From Associated Press reports

Truck caravan to protest new law

PIKEVILLE — Organizers of a coal-truck caravan, scheduled to roll early today out of the eastern Kentucky mountains to the state capital, say they want Gov. John Y. Brown to hear their protests of a new tax.

The governor, however, is not scheduled to be in Frankfort when the truckers arrive, his office said. He'll be campaigning in Arkansas for Democratic candidates.

Dwayne Thomas, the caravan's organizer, said 500 to 1,000 trucks are expected to participate in the caravan.

The truckers are protesting a new law that allows coal operators to get permits to haul more than the legal weight limit. The permits give coal haulers and operators an option from paying the weight-distance tax, which was adopted under separate legislation also passed by the 1982 legislature.

At least two lawmakers — Reps. John Doug Hays, D-Pikeville, and Clayton Little, D-Virgie — have said they would accompany the truckers.

Thomas said he talked to Brown by telephone Thursday night and the governor indicated he would try to meet with association representatives today.

45 believed dead in chopper crash

MANNHEIM, West Germany — Authorities said yesterday they now believe 45 people died in the fiery crash of a U.S. Army helicopter carrying an international parachute team, but it may take days to complete the grisly task of sorting the victims.

West German and American investigators, meanwhile, began probing the cause of Saturday's disaster, one of the worst chopper crashes on record.

Witnesses said the Chinook helicopter lost a rotor before it plummeted from a height of about 1,050 feet during the Mannheim Air Show and slammed into a nearby highway, where it exploded and burned.

At first, authorities said they thought 44 people were aboard the giant helicopter — five American crew members and 39 skydivers from several countries.

Mannheim chief prosecutor Frank-Peter Gleiter said at a news conference that officials now believe the chopper crew had only four members but that a two-man television crew from the U.S. Armed Forces Network may have been on board, raising the death toll to 45.

Bus, train crash in Switzerland kills 39

PFAEFFIKON, Switzerland — A train ripped through a bus carrying West German soccer fans home yesterday from a weekend tour, killing 39 of the 40 men and women aboard including the driver, officials reported.

They said among the nine people injured was the signal-woman, whose duties included lowering the railroad crossing barriers when a train approached. She was badly burned when flames from the blazing wreckage engulfed the signal house beside the tracks.

The others injured were listed as one woman who was the only survivor from the bus, the locomotive engineer and six train passengers.

Zurich police Maj. Eugen Thomann said the crossing barriers were not down when the bus passed through a level crossing about 12 miles south of Zurich in the early afternoon. He said the bus and the first car of the electric train burst into flames on impact.

All the bus passengers were believed to be West Germans from the Stuttgart area in southwestern Germany.

The first two cars of the three-car train derailed, plunging into a field some distance past the rail crossing.

Fighting breaks out again in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanese soldiers and police, coming to the aid of an ambushed convoy of Sunni Muslims, traded machine-gun and artillery fire with leftist militiamen in West Beirut yesterday in a four-hour battle that drove French peacekeepers from the area.

The army later announced it had quelled the first major flareup since government forces deployed in Moslem West Beirut, and the state-run television quoted an official as saying the government would strike with an "iron fist" against future attacks.

In eastern Lebanon's volatile Bekaa Valley, meanwhile, Israeli warplanes raided Syrian positions for the third time in five days and destroyed a sixth SAM-9 anti-aircraft missile battery, according to the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv.

The Israelis reiterated their demand that Syria keep the missiles out of Lebanon, and a senior official warned: "Israel will not tolerate a war of attrition, because we will not allow one to develop."

WEATHER

Today will be cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain and a high around 80. Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the middle 60s. Tomorrow will be partly cloudy with a high in the low 80s.

Merchant samples abound at festival; attendance estimates differ widely

By EVERETT J. MITCHELL II
Senior Staff Writer

The Student Government Association and WFMI-FM welcomed autumn Saturday with its second annual merchant fair and all-campus party, better known as Fall Festival '82.

With temperatures in the 80s, partly cloudy skies and a variety of music from four bands filling the air, students and others walked around Commonwealth Field sampling wares.

The companies displaying at the festival were prohibited from selling but were encouraged to distribute promotional items. The number of booths this year increased from four to seven.

A soft drink distributor gave samples from 20 five-gallon tanks. Chris Moore, a representative of the distributor, said 100 gallons were consumed.

A pizza company that gave away hundreds of free pizzas last year opted this year to distribute coupons.

"The main reason we didn't serve pizza this year is because sanitary conditions are hard to come by when you are out in a field like this," said David Knapp, a spokesman for the pizza maker.

"By time it reached the consumer it was not of the quality (the company) would like. We decided to make a strong showing in support of student government with coupons for a substantial discount on pizza."

The company also gave away 400 Frisbees and paraded a 23-car caravan across festival grounds.

According to David Bradford, SGA vice president, and Larry Trimmer, vice president and general manager of the Winchester radio station, attendance at the festival was 6,000, double last year's.

A reporter's estimate, however, put attendance at about 300. A larger crowd at a nearby rugby game may have been included in Bradford's and Trimmer's estimates.

"It was a deceptive crowd in numbers, because you never saw that many (6,000) people (at one time)," Bradford said. "The people were constantly coming and leaving."

"At 3:30, the estimate was about 1,500 people on site," Trimmer said. He did not say if the site included the rugby field.

One student thought a change in sponsorship affected attendance.

WFMI replaced Lexington station WKQQ after a dispute over the billing SGA would receive.

Mike McMimm, an electrical engineering junior who attended the festival, said he thought sponsorship by WKQQ would have ensured a larger attendance.

"Double Q' is a big name around campus," he said. "Just having them help sponsor the festival would have brought out more people."

Bradford said WKQQ's involvement with the festival ended when the station declined to co-sponsor this year's festival. He said SGA found WFMI, a station "trying hard to get into the Lexington market."

They were glad to meet us on any terms.

"I think the festival was a total success," he said. "People were very skeptical at first when I chose WFMI, but (station employee) Trimmer was very cooperative. They pulled off a very successful Fall Festival."

Trimmer said that the festival was good exposure for the radio station and that he considered the event a success from every aspect.

"We worked very well with SGA and are absolutely interested in working with them next year,"

Trimmer said.

Financially, the festival's sponsors certainly have nothing to complain about. Bradford said SGA received $1,400 from this year's festival, compared with $800 last year.

Each of the seven merchants paid $200 to participate. Sixteen student organizations also sponsored booths at $5 each, with the exceptions of SGA and UK Student Agencies. The latter received the proceeds.

Bradford said the earnings were given to UKSA, a non-profit service intended to match students' skills with demands, because it "goes back to employee UK students. They needed some funds to operate on this semester."

Bradford said Student Agencies employed students to aid in setup, promotion and cleanup.

He said it took 45 minutes to clean up the festival grounds with the help of a UKSA-employed pledge class from Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

The $800 raised last year was donated to the Library Modernization Fund, which paid for the security system installed in M.I. King Library last spring.

Trimmer said it cost WFMI between $3,000 and $4,000 to underwrite the festival.

Democrats pushing job bill in House

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congressional Democrats, trying to ride the momentum of their veto override victory, plan to seek quick action in the House this week on a $1-billion jobs program opposed by the Reagan administration.

The Democratic initiative, which backers said could put 200,000 unemployed to work on bridge and highway repair projects around the nation by the end of the year, seems certain to touch off a week of heightened partisan bickering.

With congressional elections less than two months away, the remaining battles of the almost-expired 97th Congress are expected to be dominated by politics.

Democrats, who have won few skirmishes since the 1980 elections, remained exhilarated from the 60-30 Senate and 301-117 House votes last week overriding President Reagan's veto of a $14.2-billion spending bill he deemed too costly.

Hopeful to strike again while ahead, Democratic leaders decided late last week to try to bring the jobs bill to the House floor, out of schedule, by mid week.

"Now seemed like a good time to try to get this thing moving. If we can get two-thirds to override a veto, we should be able to get the votes needed for a jobs bill," said a Democratic leadership aide who asked not to be identified.

"I can no longer accept in good conscience the president's plea for patience. The American people need to see action now before it is too late," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

"The costs of unemployment now outweigh the cost of putting people back to work," O'Neill said yesterday.

"Today we are paying out more than $20 billion in unemployment compensation alone. This says nothing of the lost output, the lost revenues, that result from today's high unemployment."

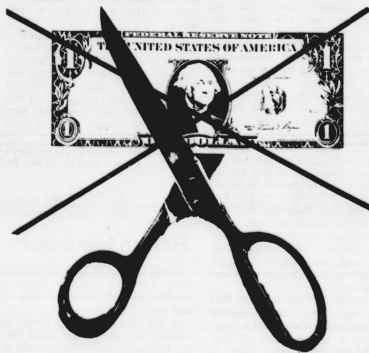

O'Neill said that funding for the program would equal 5 percent of the cost of the country's unemployment compensation bill.

Congress is in its final push before a scheduled early October adjournment.

The announcement last week by congressional leaders that they would not call a post-election "lame duck" session to deal with problems in the Social Security system meant that all the remaining work of the session must be done in the next three weeks.

Since the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1, the priority for Congress is to provide the money needed to run the government. But of 10 appropriations bills to fund federal agencies, only one — military construction — has been approved by either chamber of Congress.

And while a second funding measure, to finance the Department of Housing and Urban Development, will be before the House on Wednesday, it seems unlikely that Congress will enact many funding measures before the end of the session.

Veto overturn by Congress is a good sign

A skirmish won does not a victory make. But when you've spent two-and-a-half years in the shadow of defeat, it helps to have your morale boosted occasionally.

Such was the situation Friday, as Senate Republicans and Democrats joined to defy President Reagan's veto of a $14.2 billion supplemental appropriations bill. The Senate followed the lead of the House, which overwhelmingly overturned the veto Thursday. Although the vote in the Senate was narrow — the numbers came to exactly the minimum two-thirds needed to overturn a veto — it was the first time since Reagan took office that he has been defeated on a budget measure.

More importantly, the bill indicated a move toward more logical priority-setting by reallocating more money to social programs and less to defense. Perhaps the trend of taking increasing amounts away from vital services and reallocating it for defense has finally hit the wall. And maybe the nation is ready to wake up and realize that Reagan is simply taking the extra money and spending it in different places, not cutting back as he promised.

But, although encouraging, the narrowness of the margin overturning the veto does not justify such hopes. All that can be assumed is the once-unbeatable coalition of Republicans and "boll weevils" Democrats is feeling the pressure of upcoming elections and needs to throw its constituencies a few scraps in order to keep its seats, although signs are the change in voting patterns may have deeper meaning.

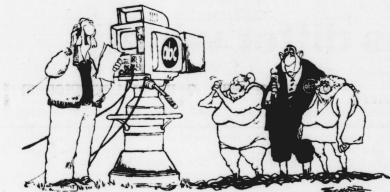

One ray of light shines through, however. Among the programs benefiting from the overturn was student financial aid, to the tune of $217 million. While it won't mean the restoration of the full Guaranteed Student Loan program, which until this year offered low-interest loans to college students regardless of need, at least there will be a few more recipients of need-based grants than there might have been otherwise.

Football game lost, but not the season

On the other hand, a lost skirmish does not a lost cause make. Although Jerry Claiborne and his Cats suffered an atrocious loss to Kansas State, losing 23-9 on six greasy-fingered fumbles, UK wasn't the only university to be embarrassed Saturday. Oklahoma (whom UK plays Saturday at Commonwealth Stadium) lost to West Virginia 41-27, and Western Kentucky didn't even get on the scoreboard against Delaware, going down 31-0.

So it can be assumed that opening games aren't always representative. And we hope Claiborne will have the boys out working on holding the ball for the rest of the week. Perhaps the Colonel will help out by donating a gross of moist towelettes.

Better luck next time. Maybe Oklahoma is ripe for another embarrassment.

Football fans: Worship at a church of your choice

Ah, yes, the middle of September. The trees begin to shed their green summer tops for the warm, comely golds and reds of autumn. The mountains overflow with hikers, their fanny packs filled with cheddar and wine sacs filled with burundy. Young lovers dressed in flannels and corduroys escape the concrete confines of the city and head for grassy glades to lie in. And across America, the song of prosperity, in four-part harmony, reaches the higher registers. Beer distributors sing bass, television technicians sing tenor, easy-chair salespeople take the alto line and divorce lawyers fill in the soprano section. Accompanied by the crack of shoulder pads and the thud of leather-clad feet against air-filled pickin', with the roar of the crowd and the glitter of the cheerleaders, with the swooning laments of many a pastor in many a church, yes... The National Football League is back. It's always a beautiful time of the year around my house, almost resembling a 22-week long Christmas. Week after week, I sit in my living room, in my overstuffed chair, with the wonderful sounds of onion dip-laden potato chips crackling in my mouth and pop top springing off frosty cold cans filled with my favorite amber concoction.

church for football fans came to Slade and three friends "in a vision, really... television," says Slade. "Me and the three Wise Guys (his church co-founders) had been meeting regularly to watch Monday Night Football" when we realized that football watching has all the elements of church: worship, devotion, congregation. Now this Slade fellow is my kind of guy. He realizes there exists in America a substantial group of people whose lives are dedicated to offense, defense and the pursuit of a quarterback on third and long. He and his flock aren't trying to replace Mom, apple pie, the nuclear family or religion. Slade says the congregation supports religion and the Sunday family dinner. "We feel people shouldn't be watching football when the sun is out and the church bells are ringing," he emphasizes.

"We feel people spend too much time watching football on Sunday," he says. "That's why we have our church on Monday nights. It's the perfect ending to a week, normally the laziest day of the week." The church's 4,000 parishioners, who live as far away as Saskatchewan and Guam, have one divine mission, one "real utilitarian purpose," according to Slade: to move the Super Bowl from Sunday to Monday night. The congregation is currently petitioning the NFL to move Super Sunday to Super Monday — at least by 1985, when Frank Howard and Dandy Don will get their first crack at calling the biggest of the big games.

"If we accomplish that, we'll have fulfilled all our commandments and we'll bow out gracefully," Slade said. But not before I convert. After reading about Rev. Slade and his congregation, I saw the light — I'm ready to join the Church of Monday Night Football. I'm going to send my $14 donation so that I too can become a deacon and spread the word throughout the land. I can't wait to get my T-shirt and "sacred schedule," my official newsletter from "The Rev" (with his divine wisdom on the season's sure bets), my official church beer cooler and the scroll of commandments. My wife can't wait, either. After all, she did buy the television set. Jim Harris is a journalism senior and Kernel managing editor.

Needless to say, my wife is somewhere else in the house, cursing every post pattern, damning every linebacker blitz, wishing George Halas had left the meat packers to their work in Green Bay.

And now it comes to my attention, via Scott Kraft of the Associated Press, that on autumn's cool Monday nights, in a Santa Barbara, Calif., tavern, Rev. Richard Slade of the Church of Monday Night Football calls services to order. Over mugs of suds and bowls of beer nuts, these devoted parishioners gear every Monday night to hear the word spoken by Frank, Howard and Dandy Don. Their creed is a simple one: "Thou shalt keep Monday night holy... and tune in early." Kraft writes: "The idea for a

Health fee unfair

I am concerned about the recent actions of the SGA regarding the proposed mandatory health fee. While I am opposed to the health fee, I am further appalled by the usurpation of rights the SGA committed by denying the students a proper vote in what will affect their pocketbooks. It was my understanding the senators were going to vote on a student referendum. This would give the students against the health fee a chance to organize a concerted effort to defeat this action. However, in less than a week from their first meeting on the subject, the Senate will decide for themselves what is best for the rest of the students. I am sure the Senate realizes that four days, not including the weekend, is hardly enough time to organize a credible effort to inform the students and form an opposition. It would seem the senators have no faith in the students' judgment on this issue. It seems ironic the senators have no faith in the same students that put them in office. Several reasons for opposing the mandatory health fee include: 1) Many students cannot use the Student Health Center due to specific medical problems that only a physician acquainted with their special case histories can treat. These students have their own doctors, they trust them, and would not be treated properly going to another. It seems unfair for these students to pay an extra fee for a service they cannot use. 2) Many students are on their parents' health maintenance organization health plan, such as Hunter Foundation. These students receive the same health care as the Student Health Service provides without the added expense. It is unfair to these students to pay for a service they cannot use. 3) Since the Health service has experienced a decrease in the number of people who use it, from 75 percent of 52 percent, why should it not be cut a corresponding amount. It seems that if the enrollment of a department on campus reduces, it is cut-back. We do not ask that business majors become philosophy majors to make sure that department is not reduced.

4) The people who use the Health Service are the people who should pay. It makes little sense for me to pay my neighbor's doctor because he will go out of business unless everyone pays him. Yet, this seems to be what the Senate is asking the students to do. I urge all students who feel the mandatory health fee is unfair to go to the Senate meeting tonight at 7:30 in 206 Student Center.

No incentive

Could someone please tell me whether or not I've got this straight?

According to the figures attributed to Jean Cox in the Sept. 7 Kernel article on a possible health services cutback, 52 percent of the University's students paid the health fee last year. This seems to indicate that 48 percent of the students did not pay the health fee.

Now the Health Services want to require the full-time members of the 48 percent (who did not pay $25) to pay $25 so the 52 percent (who did pay $25) will not have to pay $40. Can I conclude from this that the policy of the Health services is "If we can't convince students to buy our product on its own merits, then we will seek the adoption of a regulation telling students they must buy our product?"

The Health Services has said that raising the amount of the student health fee will probably reduce participation in the program. So they are probably trying very hard to keep their expenses down. But if the student health fee is made mandatory, then what incentive would they have for controlling expenses?

Name withheld by request

Fee unreasonable

Your editorial on Sept. 9 was eloquent in demonstrating a need for the student health service to continue existing. However, making fee payment mandatory is unreasonable, if not criminal.

If, as you have reported in the past, only 52 percent of the student body pays the fee, is this not a demonstration that 48 percent of us don't want it or can't afford it? Why should the 48 percent be required to subsidize the needs of 52 percent?

Mandatory fee payment would only increase the existing financial hardship on students who don't want it. It would also be unfair to those of us who prefer other arrangements for our health and accident insurance. What of younger students who are still covered by their parents' insurance? The fee is a waste of their money.

Mandatory fee payment to the student health service is comparable to helmet laws. This may be done "for our own good," but to paraphrase Rober Zelazny: History is full of people who did things to others against their will (for their own good). History tends to judge those people harshly.

Forty-eight percent of us don't want this. Please don't do us any favors.

Health fee input

I have a question for full-time students: Can you afford to ignore a possible $50 per year increase in your student fees?

At this time the Student Senate is considering a mandatory health fee. The alternative is a voluntary fee of around $80 per year, coupled with a drastic cutback in services or even a discontinuation of the Student Health Service. This is the most important issue considered by Student Government Association in the last four years.

I need your consideration and input. Since the Senate defeated my request for a campus-wide referendum, I ask you to write to me at the SGA office, 120 Student Center, UK, 4050-0030, and let me have your opinion. I promise your views will be expressed to the Senate.

I also hope you will consider writing to the editor. It would be a shame if a decision affecting every full-time student was made with most of the campus unaware of its implications.

Please take a few minutes to let me know your views on this subject. In doing so, you will contribute to the eventual decision.

University announces selection of student publications adviser

Wesley Calvert, student publications manager and associate professor of journalism at Washington State University for the past 19 years, will become UK student publications adviser Nov. 1, Robert Zumwinkle, vice president for student affairs, announced Friday.

Nancy L. Green, who served as adviser for 11 years, left UK to become general manager of student publications at the University of Texas at Austin.

In his new position, Calvert will advise the Kernel; the Kentuckian yearbook; the Kentucky Greek, a monthly newspaper for fraternities and sororities; and the Communicator, a monthly newspaper produced by black students.

Calvert, a native of LaJolla, Calif., has advised student publications fulltime for nearly 22 years. In a telephone interview yesterday, he said he is eager to begin his new duties at UK.

"I'm pretty well established here," he said. "The economy in Washington is pretty bad, and there's not much more I can do for this organization. I'm looking forward to putting a little love and some professional integrity into something else."

Calvert was runner-up to Green in the competition for the Texas job, which involves running the largest student publications plant in the nation.

"I've known Nancy for a long time," he said. "I think the last 12 years (at UK) under her guidance were very good, but the next 10 or 12 can be even better."

Calvert graduated in 1960 from the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo., with bachelor's degrees in political science and journalism. He earned a master's degree in journalism from Missouri in 1962.

In addition to advising the Daily Evergreen newspaper and Chinook yearbook at WSU, he has advised student publications at the University of Iowa, the University of Oklahoma and Texas A&M University.

He is active in Sigma Delta Chi, the professional society of journalists.

Calvert, 55, and his wife, Beverly, a real estate agent, have three children: Janet, 29, Donald, 27, and Karen, 22.

Black UK fraternity gets house

By VICKIE BOWLING
Reporter

After 17 years of meeting in the Student Center, Alpha Phi Alpha, UK's first black fraternity, now has a chapter house at 571 Woodland Ave.

The fraternity gained a house because of an increase in membership and strength, said Michael Palm, fraternity adviser and dean of students. The group has approximately 20 members.

Ozell Sutton, national Alpha Phi Alpha president, presided at the house's dedication Saturday. The ceremony was timed to coincide with the fraternity's regional meeting, held this weekend at the Lexington Hilton Inn.

"It was a day-long process," said Jason Tyler, a chapter member. "There were members from all over the state and other states."

Although the official opening was Saturday, some members had lived in the house during the summer.

The group is renting the house from the University.

The first black fraternity at UK to get its own house was Kappa Alpha Psi, which began renting a house from the University at 443 Pennsylvania Ave. in 1980.

Phi Beta Sigma, a fraternity with 14 members, was the second to obtain a house. It moved into 370 Aylesford Ave. in June.

The dedication of the Alpha Phi Alpha house leaves one black fraternity on campus without a house — Omega Psi Phi. The chapter currently holds its meetings in the Student Center and has about five members, Palm said.

Hinckley against move to alter insanity plea

NEW YORK (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. says abolishing the insanity defense would be "a travesty of justice" by a vindictive America to avenge the shooting of President Reagan.

"I can only respond with a shake of my head and the wish that society will someday show some compassion for its disturbed outcasts," Hinckley wrote in a letter printed in the Sept. 20 issue of Newsweek.

"To abolish the insanity defense would be a travesty of justice," he said. "Let's leave the insanity defense alone and accept the fact that every once in a while, someone is going to use this 'defense of last resort' and win with it."

In a national radio address last week, Reagan indicated his administration was considering proposals to amend the defense, which sparked a public outcry after Hinckley's acquittal last June of shooting Reagan and three others outside a Washington hotel.

Reagan, who has not commented on the Hinckley verdict, said he will press for "common sense revisions," and added that the insanity defense has been "much misinterpreted and abused."

Writing from St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington where he has been confined since the trial, Hinckley charged that the move to abolish the defense demonstrated "the vindictive nature of many Americans."

"They are jealous and just drooled at the thought of me spending the rest of my life in some wretched prison in the backwoods of North Carolina," he wrote.

Volleyball team beats Memphis State

Celeste Phillips, a sophomore, sets up the ball during UK's winning match against the University of Louisville Friday. The Lady Kats lost to Memphis State Saturday.

Connors defeats Lendl in 4 sets for fourth U.S. Open singles title

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — A charged-up Jimmy Connors, ruling the tennis world again at age 30, won his fourth U.S. Open singles championship yesterday, beating Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

The triumph, coupled with his third Wimbledon title in July, gave Connors a sweep of the year's two top tennis tournaments — a feat he first performed in 1974.

What had shaped up to be a tight battle between the top two players in the world — Connors now is No. 1 and Lendl No. 2 on both the ATP and Nixdorf computers, with McEnroe falling to No. 3 — almost became a rout.

After the first game, Lendl was unable to break Connors again until the sixth game of the third set, when he regained his powerful forehand volley. And Lendl had to fight the entire match to hold serve.

Besides the breaks he suffered, on three other occasions Connors took Lendl to deuce before the Czech held service.

Lendl double-faulted his first point after the opening-game break and dropped to a love-40 deficit before fighting back to deuce. But Connors prevailed when, after the second deuce, Lendl netted a forehand, then hit a forehand wide.

The two then held serve easily until the sixth game, when Connors broke Lendl at 30. Lendl double-faulted to 30-40, and Connors closed out the game when Lendl's backhand down the line was wide.

Connors held serve to clinch the opening set, then immediately broke Lendl to take the advantage in the second set. He broke him again in the seventh game as he raced out to a two-set lead.

Connors went ahead in the third set when he broke Lendl at 15 in the third set. But, in the fifth game, Lendl lost a point after Connors hit a groundstroke that looked long.

In the sixth game, Connors was down love-30 when he pulled even on two straight aces, his third and fourth of the match. The crowd thought Lendl had been the victim of a bad line call again and began rooting for him.

And Lendl was not ready to quit. He broke Connors' serve, then took the set with another break in the 10th game.

Connors again broke Lendl to open the fourth set, this time after the Czech fought back from love-40 to deuce. But Connors took the next two points and, after holding serve, a 2-0 lead.

They traded breaks in the fourth and fifth games, then Connors served out for the match.

Connors is the only person to win the Open on three different surfaces. His first two victories, in 1974 on grass and 1976 on clay, came at Forest Hills. He won on the hard courts at the National Tennis Center in 1978.

The loss spoiled what has been a magnificent year for Lendl, who lost a five-set final to Bjorn Borg in the 1981 French Open.

Lendl, 22, has amassed a record single-season prize money total, winning $1,288,050 going into this third leg of the Grand Slam.

After suffering a disappointing defeat to the Louisville Lady Cardinals in its home opener Friday night, the Lady Kat volleyball team bounced back with a come-from-behind victory over Memphis State yesterday.

Marilyn McReavy, an associate coach, said she was pleased with the team's 8-15, 12-15, 15-9, 15-12 and 15-9 victory because the team didn't give up after losing the first two games. "They played point by point," she said, "other than (letting) the other team landsliding them."

"We were mentally more ready," said Celeste Phillips, a sophomore setter. "We played with everyone pulling together. We needed to win, and we got our heads together."

The Lady Kats lost Friday night's match in three games without the services of Marsha Bond, a 6-foot All-America candidate.

Bond has been declared ineligible because of ... a mix-up in credit hours," she said. Bond said she expects to be eligible in time for the next home game, Sept. 21.

In the first game against Louisville, the team jumped out to a 9-3 lead. Louisville brought the score back to 9-8. The Lady Kats regained the serve and scored one point before losing possession.

The teams traded serves and points until the score was tied 13-13, before Louisville scored the next two points to win the game 13-15.

"The girls started out at 100 miles an hour," McReavy said. "We had trouble controlling ourselves."

In the second game, the Lady Kats were plagued with mistakes. Mary Jo Peppler, an associate coach, said she thought the Lady Kats received a few bad calls.

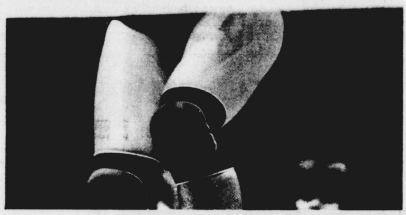

"I don't think he (the referee) knows he's in Lexington," she said after a questionable call. Kentucky was held to four points while Louisville scored the needed 15 points to win.

"I thought the spirit really wasn't there," Bond said.

The Lady Kats jumped out 13-1 in the third game, but Louisville tied the score at 13. Louisville scored the next two points to put the game on ice 15-13.

"We roll along and then everybody gets so tight," said Kim Clay, a senior hitter. "We're just too hyper to play."

"Our passing was erratic, and our play was erratic," Peppler said. "Louisville overall had a better ball team."

Kim Clay, a senior, spikes the ball during a match against Louisville Friday at Memorial Coliseum. The Lady Kats won the game, the second of their season.

Denise Burke, a senior hitter, said the team has a tendency to tighten once it gets a lead. "We tried to be careful. We start thinking about them coming up on us and (we) lose it."

Claiborne sings blues over 9 Cat fumbles in Kansas State loss

By LEW FERGUSON
AP Sports Writer

Doug Bogue to Eric Mack

But UK bounced back to finally get a touchdown with one second left. It came on a 9-yard pass from Jenkins to Rick Massie.

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Committing nine fumbles and losing six of them is not conducive to winning football games and after Saturday's 23-9 loss to the Kansas State Wildcats, no one knows that better than Jerry Claiborne.

"We've got to stop it," he said after losing his inaugural game as UK coach. "That is ridiculous."

UK, which squandered two prime scoring chances in the first half while falling behind 13-0, appeared to finally overcome its first-game jitters in the fourth quarter when it got to the Kansas State 14-yard line.

However, when quarterback Randy Jenkins completed a pass to John Gay at the Kansas State 1-yard line, the receiver fumbled the ball away to the other side.

Unable to move, Kansas State took a safety rather than have its kicker punt into a strong wind.

The ensuing free kick bounced off a Kentucky lineman and Kansas State recovered at its 40. The home-team Wildcats then drove to the clinching 37-yard field goal by Steve Willis with 4:10 left.

Kansas State then recovered another UK fumble on the visiting Wildcats' 29-yard line and scored a touchdown with 1½ minutes left in the game on a 7-yard pass from

The victory successfully launched Kansas State's redshirt era. Nine of Kansas State's top 22 players had been held out of action in 1981 by the coach, Jim Dickey, in an effort to stockpile experienced players and bring the Wildcats their first winning season since 1970.

UK, opening under the new coach, was its own worst enemy throughout the game. UK wound up losing six fumbles, three of them costing potential touchdowns and three others leading to Kansas State scores.

Kansas State scored the first two times it had the ball, driving 51 yards to set up the first of Willis' three field goals and then striking on a 67-yard touchdown pass from Darrel Dickey to Mike Wallace.

Kansas State made it 13-0 when Willis booted a 43-yard field goal into a stiff wind gusting to 21 mph just before halftime.

Besides its second half miscues, UK drove 47 yards once in the first quarter only to have to punt the ball away when Jenkins bobbled the snap on a third-and-two situation.

UK also drove 69 yards to the Kansas State 11, where Jenkins was blindsided as he tried to pass, and fumbled the ball away. UK also fumbled at its 29 to set up Willis' second field goal.

Fleetwood Mac: solos succeed where group effort fails

To say the members of Fleetwood Mac are at their best in concert when they are performing alone might be sacrilege to some, but, to those who saw the show at Rupp Arena Thursday night, this was embarrassing evidence.

Enormous rounds of applause were sent up from the crowd as Mick Fleetwood tore off on one of his drums solos, as Christie McVie played her accordion during "Tusk," and as Lindsey Buckingham sang "Second Hand News" alone on stage.

Four years ago, Nicks was the leading female singer of rock and roll. Her voice had electrified such songs as "Rhiannon," sending her and the group to the top of the charts while many artists had trouble selling their recordings.

Instead of getting better, her voice has deteriorated while others have bypassed her in versatility.

Linda Ronstadt, for example, has recently proven her ever-broadening talents by singing coloratura in Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance."

For Nicks, in her present state, to attempt such a move now would only prove embarrassing.

Nicks, in fact, was absent — physically and, more importantly, mentally — from the stage for half the concert. When she did appear, her now-gravelly voice sounded lower than Buckingham's. All the vocal magic she once displayed was gone. Even her stage presence couldn't save her. She stalked about the stage in her platform boots telling the audience of her love for them. Too bad some reciprocity could not be had.

Her rendition of "Rhiannon" was the low point of the concert. Nicks crouched low on the stage during the song's instrumental interludes as if to lament the sorry state of her vocal chords.

Nicks' basic "problem" throughout the concert was her concern with the "personas." She only gave what she assumed the crowd wanted to see. She was not entertaining; she was bored and it showed.

The pathos was heightened when McVie dedicated her haunting "Songbird" to Nicks. The tone in her voice expressed a feeling of the past instead of the present.

To end the concert on this note made the whole evening seem like a mercurial instead of an uplifting event.

The magic that occurred between McVie and Buckingham was wonderful. His energy and charisma as a performer was matched by her versatility on the keyboard.

It's hard to say that the other members of the band didn't matter, but, at least in Nicks' case, this seemed true.

The magic of McVie and Buckingham made the evening memorable and also pointed out the sad question of what to do with Stevie Nicks.

Men at Work, an Australian band making their first American appearance, had a neat kind of buoyancy. "Who Can It Be," their current release, got a healthy amount of applause from the few people who bothered to listen to them.

The applause might have been even better if the sound system had been better.

Overall, Men at Work seemed to have fun with their music, as did McVie and Buckingham. Sometimes, though, that isn't enough to save the evening.

BARBARA P. SALLEE and JOHN GRIFFIN

REVIEW

Together with Stevie Nicks and John McVie, however, the group failed to ignite any of the sparks that sent millions to buy their studio recordings.

The show was memorable for these solo performances, especially those by Buckingham, who stole the evening. His almost boyish pride in the band and his endless love for music came through in his numerous solos that saved the show from almost certain inertness.

Buckingham assumed the role of the "Good Humor Man." He tried valiantly to cover up any faults that occurred in the show. But something went wrong.

That something, or rather someone, was Stevie Nicks.
