WRFL to show computer system at convention this week

By ELIZABETH WADE
Staff Writer

A computer system used by UK student radio station WRFL to decrease paperwork, WRFL-FM, will be featured at the College Media Journal convention in New York this week.

College radio representatives, record companies, and artists will participate in seminars, panels, exhibitions, and showcases at the convention.

"At the convention we're going to have a booth with Apple Computers and we're going to exhibit 'traffic control' which is a music tracking system that makes it possible to keep track of, and sort all music, public service announcements, and grant announcements played on the air," said Mark Beatty, WRFL program director.

"We have taken a commercially available data base and adapted it to fit our needs," Beatty said. "This is the first time that we know of anyone adapting an existing data base specifically for music tracking."

"We called everywhere to try to find someone who did what we wanted to do, and no station does this," she said. "The only people who didn't try to talk us out of it were the people at CalTech and MIT — so I knew it was a good idea."

All of WRFL's disc jockeys must be able to type 40 words per minute and learn to perform basic data entry.

The DJs record information about each record they play, which includes the artist, the album title, the song title, the format, and time and date on the database program.

Recorded information, which is required by the Federal Communications Commission, had been recorded by hand.

"We would be ending up storing something like 8,760 pieces of 8.5 by 11-inch paper as opposed to 26 three-and-a-half inch diskettes with this new system," Beatty said.

The information recorded by the DJ is used by the programming and music staff to evaluate each week's programming, which helps the staff make programming changes by looking at the types of music being played at certain times and seeing what is being requested at those times.

The system also is used to compile the station's Top 45 for the week, which is reported to several trade magazines and charts.

"With this system we can rapidly find out what is the most requested song at night, what is the most requested song on weekends, in the morning, how many times an artist played in a day, a week, a month," Urch said. "This kind of information is used all the time by commercial radio stations in programming their stations."

WRFL also uses the computer to store an alphabetized library of all albums they currently have and every album they receive or purchase. The system helps the station with purchasing and requests, Urch said.

Madden's mall should not affect Coldstream Farm

By JIM WHITE
Associate Editor

The regional mall that Preston and Anita Madden plan to build on their Hamburg Place farm will not affect UK's plans for development of Coldstream Farm, according to city and University officials.

Lexington Mayor Scotty Baesler said last night that because of the timing of the Coldstream project and the other developments UK is planning on the site, comparing it to the Madden's mall would be like comparing "apples and oranges."

"I really don't think it will have much affect whatsoever," Baesler said. "There will be a lot more at Coldstream than just a mall. And we're also talking about Coldstream being a long-range plan."

The Urban County Government approved a zone change Thursday night that will allow the Maddens to go ahead with plans for the largest mall in the Lexington area. The site of the development is at the intersection of Interstate 75 and Man o' War Boulevard.

UK's plans for development of its Coldstream Farm property — located between Georgetown Road and Newtown Pike, south of the intersection of interstates 75 and 64 — includes a regional mall, research facilities, a continuing education center, a boarding school facility for Kentucky high school students and retirement housing for UK alumni.

The Maddens hope to complete their project by fall 1992. UK's project is a 20-year plan.

"I don't think the market demand is there right now for two regional malls," said UK Vice Chancellor for Administration Jack Blanton. "But our plan is a long-range plan. We intend to take it before the council and we intend to get it approved."

Blanton said UK will be ready to take its proposal before the Urban County Council in about three months. To proceed with plans for Coldstream, UK must get approval for an interchange to provide access to the mall. The Council must then approve a land-use proposal to keep with the 1988 Comprehensive Plan.

The Comprehensive Plan is a five-year plan which acts as a growth guideline for the city.

The plan was evaluated earlier this year by a 25-member committee. It provides information about what areas in the Lexington area are the best for development and growth. Hamburg Place and Coldstream were both pointed out in the plan as sites for possible retail development.

"The Comprehensive Plan suggests criteria that you should consider for development," Baesler said. "It's a suggestion, it's not the law."

Much of the opposition to the Madden's mall was that it will take retailers and customers away from downtown and some of the areas other shopping centers like The Mall at Lexington Green.

But Blanton said the Madden's mall and Coldstream will cater to a different customer and help the city's retailers — not hurt them.

"You've got to distinguish between a regional mall and the smaller malls," Blanton said. "The smaller malls are for people living in Lexington and Fayette County. A regional mall would attract customers from Ashland, Harlan, Pineville all over the state. There has been a great decline in regional shoppers in Fayette County."

Blanton said University President David Roselle may ask him to provide a report on Coldstream at the UK Board of Trustees meeting on Tuesday.

"The fact of the matter is, is that we are going to proceed with our land-use plan just as we have been," Blanton said. "And that calls for a regional mall on Coldstream Farm."

Wilkinson briefed by Roselle on allegations against team

Associated Press

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson has been briefed on the NCAA's allegations against UK's basketball program and of the University's ongoing investigation.

The governor said his information came during a recent meeting with UK President David Roselle. Roselle released the allegations publicly in summary form last Saturday.

UK has until Dec. 12 to respond to the lengthy allegations.

Asked how he felt about the allegations, which have gained nationwide publicity, Wilkinson said:

"I'm like all the other people in the commonwealth. I think we're waiting to see what the investigation is going to reveal and what the facts are. I still firmly believe we're innocent until proven guilty by someone, and I see no guilt yet proven as far as anyone is concerned."

Wilkinson, whose comments came Friday in an interview after he addressed a Kentucky Coal Association luncheon in Lexington, said Roselle's briefing was "a courtesy to me on the broad parameters of what's happening."

He said Roselle assured him that UK is "going to do everything that they're supposed to do and is expedient of them." The governor said he made no suggestions to Roselle about the continuing probe.

Bernie Vonderheide, UK's director of public relations, said Wilkinson and Rose-lie met last Tuesday in the governor's office.

The investigation probably won't be completed for several months. It began last April after an Emery Air Freight package allegedly sent by UK assistant coach Dwane Casey to the father of a California recruit came open in transit, revealing $1,000 in cash, Emery employees said.

Casey has denied sending the money and Claud Mills and his son, Chris, now a UK freshman, have denied receiving it.

Any penalties against the UK program will ultimately be decided by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions.

Besides denying he sent money to the Millses, Casey has also denied two charges that he misled NCAA investigators. He has declined to comment on the other four that mention his name.

One of the latter allegations charged that Casey offered cash and cars to Sean Higgins, a California prep standout who now attends the University of Michigan.

Investigator rebukes myths from realm of the supernatural

By TONJA WILIT
Staff Writer

Joe Nickell is a skeptic when it comes to ghosts, but he has spent the last 15 years investigating them.

Nickell, a UK professor, was the featured speaker Friday at a noon gallery series presentation "Investigating the Supernatural."

He has written two books and investigated "countless" cases of incidents that other people have not been able to explain.

"After 10 years of searching," Nickell said, "I have not found a haunted house or a person with special powers."

Nickell teaches technical writing at UK and has worked with police on homicide cases, forgeries and historic mysteries.

Nickell said that his interest in the supernatural began when he worked as a stage magician.

"I worked with people that tried to make others believe they had supernatural powers," he said. "I knew from experience that these were just tricks."

One of the first cases of the supernatural that Nickell investigated concerned a house in Toronto that was supposedly haunted. But Nickell found the explanation of late-night noises and strange sightings to be simple.

"The Mackenzie house is now a national historic shrine," he said. "It was said that a caretaker's wife saw a figure standing at the foot of a bed, then it disappeared. The caretaker heard footfalls on the steps and no one was there. Two sets of caretakers left because of this."

Nickell investigated a printing building located 18 inches away from the Mackenzie house.

"The late night crew in the other building was making the noise," he said. "No one until 10 years after the haunting began) had suspected the next building. All these noises were real, people heard them, but they were not ghostly noises."

The caretaker's wife suffered from what psychologists call a hypnopompic hallucination or a waking dream.

"The caretaker's wife was in bed, woke up, saw a ghost, and went back to sleep," he said. "If the ghost was real she wouldn't have gone back to sleep."

Another case Nickell investigated concerned the death of a Florida woman named Mary Reeser in 1951.

The woman was believed to have caught on fire for no reason. The fire produced an even line around her and melted the plastic fixtures in the room. Nothing else in the room except the woman and her chair caught on fire.

"People were lead to believe that she caught on fire for no reason," he said. "What the public did not know, and the real reason that nothing else caught on fire, was that the room was concrete."

"The woman was known to be plump, and around the burn stain was a grease stain," he said. "Her body fat melted and was absorbed into the chair, causing the fire to burn."

BREAKTHROUGH: Alfred Rawls breaks through several tackles on his way to a game-high 128 yards rushing against the Georgia Bulldogs on Saturday. UK won 16-10. The Wildcats play Southern Illinois next week.

Cats finally win the big one, beat Georgia

By BARRY REEVES

UK coach Jerry Claiborne walked into his post-game press conference Saturday afternoon soaking wet, but this time the dampness was not due to mother nature.

The culprits this week were Jay Dorch and Chris Chonalt. The two seniors emptied the Gator Aid buckets on their coach after an emotional victory over the Georgia Bulldogs, 16-10.

Did Claiborne mind?

"I'd like to have four more of them," he said.

The victory was the first against a Southeastern Conference opponent after three near wins. Georgia was on top of the league with a perfect conference record. UK is now 13 in the conference with three more games to play.

Claiborne and his team feel like they are on top of the world after Saturday's win.

"This is the happiest I've been in a long time," Claiborne said. "It's exhilarating."

Georgia coach Vince Dooley had nothing but praise for Claiborne and his UK football program following the game.

"We had our chances, but Kentucky is a tough football team," Dooley said. "They fought hard and deserved to win."

UK played as if it were a team, every group did its part to get the victory.

"We played a tremendous football game in all phases," Claiborne said. "I'm really proud of them."

The UK defense held the Georgia rushing attack to only 175 yards and the UK offense rolled up 368 total yards including 192 yards rushing. More important than that, the UK punting team did not allow a punt to be blocked.

Claiborne happy to get wet after Cats dry out Georgia

Georgia came into Commonwealth Stadium averaging more 300 yards a game rushing, tops in the SEC. UK's defense also held Georgia star tailback and Heisman candidate Tim Worley to 99 yards rushing. Worley entered the game averaging more than 126 yards a game rushing.

"Our defense played an outstanding game. No if's, and's, or but's about it," Claiborne said.

"Kentucky's defense was everything we expected it to be and even more," Dooley said.

The UK offense was led by junior tailback Alfred Rawls who ran for 128 yards on only 15 carries. Rawls, a Georgia native, is a former Bulldog signee, so this game meant more to him than to the average UK player.

"This game definitely meant something extra to me," Rawls said.

Rawls's personal goal all week was to show the people from Georgia what they missed out on and have a great game.

"I knew all week that was his personal goal," UK senior quarterback Glenn Fohr said.

"Rawls's performance was super. His yards after contact, his broken tackles were great," Claiborne said. "If he gets outside, he's got the speed to beat some people."

Rawls attributed his success to the UK offensive line. Georgia took the opening kick-off and ran the ball right at UK all the way down to the UK 26-yard line when the defense stopped the Dogs to force a field goal attempt. Georgia sophomore kicker John Kasay's kick went wide left.

UK got on the board first when senior tailback Ivy Joe Hunter went over the goal line from two yards out with 39 seconds remaining in the first quarter. Ken Willis's point after was good to give the Cats a 7-0 lead.

The 14-play drive featured both the run and the pass, but it was Rawls's 20-yard run to the two that set the stage.

"It was a busted play, but I just tried to get all I could," Rawls said.

After Georgia linebacker Morris Lewis intercepted an errant Fohr pass at the Georgia 47-yard line, the Bulldogs were able to take advantage and put some points on the score board.

When the drive stalled at the UK 3-yard line, Dooley once again called on Kasey to kick a field goal. This time he did with 4:09 left in the half to put UK ahead, 7-3.

UK received the opening kick-off, but was stuffed on three plays by an aggressive Bulldog defense that moved the UK offense back seven yards.

The Georgia offense was given great field position, following a Jay Tesar punt, at the UK 39-yard line. After an incomplete pass on first down, Worley went off right tackle, broke several tackles and rumbled all the way down to the 5-yard line until UK linebacker Randy Holleran knocked him out of bounds to save a touchdown.

The UK goal line defense stiffened, but on fourth and goal from the 1-yard line Worley was able to jump over the line and into the end zone to give the Dogs the lead with 11:24 left in the third quarter. With Kasey's point after, Georgia took a 10-7 lead.

After two exchanges of the ball, turnovers started coming from both sides of the ball.

Georgia's John Kasey missed an other field goal, this one from 50 yards out, with a minute left in the third quarter.

"We needed to score again in the third quarter. We knew we would have to struggle in the fourth quarter with the wind against us," Dooley said. "We had another chance, but the Kentucky defense stopped us and we wound up attempting a field goal that missed."

UK took over at its own 34-yard line. On the first play from scrimmage, UK quarterback Chuck Broughton's pass intended for tight end Mike Meece was intercepted by Bulldog free safety Rasty Beasley at the UK 42.

On Georgia's first play from scrimmage, quarterback Wayne Johnson fumbled the ball.

After Rawls took the ball into Bulldog territory with a six-yard run to the 46, the big play that the UK staff and team were waiting for finally happened.

Rawls, after taking the handoff from Broughton, bounced outside the right end, broke two tackles and outran the rest of the Bulldog defense to the end zone.

Wildcats roll over Rebels in three, stay tied for SEC lead

By BRIAN JENT
Staff Writer

The ninth-ranked UK volleyball team stayed in a stalemate for the Southeastern Conference lead as they swept past the Ole Miss Rebels in three games Saturday afternoon in Memorial Coliseum.

"The first two games I was really pleased with," UK coach Kathy DeBoer said. "I was pleased with our serving. We have been really working on that in practice. We're concentrating on doing a better job on serving errors and accuracy. I thought we were starting to do a better job on that."

The 201 spectators that were on hand watched UK rocket six aces while only committing nine service errors.

In the first game, the Wildcats zipped to 15-2 win thanks to a little help from the Rebels. Ole Miss was whistled for five net violations, committed two serving errors and missed key kills including senior Margie Ackerman's long spike on game point.

"We played like we were intimidated for the entire match," Ole Miss coach John Blair said. "We were very tentative on our side of the net."

Blair felt that this was caused by his team's inexperience and the losing season that they are having. The Rebels record fell to 4-12 with the loss and an 0-4 in the conference.

"A lot of it is due to inexperience and a lot of it is the fact that we're not having a great year," Blair said. "We haven't done well in big matches. We just have to fight through the negative expectations. You want to believe you're fighting through them, but it is tough to believe sometimes."

The Rebels fought through it a little in game two as they scored six points in the 15-6 loss to the Wildcats.

UK completed the sweep in the third game with a 15-10 triumph. However, the Rebels did hold off four match points before a net violation was called on Ole Miss sophomore setter Michelle Whitty.

"When we got up 10 or 11 (in the third game), we did a real poor job other than that we did some real good things," DeBoer said.

UK out hit the Rebels 317 to .075. The Kentucky offensive attack was led by senior Lisa Bokovoy, who hit 900 for the match with 12 kills, and Veronica Cobb, who also had 12 kills.

Defensively the Wildcats were led by Kim Thompson who had 17 digs.

"I feel it was a total team effort. Everybody had a great game," Bokovoy said.

Even though the entire team played strong, DeBoer was especially pleased with the improvement of sophomore setter Laura Linder, who had 40 aces.

"Laura has made a step forward in the last week and a half in that she is jump setting the balls," she said. "This helps increase the speed of our attack."

Ole Miss committed 21 attacking errors compared to Kentucky's 14. Offensively the Rebels were led by Whitty who had seven kills and defensively by junior Mary Ahern with eight digs.

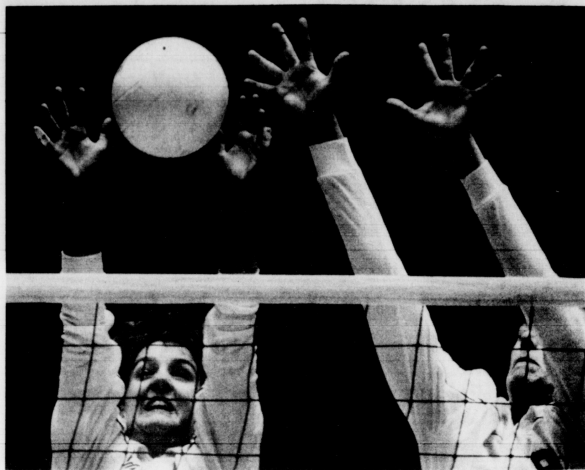

UK raised its record to 19-3 and its SEC match-winning streak to 16.

The Wildcats have been motivated by an Oct. 14, 15-11, 15-7, 15-13 loss to Texas and will know how much they have improved this Friday as they travel to Illinois to open the Sportsman Volleyball Classic on Friday against fifth-ranked Illinois.

"We will know how much progress we have made next weekend," DeBoer said. "I feel after the Texas game, we have made some progress on a bunch of things. We needed to because the match with Texas showed us what we needed to work on."

"I feel we're playing a lot better after the loss to Texas," Bokovoy said. "We're going to be up for the Illinois game. Hopefully, our adrenaline will carry us."

The other two competitors in the tournament will be the fourth ranked Texas Longhorns and 11th ranked Long Beach State 49ers.

UK sophomore Laura Linder and senior Lisa Bokovoy try for the block Saturday afternoon against the Ole Miss Rebels. UK swept the Rebels to extend their SEC winning streak to 16.

Cool Cats skate past Dogs

Staff reports

It was standing room only at the Lexington Ice Center at midnight Saturday as UK fans got a chance to see the Kentucky Cool Cats hockey team blitz past visiting Georgia 13-4.

The Bulldogs, 1-1, came back to beat UK on Sunday, 2-1.

UK, also 1-1, scored the first goal of the game midway through the first quarter on a power play from wingman Keith Kocan.

Kocan, a 6-foot, 180-pound wing, is in his fourth season. Along with center Fritz Mergard and John Beauregard, Kocan will help comprise one of the high scoring lines for the Cool Cats.

The Cool Cats defense was very aggressive throughout the match. Many fights broke out during the game which roused the crowd even more.

The match lasted past 3 a.m. In the rematch at 10 a.m. yesterday the Bulldogs defeated the Cool Cats, 2-1.

UK DUI program could help reduce number of offenses

About one-third of all drunken driving offenders are under 25 years old, according to Tom Warnick, a UK chemical dependency counselor.

Since last semester Warnick and others have been trying to reduce that number by implementing a DUI program on campus aimed at area college students.

The program will last nine hours and will focus on helping college students who have been convicted of DUI.

The program could begin next semester if the Kentucky Department of Transportation approves the proposal.

A DUI first offender in Kentucky usually has the choice between having his license revoked for six months or attending a state-accredited alcohol- and drug-education program and a 30-day license revocation.

Since a lot of people choose the 30 days, according to Warnick, the program probably would be taken advantage of by many students convicted of DUI.

In addition, the program would benefit young adults because it would be directed toward a more narrow audience than the usual adult-oriented programs.

And Lisa Stofor, a program coordinator in the dean of students office, said since the program would be directed toward students there would be a better chance to change people's attitudes toward drunken driving.

This semester the campus has been rudely reminded of the dangers that can result from drunken driving as one UK student has been killed and two others have been critically injured.

Although there are several programs offered about alcohol education, having a DUI program on campus could be a positive step toward reducing the number of DUI cases among college students.

"If (students) have a problem of it this means there is a problem we can help them right here on campus. That's pretty hard to beat," Stofor said.

The state Department of Transportation should consider that benefit, too.

The heat is up

Roselle will find it more difficult to ignore investigation

Throughout the nearly yearlong probe into the men's basketball program, University President David Roselle has said it was his intention to not let the investigation "take every waking moment" of the University's time.

In fact, the president told reporters recently, the athletics budget only takes up 2 to 3 percent of the University's overall budget. (Not to mention the fact that UK is here primarily for academic reasons, not athletic ones).

So far, Roselle has managed to keep the investigation on his own little backburner, although for the rest of us it's been an ongoing prime-time soap opera we just can't turn off even if we wanted to.

But Roselle has kept things in perspective by allowing the bulk of the University's investigation be handled by an independent investigator, Judge James Park, and UK's legal staff.

The president has not become involved in the investigation on the "micro-level," dealing with the minute details and perhaps juicy bits of gossip that an investigation might offer.

Instead Roselle only has been briefed by the University's legal counsel as events developed, which has enabled him to deal with more pressing problems such as the ailing budget and the fear of a depleted faculty — severe handicaps to a University desperately trying to increase its respect as a public institution of higher learning.

All that, however, will change soon.

As it becomes increasingly more apparent that UK will be placed on some sort of probation by the NCAA, (no matter what head coach Eddie Sutton says or doesn't say about a set-up), the president will find it increasingly more difficult to keep the investigation from taking up a large portion of his and the University's public and private time.

Signs of this change already have taken place. Roselle recently spoke to the Lexington Rotary Club. The topic: Athletics and the University.

Recently, the president met with Gov. Wallace Wilkinson to update our bestest buddy on the investigation.

The governor, after all, has a legitimate concern in this matter. If we don't have a team worth seeing, he can knock his basketball seats and give the money to faculty salaries. It might take some of the money-making burden off that cure-all-of-cure-alls, the lottery.

And last week, the sophomore president appeared on the Louisville radio talk show, "Metz Here." You can rest assured the main topic was not the future of agricultural extension or the construction developments on the Robotics Building. It was the fate of the tormented basketball program here at UK.

Although newspaper reports following the radio show seem to indicate that people favor Roselle's tough line approach to this investigation, the heat is about to turn up a notch on the president.

The president can no longer afford to keep himself out of the investigation foray, and recent public appearances and statements suggest he has acknowledged it.

That really is too bad, since it could mean a derailing, at least temporarily, of programs and initiatives that the president had hoped to work on.

Items such as getting higher education on the agenda of a special session of the General Assembly in January may have to take a backseat to dealing with slush funds, dismissals within the athletics program and handing out handkerchiefs to the crying masses when the basketball program is hit with probation.

When you think about it, Roselle's assertion that the athletics program, although important, really is a small part of the University makes sense.

There are many more important programs, such as education and state economic development to name two, that the University is responsible for.

I know it certainly doesn't help that this whole mess is fed to you each morning for breakfast, lunch, dinner and your late-night snack. I suspect, however, that Roselle and his administration know that what we're dealing with here is not just a basketball program or small part of the University's budget.

We're talking about a betrayal of trust, something that shouldn't be taken lightly anywhere, but especially at a University where ethics should be at the highest level.

It's a serious charge against a University. One that needs to be defended and dealt with, which will require require a president to devote more and more time to the investigation.

But defending and restoring the lost respect and reputation of UK threatens to disable an administration and University already beset with many handicaps.

Kernel Checklist

A public service by the Viewpoint Page to help keep its readers abreast of what the hot items are on campus.

✓ Non-Denial Denials: The NCAA Investigation. As the media began to uncover what some of the NCAA's allegations about the UK men's basketball team are, the usual response from UK officials was: "I cannot confirm nor deny that." Sound just a little bit like the days of Watergate when more heads were rolling than during the Reign of Terror?

✓ Operation Intoxication: Alcohol Awareness Week. While last week was supposed to be a time when the campus and community was to sober up to the dangers of alcohol abuse, local radio disk jockeys and at least one Student Government Association official got drunk so we could all recognize when someone has had too much to drink. Ah, so that's why some people act so strange at parties. Now let's show what happens when someone drinks too much and gets behind the wheel.

✓ Me And My Shadow: Dwane Casey and Joe Bill Campbell. Have you seen UK men's assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey lately? If you have, chances are you probably have seen his lawyer, Joe Bill Campbell, next to him. Never know when you're going to need a good lawyer, right Dwane?

✓ Let Them Eat Cake: Student Government Association Senate Surveys. The Student Government Association Senate allocated $115 last week to see if the campus wants a student credit union. It's nice that the Senate wants to make sure it is giving students what they want, but at some point senators are going to have to act like leaders and make some tough decisions — that's why they were elected — even if it costs a few votes.

✓ Long Arm of the UK Basketball Program: Jimmy Dykes. Be careful what you say about UK men's basketball coach Eddie Sutton or assistant coach Jimmy Dykes will be mad at you. He has called journalists several times in the role of Sutton's hatchet man. In a story published in last week's Sports Illustrated Sutton was quoted as saying his program was set up by either UCLA or UNLV. Out of the blue came Dykes who said he was there when Sutton was interviewed and the head coach never said it. That's strange, because SI writer Bruce Selcraig said Dykes was not present during the interview.

Letters Policy

Readers are encouraged to submit letters and opinions to the Kentucky Kernel.

Writers should address their comments to: Editorial Editor, Kentucky Kernel, 035 Journalism Building, Lexington, Ky. 40506-0042.

Letters should be 350 words or less, while guest opinions should be 850 words or less. All material must be typewritten and double-spaced.

Frequent writers may be limited so that we may publish letters from as many writers as possible.

Writers must include their name, address, telephone number and major classification or connection with UK on all submitted material.

If letters and opinions have been sent by mail, telephone numbers must be included so that verification of the writer may be obtained. No material will be published without verification.

The author's name must appear on all material published unless a clear and present danger exists to the writer. All submissions are subject to editing.

Opportunity to examine Bush startling

brain was in front of me. It was smaller than I expected, maybe as big as a walnut. It seemed to float in front of me like a ghost.

"Mr. Vice President, can you hear me?" I asked.

"Yes. What is this? I'm scared. Where's Barbara?" The last thing I remember is my best friend Manuel Noreiga giving me a scotch and soda.

"Don't worry Mr. Vice President, this is only a test."

"Of the Emergency Broadcasting

Bush's brain. It was dusty from lack of use, but I managed to make it through. I just wanted to bask myself in the muck of his cerebrillum.

"We need a running mate," I heard Bush say.

For a moment I was confused and then I realized I had set off a mental projector in his brain. He was replaying one of his memories for me. Maybe this was my chance to see just why he chose Dan Quayle.

I saw Bush sitting at a table with two of his advisers. They were flipping through back issues of Playboy.

The problem was finding a patient. It had to be someone whose mind was so weak that I could totally dominate it. They needed a walking bundle of gray matter.

Network," he said and started making a beeping noise.

"No, of Hoshi Electronics," I said.

"I don't think so," I answered.

"Good," he said, "but when they do I think we'll have to give them Iowa or something as a marker."

I was quickly bored by his conversation and I decided to delve deeper into his consciousness. I tensed myself and concentrated on the walnut-like thing in front of me. George Bush was mine to control.

I found my spirit-self traveling through the deepest recesses of

"We need a running mate," Bush said again.

"We need to get laid," one of his advisers said.

"We need a running mate who can get us laid," the other adviser put in.

"How about Bob Dole. Elizabeth's kind of a looker. I'd love to stick my..."

"No, I have it," adviser one broke in.

"No, Bob Dole has it," Bush replied.

Suddenly all three of them looked at one another. In unison they yelled, "Dan Quayle."

This display of lust sickened me, being the pious person I am. I decided to try to move the memories forward to see what I could find. That was the beginning of the nightmare!

I saw a dark plateau surrounded by a "thousand points of light." It took no time for my super-quick mind to deduce that these points were actually holes in the ground. They all were being lit by the same light source. I wondered what could produce so much light.

I used my Indian hunting skills to find a dirt path that lead underground. I followed the path to a room filled with light. I touched the door, the handle burned my hand. Being a major he-man, I opened it anyway.

The horror of what I saw will live with me forever. Lying on a bed, as scantily-clad as ever, was Tinkerbell. It hurts to much to be graphic about what I saw. Those pigs had turned her in to a sex slave. Before I could try and save her I was called back by the Hoshi technicians.

I am a man living in fear now. If the Republicans get into office I know that they will try and assassinate me before I can find Tinkerbell. But I'm a liberal and I know sometimes there are things just a little more important than personal safety. So when you go to vote on Nov. 8, just think of Tinkerbell and I.

Neighbors of Louisville nuclear plant express concerns about it

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Neighbors of the Ohio Valley's three government-owned uranium-processing plants have discussed common problems and swapped strategies to deal with them.

Members of citizens' groups that advise plant managers on environmental issues gathered here Thursday, saying they all want the plants run more cleanly.

In Portsmouth, Ohio, for example, neighbors of the U.S. government's uranium-enrichment plant told of contaminated groundwater beneath the plant.

But the problems are more serious at a sister plant near Paducah, Ky., where radioactive and cancer-causing chemicals have traveled into residential wells, forcing extension of a public water line.

But that even pales in comparison to the problems of the folks from Fernald, Ohio, about 20 miles northwest of Cincinnati. There, radioactive waste from nuclear-weapons production has been dumped into pits, streams and the air for more than 30 years, threatening workers and residents.

When residents near Paducah and Portsmouth complained of community apathy, a Fernald woman said the international media has kept her phone ringing off the hook.

And after hearing about the groundwater problems near Paducah, a university professor studying the problems at Fernald said he was "jealous."

The committees are stocked with university professors, school administrators and a small-city mayor.

Pictures of Bush suspect found

Associated Press

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — A photographer who snapped pictures of his wife during a rally for George Bush also may have unknowingly taken some of a man later arrested on charges of threatening the vice president.

The Secret Service said it was picking up duplicates reportedly showing David Allen Russell at the Sept. 27 rally in Owensboro, Ky.

Russell, 21, Owensboro, was accused of sending the threatening letter to the White House days after the rally.

The pictures were taken by Art Gerber, a Tall City portrait photographer, who said he has three slides with Russell in them.

Russell's mother, Beatrice Russell, examined one of Gerber's pictures Saturday and confirmed it shows her son, according to The Evansville Courier. It also obtained a copy of one picture.

Russell said she believes the picture, showing her son standing behind a railing in the middle of the crowd, refutes the notion that he carried a gun at the rally.

"That's him," she said. "See, he has on a T-shirt pulled over his jeans. Where could he be hiding a gun?"

"David didn't even know how to shoot a gun," Gerber said he didn't realize how important his photos were until Tuesday.

"I had taken tons of photos, and I just thought I would take some pictures of Kathy," Gerber said, referring to his wife. "I had no idea."

FBI probing allegations of white-supremacist prison group

Associated Press

EDDYVILLE, Ky. — A civil-rights organization says the FBI is checking its allegations that a white-supremacist group operates at Kentucky State Penitentiary and is responsible for various crimes there.

The crimes include the deaths of two black inmates, according to the Kentucky Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression.

Robert Jones, a member of the Louisville organization, said the complaints were contained in a letter dated Sept. 18, and the FBI has begun an investigation.

Phil Doty, a spokesman for the FBI's Louisville office, said Friday he could neither confirm nor deny whether the bureau is investigating.

The complaint alleges that the Aryan Brotherhood is responsible for the deaths of black inmates Glenn Burks earlier this year and Benjamin E. Higgins III in October 1983.

"Despite all the violence and the killings . . . the prison guards never see or know anything," says the alliance complaint, written by Jones. "I have received information that, in the most violent incidents, the guards turn their heads."

Several prison and state officials denied the group's allegation on Friday.

Warden William Seabold said that, while there are often racial tensions in a prison setting, he does not believe any white-supremacist organization exists at the penitentiary, the state's only maximum security facility.

Michael Bradley, a Corrections Cabinet spokesman, said, "Racial tensions are at a bare minimum, and gang activity is almost nonexistent."

The FBI is required to investigate allegations of civil-rights violations in the federal government's purview, and that determination is made by the U.S. Justice Department, Doty said. A department spokesman did not return phone calls Friday.

Seabold said FBI representatives have visited the prison in the past 30 days, and that he believes they talked to both black and white inmates. Seabold said that the FBI comes to the prison routinely, and that the representatives did not interview him or tell him about any such investigation.

In a September 1984 Courier-Journal story about inmate gangs, then-Corrections Secretary George Wilson said there were only about 20 hard-core members of the white-supremacist Aryan Brotherhood in the system, and that most were kept in isolated cells. Seabold said there are no inmates now in isolation because of such an affiliation.

Seabold also said there has been only one occasion during his year as warden when the penitentiary intercepted mail with a white-supremacist bent. He said that he has taken steps to eliminate the threat of gangs or their formation by requiring that all inmate gatherings be supervised by a staff member.

Panel found for show on broad-form deed

Associated Press

Kentucky Educational Television has lined up a panel for its call-in show on the proposed broad-form deed amendment, but it excluded a leading pro-amendment spokesman.

KET Executive Director Leonard Press said the panel for the Oct. 31 show will be composed of four lawyers and will focus on aspects of the amendment such as its constitutional, legal and economic ramifications.

Amendment supporters will be represented by state Rep. Greg Stumbo, a Prestonsburg Democrat who co-sponsored the bill that put the amendment on the Nov. 8 ballot, and Joe Childers, a Lexington attorney who represents Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, the organization that is leading the pro-amendment campaign.

Amendment opponents will be represented by Rick L. Thomas of Lexington and A. Douglas Reece of London, both of whom do legal work for coal companies.

Kentuckians For The Commonwealth had wanted Sidney Cornett, a Perry County landowner, to argue their side of the issue. Leading amendment opponents, however, had refused to debate him.

"This is a dispute between landowners and mineral owners, and we just wish that landowners and mineral owners could speak," Joe Szakos, coordinator of the group, said.
