

A BRIEF HISTORY

Kentucky's concept of a state university dates back to 1865 when Kentucky University became a land-grant institution.

In 1878 the people of Kentucky decided to establish a "State institution, free from all ecclesiastical entanglements or control," and separated the Agricultural and Mechanical College from Kentucky University.

For the new College, the city of Lexington donated its 50-acre fairgrounds-park, now a part of the central campus. This area had been used as a bivouac area for Union troops during the Civil War.

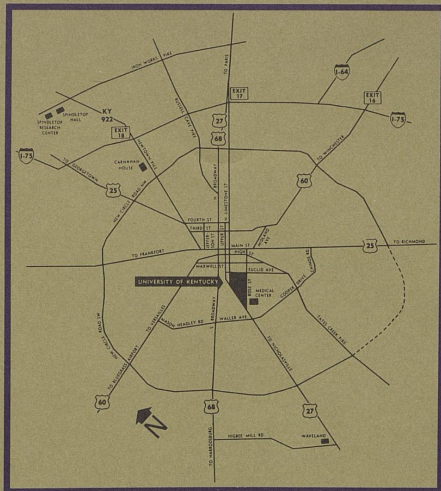

Thirty years later, the State legislature changed the name of the institution to State University and allocated funds for support. In 1916, the name was changed to the one by which it is known today—The University of Kentucky.
