HOW DO YOU STAND?

Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "I find that the great thing in this world is not so much where one stands, but in what direction he is moving."

Think it over, where are you standing, in what direction are you moving?

To "stand pat" is a good thing in its place and a good thing when used with "common sense." To hold one's ground in the face of a world of opposition is one of the bravest things anyone can do—when he knows that he is right. To hold one's ground when the opposing factor has proved in "black and white" that a certain thing is a fact, "standing pat" then ceases to be a brave thing and becomes "hard headed."

Not to have a mind of one's own—to one own which will change with the slightest deflection of the wind—is just as bad as being a chronic "stand patter."

To strike a so-called "happy medium," then, somewhere between the firm "stand pat" man, and the man who is willing to listen and reason with another man, is that toward which we should strive.

Critics lack the initiative themselves to put their ideas across, but when another who has the initiative steps in and does his best, they are ready to pick the faults. In the words of Holmes, one of these men stands, and the other is moving in a certain direction. What are you doing?

COLLEGE COMMENT

Mr. Tunney has retired as champion of the world, and doubtless the air will soon be thick with the threats of what certain other pugilists would have done to him if he hadn't stepped aside.

A baseball park near Osaka, Japan, covers fifteen acres and the grandstand can seat 70,000 spectators.

The United States may some day have to share honors in its national game and we may have a world's series worthy of the name.

The weather bureau in this country will continue to be up against it until it learns how to supply at least 120,000,000 kinds of weather at the same moment.

If anybody happens to want a real description of a real fight, we recommend that he get down his old Virgil and look up the account therein contained Mr. McNamee is pretty good, at that.

Day after day the golf courses are crowded with men and women who think the passage of 24 hours will somehow or other have cured that slice.

Honesty is defined by the very learned Mr. Webster as freedom from guilt or fraud. He neglected to say one thing, freedom from money.

And it's Open House night. We hope all the visitors have appreciated the display, and have been successfully deluded that all laboratories are a lot of fun and no work. (At least, that's how it seemed to us, not so many years ago.) And to the prospective frosh, remember, contris are always a source of joy to the poor humor ed.

LITERARY SECTION

(MARGARET CUNDIFF, Editor)

Due to the make-up of the paper last week, the name of the author of Pan and the Miser, was omitted from this column. We wish to apologize to Mr. Virgil Leon Sturgill, who wrote the poem.

THE FLAME

Since life is short
And love is best
When the flame burns low
My soul shall rest.

—VIRGIL LEON STURGILL

SHOWERS

It rained last night—
Clear crystal-cold droplets
Of bright jewels.
Myriads fell on the trees,
Clinging to the ebony bark
Like glistening rhinestones.
The trees stirred, thrilled,
Drinking them in with joyous delight.

A STUDENT.

CLOUDS

Black clouds hover
Outside my window
Like hooded monks
Chanting litanies
To slow music
Of the rain.

—VIRGIL LEON STURGILL

VOVES HIS HOME WHEN HE CHANGES SCHOOLS

COLUMBIA, Mo.—John Davenport of Mercer, Mo., wanted to go to college, but didn't have the money to pay room rent, so he built his own home and moved it to Trenton so that he could attend junior college there. When he has completed his two year course he will move his little house to Columbia and finish his college education at the University.

When Davenport wants to "move" he pulls 25 bolts and the house is ready to be packed on a truck. He can rebuild it in six hours. He plans to settle outside the city limits, or wherever he can find the cheapest site. The house is a one-room affair, heated by a little coal stove. John cooks his own meals on a three burner oil stove.

He gets his supplies from the storeroom of home canned vegetables and fruits at home. He uses his car to transport the food.

CORNELL SENDS SECURITIES TO CITY FOR SAFE KEEPING

ITHACA, N. Y. (IP)—The entire endowment of Cornell University, twenty million dollars in securities, has been safely locked in the vaults of the National Bank of Commerce, New York City, after having been transferred from Ithaca in small consignments. Over 20,000 separate securities were shipped without mishap.

Clara Bow at Kentucky Sunday

Despite the name of Clara Bow's newest vehicle "Dangerous Curves," we predict that it will be the usual woe that this red-headed girl is renowned for making. Richard Arlen plays the tight rope walker who ties knots in Clara's heart, and even if Clara has announced her engagement to Harry Richmond, that has nothing to do with this picture.

Although we have heard some criticism of Clara's voice, it is our belief that it carries out her vivid personality and is an intensification of the parts she takes. She may have a hard time with her men, but she always obeys the Northwest police injunction, for after a few husky sentences from her they are willing to be lamely led to the four corners of the earth.

"Where East is East" at Strand
Lon Chaney, master of makeup, stars in "Where East is East," a M-G-M picture coming to the Strand Sunday. Ahy supported by Lupe Velez, who plays his daughter, Estelle Taylor, who plays his wife.

Lloyd Hughes, who is cast as the young man in love with the two women, Chaney gives a sterling performance. The story was written originally for the screen by its director, Tod Browning, and it is the story that is the weakest part of the picture.

Chaney's role is that of a former circus man, living in Siam, trapping wild animals for the circuses. His face is scarred from his encounters with the beasts but his heart is devoted to his daughter. When his wife returns after having deserted her family for 16 years and tries to wreck their happiness, Chaney retaliates by setting upon her a great Frozen Health!

There's a world of health in ice cream and that is why you never tire of it. A great scientist once said, "We live not upon what we eat, but upon what we digest." Ice cream, in addition to being a food of great nutritional value, is one of the most easily digested.

Our ice cream is the only brand made in this city under the Heathenized method of freezing in a flavor-intensifying atmosphere which insures greater purity and flavor.

Eat our ice cream every day. It is easily the most popular dish of all.

tucky, either because they haven't any money or because they haven't earned it to taking it from their families. It's different from the old days when the big thing was to own a couple of horses and no one, particularly the athletes, studied. We musicians can make as much in an hour as another fellow can make in a day slinging hash, and it's pleasanter. A summer ago, the Kentucky Rhythm Kings played their way across the Atlantic on the Berengaria, and then worked at Desauville and at the Ambassadeurs. We paid our passage, had a lot of fun, saw new country, and came home with a profit after making quite a name for ourselves in Paris, where jazz bands have as many nationalities represented as they have instruments. We've been organized for three years and now that we've back we'll continue playing for the majority of fraternity and sorority dances on the campus. A couple of our boys couldn't go to school at all if it weren't for the money they earn getting hot and bothered through a length of silver-plated pipe.

"At Kentucky, Phi Beta Kappa is about the only exception to the rule, 'No Man Who Makes an Honor Fraternity Deserves It.' It's all a matter of fraternity politics; fellows already in the society pulling in their brothers behind them. We're much more interested in campus than we are in national politics, perhaps because everyone is a Democrat.

"Prohibition makes few people sob for joy. Our big drinks shine, which is not corn, but 'sugar' whiskey. The niggers make it. They throw everything into it from mortmen's gloves to old shirts. It gets about halfway down and then wants to come back. Some of it tastes like lye dissolved in vinegar, but we mix it with punch. I reckon people drink as much in the South as they do anywhere else.

"We have a good time in our fraternities, but we have nothing as rough as the tubing done up North. About the worst thing we do to our freshmen is to make them parade in front of the Lafayette hotel shouting 'Lafayette, we are here!' Or ride them ten miles out in the country on a rainy night and let them walk home. At the University of Kentucky a freshman is a freshman—with adjectives—just as an auto is a car or a chariot and just as a tea hound is a candy ankle.

"The thing we get out of college which we enjoy most, I reckon, is romance. The funny part is that you can't tell exactly what goes to make it. Suppose you're playing candy-leg at a jig somewhere and afterwards you take one of those sweet little feminine things out riding in your hack. It's one of those nights—you know, a full moon and a warm wind on your face, and the black trees shushing, and no sound except a dog barking 'way down in the valley. All of a sudden you feel sort of dizzy and you look into the girl's eyes and you know she feels the same way you do. For a while the world seems different. It belongs just to you and the girl. You have stumbled onto romance.

"What makes it? It isn't only the full moon. It isn't only the warm wind. It isn't the trees. I'm darn sure it isn't the dog. It's just one of these things that happen, and a person's lucky. I think, when it does happen to him. And if it happens oftener at a university than it does at other places, then a person is lucky to be at a university. Maybe it's a machine made project—the result of soft lighting, red and blue hases in dusky corners; the 'right girl at the right moment; a good imagination, maybe; or a jazz band playing 'sweet stuff' that fairly drips from the saxes' mouths. But if the jazz band has any part in it, I'm honestly glad that I'm part of one."
