Writer Sees In Gum Chewing the Possibilities of a National Sport
(By M. E. Stewart)
Not that it is new, this game—far from it, unfortunately. But so far as we know, it has never been publicly recognized as a proper diversion. However, it could be made very fast and enjoyable, that is, for those already inclined to it. We refer to no less famous an occupation than that of chewing gum. It can be made, it is a furiously speedy race when two or more devotees indulge together, as any university student can testify.

"LETTERS"
New Issue Brings Editors Many Congratulations
The Kernel is delighted to report that the second issue of "Letters," the literary quarterly, was published on this day, even at this early time has been the occasion for numerous compliments and congratulations to the editors of the magazine.

Alice Hogan Rice's short story and David Alexander's critical study of Sherwood Anderson seem to be the most popular contributions in this issue. Students who wish to contribute to "Letters" are asked to do so through Jack Cousins, who has recently been given charge of student subscriptions.

us as questionable in taste. Perhaps we shall even come to enjoy the aerial soap. Why not, if gum-chewers may wax poetic and never, never weary?
But as to elevating the game from a mere pastime to a national sport, we believe that a series of experiments have shown that a nation of gum-chewers, spending more annually on that necessity than on any other article of personal attire, should do its share in upholding our national reputation. Personally, we are sure that it does—the evidence is all in the evidence. We believe that still hear behind him the derisive crack of many loyal jaws "Crack, crack!" they go, the sprightly ones, and "Crack, crack!" they go, the persevering sort is sure to answer, is it not so, my brethren? Yes, with in the temple itself they carry on the crackery. We venture to give our students will be held responsible for this meeting and should make every effort to attend.

THE BASKETBALL TEAM

Every graduate and former student of the University of Kentucky has reason to be proud of the basketball team that this year is wearing the Blue and White of our Alma Mater. Beginning the year with an entirely new coaching system along with a majority of green men just graduated from the freshman class they have been victorious in all but one Southern Conference game. That defeat came from the hands of Maryland at the end of a long and hard trip. With three more conference games facing them, at the time that this was written, they have a good chance of going through without a defeat at the hands of any of their Southern opponents. Two of these games are return games with teams that they already have beaten: Vanderbilt and Tennessee. They then return home and play Georgia Tech here for the last Southern Conference game. Following this they will again meet Centre whom they have already beaten. This year Kentucky has a good chance to take the championship of the South. A team from the University of Kentucky won the Southern championship in the spring of 1921. This year wearers of the Blue and White have the best chance of again taking that honor since 1921. At the beginning of the basketball season little thought was given to Kentucky's chance in the race for Southern Conference honors, but with each game Southern writers and coaches took notice of the threat from Kentucky until now we are considered strong contenders for this honor. Too much cannot be said in praise of our present coaching staff. The vastly improved basketball team is but another indication of the progress that the young men in charge of athletics at the University of Kentucky have made in the short time that they have been here. Alumni of the university who have followed our teams closely this year are proud in praise of the present coaching staff and at all times voice their desire to have the same staff retained for another year.

A HISTORY OF ATHLETICS

As we announced in another column on this page we will next week begin the publication of a history of athletics at the university which was written in 1915 by Dr. A. M. Miller of the geology department of the University of Kentucky. This history begins at the beginning of athletics at the university and brings the account through each year until 1915. The account was written from memory by Doctor Miller. This same account was published once before in the Kentucky Alumnus, but we are reprinting it word for word, as it appeared before, for the benefit of those who have been graduated from the university since that time. Then again, we feel that it will be welcomed by a great many of the older alumni who were students in the university during the earlier days of athletics when games were played under difficulties and hardships. We sincerely trust that you will find the same enjoyment in it that we did when we first read it over.

BUFFALO ALUMNI ELECT OFFICERS

Club Members Name Men to Direct Affairs of Organization for Coming Year; To Make Club 100 Per Cent.

The Buffalo Alumni Club of the University of Kentucky in the regular monthly meeting held January 14, elected officers for the coming year. The officers elected were: President, G. S. Frankel, 1919; vice-president, C. S. Tucker, 1926; secretary, J. P. Hill-claw, Jr.; treasurer, D. J. Harney, 1927.

The Buffalo Alumni Club always has been one of the most active of the organizations of the Alumni Association. In reporting to us the election of officers the newly-elected secretary asked for a list of all the Alumni living in Buffalo who have not paid their dues for this year. He stated that it was the aim of the Buffalo Club to be 100 percent members of the Alumni Association.

Last year this Club with the same objective in view was furnished with a list at and at the close of the year the club was about 95 percent active in the Association. This year they have begun earlier and according to the record they made last year the goal will be reached early this year.

All the officers of this club are connected with the Buffalo Forge Company in Buffalo, as are several other graduates of the University of Kentucky. Any of the officers can be reached by addressing them through the company. The date of their regular meetings and the place of meeting will be announced later.

It is highly probable that this club will be host to the Sent Engineers again this year when they take their annual trip through the North and East. The Buffalo Alumni Club always has entertained the seniors since they began making Buffalo a port of call during their spring pilgrimages.

Interested in the University of Kentucky and always send in his check for the Kernel early each year.

Athletic History of U. K. to be Published

Series of Articles Will Appear on This Page of The Kernel

Beginning next week, "The Early History of Athletics at the University of Kentucky," a series of articles, will appear on this page of the Kentucky Kernel. This history of athletics was written by Professor A. M. Miller of the University of Kentucky and published in the Kentucky Alumnus beginning in 1915.

Doctor Miller, when he wrote this history of athletics, was dean of the College of Arts and Science and also professor of Geology at what was then known as State University. According to a note at the beginning of the history, Doctor Miller wrote from memory alone as adequate records of the athletic program were not kept in the earlier days of athletics at the university. However, the work is interesting and will be instructive to a great many of us Alumni who have entered and graduated from the University of Kentucky since this series of accounts were published in the Kentucky Alumnus.

Governor Sampson Entertained

Last Friday was a brilliant evening at the university with the visit of Governor and Mrs. Sampson, and other notables to witness the basketball game between Washington and Lee and the University of Kentucky. It pleased all to have the university team victorious before these prominent guests and also that the university band and the military department were able to show what a really distinctive welcome the university could give to the chief executive and his party. The Governor and Mrs. Sampson came from Frankfort to Maxwell

Place and were met there by a guard of honor, Captain Taylor and five of the cadet officers, who escorted the honored guests, with President and Mrs. McVey, Judge Richard C. Stoll, to the gymnasium where the game was played.

As the distinguished party entered, they were welcomed by a fanfare of trumpets, all the students arose and then the band accompanied by the new sponsor, Miss Mary Lewis Marvin, played a special selection, called "The Strength of a Sampson," which was composed by Mr. Elmer G. Sulzer, in honor of the governor.

After the basketball game, which so thrilled all the spectators, President and Mrs. McVey entertained the Governor and Mrs. Sampson with a very informal buffet supper at Maxwell Place.

The table was decorated in blue and white carnations in a blue vase and blue candles in silver candlesticks. The host and hostess were assisted in entertaining by their daughter, Miss Janet McVey.

Alpha Delta Theta Tea

The Alpha Delta Theta sorority entertained with an informal tea Friday afternoon at their chapter house in honor of the new girls of the university. The house was decorated with red and white roses, and the color scheme of red and white was carried out in delicious refreshments.

Weddings

Baker-Williams

Miss Margaret Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anval Baker, of East Maxwell street, and Dr. Earl Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Williams, of North Broadway, were married Wednesday, January 25, at the home of the bride's parents, the Reverend William Punch officiating.

The ceremony, which was read before a beautifully arranged altar of pale yellow roses, cathedral candles and ferns, was witnessed by 150 guests.

The bride looked lovely in a two-piece ivory, transparent velvet gown with gold belt and trimmed with rose point lace. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and lilies of the valley.

Her maid of honor was Miss Noma Hammons, of New York, and the best man was Dr. Clarence DeWesse.

Dr. and Mrs. Williams left in the afternoon for a motor trip. They will visit Cleveland and other northern cities. Upon their return they will live at the Phoenix hotel where Dr. Williams is resident physician.

Messrs. Larus & Bro. Co. Richmond, Va. Dear Sirs:

Just a confession and an appreciation. A number of years ago I was a user of your Edgeworth smoking tobacco. But like some others, perhaps, I was led by alluring advertisements to change. A few days ago I went into a drug store to get some tobacco, and the case was the familiar can of Edgeworth. I bought it and since then I have enjoyed old-time comfort. So my confession is that I made a mistake in changing to other brands, and my appreciation is such that Edgeworth will be my Smoke Pal while life lasts, which may not be long for I have passed my "three score years and ten."

H. L. MENCKEN SCANS THE MODERN COLLEGE
ITHICA, N. Y.—(By New Student Service)—I am thoroughly convinced that too many young Americans are now going to college and that their presence is greatly impeding the work of the colleges. Certainly it should be possible to devise some scheme to weed out the unfit." Thus spoke Henry L. Mencken to a reporter for the Cornell Sun, in one of several interviews recently granted to college papers.

Mr. Mencken, we are told, "is opposed to the college for the purposes of intellectual education. With Nathan, he holds that its greatest benefits are social."

Of compulsory military training, the editor of the Mercury said: "The military training idea seems to be absurd. I see no reason why the college student should be conscripted and not the young man outside."

And of the lecture system: "The American system, it seems to me, is better for America than the Oxford system. It is obviously more in accord with the habits of mind of our people."

And of fraternities: "Regarding fraternities, I know nothing. It is commonly alleged that they foster snobbery. But I see no objection to snobbery per se; all rational men are snobs in some way or another. That the fraternities exalt fifth-raters and overlook men of merit may be true, but the accusation might be leveled against any other human institution."

Mr. Mencken urges all who feel the urge to write, first to obtain steady employment. Until recently he suggested bootlegging, but the strength of competition has led to advocacy of taxi driving and similar occupations.

"Our School, Not Ourselves"

COLLEGES OF THE FUTURE

In view of the conflicting ideas of what a college is, and what it ought to be, leading educators throughout the country are becoming ever more aware that the college of today is undergoing a transition period. That they recognize this fact, is shown by the constant experimentation now going on—an experimentation that is increasing in impetus throughout the entire United States.

Out of the chaotic mass of opinions and ideas on the subject, there is one dominant fact. This is, that there will not be a college of tomorrow, but rather that there will be colleges of tomorrow.

It is believed that these colleges of the future will be of two types: one, the college of ideas, to which the student will go simply to obtain a cultural background with no idea of gaining a social or economic advantage; the other, the college of specialization, to which the student will go with the single purpose of being instructed in one particular field of work. In the state universities both types would exist. Nor would there be any attempt to confuse one sort of education with an education of an entirely different nature, such as is the tendency today.

Progress is being made slowly, but surely, toward this new idea of what the colleges and universities ought to be. And this age of experimentation holds great promise. Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, dean of the Experimental College at the University of Wisconsin, has turned the old system topsy-turvy and is proceeding along entirely new lines. Sunday's edition of the New York Times carried the headlines: Yale Tries New Idea In Medical School. The new idea is to give the students absolute liberty, complete freedom of action. The student will take examinations when he is ready for them without regard to classes or classroom technique, but surrounded by faculty members who are on the plane of friends and advisors, instead of technical instructors. Also, the student, and student alone, will select his courses.

These changes need no comment. They admit more than any other one thing, that the present system of education is a failure. Formerly, if one will recall, it was the student who was a failure. The new force steadily gains in power. In our favorite collegiate slang, "It won't be long now."

"TO VAGABOND"

One of the recent additions to the undergraduate vocabulary is the verb, "to vagabond." The expression was coined at Harvard and means to rove around into classrooms where one does not belong, help oneself to a vacant chair and listen of one's own free will to what is going on.

So popular has vagabonding become at Harvard that the editors of The Crimson print daily a list of a dozen or so lectures worthy of the vagabond's attention, and from this assortment he chooses one or more for his casual patronage.

Such a delightful means of entertaining oneself is, of course, possible only in a college where the quest of specific academic credits is not the one imperative demand a student must meet if he is to graduate. Otherwise one does not have the leisure. But this practice of vagabonding shows something else. It shows that the undergraduate, free from the drudging work requirements imposed upon him, is not content to sit down to a game of bridge, but is actually interested in broadening his outlook; is actually interested in gaining an insight in what he believes might interest him. Having this opportunity the student may easily decide whether or not a particular subject will interest him.

If the students on the campus are sufficiently interested in vagabonding and if the professors of the university will cooperate by turning in to The Kernel lectures that they think may prove of special interest, The Kernel may in the near future publish such lists. Such a procedure would test both the students and the professors. It would show whether or not some students of the university are worthy of being here. It would show whether or not some professors are really capable of teaching.

THEATER RUSHING

It seems to be customary, among lower classes, to form a "wild group" and rush downtown theaters after the basketball games. The managements of the theaters have, no doubt, been very considerate in this matter and have allowed it to go on to a certain extent. Recently, however, there has been no consideration shown on the part of the university students as to the comforts and rights of the theater patrons. On one occasion the manager of a local theater stated that he lost two hundred dollars as a result of a large group of students "rushing" the theater and remaining in the best seats throughout the show.

Business people of Lexington have always responded to requests asked by the student body of our university, and the business people have a right to believe that their request for students to be more considerate in this respect be fulfilled.

WAILS OF THE WEEK

At the University of South Dakota women students are three and one-half per cent smarter than the men, their registrar reports. At the University of Kentucky the dean of women appears to be 100 per cent smarter than the girls. Now when in the heck does that put the men?

"Take that, and that—and that," muttered the professor as he handed out the successive sheets of outside readings.

Hot air, it is said is a wonderful polisher. We are now accepting orders for silver ware and shoes to take to several of our classes.

The governing board of Creighton University abolished Freshman cap wearing in order that the first termers might be raised to the plane of equality with upperclassmen. There was no action taken to remedy the fact that they were still freshmen.

One way to tell a freshman is to utter vocally your communication to him.

A Dating Bureau has been organized at Southwestern College, Memphis, Tenn., we have learned. What's the matter with the sororities, anyway?

LITERARY SECTION

MARTHA CONNELL, Editor

FUTILITY

I spoke with some measure of vehemence
 Concerning treachery and cheat,
 The mawkish futility of endeavor,
 Signifying that "Ambition" is a much-traveled lie.
 I made pointed allusions to
 The shoddy drapery that is termed Culture.
 The subject of Beauty, such as the obscene
 Innocence of a woman's charm,
 Heaven, also, seemed not overly attractive
 According to my thinking.
 And so I discoursed mightily, in fluent style,
 On these unimportant matters.

The fox flirted his tail in my face,
 Muttering some great nonsense
 About sour grapes. . . . —N. G. A.

A TOAST

(Republished by request)
 This is the end of the fury of living,
 The end of the passion and strength we are giving,
 Out of the earth the blind worms creep,
 Down through the earth the cold rains seep,
 Gropping their way
 To the huddled clay
 Hidden down from the sun's sweet play
 Awhile.
 This is the end of the fury of living,
 The end of the passion and strength we are giving,
 Into the dust there will drift soon
 All that dear life beneath the moon.
 Then drink a toast
 To the happy host
 Over whose bones we brawl and boast
 Awhile. . . . —N. G. A.

MAGIAN

I have built mountains from my mind
 And toppled them with drunk Heaven—courts;
 I have made fancied figures, twined
 By magic means into black script;
 Made ships career past friendly ports;
 And wander out where mad winds dip
 Into the sea where lost Atlantis lay.

Of things beyond belief and beyond gift
 I have had knowledge and some brief control,
 Have visited where other races lift
 Their faces up to other skies than ours,
 And made my moon at fortune's scanty dole
 To scarcely human forms at uncouth hours,
 And won such rule as mortals may.

And all to such an end that I bow low
 Before the bidding of soft, tinted finger-tips,
 To follow where a woman's wild caprices go,
 And take my wages from her ruddy lips.
 —N. G. A.

HALF-LOVE

Sure, I loved you for awhile,
 But—aw, let me go away,
 I—well—I do regret it
 But there's a ship sails out today.
 You yourself, you gotta admit
 That the fun was worth the pain,
 I don't wanta hutchka kid,
 I'm just tellin' ya out plain:
 That I—well—I hate it,
 But the jinx is up I guess.
 So I think that I'll be going.
 On board ship to get my mess. . . . —M. H.

Looking Over The Magazines

(By J. Clark Graves)
 The "Forum" for February has some interesting articles that I shall probably comment on them throughout our entire column. Count Herman Keyserling contributes to the Forum Educational Series, explaining his theory of education as practiced at the Darmstadt meetings of the School of Wisdom. He argues that our present form of education with its specialization, its efficient system, imparts knowledge to a "not only low but lowering level of the educated masses all over the world," and that real education "can only be brought about by a stimulation of the creative essence within the individual soul" which he is endeavoring to do at the Darmstadt meetings. Count Keyserling's theories are extremely interesting and this article embraces, it seems to me, some very important ideas.

Professor Irving Babbitt in the same issue of the Forum, follows in Mr. Paul Elmer More's footsteps and attacks modern American criticism directing his complaint against Mr. H. Mencken who seems to sum up for Professor Babbitt all of the discrepancies of American culture. He deprecates the lack of standards in the criticism, the disregard for form by American novelists, asserting that in passing from "the love and fear of Jonathan Edwards to the love and service of man professed by the humanitarians," the American critic has lost "the inner life with the special type of control it imposes," to the detriment of American letters. Professor Babbitt overwhelms his antagonist with his rather classical erudition which is at times blurred, if I may say so, by his evident dislike for his subject.

In the same issue of the Forum Don Marquis in "The Glass Eater" has written a delightful story, somewhat satirical, in which Elphaleht, the depraved confessor, reveals how the glass eating has been responsible for his undoing. Just as one hears so much about the addiction to alcohol so Elphaleht in a curious blend of absurdity and sentimentality, tells how that he first became addicted to glass eating which he inherited from his grandparents, how that he was banished from polite society for endeavoring to eat a Bishop's glass eye, and how that, after eating the stained glass windows in a country church he managed to cure himself of the glass eating habit until he dropped a buttered bun and, being unable to overcome the ravishing desire, fell upon the fragments, devouring them every one. Don Marquis has produced several successful plays, and in this absurd story, one can savor the whimsical quality of his delightful work.

I also recommend in the same issue of the Forum, Andre Maurois' "Diarrell," which is appearing serially, and D. H. Lawrence's "The Escaped Cock." Andre Maurois is on a lecture tour now in the United States and he is one of the most capable biographers of our time. This life of Diarrell has been highly praised critically and it is appearing in six installments, I highly recommend it.

Music, Stage and Screen

Students will, one hopes, attend Fritz Kreisler's concert in the Woodland Auditorium Wednesday. If not the most famous violinist in the world he is at least the most beloved. Those who hear Kreisler Wednesday evening will retain a pleasant memory of him through his music.

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Baby Mine" is the feature attraction coming to the Strand Sunday. "Baby Mine" was one of the season's most popular plays when it ran on Broadway, and the screen version of it is said to retain all of the qualities that made the original a success. The story concerns two rab-rah boys, a type of individual prevalent on the campus of this university. Oswald and Jimmy—such nice names, too. They attended the National University of Vertebral Manipulation. It ought to be a peach of a comedy.

"The Gay Retreat," a comedy of "war daze and Jewish nights," is the feature picture coming to the Strand next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The plot of this drama is built about the adventures of a handsome young sleep-walker and his two faithful buddies, his former butler and chauffeur—who have been detailed to France by his father to take care of the house of Wright. They start for France A. W. O. L. from their own unit. Having started out by getting in trouble they keep it up throughout the war in Europe and Ted McNamara, of "What Price Glory" fame, are featured in the parts of the two attendants. Gene Cameron plays the role of Dick Wright.

"Publicity Madnes," with Lois Moran and Edmund Lowe, is the picture coming to the Ben Ali Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a clever story of modern finance and publicity stunts. In the picture, Miss Moran emerges from the grab character of an old-fashioned girl into the most modern of fappers, Edmund plays the part of the "go-getter" salesman.

Dolores Costello in "Old San Francisco" is the attraction at the Kentucky Sunday. The program is rounded up by a complete Vitaphone program. The management announces that Norma Talmadge. "If The Dove" is soon to be shown there. It seems to have been a long time since Miss Talmadge has been seen in a picture by Lexington theater-goers. One admits one has missed her and expects a good picture.

Excesses on Last "Rugger Night" Bring Ban From Oxford and Cambridge Heads; Protest Against Accusations.

LONDON—Oxford and Cambridge undergraduates who wish to celebrate in London on the occasion of an inter-university contest, whether it be the annual boat race or the Rugby football match, will have to find some other outlet for their high spirits than in such a "rag" as took place on last "Rugger Night."

The police, always indulgent to exuberant undergraduates, could not but take serious notice of what occurred on that occasion, and the result is that the Vice-Chancellors of Oxford and Cambridge, after a conference with the Home Secretary, have considered it necessary to issue a serious warning to all students whom it may concern.

Bad Behavior

On last "Rugger Night" the "rag" degenerated into excesses which, for rowdiness and bad behavior generally, eclipsed all previous celebrations of the same description. On that occasion, the youths who "painted the town red" held up traffic on the streets and had differences of opinion with the police that landed some of them in the police courts the next morning. At several theatres the delinquents interfered with the performance by shouting remarks to the players, throwing things about, breaking the furniture and even going to the extreme of emptying fire extinguishers upon women in the audience.

Students Protest

Oxford and Cambridge undergraduates protest that they are being wrongly accused. They declare that there are many London youths possessing turbulent natures who seize the opportunity on "Rugger Night" and "Boat Race Night" of joining in the "fun," and that it is the overflow of animal spirits on the part of this extra-mural element which is responsible for most of the excess. It is pointed out, however, that among the youths charged in the police courts on the morning after the last "rag" there were a number of undergraduates.

The disgraceful scenes in some of the theatres on that night were the subject of discussion at a special meeting of the Society of West End Theater Managers a few days ago. Afterward the following statement was issued: "Feeling sure that after the regrettable events of last 'Rugger Night' the necessary steps will be taken by the authorities themselves to debar their members from participating in such scenes in the future, the society does not propose, therefore, to take any action in the matter."

It is understood that the police authorities have decided, for the protection of the public, to no longer take such a lenient view of similar occurrences. In the future "ragging" caught in the act of committing breaches of the law are likely to find themselves visited with the full penalty that the law allows. It is further understood that the university heads at Oxford and Cambridge will act just as drastically by expelling any undergraduate convicted to the courts of a breach of the law during one of these "rags." — New York Times.

W. A. A. NOTES

(By Lee Keyes)

Basketball for girls is in full swing and there is much rivalry between the classes, each being eager for the coveted laurels. Virginia Elbert, basketball manager, has announced the following schedule of games:

February 10, Freshmen vs. Juniors.
February 13, Juniors vs. Seniors.
February 14, Freshmen vs. Seniors.
February 16, Juniors vs. Sophomores.
February 17, Freshmen vs. Sophomores.

The schedule for inter-sorority games is not yet completed.

Horseback riding at the Kentucky Saddle Club is the latest sport sponsored by the W. A. A. and unusual interest is being shown by the girls in this activity. The number who can enroll in the classes is limited, and all who wish to join this class are requested to see Miss Skinner at once.

The advance rifle team will hold their first match with the University of Louisville during the week of February 19, and several girls have been practicing daily for this event.

Philosophy a Cure For Love

Philosophy as a cure for a broken heart was advocated by a noted German educator speaking at Vassar. He cited his own case as an example to show that the pangs of disappointed love might serve as a stimulus toward accomplishing what one otherwise would never do.

Within the last few years there have been suicides, kidnappings, and murders, springing from the rejected love motive. If some persuasive orator could convince people that they should look for solace in other interests than in deeds of violence, what a fine world this would be!

A man seeking distinction should welcome the rejection of his love, because the emotional experience would be necessary to the best expression of himself. A girl dismissing an unwelcome suitor would know that she was doing him a good turn. Altogether this philosophy would work toward the greatest good to the greatest number.—Daily Iowan.

MEN LIVE LONGER WHEN MARRIED

Records of Class of 1877 of Princeton Give Husbands 12-Year Advantage Over Bachelors; Wives Get Credit.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY—That the chances of a college educated man's surviving the stress and strain of the modern world are nearly twice as great if he marries than if he remains single is the conclusion reached by examination of the record of the half-century class at Princeton University in its fiftieth anniversary year book, edited by Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Forty-two per cent of the married men have survived the fiftieth anniversary of their graduation from Princeton, while only 25 per cent of the bachelors are living today. The average age of the class is 72 years, and 58 of the 152 men who matriculated at Princeton with the class are still alive. Journalists and physicians have had the highest mortality rate, while bankers, farmers, manufacturers and engineers have had the lowest.

In commenting on the statistics, the year book says: "Once married, the men of each profession not only lived on the average twelve years longer than the bachelors, but 45 per cent of them still survive, as opposed to 25 per cent of the single men. Some credit for this record must be given to the good housekeeping and ceaseless vigilance over rubbers and overcoats of the wives of '77, and probably, if the truth be known, of their daughters as well."

"It is not surprising," the book continues, "that the uncertain hours and high pressure work of the journalists and physicians made both groups short lived. Perhaps the type of temperament essential to distinction in either of these lines burns up a man's physique quickly. Calmness and financial stability on the other hand survive long usage."

The record of the class of 1877 shows three members of Princeton's Board of Trustees, eighteen professors and a large list of prominent journalists, bankers, physicians, ministers, lawyers, scientists, manufacturers and engineers.

Recent publication of the year book of the class of 1902 shows that forty-five members of the 340 men in that class have in the past twenty-five years published eighty books and eight plays besides short stories, articles, poems and motion picture plays. The record is held by George Agnew Chamberlain, who has eighteen books to his credit, while Ernest Poole has fifteen. Eobert Haven Schaufier, eleven, and Charles Wadsworth Camp, ten. The class roll includes David Hunter McAlpin 2nd, New York broker; William W. Roper, a member of the Philadelphia Council; and Princeton football coach; John V. A. MacMurray, Minister to China, and Ralph H. Leidenperfer of New York, auction bridge expert.

Wildcats Trample Washington & Lee Generals in Fastest Game of Year

OVERCOME HEAVY LEAD TO WIN, 34 TO 28

The University of Kentucky Wildcats turned the tables of the Washington and Lee Generals into a disastrous retreat at last Friday night, in the most convincing before approximately 4,000 spectators, coming back from seemingly certain defeat at the half to win by 34 to 28. It was the fifth Southern Conference game won by the 'Cats.

James opened the attack for the Generals in the first moments of the game, and before the Wildcats knew the contest had started, they were trailing by 17 to 5. During the latter part of the session Kentucky began to catch up, but at the half the Virginia boys were still on the long end of a 20 to 11 score.

Kentucky found herself at the beginning of the second half started a drive which the Generals were never quite able to repulse. Jeffries found his old form, caring two field goals in rapid succession. Others followed and then Jenkins tied the count, which created such a furor among the fans that it seemed everyone had gone mad. Kentucky's forwards then came out of their daze and Combs tossed a field goal, giving the 'Cats the lead for the first time.

Milward, former Lexington Blue Devil, substituted at center at the half and held Spotts, who had made fifteen points in the opening period, to a single free throw in the second half. Jenkins excelled in his guarding, and Combs and Jeffries, working together in faultless manner, passed to each other and kept the ball in circulation. Milward, however, was the outstanding player.

Kentucky was weak on free throws, completing only four in eleven tries. The Generals made good ten out of twelve shots.

The line-up:
 Kentucky (34) Pos. (28) W. & L.
 Owens F (5) Elgiebach
 Jeffries G (1) Lowry
 McEaver C (16) Spotts
 Jenkins F (7) G (2) Wood
 McGinnis G (1) G (2) Joyce
 Substitutions: Kentucky—Combs (12), Milward (2). W. & L.—Ebert, Howe, Nance (2).
 Referee—Lane, Cincinnati.

Fraternity Basketball Quintets Start Play for Intra-mural Championship

Eleven games have been played so far in the intramural inter-fraternity basketball tournament with most all of the contests close and interesting throughout. Among the teams that have already exhibited their skill the Sigma Nu's and Alpha Sigma Phi's are among the best bets for division winners.

The winners in each division of the inter-fraternity meet will play for the fraternity championship and the winner of this game will play the independent champions for the university cup. The independent championship will be decided between the church league teams and the dormitory and town fives. The tournament finals will be played March 2. Good crowds have been turning out for the inter-fraternity contests and the ardent fans have been rewarded with a high class brand of basketball.

M. E. Potter, head of the intramural department, is in charge of the meet and Roush and Griffin are the officials par excellence. The summary of the games up to Wednesday follows:

Division I.
 Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 29; Phi Sigma Kappa, 14.
 Delta Chi, 15; Sigma Chi, 11.
 Kappa Alpha, 11; Alpha Tau Omega, 8.
 Alpha Gamma Epsilon, 9; Delta Chi, 24.
 Division II.
 Sigma Nu, 33; Sigma Beta Xi, 4.
 Kappa Sigma, 10; Phi Delta Theta, 5.
 Delta Tau Delta, 28; Phi Kappa Tau, 6.
 Alpha Sigma Phi, 19; Delta Tau Delta, 13.

WILDCAT NETMEN TAKE LAST TRIP OF SEASON

A stalwart band of Wildcats, led by Captain Paul Jenkins, entrained for Nashville last Tuesday night, bent upon the sole mission of successfully invading the stronghold of the Vanderbilt Commodores and the Tennessee Volunteers on successive nights. Vandy furnished the opposition on Tuesday night, and Tennessee on Wednesday night.

After these games, which constitute the last road trip of the season for the Wildcat quintet, the team will play Georgia Tech and Centre here, before the Southern Conference tournament.

Coach Mauer and his squad are endeavoring to wind up the season with a string of victories after the disastrous wallowing handed to the Blue and White at Indiana last weekend.

This basketball squad, made up as a whole by sophomores, with the exception of Captain Jenkins, has shown the effects of the strain under which it is playing, especially when several hard games follow in rapid succession. This was the case in the Maryland embroglio, in which instance the 'Cats were turned back by a 37-7 score, after defeating Virginia in a close game and fighting the Middies at Annapolis to a standstill on the preceding nights. Then last week Washington and Lee was trounced on one night, and the next night, following a very tiresome trip, the Wild-

COLLEGE SPORTS

(By Bill Reep)

Well, the 'Cats did it last Friday, but it was looking pretty tough for the boys during the first half. With the score standing 20 to 11 at the end of the first half in favor of the Generals, the 'Cats came back in the second part with their traditional lightning spirit and tied the score before the Generals knew what it was all about. After that it was a nip and tuck affair all the way, but Blue and White managed to maintain a slight lead through the remaining moments of the game.

The victory over Washington and Lee was the fifth out of six conference foes who have fallen before the Kentucky a prominent standing in the conference.

The game with Indiana last Saturday night was a tough one to lose especially since the way the Kentuckians held the Big Red during the first half. The score at that time was 18 to 14 in favor of the Hoosiers. The followers of the Blue and White had hopes of a victory since the 'Cats always play better ball during the second half. But the pace was much too great for our boys and gradually the Big Red team pulled away to a comfortable lead. The final score was 48 to 23.

It is never a good policy to offer alibis for a defeat, but we do feel that the Wildcats would have played a much better game against Indiana if the game the night before with W. and L. had not been so strenuous, requiring all of their stamina. They immediately left for Lexington after the game, going in a special bus and remained there all night, saving the next morning for Bloomington. Taking all of these things into consideration, the trip to Indiana was a hard one on the team and naturally it did not help their playing. We admit, and with pleasure, that Indiana has a great team and that they deserved to win.

On Wednesday night of this week the Wildcats will take on the Commodores of Vanderbilt at Nashville for the second meeting of these two teams. Kentucky won the first game here and according to dope they should repeat. At the time of this writing we, of course, do not know the outcome of the game, but we do feel safe in predicting a victory.

Then, on Thursday night of this week, Kentucky will play Tennessee as a return game, this game also being played away from home. The Wildcats won the first game from the Volunteers in rather an easy fashion, but this time they may encounter much stiffer opposition as they are playing on a foreign court and will be somewhat handicapped. Let them should win this game and we believe they will.

To bring the week to a grand finale the Wildcats will take on the Yellow Jackets from Georgia Tech tomorrow night on their own floor. This will be the first time that Kentucky has met Georgia Tech in any branch of sports on their own grounds since the "hate" game of 1928 when the Yellow Jackets invaded Lexington with a crack team which boasted a

SPENDER EXTOLLS OUR JOURNALISTS

Departing for England, He Says Their Idealism Impressed Him on Visit Here; Criticizes Publishers.

Among the passengers who sailed recently for Chesham and London, was J. Alfred Spender, English author and former editor of The Westminster Gazette, who came here last October as the first American Newspaper Fellow, under the auspices of the English-Speaking Union. Mr. Spender, who was accompanied by his wife, said he had traveled through the United States from coast to coast, making a study of American social and economic problems, but giving most of his attention to American newspapers.

"There is much in the newspapers that I like," the English journalist said, "but there is also much that I do not like. One thing stands out paramount in my mind, and that is the idealism of the American newspaper man. If he had complete control of the American newspapers they would, I believe, be truly great."

"It is unfortunate that commercial men, for the most part, and admirable men at that, have got hold of the American press and conduct it along the lines of 'advertising first' and reporting and editorial leadership as a secondary factor."

He expressed amazement at the space given to crimes and said that in England it would be impossible for a newspaper to print long details about either the Snyder execution or the Hickman trial. American publishers he had talked with on the subject were agreed, he said, that to protect the better newspapers, America would sooner or later adopt the English law against violations of good taste.

"I want to say in departing," he declared, "that I have been treated with the rarest courtesy and I leave with the conviction that your journalist, if anything, is superior to the publishers. It must be heart-breaking for them to realize that real ability is subordinated to the prestige of advertising and the rule of the advertiser."—New York Times.

Clever is the man who can put to and to together and get "tool."—Cornell Widow.

RELIGIOUS DISCUSSION
RADICAL PROBLEMS

We have previously stated that to follow Jesus' way of life, or to apply the principles of love, of humanity and of justice would mean for us: To practice brotherhood toward all; To remember that every human being is a person of infinite worth, deserving the fullest opportunity for self-development. To participate in no secret order or fraternity if it tends to exclusiveness, prejudice or strife. To seek justice for every man without distinction of caste or color."

In the light of these ideals what is our actual practice in the matter of race relations? There are some 710 million members of the white race and 1040 million of the colored races. The white race is increasing so much faster than the others that before 1950, at the present rate of increase, it will outnumber all other races combined. While the older countries of Asia are almost stationary in population, the white race by its political control of nine-tenths of the habitable globe, and of the bulk of the world's raw supply, is rapidly outstripping others. It occupies the best portions of the earth; it exercises control over more than half of Asia and all but one-third of the continent of Africa.

Looking at the world as a whole, we do not find that the feeling of race and color prejudice exists to any appreciable extent among the Slavic or Latin peoples. Like an infection it has spread chiefly among the English-speaking peoples, due probably to the political and economical position they occupy in the world. Nowhere is this feeling more intense than in the United States, where the "Nordic" element, having come first into possession of the natural resources, has developed a defensive attitude toward other racial groups.

A survey shows conclusively that in many instances where the colored population filtered into the white residential sections, making them ultimately colored sections, there was no loss of real estate value, and in many cases the rentals and sale prices increased.

If, in any section of the country, the greater proportion of appropriations for education and the best facilities are given to the ruling race, and the worst conditions to the subject race, what moral conditions will it inevitably beget and who is chiefly responsible for them? Lynching has become a national disgrace in America. Since 1885 a total of more than 4,250 persons have been lynched in the United States, of whom over 3,200 were Negroes. This was an average of two per week for over 40 years. The number of lynchings has been declining in recent years; in 1925 the number was 17, in 1926 it rose to 31, a little more than one every two weeks. In many sections the majority who constitute the lynching mob are professing "Christian" church members who see no contradiction between this practice and their religion. Is the solution for this or any problem to be found in the use of violence and the appeal to force? The answer will depend upon whether our position is to be Christian or frankly pagan.

Mr. Oldham maintains that from the Christian view of God certain consequences in regard to the relation of man with man inevitably follow: The Christian's business is to seek first the Kingdom of God and his rightness. God's love for all men gives to each human personality an inestimable worth. Since God loves men and seeks their good, Christians are dedicated to the service of their fellow men. Their religion demands from all that they should sacrifice a portion of their own lives for others. Since the race problem is dealt with so fully and so fairly in Mr. Oldham's pamphlet in this series, we shall not attempt here to enlarge upon it. Let us only ask ourselves whether individually we are prepared to recognize and to endeavor to root out any race prejudice that still lurks within each of us.—Sherwood Eddy, Student Leader and Spokesman.

Quality sent P.A.
to the head of the class

YEARS ago, P.A. showed a clean pair of heels to the field of smoking-tobaccos. It has maintained its lead ever since putting more distance behind it every year. There must be a reason why P.A. is the world's largest-selling brand.

There is! Open a tidy red tin and get a full breath of that class-by-itself fragrance. Then tamp a load into the bowl of your pipe and light up. The first pull tells you why more men smoke P.A. than any other brand. Cool and smooth and mellow and mild—not for one pipe-load, but always. Try this long-burning tobacco, Fellows. You'll say so!

TOWNSEND TELLS STORY OF LINCOLN MOMENTS

expensive law volumes, Abe's first knowledge of the Constitution of the United States was patiently gleaned from this book of his friend David Furman, a young deputy sheriff.

Eight autographed volumes of Lincoln's law books, owned when Lincoln and William Herndon were law partners, also in the Townsend collection. These well-worn books, with evidence of long hours spent poring over their faded sheepskin bindings, show over different cases. Lincoln never underscored a line which he considered important. Instead he would draw a crude hand with the forefinger pointed toward the significant passage. Throughout the volumes, these faint pencil drawings appear.

Lincoln's Kid Glove

The search for Lincoln relics, as fascinating as a pirate hunt for buried gold, has led this devotee of the Civil War president far and wide. From auction rooms where prices reached fabulous sums, to dusty bookshops where under piles of papers and dirt, unknown treasures might be hidden.

It would take several volumes to tell how I got them all," laughingly admits this modern treasure-seeker. "I have a white kid glove which Lincoln wore to a White House reception. Imagine Lincoln's broad, gnarled fingers in white kid! The reception was progressing splendidly. Nevertheless, when an old friend of Lincoln's, Mr. Dubois, of Illinois, came up, the country's executive smiled broadly and seized his friend's hand in a strong, hearty backwoodsman grip. I felt the sense of the white kid-glove! And ripped it is to this very day. When Lincoln died, his old comrade asked for the glove as a remembrance of his beloved friend. He bequeathed it to his daughter, Jessie Dubois, from whom I secured it."

Lincoln's Letters

Numerous letters in the precise but somewhat cramped handwriting of the president are owned by Attorney Townsend. Occasionally a misspelled word occurs in them, but Mr. Townsend is quick to defend his hero.

"At any rate he was not half so bad a speller as George Washington." One of these letters is a petition to a Confederate soldier, written four days before Lincoln's death.

The only letters which Attorney Townsend was able to find in Lexington, relate to the one case on record where Lincoln was the defendant. A firm of local merchants, Ochs and Hemmingsway, cotton and grain manufacturers whose shop was located at Number 4 West Main street, at the time of which is, curiously enough, just next to the First and City National bank where Lawyer Townsend's office is located, accused Lincoln of appropriating $176 which he collected from their delinquent debtors in Illinois. Lincoln was furiously angry at the accusation as his letters to his attorneys show. He forced the merchants to discontinue the suit and records of the case can be found today in the Lexington Court House. These letters, in the clear and legible handwriting of their writer, lay for 70 years in an attic unknown to the family of Judge Kinkade to whom they were written. Finally they were unearthed from an old desk drawer by Mr. Townsend and are now a cherished part of his collection.

Has Many Photographs

"But the most curious place for a Lincoln relic to be was in a little cottage in the Sangamon river bottom where Lincoln lived as a grocery clerk," the Lexington attorney told me as we sat in his law office. "The old woman who lived in the house didn't know whether there were any tokens of Lincoln or not, but she invited me into the kitchen to look. I noticed a shoebox perched on an old-fashioned, three-cornered cupboard. I climbed on a chair and began an investigation. There under a great pile of garden seeds and onions lay a daguerreotype of the man for whom I was searching—and it is one of the rarest ones in existence!"

"I have the only photograph of the Lincoln conspirators in existence," exulted Mr. Townsend. "And I've got a bronze cast of Lincoln's face and hands made by Leonard Volt, sculptor. Lincoln was so unassuming that when Volt asked him to place something in his hand while the cast was

Dr. Fryor's Historical Drawings Disappear

Drawings which have graced the blackboard in Dr. J. W. Fryor's Recitation room on the second floor of the Science building for 25 years have been erased. The chalk drawings were outlines of the heart, a cross-section of the spinal cord and a cross-section of a hair, which were made by Dr. Fryor to be used in lecture work in his anatomy classes.

A worker who painted the boards disregarded the "Do not erase" notations which were all around the sketches, and with a damp rag made them history. Some of the students who first gazed upon these drawings have now been practicing medicine for about 18 years.

being made, he went out, got an old saw, cut off a piece of broom handle, and said, "I'm ready." So in Volt's words, a small broom handle appears firmly clutched in Lincoln's right hand.

"This evening the performance will be honored by the appearance of Abraham Lincoln," announces a yellowed program of Ford's Theater, dated April 14, 1865, the day of Lincoln's death. This occupies a prominent place in the Lincoln collection.

"My only regret is that I failed to buy even more moments when I had an opportunity," said the owner of over a thousand books, pamphlets and manuscripts about Lincoln, numerous original photographs, and 750 pictures and places connected with his life. "He was a wonderful man!"

We are reduced to suggesting that they either cheer within the privacy of their sanctuaries or go frankly over to their step-brother. And, should these bovine emulators think fit, we should even applaud the adoption of the gum-chewing relays as annual athletic events. It would be, at any rate, a noble evidence of consistency. We need not be snobbish; the drooling imbecile can crack his gum as loudly and as long as any university graduate ever could—perhaps a point in favor of M. John
