

37 Wildcats Quit Football Squad

Language Conference Starts Here

The 15th annual University Foreign Language Conference will be held here today through Saturday.

Julio del Toro, Marquette University, will preside over the general opening session at 9 a.m. tomorrow in the Guignol Theater.

Kenneth W. Mildenberger, chief of the language development section of the United States Office of Education, will speak on "Controlling Federal Aid: Your Obligations" during the session.

A dinner meeting will be held at 6 p.m. tomorrow at the Ballroom of the Student Union Building. Irvin E. Lunger, president of Transylvania College, will preside.

The principal address will be given by Wilhelm Schlag, cultural affairs officer, Austrian Consulate General, New York, on "Foreign Languages in Austria."

Twenty-five sectional meetings are planned, and 183 papers have been submitted to the conference.

"This conference, based as it is upon the need for increased emphasis on modern foreign languages, takes on real significance in our national and international scene," said Dr. Frank G. Dickey, president of the University.

He said, "We hope the conference will bring forth a better understanding of the ways through which we may achieve world peace and concord."

The International Arthur Schnitzler Research Association, founded a year ago here at the University, will hold its first anniversary meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the Student Union Building during the language conference.

The organization, with a membership of more than 100 scholars in 13 countries, maintains the Arthur Schnitzler Archives and serves as a coordinating agency for research on the Austrian author and physician and his work. Schnitzler lived from 1862 to 1931.

According to IASRA's founder and president, Dr. Robert O. Weiss, associate professor of modern foreign languages, 15 members have

Engineering Day Friday; 'Space Age' Is Theme

The College of Engineering will sponsor an Engineering Day for high school students tomorrow.

The annual event is aimed at acquainting boys interested in engineering with the training available at UK.

The theme this year is "Space Age Engineering." A demonstration drive of a space ship will be simulated on an oscilloscope and the effects of heat on various metals used in space travel and radio controlled missile guidance will be shown.

The NASA Spacemobile will give two additional space science demonstrations on Saturday morning at 9:30 and 10:45 a.m.

Although 37 of his 88 players have quit, coach Charlie Bradshaw still has his big one-two punch, Tom Hutchinson, and Jerry Woolum. Bradshaw had nothing but praise for the two grid stars after a week-and-a-half of spring football practice.

Football Isn't Easy, Bradshaw Exclaims

By CARL MODECKI
Daily Sports Editor

Nearly half the University football team has turned in its uniforms since Charlie Bradshaw became head coach Jan. 8.

Fifty-one out of 88 players who were on scholarship when Bradshaw assumed the coaching reins remain on the squad.

Of the 37 players to turn in their uniforms, 18 did so before spring practice got underway April 17, and 19 have left the squad since the beginning of practice.

When questioned Tuesday, Bradshaw said, "I don't think we should acknowledge the quitters, but we should bolster the ones who are out there. If a boy quits once, he'll quit again.

"Life isn't easy and football at this level certainly isn't. None of us are sadists." Bradshaw admitted that coaches have grabbed the face masks off some of the players and have shaken the helmet of the player when they did not return immediately to the huddle for the next play.

"There has been some, but there won't be anymore," Bradshaw answered. "We're not proud of it, and it won't happen anymore."

At the same time he denied that coaches had thrown elbows at players causing any of them to lose their teeth.

Ken Kuhn, sports publicity director, pointed out that 15 players quit at one time in 1950 when Paul "Bear" Bryant was coaching.

Kuhn said the squad went on to post a 11-1 second record and defeated Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl, 13-7.

Bradshaw said that there has been a change in the attitude between the previous coaching staff and his staff. "We are working hard, there is no question about it. We are demand-

20 University Coeds Survive LKD Queen Talent Contest

By JIM CURTIS
Kernel Staff Writer

Legs flashed, bodies twisted, voices raised to deliver readings and monologues, and fingers dexterously worked with musical instruments as 20 of the most talented UK coeds won the first elimination of the Little Kentucky Derby Talent Contest.

In the very strong competition, 18 girls were eliminated for the race that will eventually lead to LKD queen tomorrow night.

The 20 winners and their talents are Becky Anderson, singing; Carol Baldwin, singing; Betsy Beecher, singing; Barbara Burgan, the Highland Fling; and Donna Bush, recital.

Vicki Sue Cheek, dance; Lana Coyle, piano; Betsy Hart, dance; Phyllis Howard, modeled clothes she made; Candy Lindley, calypso song.

Debbie Long, monologue; Nancy Clay McClure, piano; Anne Pulliam, monologue; Judy Secunda, dance; and Nancy Jane Spare, dance.

Linda Tobin, monologue; Jane Allen Tullis, pantomime; Julie Wardrup, dance; Beverly Wetendorf, monologue; and Cora Wright, singing.

The judges for the entire event are Joe Wile Jr., vice president of Wolfe Wiles, Dick Rushing, Field Secretary for the UK Alumni Association; Mrs. William H. Raines, the owner of Four Seasons, and Mr. Elliott, a Lexington businessman.

Mrs. Raines said about the contest, "They were all so pretty and cute, it was hard to make a decision."

Dick Rushing and Joe Wiles Jr. expressed similar opinions.

"All of the girls displayed a lot of talent. It seems different than when I went to UK. In the LKD contests then, some of the girls had talent and it wasn't hard to pick a winner," Rushing said.

"Now it seems that all the girls in this contest have talent. It really makes it hard to pick a winner," he said.

Joe Wiles Jr. agreed with Rushing. "The competition was very close."

The 20 winners will attend a tea today from 4 to 6 p.m. in the SUB Music Room. During this time, the judges will have a chance to get to know the contestants better.

The coeds will be judged on beauty, poise, and general appearance tomorrow night, and the judges will select 10 girls on that basis.

The 10 contestants will then be cut to five on the basis of their answers to a "semi-serious" question, such as their opinions on dating, school life, or ideas on life in general.

The LKD queen will be chosen from these five by her answer to a serious question. All of the remaining girls will be asked the same question.

The Little Kentucky Derby queen for 1962 will be presented tomorrow night as the last event of the night before the street dance.

The LKD queen will be UK's entry in the 1962 Miss Kentucky Pageant.

Curfew Hours

AWS senate members voted to extend women's closing hours until 2 a.m. this Saturday night for the Little Kentucky Derby.

A Friendly Visit

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, president of the University, makes kind conversation with the youngest of the first six patients admitted to the University Medical Center's new hospital. She is Margaret Ann Schoolcraft, 11, of Pikeville. Former governor, A. B. Chandler, and two nurses join the friendly conversation.

Students Back Breckinridge For Governor

A committee of UK students was organized Tuesday to give their support to Attorney General John Breckinridge, a candidate for governor in 1963.

A statement issued by the committee said, "We believe John Breckinridge is best qualified to provide capable and aggressive leadership as Kentucky's next governor."

The committee feels that John Breckinridge can elicit support from voters who have no vested interest in any faction.

"We believe the record shows John Breckinridge to be a man of principle and ability and best suited to be Kentucky's next governor," the committee said.

Serving as cochairmen of the Young Kentuckians for Breckinridge for Governor Committee are Bill Jones III, Prestonsburg; Dave Cole, Nicholasville; Leroy McMullen, Shelbyville; and Phil Taliaferro, Erlanger.

Members of the committee include a Sullivan Medallion winner, the president and former president of the student body, the former president of the student body at Transylvania, and members of the law journal.

Pi Tau Sigma

Moot Meet To Select Next Kentucky Governor

A moot political convention will be held on the weekend of May 18-19 to select a candidate for the next governorship of Kentucky.

The student convention, which will try to stimulate the actual procedures of a real national political convention, is sponsored by the Student Forum.

The main objectives of the convention which will be made up of representatives of campus interest groups are:

(1) To promote interest in the political affairs of our state through the use of the discussion method of decision-making.

(2) To provide experiences in political decision-making through the use of convention deliberation.

Representation for the conference will be accorded to each interested campus group on the basis of one representative to every 15 members of the particular organization.

Several groups included for representation at the convention are Young Republicans, Young Democrats, Patterson Literary Society, all social and religious groups, and cultural organizations.

The convention will be highlighted with a speech by two state political figures.

Representatives will be divided into groups and discussion of specific issues important to Kentucky will be held.

Culminating the convention a summary speech will be given of the group resolutions, actual candidates will be nominated, and a candidate will be elected.

New Building Set For Law

The University Law School will get a new building within the next few years.

Larry Coleman, coordinator of campus planning for the University, said, "The corner of Graham and Limestone Streets is being considered for the site of the new building."

Construction may possibly begin in late 1963 or in early '64. This is dependent on what the legislature appropriates to service the bonds.

"We are proceeding with the planning on the basis that the money will be forthcoming," Coleman said.

Choristers Will Tour Kentucky

The University Choristers leave today on a four-day concert tour around this area of the state.

The 100 member group, under the direction of Almo Kiviniemi, will present concerts at several surrounding cities including Paris, Flemingsburg, Ashland, and Jackson.

They will also have a concert at Lees Junior College in Jackson and one at the University Center in Ashland.

The Choristers will return to Lexington on Saturday.

This group is representative of the mixed voice singing groups here which are open to all students.

Each year over 500 students from all colleges of the University participate in these musical organizations.

The Choristers' two most important annual events are the concert tour and Spring Concert. This year the Spring Concert will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial Hall.

Sue's Views

by Sue McCauley

Well, isn't it nice to be back? Aren't you glad that spring vacation and sunning and all those little things are over and you are plunged back into activities, and classes, and tempers?

Stop a minute and think, seniors. That was your last college fling in Florida and these are your last college fling in Florida and these are your last tempers and soon will be your last finals. Does such meditation bring tears to your usually hard, cold eyes—or do you just get that panicky feeling in your stomach and wonder "what in the heck am I going to be doing this time next year when I have been thrust out into the cold cruel world?"

Let's change the subject and think about something more cheerful like the frilly shirtwaist that Cindy Allen models this week. The aqua blue cotton dress is fashioned with an embroidered flounce around the neckline and on the three-quarter sleeves.

The full skirt has tiny pleats. Cindy chooses a white leather purse and shoes and carries short white gloves. Her pillbox hat is of polished white straw.

Our model is publicity chairman of her sorority and a member of the SUB Recreation Committee, the Philosophy Club, and the Women's Advisory Council.

As a sophomore English major, she has a standing of 3.4.

Leftover Easter Invades DZ House

By NANCY MOORE
Kernel Staff Writer

Even though the Easter holidays are over, the remnants are still with us. From half-eaten Easter candy and wilted corsages, to the rotten dyed Easter eggs, we are reminded of the past weekend.

At least we can dispose of these remains. Not so in the case of Maxine Cates, for she received a live baby duck for Easter.

The duck follows her everywhere and when Maxine goes to classes, she leaves with the sound of anguished cries in her ears. The duck is afraid to be left alone.

Named "Puddles," for an appropriate reason, the duck lives in a box in Maxine's room at the Delta Zeta sorority house. He loves people, and his favorite playground is on Maxine's bed surrounded by a group of girls. Not being able to stand his cries when left alone at night, Maxine puts a mirror in his box. "Puddles" thinks another duck is in the box with him and he is content for a short while.

"Puddles" takes a daily swim in the bathtub or sink. He also has acquired quite a fan club, comprised of girls in the sorority house, and gets a lot of attention. That is, until about midnight when he starts crying for attention, or when he puts his name to use. Then Maxine is deserted.

A little left over ham in the refrigerator? Chop it fine and add it to a beef stew. You'll be surprised at the good flavor.

Career Cues

"Cure for job boredom:
I made my favorite pastime my career!"

Richard Bertram, President
Bertram Yacht Co., Division of Nautech Corp.

"When you stop to think what percent of our total waking hours is spent bread-winning, you realize how tragic it is for any man to work at an occupation he doesn't enjoy. Besides frittering away life, it reduces chances of success to just about zero. I know... because it almost happened to me!

After college, I did what I thought was expected of me and joined a solid, Manhattan-based insurance firm. I soon found office routine wasn't for me. I lived only for lunch hour when I could walk to the Battery and mentally sail with the ships that stood out in the Narrows... and for the summer weekends when I could go sailing. Fortunately, the company I worked for is one of the leading insurers of yachts and after two years I was transferred to their Yacht Underwriting Department. Enjoyment and interest in my work improved immediately 100%.

After World War II, I started my own yacht brokerage firm and yacht insurance agency in Miami, combining my marine insurance background with an even closer relationship with boats.

My only problem ever since has been a feeling of guilt that my work was too easy. I love boats and boating people. That affection has paid me rewards way beyond the financial security it has also provided.

The moral's obvious. You have an odds-on chance for success and happiness working at what you enjoy most — what comes naturally! And if it's not just frivolous, your life's work could well be what you now consider just a pastime. It's certainly worth thinking about, anyway!"

Richard Bertram, while still in his early thirties, became one of the country's leading yacht brokers. Today he heads up eight companies covering yacht manufacturing, insurance, repair, storage, finance and brokerage. A resident of Coconut Grove, Florida, Dick became a Camel fan while still in college.

And to make any time pass more enjoyably...

Well, isn't it nice to be back? Aren't you glad that spring vacation and sunning and all those little things are over and you are plunged back into activities, and classes, and tempers?

Stop a minute and think, seniors. That was your last college fling in Florida and these are your last college fling in Florida and these are your last tempers and soon will be your last finals. Does such meditation bring tears to your usually hard, cold eyes—or do you just get that panicky feeling in your stomach and wonder "what in the heck am I going to be doing this time next year when I have been thrust out into the cold cruel world?"

Let's change the subject and think about something more cheerful like the frilly shirtwaist that Cindy Allen models this week. The aqua blue cotton dress is fashioned with an embroidered flounce around the neckline and on the three-quarter sleeves.

The full skirt has tiny pleats.

Cindy chooses a white leather purse and shoes and carries short white gloves. Her pillbox hat is of polished white straw.

Our model is publicity chairman of her sorority and a member of the SUB Recreation Committee, the Philosophy Club, and the Women's Advisory Council.

As a sophomore English major, she has a standing of 3.4.

Leftover Easter Invades DZ House

By NANCY MOORE
Kernel Staff Writer

Even though the Easter holidays are over, the remnants are still with us. From half-eaten Easter candy and wilted corsages, to the rotten dyed Easter eggs, we are reminded of the past weekend.

At least we can dispose of these remains. Not so in the case of Maxine Cates, for she received a live baby duck for Easter.

The duck follows her everywhere and when Maxine goes to classes, she leaves with the sound of anguished cries in her ears. The duck is afraid to be left alone.

Named "Puddles," for an appropriate reason, the duck lives in a box in Maxine's room at the Delta Zeta sorority house. He loves people, and his favorite playground is on Maxine's bed surrounded by a group of girls. Not being able to stand his cries when left alone at night, Maxine puts a mirror in his box. "Puddles" thinks another duck is in the box with him and he is content for a short while.

"Puddles" takes a daily swim in the bathtub or sink. He also has acquired quite a fan club, comprised of girls in the sorority house, and gets a lot of attention. That is, until about midnight when he starts crying for attention, or when he puts his name to use. Then Maxine is deserted.

Career Cues

"Cure for job boredom:
I made my favorite

Richard Bertram, President
Bertram Yacht Co., Division of Nautech Corp.

"When you stop to think what percent of our total waking hours is spent bread-winning, you realize how tragic it is for any man to work at an occupation he doesn't enjoy. Besides frittering away life, it reduces chances of success to just about zero. I know... because it almost happened to me!

After college, I did what I thought was expected of me and joined a solid, Manhattan-based insurance firm. I soon found office routine wasn't for me. I lived only for lunch hour when I could walk to the Battery and mentally sail with the ships that stood out in the Narrows... and for the summer weekends when I could go sailing. Fortunately, the company I worked for is one of the leading insurers of yachts and after two years I was transferred to their Yacht Underwriting Department. Enjoyment and interest in my work improved immediately 100%.

After World War II, I started my own yacht brokerage firm and yacht insurance agency in Miami, combining my marine insurance background with an even closer relationship with boats.

My only problem ever since has been a feeling of guilt that my work was too easy. I love boats and boating people. That affection has paid me rewards way beyond the financial security it has also provided.

The moral's obvious. You have an odds-on chance for success and happiness working at what you enjoy most — what comes naturally! And if it's not just frivolous, your life's work could well be what you now consider just a pastime. It's certainly worth thinking about, anyway!"

Richard Bertram, while still in his early thirties, became one of the country's leading yacht brokers. Today he heads up eight companies covering yacht manufacturing, insurance, repair, storage, finance and brokerage. A resident of Coconut Grove, Florida, Dick became a Camel fan while still in college.

And to make any time pass more enjoyably...

In Proper Perspective

Proposals by two of the Commonwealth's education agencies that schools should be required to cut back on their extracurricular activity programs or have their ratings lowered already are drawing the fire of some Kentuckians. Logical discussion of the issues involved is good, but we are afraid the central problem—whether students are too involved in extracurricular activities and not involved enough in their classwork—will be clouded by those who are interested only in the extracurricular side, mainly athletics.

Some persons are using the argument during these initial stages of discussion that America's youth already are lacking in physical fitness, and to de-emphasize athletics will make matters worse. We do not view present proposals in the light that there is any "ill-will" toward athletic programs; educators simply are trying to place emphasis where it's needed most—on a program which will produce well-rounded young people, both mentally and physically.

If Kentucky's public school system has no other purpose or goal than to do wonders for the state's children's social adjustment, we had best close up shop and let them go their separate ways.

Some others contend that the schools' athletic programs, mainly football and basketball, produce physically fit youngsters. This may be true, but these same persons are conveniently forgetting one important factor. All students cannot benefit physically from the strenuous efforts of their fellow students on the field or on the court.

Campus Parable

By RABBI ROBERT ROTHMAN

A great teacher and scholar lay on his death bed and his disciples gathered round about him in their death watch. A few of them noticed tears in their master's eyes and were obviously distraught. "Does the master fear death?" they asked. "This man who had been so faithful and pious all his life, why should he fear to come before God? Is all that he teaches us a waste?"

The scholar heard the whisperings of his disciples and students gathered around his bed. He raised a weak and almost lifeless arm for attention and silence and asked in a soft voice for the cause of all the seeming consternation written on the faces of his students.

They told him they had seen the tears filling his eyes and furrowing his cheeks and felt that it might be due to his fearing death.

The master raised his eyes, looked at each one individually, and said: "My tears are not those of fear, but only of regret. Regret not that I am about to die, but only for what I shall have to answer when I am asked by the guardian angel of heaven: 'Simon, I do not ask of you why were you not like King Solomon, or Moses, or Abraham our father. I ask only, why were you not like Simon?'"

No Reason In Oran

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

ORAN, Algeria (AP)—Europeans of Algeria's once thriving second city have decided to bury their riches under the debris of disaster rather than surrender them to the Moslem majority in an independent Algeria.

No one has given any reason because there is no reason in the tense mass hypnosis gripping Oran's 200,000 Europeans.

You ask European men and women strolling under the palm trees why they are willing to court disaster rather than seek peace. They answer with cold hateful stares:

"Disaster and Arab rule are the same to us."

Each day seems to bring doom closer.

Most of the Europeans admit that Algeria's independence is inevitable and that Moslem rule will come sooner or later.

But they continue to support the desperate, bloody resistance of the secret army. The terrorist organization's new commander, ex-Gen. Paul Gardy, has vowed to fight until the end.

Some say they resist by inertia, others that they will go down fighting. Still others are swept up in an atmosphere of fanaticism where one single voice of opposition is drowned by thousands of chanting and shouting secret army slogans.

Elsewhere the law is the secret army with its slogans, posters, and terrorist attacks.

The tarnished scrawl of "Algeria Is French" on the walls still retains its spell.

Oran is a city outside French law and order. It is a city bracing for final combat against the authority of France.

In the so-called European Oran, there are four islands still held by French troops and riot police: the old and new city hall, the once thriving Hotel Martinez, and the cable and telegraph office.

Only a fraction of the 40,000-man Moslem working force is employed. No Moslem dares to enter the European quarters, where all persons with Arab features are immediately shot down.

Few Europeans believe the city ever will recover.

"We will go down, but the Arabs will starve," the Europeans say.

Objects To Combination

To The Editor:

This letter is concerned with the recently reported expenditure of $44,000 for art work at the Medical Center. However, before detailing my objections to the use of funds for such purposes, I should perhaps state what this letter is not.

First, it is not an attack on the College of Medicine. Second, it is not an attack on art, although personally the murals over the entrance to the hospital and in the Medical Science Building could do with some attacking—preferably with bazookas. (Incidentally, these murals were purchased at costs of $20,000 and $8,000 respectively.) Rather, it is the combination of art and medicine to which the writer objects.

I sincerely question the wisdom of expending a rather large amount of the taxpayer's money for items which, by the farthest stretch of the imagination, result in little or no educational or, in the case of the hospital, therapeutic value.

If educational facilities throughout the University were entirely adequate, there would be no need for this letter. But, the fact is that there are many other places in which, as any fair-minded person would agree, $44,000 might be better spent.

As I am a faculty member in the Psychology Department, I know its needs most intimately and my comments will therefore be directed to ways in which we might spend $44,000. I realize, moreover, that other departments can point to similar projects which would be appreciably aided by such a sum.

The introductory course has a great need for $44,000 to purchase laboratory equipment. In questionnaires given students at the conclusion of this course, they felt inadequacy of present laboratory facilities is perhaps the most frequently-mentioned criticism. I can assure you that the inadequacy is even more keenly experienced by the laboratory instructors.

In upper division and graduate courses a substantial amount of laboratory equipment is available only because of research grants to various staff members.

Thus, equipment originally obtained for research is, of necessity, used for instructional purposes. Needless to say, both instruction and research suffer from such an arrangement.

Surely, funds to further some of the aforementioned goals are more wisely spent than for the purchase of stone boomerangs (the fountain sculpture which I truthfully admire, $10,000).

For these reasons, I draw little comfort from the Kernel's report that "$50,000 was appropriated for art work, but the total cost was only $44,000." If nothing else, the only decent thing is to adorn the new physical sciences building with a massive, 24 carat gold, Euclidean model of the structure of the atom (rubies for electrons would be a nice touch).

Reviewer Lauds Poets Of Brazil

In contemporary Brazil, poetry constitutes an avant garde for all the arts. The outstanding work of twelve leading Brazilian poets, translated by John Nist under the title "Modern Brazilian Poetry," will be published by Indiana University Press on April 20.

Since 1922, a cultural revolution has swept Brazil, spearheaded by the poet Mario de Andrade, who rebelled against the traditionalists in his country to restore to poetry its link with Brazil's heroic past and the aspirations of her people.

The brilliant success of this literary uprising is in a large part the achievement of the poets represented in "Modern Brazilian Poetry." Manuel Bandeira, Mario de Andrade, Jorge de Lima, Cassiano Ricardo, Cecília Meireles, Carlos Drummond de Andrade, Murilo Mendes, Augusto Frederico Schmidt, Vinícius de Moraes, Domingos Carvalho da Silva, Joo Cabral de Melo Neto and Paulo Bonfim. A biographical vignette of each of these poets further enhances the anthology.

In his critical introduction, John Nist comments: "So dazzling are some of the jewels in Brazil's literary case that it will take expert criticism quite a while to arrive at a just and proper appraisal. This anthology is intended . . . to help facilitate such an appraisal."

O'Neill Gets More Attention With Addition Of 3 Volumes

By WILLIAM GLOVER
Associated Press Drama Writer
NEW YORK — After long neglect, Eugene O'Neill is getting more and more attention from other writers.

Two biographies and a critical anthology are new additions to the expanding shelf of posthumous literature about America's only Nobel Prize playwright.

This makes seven assorted works published in the past three years. Before he died in 1953, O'Neill inspired a single slender biography and one book of criticism.

The boom began with a sudden revival of Broadway interest in his dramas in 1956. Researchers have been scurrying ever since.

The rivalry to document and explain his anguished life is turning out to have an odd aspect. Besides expectable disagreements in areas open to opinion, the record is being complicated with peculiar differences over allegedly factual data.

This is particularly noticeable with regard to the latest biographies: "The Tempering of Eugene O'Neill" by Doris Alexander (Harcourt, Brace & World; $5.95); and "O'Neill" by Arthur and Barbara Gelb (Harper; $12.50).

Miss Alexander, an assistant English professor at Staten Island Community College, limits her account to O'Neill's first 32 years. She promises a second volume later, covering the years from 1920 to 1953.

Gelb, a theatrical news reporter for the New York Times, and his wife tackle the dramatist's entire Floridians are doing their best these days to lure horses and horse-farm owners from Kentucky to Florida. If things go as the deep-Southerners hope and predict, the owner of this Kentucky farm may soon be moving himself and his horses to somewhere in central Florida. The peninsula-dwellers point proudly to a growing industry that produced the Kentucky Derby winner of 1961, Carry Back, a resident of the state's Ocala Stud Farm. Still, however, the Blue Grass is the home of 25 percent of the racing horses and 48 percent of the stakes winners.

Floridians Are Trying To Break Kentucky's Hold On The Horses

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Efforts by Florida breeders to break Kentucky's virtual monopoly in the nation's $500 million thoroughbred horse racing industry may be headed toward the showdown stage this year.

Florida people claim they have the best of everything to train race horses. They say the names of those soon to pull out of Kentucky will surprise many.

Top breeders in Kentucky, however, compare Florida with the fabled upstart mouse which marched into a pack of elephants and squeaked: "I can lick anyone in the house!"

Nevertheless, the sunshine State is feeling its oats on the amazing success of the Florida-bred colt, Carry Back, winner of the 1961 Kentucky Derby and more than $900,000 in purses.

Joseph O'Farrell, manager of Ocala Stud Farm which catapulted Carry Back to fame, says there were only three horse farms in central Florida in 1956. The number now stands at 57. He says half of the new farm owners came from Kentucky.

O'Farrell says Florida has a natural advantage over Kentucky because of its year-round sunshine. "You are not prohibited from turning the horses out in the winter in Florida," he says.

Hugh Fontaine, who developed Florida's first Derby winner, Needles in 1956, is more explicit:

"Florida offers the greatest natural resources and most favorable all-around conditions to raise good thoroughbreds of any area in the nation."

Florida partisans point to the 1,100-acre farm of Kentuckian P. A. E. Widener III, which soon will begin operation near Ocala. They say the Widener move points to things to come.

They also cite a recent land purchase in Florida by Leslie Combs II, owner of Nashua and Gallant Man. However, Combs says he bought the land only for speculation and isn't considering moving his horse farm to Florida. Combs and other Kentuckians wintered their horses near Albany, Ga., this year.

Combs says breeders who have moved to Florida couldn't make the grade in Kentucky. He predicts that Widener's major operation would remain in the Blue Grass State.

C. V. Whitney, owner of the second leading breeding establishment in the nation, said he has never considered moving. "The best all-around place to bring up thoroughbreds is Kentucky—it's been proved."

A. B. Hancock, owner of the 3,000-acre Claiborne Farm, which had five of the ten leading sires last year, said he had never considered moving. Hancock owns a small part of the St. Lucie training track in Florida, where he winters yearlings, but headquarters remain in Kentucky.

There seems to be no doubt that Kentucky is still king in the business. Kentuckians were breeding and racing good horses when the area around Lexington still was part of a British Royal Colony. In 1826, horseowners formed an association "for the improvement of the breeds of stock."

Florida didn't get its first real horse farm until 1940, when Carl Rose started in the Sunshine state.

Kentucky has 239 thoroughbred farms, compared with 82 for Florida. But domination of the industry rests more with the number of stakes race winners and divisional champions than with the number of farms. Here, Kentucky has a commanding lead. The Blue Grass state produces 25 percent of the horses but 48 percent of the stakes winners. The ratio for most other stakes is about one-to-one.

Most of the great stallions are in Kentucky. The mares go where the stallions are. This also means that feed men, tax consultants, bloodstock agencies, those connected with auctions, trainers and grooms go to Kentucky.

In the Lexington area, owners get as much as $10,000 in a single stud fee. The top fee in Florida is $5,000. Stallions in states other than Kentucky commanding $10,000 fees include Khaled and Determine (California), Native Dancer (Maryland) and First Landing (Virginia).

A gradual buildup of industry and housing developments around Lexington could be a factor in the increase in horse farms in Florida. Mrs. Gene Markey has gone to court three times to block commercial ventures across the road from her Calumet Farm.

Florida uses its tax laws in an effort to attract new industry and new residents. But taxes actually make up only a small part of operations of horse farms in Kentucky.

Marion County, Florida, looking for a bigger share of the tourist and convention trade, advertises as: "New Home of the Thoroughbred."

The reply from Kentucky's Blue Grass would seem to be: "One Carry Back does not an industry make."

Updike's Stories Called 'Sensitive'

PIGEON FEATHERS AND OTHER STORIES. By John Updike. Knopf, $4.

One of the most difficult tasks which a writer may undertake is to capture in words those small distillations of mind and emotion which depict a nuance-filled experience in human life.

Updike is a craftsman who is very skilled in this sort of writing. He possesses a spirit which must be described by the overworked term "sensitive." And he translates his imaginative web of ideas, feelings and responses into a fabric of communication that often achieves a fascinating result.

But if the telling of these stories requires a delicate skill, the reading of them also requires the reader to contribute a considerable amount of mental agility and emotional awareness. In blunter words, these stories are for readers who are intellectually awake and willingly sympathetic to the more fragile aspects of human thought. Even then, parts of this book will seem bafflingly intangible.

Most of these stories are a recollection of things past. Their range is wide. One is about a 19-year-old boy working in a supermarket, and his reaction to a small incident involving another girl. Another is about a not-so-young divinity student who has a summer job as a lifeguard, and who philosophizes atop his perch at the beach.

The title piece deals with a boy's shattering realization of human mortality, and is very effectively done.

To say that Updike is moody is not to deprecate his talent. It might just be, however, that he could establish a warmer rapport with the reader if he were to infuse his writing with a little more of the savor of humor.

VOLLEYBALL WILL BE IN OLYMPICS

How is one able to quickly master the basic fundamentals involved in a scientific game such as volleyball?

Most of those who have taken this sport as a part of the physical education requirement know that it is nearly impossible. It is only after tireless effort, practice, and playing against the best possible competition that the real skills are thoroughly learned.

The more important fundamentals of volleyball are the chest pass, underhand passing, spiking (jumping in the air at the net and slamming the ball into the opposite court), and blocking.

The chest pass is volleyball's most important and effective method of passing. In executing the chest pass the player must have his eyes concentrated on the ball. As it is contacted the ball is released with a finger snap and a coordinated follow-through of the entire body.

The Pan American Games, United States, and World Championship play have greatly influenced the trend toward the closed-fisted style of underhand passing. The two-handed stroke is similar to the swing used in the game of croquet. The ball is hit dead center, well out in front of the body and contact is made on the upswing of the arms. The one-hand underhand pass is an effective means of playing a ball that is almost out of reach. When an emergency play is necessary, the player lunges to gain the terrific speed needed to make this one-handed recovery.

The most spectacular action in volleyball and one of the most difficult of all skills to master in sports is called spiking. This dynamic maneuver in high-powered volleyball is an effective method for scoring points by jumping into the air and hitting the ball back across the net to the opponent's court. Contact is made with the palm of the open hand. As the ball is blasted there is a powerful flick of the wrists as it picks up spin, adding momentum to the ball which may travel at the blazing speed of 162 feet a second.

To counteract this spiking ability, a block is employed with three or four men jumping at the net in an attempt to intercept the spike ball.

The important message conveyed in this article is this: no player is playing modern volleyball until he learns these fundamentals as well as good ball handling. The skills described above are fundamental.

The last of this series will be an introduction of the UK volleyball squad, possibly representing this institution in the National Collegiate Tournament.

The aggressiveness of volleyball is emphasized by these players shown in action. This sport will be introduced in the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo.

Mark Twain Estate

REDDING, Conn. (AP) — Mark Twain's estate made $18,679 last year in royalties on his books.

The annual accounting was announced by Probate Judge Hjalmar Anderson, who was six years old when author Samuel L. Clemens died here in 1910.

Anderson has reported on the estate annually for the past 24 years. As of Dec. 31, 1960, the estate was valued at $783,485.

One-half of one percent of the entire 1956 college enrollment was honored on the new Dean's list.

Sportraits

By Jim Ennis

You might have read before the start of the 1961 baseball season that the Pacific Coast League was about to establish an unprecedented ruling concerning pinch hitters.

The rule, in effect, stated that pinch hitters could hit for the pitcher while allowing the hurler to stay in the game. Under the plan, a manager would announce before each game whether his pitcher would bat for himself each time or if an alternate player would be used. If the latter, the pitcher would play only on defense and his alternate—becoming the team's 10th man—would appear only as a hitter.

This so-called "wild card" rule was attempting to change baseball, long a stand-fast sport that has withstood the vagaries of time.

But old man baseball, in the form of the directors of the Pacific Coast League, promptly settled back to old standards by abolishing the rule at the end of last season.

While not being aware of the reasons the rule folded, we would like to tender a few of our own. There's no doubt but that the rule heightened the fans' interest. But the plan in our mind seemingly had a major drawback—overspecialization. It's conceivable that a man could make a ball club without being able to field his weight, but instead possess enough prowess with the bat to make up for the deficiency.

Also, pitchers, notoriously weak hitters, might just give up batting altogether and concentrate on what they're paid for—to pitch.

Now, we're not saying that the rule was or is good for the national pastime. We're just pointing out that these are possibilities to look for if the subject is ever again brought to light.

We recently read a tear-jerking piece of literature which concerned the fact that a California junior college cancelled a doubleheader with an Arizona Jaycee "because of reasons three-fold."

Leading off the trio of cardiac-pulling reasons was the fact that the team's second baseman and shortstop were sidelined with injuries. Secondly, without these individuals, who also help handle the pitching chores, to quote, "... it would be tough to play an eighteen-inning doubleheader in the Arizona heat with a 10-man squad." Thirdly, and we might add most absurdly, was the "inconvenience and high cost of the long (400 mile) trip.

Our point is, what's the main objective in establishing a particular schedule when a conference member can, on a sudden whim, cancel this agreement which was made months prior?

On examining these so-called reasons for the cancellation, we find it hard to tender an agreement with any of them. Should a whole league suffer because of two players getting knocked out of action? Hardly. We agree that to play a doubleheader with only 10 men does present its problems. But it seems that the school could somewhere scrape up enough ballplayers to keep the date. Finally, to give an excuse of the trip being costly and inconvenient is hardly grounds enough to forfeit two ball games. Can you envision, say, the Yankees postponing an American League game with the Angels because of the "inconvenience and high cost of the long trip?"

LITTLE KY. DERBY — Week-end is here once again, and so is all the bally hoo—things will be "rockin' or twisting around the old campus. Don't miss the gigantic style show at the Coliseum tomorrow night (one of the many planned activities). The committee has worked hard to make this week-end a real swinger, and deserves plaudits for a job well done. Committee; Here's my plaudit!

NEW STAR — In the shirt collar style parade is the "snap-down." The snap-down gives a very neat appearance in short sleeve dress shirts (extremely popular) or in the sport shirt medium. The snap-down collar is not to be confused with the "snap-tab" or the "button-down." This a combination of both. My advice—check into it for yourself—and latch on.

JOHN COLE III — Pre-med (non-frat) major had himself a ball the other day selecting some new spring and summer threads. Here are a few of the items he picked up on—a jet black suit of wool-dacron and mohair—Ivy cut—very conservative and very smart (suitable for any occasion except swimming, and that has been done on some joyous occasions). In the casual sporty department he chose two Bermuda ensembles worthy of mention. One set consists of black and brown block designed with a knitted ban-lon slip over shirt of light beige with matching beige ban-lon sock (ankle length—knee length is passe) and another set of black and green plaid bermudas with dark olive shirt and matching sock. Personal note to John — was nice meeting you, and how is the strategy working out?

SOON — 'Twill be splash time at the pool, river or lake, and my tip to you is—get your swim wear while the choice models are to be had. When they are picked over that is it. There are lots of styles for this season—sure to please most every one. When shopping for beach wear don't forget a straw "Kookie hat" — not only fun to wear, but protects your hair from sun rays.

AS — I scribble this epistle my models for the Little Ky. Derby style show will be Herschel Robinson (Kappa Sigma), Dainy Hammer (Phi Delta Theta), Richard Adams (non-frat) and that's a fine trio!

QUESTION — (By phone) "When wearing a blazer with crested left breast pocket, do you ever wear a breast pocket handkerchief?"

ANSWER — No — the crest is enough. Thanks for the inquiry.
NOW IS THE TIME — For me to shut up for this week and I will be behind scenes at the style show and hope you will be out front—now back to TV.

So long for now,

ing a lot from them, and we aren't going to be any less demanding. You and I and everyone else will draw our strength from the way these men play," the coach said.

Bradshaw feels that his group of 51 he now has will stick it out. And if they don't—well, the 1948 UK graduate said, "We'll play with 10 men and a coach if we have to."

The head mentor said that he was optimistic when he came here, and he is even more optimistic now. "This program is no different than the ones at Tennessee or Alabama or anywhere else. We have some real men on our football team, as fine as you'll find anywhere."

Bradshaw said he is worried about the effect publicity of the players quitting the squad will have on his recruiting program. He pointed out that all high school players are a little apprehensive about their ability to play football on the college level.

Kentucky has signed 41 high school players, and has 14 more scholarships available for this fall. The most scholarships that can be issued in any one year is 55, and the total football scholarships can not number more than 115.

Of the players who have quit, there has been only one letterman, Darrell Cox, a 5-8, 172 pound halfback from Miami, Fla.

Cox was a member of the SEC All-Sophomore Team and was the leading punter on the Wildcat squad last year with a 34.9 yard average. He was 11th in the SEC in the department.

Other players listed in the top three teams in the 1961 depth chart who have quit since Bradshaw's arrival include John Rampulla, Billy Bird, Joe Moraja, Steve McGee, Dan Haley, and Shelby Lee.

The hardest hit position is the quarterback spot where the Wildcats are down from eight to four signal callers. The halfback position is also hurting as seven of 16 players from that position have left the squad.

Those who have quit the squad since the beginning of spring practice include:

Ends—Ben Harrison, sophomore,

Guntersville, Ala.

Tackles—Bob Hennecke, sophomore from Decatur, Ga., and Roscoe Perkins, sophomore, Middlesboro.

BEHIND THE SCENES OF THE "PLAYBOY" EMPIRE

Hugh Hefner launched Playboy magazine on $10,000—and a nude photo of Marilyn Monroe. Today he's a millionaire. In this week's Post, you'll learn how Hefner lives up to his Playboy image. Why he keeps close tabs on the private lives of his buxom "bunnies." And which Hollywood stars got their start as "Playmates."

The hospital chapel's wooden cross and altar are viewed by Jean Kabler, a freshman student in nursing from Munfordville. The chapel is located at the end of the main corridor leading from the front door of the hospital.

Chapel Is Important Asset To New Medical Center

"The peace of God which passeth all understanding . . ." As the busy life of the hospital goes on there will be one place where the hustle and bustle will not intrude — the chapel.

Decorated in a modern design, the chapel is located in the southwest corner of the hospital building. The back wall is a sliding panel which can be opened to increase the capacity of the chapel by joining it with the cafeteria. A family room is located to the right of the altar. It is divided from the rest of the room by a partition. It will be used primarily as a sitting room by families and friends of patients. Services in the chapel will be conducted or coordinated by a full-time, salaried chaplain. The chaplain has not been hired nor his denomination determined. He will give direct pastoral services to patients when needed, and will maintain a liaison with the patients' clergymen and attending physicians. The chaplain will also participate in a program designed to instruct ministers and theological students in the duties of a clergyman as a member of the patient care team.

Pharmacy College Schedules Career Day For Saturday

The University College of Pharmacy will conduct the first pharmacy career seminar Saturday. All prepharmacy students of the University and other colleges of Kentucky and high school seniors who are considering a career in pharmacy are invited to attend. E. M. Josey, Frankfort, secretary of the Kentucky Board of Pharmacy, will be guest speaker and will discuss internship requirements during the afternoon session.

Registration will be in the Pharmacy Building lobby from 9:30 to 10 a.m. Dr. Earl P. Slone, dean of the college, will give the welcoming address.

During the morning session, addresses concerning the professional curriculum will be made by Dr. Howard H. Hopkins, head of the Department of Pharmacy, Dr. Arthur C. Glasser, head of the Department of Pharmaceutical Chemistry, and Richard M. Doughty, acting head of the Department of Materia Medica.
