Dark Horse of Tournament Downs Nervous Kentucky Team In Greatest Upset of Season; Score 31-26

NORTH CAROLINA CHAMPS

V. M. I. and Georgia Succumb To Flashy Attack of Blue and White

Entering the Southern Conference tournament as one of the favorites, the Wildcats set sail and displayed their brilliant season form in their first two games on Friday and Saturday by defeating V. M. I. and Georgia by the scores of 32 to 25 and 39 to 34, respectively, but in the semi-finals an unexpected foe and the dark horse of the tournament, Mississippi A. & M., cowed the Wildcats enough to win, 31 to 26.

Failure to follow their shots and inability to register free throws consistently were the potent factors that cost Kentucky the game. The Wildcats missed more craps and free throws than they have missed in any other game this season. This was due to the nervous strain under which they were laboring since the commencement of the tourney. The Aggies, on the other hand, were at the peak in form and made every shot count.

U. K. Rooters Pray for Victory
The Wildcat supporters, which numbered into the hundreds, still had hopes of victory as the team marched off at the half with the Aggies leading by the count of 18 to 13. But Kentucky could not produce their customary come-back which the Aggies feared and for which Kentucky fans prayed.

Every team entered in the tourney.

Approximately 150 Basketball Fans "Bum" and Pay Their Way to Atlanta To Back Wildcats in Semi-Final Game

(By KYLE WHITEHEAD)

Approximately one hundred and fifty basketball fans, ranging in rank from the mayor of Lexington to a university freshman, failed to be daunted by the 450 miles of road and rail from the Blue Grass to Atlanta, and aligned their husky voices behind the Kentucky Wildcats in their sixteenth Conference game and semi-finals of the Southern tournament last Monday night.

Pull Out for Atlanta
Several university men entrained with the team last Wednesday night, and how they reached the Southern city is past history. Several more pages of such history in university life was written when the Wildcats fought their way into the semi-finals. A feverish spirit for travel developed in the hearts of those fans who had formerly been contented to hear about the games over radio or through telegraph, and on Sunday afternoon the radions of many cars were turned southward. Into Atlanta came slowly a travel worn stream of Kentuckians, with only one idea, to be with their team during 60 minutes of fight.

Everybody Who Started to Atlanta Might Have Arrived, Returned O. K. If Those Who Paid Had Kept Quiet

(By LeROY SMITH)

There is them that started to Atlanta and there is also them that got there, accordin' to the most recent ad modern dope which has come to our ears. Most likely, everybody would have got there, except for the unique and original mode of travel which the more enterprising evolved to urnish entertainment enroute.

Seems like the Wildcats had took the peaches away from Georgia kind of suddenly and conclusively along towards the windup of the argument, so everybody at this end of the line got to feelin' prosperous and borrowed enough money to buy a ticket and a big berth that would accommodate five friends who were required only to keep out of sight and not bother the conductor.

Too Much Weight

These here social gatherin's worked all right except that the berths sagged a little in the middle and caused some discomfort to them under it. One of the promoters happened to remember that a single snore would wreck the works so everybody was cross-questioned but them that snored wouldn't admit it. It was decided

Fleet Warrior Misses Berth On Coveted Selection By Only One Vote

(By FRANK K. HOOVER)

Magnanimous in defeat, outwardly smiling but inwardly regretting and crying, Kentucky's fighting Wildcats have returned from sun-kissed Atlanta, capital of the invisible Empire State, to borrow a statement from Mencken, where they made a courageous, though futile, effort to break the monopoly which North Carolina Tarheels have held on the Southern Conference basketball championship title for three successive years.

Despite the lamentable fact that the Wildcats did not bring back to the old Blue Grass state a championship, they brought back with them an all-Southern guard in Paul Jenkins, who was awarded this distinguished and coveted honor which comes to only two men every year. Jenkins' selection was unanimous and he certainly deserves the wreath with which he has been crowned. Gayle Mohney, Kentucky's fleet warrior, missed the berth on the all-Southern selection by only one vote, the officials finding it a hard job to keep from awarding him the honor. His illness over Sunday, which hamp-

BOND ISSUE FOR UNIVERSITY AND CHARITIES

(The Lexington Leader, February 27, 1926)

It is highly probable that public approval will be given to the proposed $14,000,000 State bond issue for the University of Kentucky, the normal schools and various charitable institutions, and to liquidate the State debt.

The proposition to submit this bond issue, in lieu of the contemplated "luxury" and income taxes, seems to furnish the only solution of the problem of how to secure funds for educational and charitable institutions which have already been long neglected by the people and by those high in authority in recent State administrations.

The proposed bond issue is free from many of the objectionable features which aroused opposition to the $75,000,000 bond issue which was submitted to the voters in 1924. In that case it was impossible for the voter to express a preference for the charitable and educational institutions, or for the construction and maintenance of highways, as the case might be. He was compelled to accept all or none of the provisions of the bill. In addition to this phase of the $75,000,000 submission, there were confusing and apparently unbusinesslike provisions relating to the distribution of the funds which excited antagonism and distrust.

The bond issue which is now proposed for educational and charitable institutions alone will no doubt be very simple in its administrative provisions and merit the enthusiastic support of every voter who is disposed to deal fairly, if not liberally, with those agencies which supply practically free education to the boys and girls, the young men and young women of the Commonwealth, as well as those which furnish shelter and other benefits to those unfortunate who are either temporarily or permanently wards of the State and entitled to the help of generous people everywhere.

This newspaper will most heartily support the proposed bond issue at the same time living in hope that within the next two years public sentiment may lead some constructive statesman, or some company of public-spirited men and women, to come to the front with a program of administrative improvement in our State government which would result in better methods and substantial saving of public funds.

REASONS FOR THE PROPOSED BOND ISSUE

(The Lexington Herald, February 28, 1926)

The present constitution of Kentucky, adopted over a third of a century ago, provides specifically that the legislature shall not contract

"debts, direct or contingent, singly or in aggregate, at any time to exceed $500,000 . . . unless provision be made to levy and collect an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest stipulated and to discharge the debt within thirty years; nor shall such act take effect until it shall have been submitted to the people at a general election, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it." This constitutional limitation upon the debt of the state has been honored consistently by violation instead of by observance. Soon after the adoption of the constitution, when the floating debt of the state exceeded the limit of $500,000 by only a moderate amount, the court of appeals rendered a decision holding the amount owed by the state in excess of $500,000 to be a valid obligation.

It has, however, been an open secret that numerous judges of the court of appeals have expressed regret at that decision. It is the belief of able lawyers that the decision was not in accord with the constitutional mandate. It is further believed of able lawyers that there is more than a possibility, in fact probability, that should another case get to the court of appeals it would reverse the former decision, which would invalidate the warrants issued by the state in violation of the constitutional prohibition. The debt of the state increased steadily until in the aggregate it was estimated to be over six millions of dollars when Governor Fields became governor. It is estimated now to be between four and five millions of dollars.

The state has issued interest bearing warrants to those to whom that debt is owed. It has, however, paid far more than the straight interest on that debt, because those who sold material or labor to the state added to their price a sum sufficient to recompense them for the delay in receiving their money and the risk involved in accepting the warrants.

The state would save in interest one to two and a half percent, and far more than that by being able to purchase material and labor on a cash basis instead of on a warrant basis, if it would find its debt in the form of bonds.

One hundred and twenty-eight years ago the Kentucky legislature passed an act providing for the erection of a penitentiary at Frankfort, which was erected over a hundred and twenty-five years ago. In the act passed by the legislature in 1798 the size of the cells was specified. The cells built a hundred and twenty-five years ago were larger than the cells that are now in the penitentiary at Frankfort. Some of the same buildings are still being used.

There is no justification for the continued use of that institution. It has cost the state an incalculable amount because of the greater expense required to conduct it than would be required to conduct a modern and model institution and because of the devilish effect on those confined therein. It is inconceivable that Kentucky has been so negligent, so inhumane, as to continue for a hundred and twenty-five years to confine men and women in that hell hole.

The school for the feeble minded at Frankfort is crowded beyond safety or decency. Yet there are thousands of feeble minded for whose care and confinement the state makes no provision, who are free to roam at their own sweet will and propagate their kind to an extent limited only by their opportunities. And society as a whole bears the burden of the idiots and feeble minded who are not in the institution exactly as it does of those who are confined.

Over a century ago, in 1818, the first institution for the care and treatment of the mentally ill was erected at Lexington. The same buildings, that hold out a constant invitation to the demon of fire, are today crowded with the wards of the state, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters of Kentuckians.

From the settlement of Kentucky, until after the Civil War, Kentucky was among the very leaders of American commonwealth. The first college, the first library, the first medical school established west of the Allegheny mountains were founded by Kentuckians who valued and sought to give to their children opportunity to secure education. Kentucky failed to keep step with other states and has fallen far to the rear of the states that gave to their children opportunity to secure education. Hundreds of Kentucky girls and boys are driven from Kentucky to get their education in colleges of other states.

This year the governor submitted a recommendation to the legislature to increase the tax on gasoline for two years from three to five cents, to be used in the construction of roads, and the imposition of luxury taxes or income taxes for the rehabilitation of the state institutions and the University of Kentucky.

The tax on gas has been increased. Many of the leading agriculturalists, tobacco men, business men, bankers, thought it unwise to impose either luxury or income taxes. They formulated a substitute plan to submit to the voters of the state a bond issue sufficient to:

First, refund the floating debt of the state, that will not only increase the interest charges but be a material direct saving in interest charges and a greater saving in the indirect cost to the state because of high prices charged by those who sold material to the state;

Second, to provide for the rehabilitation of the penitentiary at Frankfort, a school for the feeble minded, the Eastern Kentucky Hospital for the Insane, and other institutions;

Third, to provide for the extension of the University of Kentucky. Governor Fields, animated by the desire and inspired by the sole purpose to for the enactment of these taxes and hold them in abeyance until the people tax before this legislature, but to withdraw temporarily the recommendations have the opportunity to vote upon the bond issue at the November election.

We have not seen the provisions of the bills to submit the bond issue and therefore can express no opinion based on the bills themselves. But assuming that they will be drawn by able lawyers and in accord with the views advanced by Governor Fields, there seems to us every reason that they should be submitted by the legislature, and the bond issue approved by the people.

If the figures given in the newspapers of fifteen million dollars as the sum total of the issue are correct it will not be sufficient to accomplish all that should be done, even as the twenty-five millions of the former issue would not have accomplished all that should be done in Kentucky. And it is true that it will be necessary to increase the taxes on tangible or intangible property, or on both, a few cents to pay the interest and provides for the sinking fund, which would not have been necessary if the former bond issue had passed, dedicating part of the revenues from the tax on gasoline and motor licenses to that purpose.

But the increase in taxes will be purely nominal in comparison with the saving through the refunding of the state debt and the benefit to the state through the expenditure of the money that would be available for the state institutions and the state university.

Society Resolutions on Herbert Graham

The American Iona Society, Inc. at a meeting in New York City February 13, adopted the following resolutions in the death of Herbert Graham, former alumni secretary at the University of Kentucky, who was killed in an automobile accident on Long Island February 7:

"Resolutions of the American Iona Society in honor to the memory of Herbert Graham.

"Today the winds and storms of Dixieland chant a requiem over the sleeping place of Herbert Graham. The practical talent that marked William of Graham in 1149; the chivalry that linked Sir John Graham as the right hand of Scotland's patriot Wallace; the valor that inspired the brilliant Montrose—the qualities of all these forebears were conspicuous in Major Graham our beloved friend and secretary. Gentle yet resolute, sagacious yet tolerant, loyal to his friends yet generous toward all men, Herbert Graham needs neither eulogy nor eulogy.

"He had read widely and deeply. He absorbed the best that lies in men and in books, developing his own individuality until he became a recognized leader among his fellows. We shall never meet a man the sincerity of whose life and play mainly courage of whose nature will make a more enduring impression upon the hearts of those who know him best.

"Farewell, Herbert Graham. We leave thee to thy last long dreamless sleep, carrying with us the conviction that thou didst play the game of life cheerfully to the last.

"Whereas, on Sunday the 7th instant, Major Herbert Graham of Frankfort, was suddenly summoned to that bourne whence no traveler returns; therefore "Be it resolved that we trustees and members of the American Iona Society herewith express our sincere sympathy to his parents and to all his kith and kin.

"Resolved that, emulating him who is gone, we strive to attain the love of wisdom and the wisdom of love.

"Resolved that we send a copy of these resolutions to Mr. B. H. Graham and to the press of Lynbrook, Long Island, Lexington, Kentucky, and Frankfort, Kentucky.

U. OF K. BANQUET

The University of Kentucky banquet will be held in Louisville this year at the same time the Kentucky Educational Association is in session. Because of the fact that so many out of town alumni will be in Louisville, it is expected that this will be one of the best U. of K. banquets ever held. This will be a fine opportunity for all alumni in and near Louisville to renew acquaintances and greet friends, who at other times would be scattered all over the State.

Please reserve plates for me at U. of K. banquet to be held at Brown Hotel, at 6 p. m., April 22, 1926.

FRATERNITY INITIATION

Delta Epsilon of Delta Tau Delta held its formal initiation in the private dining room of the Lafayette hotel Saturday afternoon and 14 men were taken into the mysteries of Delta Tau Delta.

The following men were initiated: Messrs. Kenneth Baker, Burton Cornel, Arnold Combs, Roy Eversole, Roy Kavanaugh, Sam Shipley, A. R. Fisher, Harold Brush, Finley Davis, Howell Davis, Kenneth Kohlstedt, Penrose Ecton, William Patterson, and James Shropshire.

Immediately following the initiation the active chapter gave a banquet in honor of the new initiates and visiting alumni. The tables were set in the shape of the Greek letter Delta

MILITARY BALL

The military ball, annual formal dance, which was given Friday evening from 9 to 1 o'clock in the gymnasium, proved to be one of the most brilliant and enjoyable of the season's social affairs.

The gymnasium was elaborately decorated in the patriotic colors of red, white and blue which were carried out by using the three colored streamers and the flag. Two orchestras, the Kentuckians and Art Payne's, from Louisville, furnished the music, playing at alternate intervals.

A novel innovation which added picturesquely to the military atmosphere of the affair was the grand march led by cadet officer, Col. John A. Dabney and regimental sponsor, Miss Mary Lair, in which the officers of the advanced course, attired in military uniform, and their partners assisted.

At the conclusion of the grand march the Scabbard and Blade honor fraternity held their impressive pledging service. Following the pledging the fifth or special "no break" was played, which only the members and pledges of Scabbard and Blade and their partners danced.

The programs were booklets in gray with blue lettering. Miniature silver sashers were presented as favors.

TAU BETA PI DANCE

Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity, entertained on Saturday evening with their annual dance in Dicker hall, at which pledging was a feature.

The fraternity colors of brown and white were carried out in the decorations, and the shield was shown in an electric design. The Rhythm Kings furnished special music.

Hosts were, active chapter, Messrs. E. P. Morris, R. C. Williamson, H. L. Woods, Robert Harrod, William Witly, Isadore Golben, Wallace Saunders, Austin Griffith, John M. Rachel, J. P. Finn, David Browning, Joseph Bailey, John O'Nan, Edward Walters, Shearlie Basket.

Active members, pledges, and a number of alumni and the patronesses called during the afternoon. Emblems of St. Patrick and vases of white roses and spring flowers decorated the table, where delicious refreshments were served.

U. K. MAY HAVE NEW COLLEGE

Churches of Lexington Want School of Religion Established; Will Cooperate With University; Five Churches Approve

MAY BEGIN NEXT FALL

An interdenominational committee of the churches of Lexington has started a movement to establish a school of religion at the University of Kentucky. Dr. A. W. Fortune, of the Central Christian church, is chairman of the committee; and Dr. G. R. Combs, pastor of the First Methodist church, is secretary.

The plan submitted to the boards of the various churches provides for the establishment of a religious school on a cooperative basis with the university administration. The school will be under the direction of a board of trustees composed of one representative from each church, three representatives from the university, and two others to be chosen by the trustees. The trustees will be elected by a board chosen from the denominations and the university. The dean of the school will be chosen by the board of trustees.

A budget of $8,000 is recommended by the committee for the first year. The school is to offer courses in religion and the Bible, including studies of the Old Testament, Christian ethics, religious education, and supplementary subjects.

Similar schools have been established at several state universities, including Missouri, Indiana, Kansas, and Iowa.

It is indicated that at least five of the churches will approve of the plan, although no definite report has been received from any of the boards.

If the plan is received favorably by the churches and the university, the school will be established in the fall of 1926.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

The Y.W.C.A. of the University of Kentucky held its weekly meeting in the reading room of Boyd hall Sunday evening, at 6:30 o'clock.

The program was presented by the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and the subject of the evening discussion was, "The Bible in Literature, in Art, and in Music." A very attractive musical program was given which consisted of vocal solos and several flute solos, the latter of which were rendered by Katherine Best.

The Y.W.C.A. is having an attendance contest which is proving to be a big success. Sunday evening there were 60 girls present.

The next meeting of the Y.W.C.A. will be held Sunday evening, at 6:30 and the program will be given by the Alpha Delta Theta sorority. The student body, as well as the public, is cordially invited to be present.

The first of the Bible study courses was held Wednesday evening from 7 to 7:30 o'clock in all of the halls and fraternity houses of the University of Kentucky.

These meetings will be held at this

Meeting of American Association To Be Held March 11, In Cafeteria

The net meeting of the American Association of University Professors will be held in the cafeteria in the basement of the Administration building, on Thursday evening, March 11.

This will be an open meeting and the entire administrative, teaching and clerical staff of the university are cordially invited to attend. J. D. Van Hooser will talk to the university staff on "Good Investments for Professional People." Mr. Van Hooser is an authority on investments and will bring to the group information that will be helpful to them. His talk will be relatively brief and the meeting will be open to general discussion. There are many people connected with the university who have questions that they would like to have answered relative to investments and securities. There will be a round table discussion after the short talk by Mr. Van Hooser and persons desiring information will be able to procure it.

Those who desire to have dinner at the cafeteria should be there between 5:30 and 6 o'clock. Persons who desire to come for the meeting after dinner should be present not later than 6:30 p.m.

THE BATTLE IS OVER

The battle is over. While it lasted the Kentucky Wildcat struggled with all his might against superior odds. Twice, being pinned to the floor, by a glorious exhibition of strength he loosed himself from his antagonists and won the advantage. For a time it seemed that he might emerge triumphant from the conflict. But such was not to be, and in the third encounter, fiercely clawing, scratching, and biting, the Kentucky Wildcat was conquered after a desperate struggle by the Mississippi farmers.

The battle is over. Sorely disappointed, hundreds of followers of the Blue and White returned from the tourney at Atlanta. But as they come they bring with them wondrous tales of the heroic struggles of the Kentucky basketballers, of twice coming from behind to win preliminary games and in the semi-finals of desperate if unsuccessful playing.

It was not until the semi-finals of the Southern tournament that Kentucky's colors were lowered. But having gone through the regular conference season without a single defeat, the scant margin of victory by the great team from Mississippi has not destroyed the prestige of the Blue-Grass squad nor dampened the ardor of their many admirers.

But more than their impressive number of triumphs over some of the best teams in the Southland is the reputation they gained for themselves and their state in the tournament for honest effort, clean playing and true sportsmanship.

Kentucky is proud of this year's basketball team. She is proud of every wearer of the Blue and White from Captain Carey down to the "subs" who did not get into a single game. But she is especially proud of the men who so gloriously wore her colors in the southern tournament—Carey, McFarland, Mohney, Jenkins, Underwood, Besuden, Alberts, Hickerson, and Helm. Great were their efforts and great is their reward, for they have won the respect and esteem of all the South.

BACK TO YOUTH

The vaudeville performance given on Tuesday evening by members of the faculty and their wives, under the auspices of the Woman's club of the university, was a distinct success and a unique feature in the life of the institution for the current year.

We have been so in the habit of being entertained by student organizations that this effort on the part of the faculty was a welcome diversion. This entertainment by staid faculty folk and their compeers shows beyond doubt that they have caught the student viewpoint and are willing to step aside for a brief season, at least, from staid formalities of culty life and give us a reflex of their own lives when they were students.

The Kernel desires to commend and applaud this unique program and express for its fellows appreciation of the faculty's efforts.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GOOD ENGLISH

A very important subject in any university course of study is English. In fact in many, if not all cases, it is the most important. Regardless of what profession or business a student may follow after graduation, his ability, or lack of ability, to express himself well either orally or in writing is very often the factor which determines his success or failure. Furthermore, in his social contacts an easy and correct style of expression cannot but be a great asset.

There is too great a tendency to regard English as an entirely separate and distinct subject. After the required credits in the department of English are obtained many students lose all concern about commas and dangling participles. These are mere English in their opinion and need not be considered in their other work. On the other hand while the student does not take his history or his mechanics, his law or his agronomy to the English class room for inspection, he does exhibit his English, or his substitute for it, in each of his other classes.

Each student and each teacher should realize that every class on the campus is in a very important sense a class in English and that true knowledge and clear expression are one and inseparable.

W. E. Freeman.

WHAT IS THE UNIVERSITY FOR?

The most popular discussion in college literature today is "Why do students fail?" the second, "What is the college (or the university) for?"—both questions being the result, doubtless, of a mild conviction of sin, on the part of those doing the discussing. That the college is not a purely social institution, but exists primarily for the cultivation of the intellectual life, is well maintained by Professor N. M. Fenneman in an address to the students of the University of Cincinnati. Apropos of common misapprehension of his thesis, Professor Fenneman said:

"Professors have much to answer for in this line of sins. First, for failure to clear up their own ideas as to what a university is for, and, second, of indulging in a line of insincere and cynical talk that is intended to please the less serious student. Partly as a result of this and partly as a result of poor teaching, it is not uncommon to hear old graduates talk in this strain: Nothing that I ever got from books did me any good. It's the life that counts. Don't be a grind; the student's grade is C. Professors are all right in their way, and their place, but don't let them interfere with your education. It's not what you learn that matters; you'll forget all that; it's the number of friends you make that counts.

"The trouble about such talk is that it uses a real truth in such a manner as to convey a lie. Every professor knows that much of what is learned will be forgotten, at least in its concrete form. But the graduate who can say that what he learned has left him as he would have been without it is indicating both his college and himself. . . . It is not a question as to whether scholarship and social life are both legitimate and necessary. Everyone concedes that at the start. But two things cannot both come first. The library and the loafing room may be in the same building, but whichever dominates, the other is subordinate. . . .

"Football does not make an institution a university any more than it makes it a soap factory. The argument for character is much the same. It is badly needed in the daily work of the university. It conditions the behavior of the mind, more than men realize, more than most professors realize. Every hour's work makes demands upon it. Moreover, it does not pay society to put power and leadership into hands that will not use it or will abuse it. But neither character nor health, nor social culture, nor all three, will make a university. All are subsidiary. . . .

"If a young man's character is not on the right track at eighteen, he should be sent to a reformatory and not to the university. I do not say this in order to dodge or brush aside the responsibilities of the university. It is just because of these responsibilities that it cannot afford to accept men of undesirable character. . . .

"It may clear up much loose thinking to remember that the public does not support a university for the good of the students but for the good of the community. . . .

"It costs roughly a million dollars a year to run the University of California,—at least several hundred dollars a year for every student enrolled. To do this for the sake of this minute fraction of the community would be neither economic nor democratic nor ethical. No city and no state on earth could pay for the education of its whole citizenship in that way, nor for half of it. Yet this expense is regarded, and I think properly so, as a good investment. But they will not be better so long as we coddle ourselves with pious platitudes about college life, the development of character, and the making of all-around men. These things should be done, and we need to have left the other undone. All these things will be added to us if we seek first the one thing for which the university exists."

The Secret of How This Graduate Made a Five Figure Income In Five Years

LIVED in Newark, Ohio.

His folks wanted him to go into some business around home.

Wasn't a thing in the town that he wanted to drudge along in.

Figured that having spent four years at college, he didn't exactly cotton to tying himself down to "just a job."

Neither did he want to go into his father's old business.

So you see, it was the same old story so many of you college fellows have to have sooner or later.

Being a red blooded, two faced kind of a fellow, with lots of pep and go, he wanted to get into something where he wouldn't have to keep all bottled up.

Looked around a lot during his college days, and finally decided he would build some greenhouses and grow lettuce and tomatoes.

From the very start he made money.

That was 13 or so years ago.

Now he and his Dad have a fine residence on top of a hill, and from their porch now look down on acres and acres of greenhouse-covered fields of lettuce and tomatoes.

Both of them are having the time of their life.

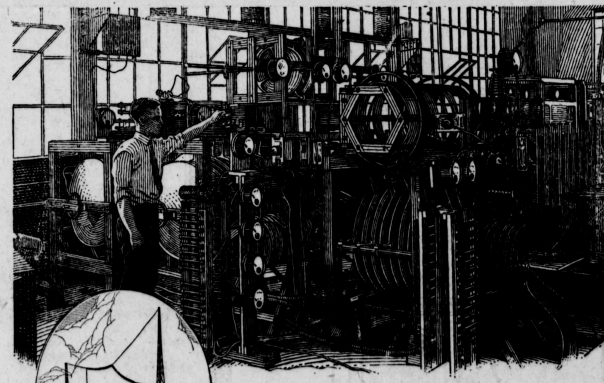

If Carl Weinst of Newark, Ohio can do all this, so can you.

We'll build you the greenhouses and help you in every little detail of getting started.

Write us. Let's get the idea working and plans started.

If interested write to the Manager of our Service Department, Ullmer Building, Cleveland, Ohio; who will give it his personal attention.

The World's Loudest Voice

On the rolling plains of South Schenectady, in several scattered buildings, is a vast laboratory for studying radio broadcasting problems. Gathered here are many kinds and sizes of transmitters, from the short-wave and low-power sets to the giant super-power unit with a 50- to 250-kilowatt voice.

Super-power and simultaneous broadcasting on several wave lengths from the same station are among the startling later-day developments in radio. And even with hundreds of broadcasting stations daily on the air throughout the land, these latest developments stand for still better service to millions of listeners.

Only five years old, yet radio broadcasting has developed from a laboratory experiment into a mighty industry. And alert, keen young men have reaped the rewards.

But history repeats itself. Other electrical developments will continue to appear. And it will be the college man, with broad vision and trained mind, who will be ready to serve and succeed.

From the studio of WGY in Schenectady, six miles from the developmental station, there may be controlled a great number of transmitters, one of which is the first super-power transmitter in the world. WGY, together with its associates, KOA of Denver and EGO of Oakland, is the General Electric Company's assurance to the American public that radio broadcasting shall be maintained upon the highest standards.

new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-1.

THE GOAL HAS BEEN REACHED

After six months of playing the prominent part of "Dust" in the well-known opera, "Activities," me and Akkie were finally initiated into the deep and dark mysteries of the most ancient of fraternities, I Tappa Kegg. I Tappa Kegg claims more members than any other fraternity, due to its popularity and the secret meaning of its name. Figure it out, if you can; if you can't, prohibition has accomplished even more than Volstead thought it could.

Course, I and Akkie, and the rest of the hollow-horned ruminant nearly the size of sheep, known as goats, had to be put through the most strenuous "under-dogging," so as to fully appreciate the honor of being full-fledged I Tappa Keggs. This year they wouldn't let us do anything silly, for fear it would embarrass us, such as carrying an umbrella until The Day arrives, or a "petit" lunchbasket in which was inserted one of our most imposing articles of footwear. However, I noticed we weren't the only pale faces on the campus, and Akkie says she never in her life seen such clean fraternity houses as in these last two weeks, even the sidewalks were spic and span, and the steps leading up to the impressive and massive edifices. Naturally, we all had to go in the back door and bow before each active. Poor Akkie got so tired getting up to give an active her chat, and standing up and backing out, etc., that she developed rheumatism.

When the Big Day broke forth, one of 'em dragged us goats to the cellar where the rest of our lodge members were, all diked out in sheets, giving the appearance of God-fearing K.K.K. The place was lighted with red lights, I guess to give the impression of the hot place, yet their attire resembled the inhabitants of the upper region, so Akkie and I have not yet figured out whether we was supposed to be in Heaven or Ell, with the H on the front.

Well, in the center of the hoodlums was the greatest antique of this modern age, a keg. 'Bout that time all I heard was a lot of spooky whispers which waited:

"Ten crool men on this wooden keg, Yo Ho, and a bottle of ale! Drink to the death of one black megal!"

Yo Ho! Drink to the bloody tale! Then they led each of us up to that famous barrel and said something like "Open, Sesame," as they handed us a brimming cup of the liquid which poured from its faucet. After that they put us in a circle and some one sang out, "Now, you may drink of the fluid of life, and all truth will come to you."

And I'll be —, if it wasn't water, plain reservoir water! I felt about as let down as a man who is being hung, when suddenly the trap floor gives away. Akkie says she thought serving water from that keg was about as nery as an aching tooth.

Thus the fantasy was finished, and me and Akkie have our own kegs now.

WHEN the dark skies are pouring rain outside, And fickle fate deals your hands at bridge that you play with consummate skill—have a Camel!

For Camel is the silent partner that helps every deserving player win his game. Camels never hurt or tire the taste, never leave a trace of cigarette after-taste. Regardless of the gold you spend, you'll never get choicer tobaccos than those rolled into Camels.

The W. A. A. gave a luncheon hike last Monday. The 17 girls who attended, hiked to the reservoir by way of Henry Clay's home and returned through Clark's woods. An all-day hike is planned in the near future for all those who wish to see Man-o-War, famous Kentucky race horse.

DENISON, WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITIES BEATEN BY CAT RIFLEMEN

Kentucky's rifle team broke even on last week's honors, defeating Denison University, but succumbing to the University of Missouri. The Kentuckians scored a total of 3577 points out of a possible 4,000, while Missouri amassed the almost incredible total of 3889 points. Despite her decline from her previous average, the University of Kentucky piled up a 264 point advantage over Denison.

Results of two more matches have been received since last week's issue of the Kernel, and again Kentucky broke even on the honors, having defeated the University of West Virginia by a "decisive margin" but being forced to lower her colors to V.P.L., the Cadets leading the Kentuckians by 104 points.

CENTRE LOOIES DEFEAT KITTENS

Although They Score First, Kentucky Freshmen Fail To Hold Lead and Lose to Danville Five, 35 to 22

(By S. W. ROYSE)

The University of Kentucky Kittens were defeated by the Centre Freshmen at Danville, Monday night, by a score of 35 to 22. The Kittens played a good game but were no match for the Lieutenants who performed in brilliant style.

Staley was the outstanding player for Centre, scoring 18 points. Knudler and Helzer were best for Kentucky, Helzer scoring nine points.

The summary:

Little Wildcat Mascot From New Mexico Is Suffering In His New Home; Sportsmen Are Asked Not To Tantalize Him

(By WILLIAM GESS)

Would you desire to be imprisoned, to be teased continually, and tantalized until death? Well, the little "Hot Tomale" as the wildcat from New Mexico is called, is getting his share of all of these horrors, being engaged in the gloomy basement of the men's gymnasium, and with only a small quantity of meat and water to keep him alive and scrapping.

Hardly a quarter of an hour goes by during the day that there is not a visitor at the little cage back in a dark corner of the dressing room snapping towels, beating against the cage with sticks, or using some other device to tease the prisoner, and just to make the little fellow growl and slam his paw against the rough wire.

Only through some scientific method or instrument could the sunlight reach his prison home and give him at least one of the blessings of the great open that he was raised in. Another season has come and gone, and Kentucky drops from her lineup men who have weathered the battles and added to the glory of the Wildcats. The referee, time, blows his whistle, and the bench of posterity calls to Underwood, McFarland and Alberts, men who can tread the court floor no more.

Sport writers have praised their work, but few sport writers know little of the men themselves. Many times have hundreds of voices rent the air as one or all of the three men were sent into the game. Kentucky fans know them to be men on whom they can depend, and as these men go out of the game the voice of praise is raised for the work they have done. For four years the colors of Kentucky have been flaunted with the ability of these men, in the face of the country's greatest teams. They have won victories that will live in years to come, and they have taken defeat that proves their worth.

Lehigh University has one of the most unusual mascots of any football team in the country. It is a mud turtle which was discovered making its way across the muddy field during signal practice. It was immediately adopted and was christened "Knock-em." After each game the score is carved on its shell.

WE'LL BE BACK AGAIN, GEORGIA

After all LEXINGTON remains the same old town she used to be, save for a few heart throbs and sighs which were by all laws of human nature necessarily forthcoming when a hopeful crowd, still clinging to the wonderful thought that "Kentucky always comes back," heard with a stunning force the score of the Wildcat-Aggie game Monday night.

The team is to be congratulated, the coach is to be congratulated for the victories they did earn honestly and Kentucky is to be congratulated for its brilliant showing made despite the fact that it was the first Southern tournament that three of the five men have ever played in.

Although the Wildcats did not win, they won the respect of the entire South for their fairness and gentlemanly conduct which, after all, is the greatest victory that can be won by any individual or any team.

While the sting of that 31 to 26 score will remain for many days, and lamentations and sighs will come unceasingly during these few days, like the rainbow, it will gradually disappear and these self same athletes will launch into other activities on the athletic field to further glorify their names and school.

Gayle, Jimmy, Paul, Chuck, Mike, Cowboy, "Sudie," "Hiek," you shouldn't feel that you didn't do your duty. You did and you did it nobly, just as you have done since January 5, and we are darn proud of you. Remember the old, old story that is so often, but forcibly, alluded to—"Rome was not built in a day." There will be other years, fuller years as far as athletic glory is concerned and although some of you may be just Alumni when that time comes, you can follow your "boys" just the same and remark with some degree of satisfaction, "We couldn't do it boys, but you did, so all is well."

CONGRATULATIONS, RAY!

In this connection I must say that Ray Ecklund fought as hard as his men to do what was required of them, supported and cried with them in defeat, gurgled with them in victory and regretted just as much, or more than anybody, when his team lost in the semi-finals of the tournament. His work with the team during the past season was nothing short of remarkable, considering that he stepped into the breach only last December and he, too, is to be congratulated.

Never judge a newspaper by the grade of paper it is printed on.

Who is so lonely as a man sitting in the back seat of a closed car on a spring Sunday afternoon, holding a baby in his lap and watching people peer in at him as they pass by? That's exactly what I saw down in front of the postoffice last Sunday and somehow the whole situation struck me as being interesting—not for the man of course.

"I looked at the lightning and saw green and emerald balls," wrote one of our literary members of the Kernel.

That's nothing, plenty of us have looked at rolling pins and seen stars.

THEY'VE ALWAYS DONE IT

Gayle and "Rabbit"—yes they're the boys who caused all the trouble, the gods of Georgia tell us. They bring back the news that Jenkins was so fast that he just naturally tied his opponents in knots when they started after him and that Gayle was too darn slick under the basket for anybody down there.

OH, WHAT A TEAM!

Saw the Lexington Blue Devils trim Louisville Male, 40 to 15, out at the gym last Saturday night and just wondered how far they will win the state championship meet which opens here next Thursday.

From indications, the Blue Devils should be followed by Louisville Manual and Pikeville. In the girls' division, the Georgetown Buffalettes with another wonder point-a-minute aggregation, are cinches to repeat their success of last year, having defeated every team they have met this year by decisive margins.

The tournament will open Thursday and continue until Saturday when the finals in both boys' and girls' sections will be fought out. Ashland will send a crack girls' team to Lexington and they will probably oppose the Buffalettes in the finals.

Some of the "sect" rushed into the Kernel office the other morning while we were arguing basketball and asked for a Bible. Singularly everybody began laughing—don't know yet who the joke was on.

Some of the expressions I heard over the telephone Monday night when I told callers that the Wildcats had lost:

- "Oh, shoot. That's a shame, isn't it?"
- "Well, I'll be damned!"
- "Aw—w—w—w—w—"
- "Good!" (I wished a thousand times I could have got a grip on his neck!)
- "That's too bad."
- "That's tough luck."
- "Oh, my goodness."
- "I'm sorry."
- "Bad on Mayor Yancey."
- Etc.

H. C. Hamilton, sports editor of the Atlanta Constitution, says the Wildcats "had bushels of luck." All of which sounds like a lot of hokum to me.
