in-chief.

ASSISTANT DEAN TO ATTEND MEET

Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes Will Go to Convention in Detroit; Approximately 1,000 to Attend

Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, assistant dean of women, will represent the university at the 15th annual meeting of the National Association of Deans of Women to be held in Detroit next week. Mrs. Holmes will leave Tuesday night and return to Lexington the following morning.

Approximately 1,000 women attend this meeting, which is held every year prior to the meeting of the National Educational Association. Last year the gathering was in Atlantic City, and Mrs. Holmes was Kentucky's delegate there.

This year the headquarters will be at the Hotel Statler in Detroit, and the convention will be presided over by Miss Thyra W. Ams, dean of women at the University of Pittsburgh, president of the Association.

At the meeting on Saturday morning Mrs. Holmes will give an address to the assembly on "Points in State Organization Programs," drawing her examples from the Kentucky organization.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday will be spent in Detroit, and on Saturday the convention will close with a visit to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where the delegates will be the guests of the university for the day.

Transylvania, U. L. Reduce Faculty

Eight Transy Professors Plan to Sever Connections with that School

Immediately following the resignation of Dr. Elmer G. Campbell, head of the department of botany, at the University of Transylvania College, comes the announcement that seven other instructors are to be released at the completion of the present school year.

Those who will sever their connection with the school are: Dr. D. D. Dings, head of the department of Romance languages; Professor and Mrs. Foster Krake, of the department of music; George E. Pele, athletic director and head football coach; Prof. William Clay, and Prof. Norman Braden, son of Pres. Arthur Braden.

Dr. Maney said that the dismissal came as a complete surprise to most of the faculty members. President Braden told him that the action was taken as "a matter of economy." Dr. Maney and Professor Dings have been connected with the college for 16 years. During the last five years Dr. Maney has performed the duties of registrar at the institution.

Only a few days previous to the news of the action of Transylvania the University of Louisville had appropriation for athletics from $15,000 to $5,000. This reduction will virtually ruin all major sports, according to Tom King, director of athletics at the Louisville school.

KIPPING RETURNS TO SCHOOL AND FOOTBALL

Bob Kipping, varsity tackle, has returned to the Wildcats fold. Kipping, who registered early in the week, was reported lost to the squad through failure to report for spring football practice.

Kipping appeared on Stoll field Wednesday afternoon and participated in scrimmage. Coach Gamage had decreed that no player would be eligible for the team, who failed to report the first day of spring gridiron work.

Kipping has been busy with outside duties and this detained him from football practice. "Kip" has been one of the backbones of the Kentucky line, along with "Babe" Wright, who left school this semester.

The loss of these two men was almost the deathknell for the Big Blue hopes of a great line this fall. With Kipping back, it is reported from reliable sources that Captain Wright may make up his work in the summer session and be eligible for competition in October.

Wright left the university a few days ago and it was believed that he would not be able to return to the university. However, things have changed for the best, and the big blond from Carrollton, Kipping, will be on the firing line fighting with Captain Wright.

Spring practice continues on Stoll field every afternoon under the direction of Coaches Gamage and Shively. Wednesday afternoon, the first and second varsity squads battled through a 20 minute defensive scrimmage.

A third team, composed of freshmen of last year and a candidate from an intramural team, spent an hour and a half talking the future of Alabama plays under the tutelage of freshman Coach Priddy.

The plays failed miserably against the varsity line. After the defensive scrimmage the Wildcats were victorious.

MYER RECOVERING

"Bo" Myer, varsity football star, is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. Myer was operated on a few days ago in Louisville. Myer will possibly be a candidate for quarterback this fall. Believed by many observers, the smartest player on the team, friends of "Bo" will be glad to know that he is recovering and will be able to play next fall.

An instructor in Shanghai, China reports in the Brown Herald that American novels and movies are giving Chinese students an unreal and unwholesome portrayal of the relations between men and women. "It is funny sometimes to hear students talk about wanting 'free love' when what they mean is freedom to choose their life partners." Co-education is fast becoming popular in the Orient.

Freshman, Senior Cabinets Addressed

McConnell from Nashville Y. M. C. A. Graduate School is Speaker

J. B. McConnell, from the Y. M. C. A. Graduate school in Nashville, Tenn., was the speaker at a joint meeting of the Freshman and Senior Y. M. C. A. cabinets Tuesday night. He spoke in the interest of Blue Ridge, Y. M. C. A. conference will be held in June.

Dr. McConnell brought out with emphasis the fact that there will be a section of the conference which will be held at the University of North Carolina, and taught in Florida before he became connected with the University of Kentucky.

He is now visiting Kentucky schools, Centre, Transylvania, Georgetown, Kentucky Wesleyan, and the University in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate school and of Blue Ridge. He spoke to the young people of the First Methodist church last Sunday evening on the race question.

Figures Show Girls Like Dormitories at Indiana University

(By Exchange Service)

Bloomington, Ind.—That dormitories attract more girls at Indiana University than any other type of residence, especially first year girls, is revealed by figures showing the housing of freshman women for the year 1929-1931, by the office of the Dean of Women.

One-hundred forty freshmen will live at Memorial and Residence halls this year as compared to 89 in sorority houses and 89 in private homes. Forty women of the freshman class from Bloomington will live in their own homes. Work for room and board in private homes has been chosen by 97 Indiana co-eds.

How Money is Raised

The total amount of money which will be earned by girls in this form of work will be $10,856 a semester estimating that each girl will be paid $30.00 for the cost of tuition, a week the report shows. Fifty-eight hundred dollars in scholarships are contributed toward the payment of expenses of 83 girls for their first year. These are in the classes of Kappa and county awards for excellence in scholarship during high school.

An unusually large number of "A" students are being worked in the university this fall. 56 being listed in the class of 1934. Five colored girls are enrolled in the class.
