An unhappy marriage, a runaway child or a problem with alcoholism are just a few of the road-blocks that many people must face.
For UK's Physical Plant Division employees, help is right here on campus. They can take their problems to the College of Social Works' Refer program.
The director of the program, Chester Holmquist, said that currently the social service and assistance is offered only to PPD employees. He said that there are plants to add the University's staff employees to the program. Goldie Hawn up to her old dizzy-blonde tricks in 'Protocol'

Goldie Hawn has carved out an acting career for herself by playing wide-yed dizty blondes, from the bilknical go-go dancer on TV's "Laugh In" to the hapless preppie-turned-reluctant-soldier in "Private Benjamin."

After a brief role change in last year's bittersweet World War II drama, "Swing Shift," Hawn is back in her comfortably dizzy niche with "Protocol."

In her latest comedy, Hawn plays the bubbly Sunny Ann Davis. Sunny lives in Washington, is always late and works at Lou's Safari Club, where she dressee as an animal (an emu outfit, which closely resembles a chicken) and serves drinks. Her great love for the governing news to her favorite soap opera.

However, this all changes after she catches a would-be assassin by the seat of her own pants when she stops his bullet several inches below her hip. The gumman she wrestled with was after the amir of a tiny Mid Eastern country.

his bullet several inches below her hip. The gunman she wrestled with was after the amir of a tiny Mid Eastern country.

The amir, who is in Washington to discuss putting an American military base in his country, naturally falls in low with the naive heroine.

As does the rest of the nation. Sunny's bright face suddenly appears on every magazine in the country, from Time to Working Woman. And naturally, National Enquery the san indepth article on Sunny's lost loves. Some san indepth article on Sunny's lost loves, we say that the marriage would ensure completion of the military base and peace between the countries. Uninformed of her admirer, Sunny is placed in the division labeled Protocol, which has the horrendous job of maintaining proper etiquette while entertaining visiting officials.

For ex-cocktail waitress Sunny, this creates several interesting scenes, like the formal barbeque where she shows up in shorts and a T-shirt carrying a frisbee and a radio.

Low's Safari Chib, beginning a scandal the press promptly labels "Sunnygate" Goldie Hawn has what Notional Lampoon refers to as T.C.: Terminal Cuteness, and both Sunny and "Protocol" also suffer from the same ailment. Fortunately, director Herbert Ross has dealt with the disease well, amusing the audience rather than coating them with sugar.

The end of "Protocol" is, of course, all sweet and

The end of "Protocol" is, of course, all sweet and happy, neatly tied together with a big bow. Definitely a brief escape from reality.

Buildings provide good and bad news for UK community

UK buildings are beginning to creep into the news in peculiar ways. And, as it always is with news, the UK community is having to take the good with the bad.

The good news is that the University will be purchasing a new computerized system for saving energy in every campus building. The computer will regulate lighting, heating and air conditioning, based on the temperature outside and inside the buildings. It's estimated that the system could save the University as much as $500,000 each year.

The bad news, however, is that it could take to the temperature of the system could save the University as much as $500,000 each year.

system could save the University as much as $500,000 each year.

The bad news, however, is that it could take as much as three years worth of those savings to pay for other building repairs that must be made.

The repairs in question are needed on the Kirwan and Blanding towers. It seems that faulty construction materials were used in the external brick work of the towers when they were built in 1967. Now, 18 years later, the bill for replacing those bricks could go as high as $1.5 million, according to UK administrators.

Easy come, easy go.

Administrators also believe that some of those faulty bricks could come tumbling down on the heads of the students who live in the Kirwan-Blanding complex. For that reason, they're building protective wooden canopies around the two towers.

Obviously, it is important to remember not to walk too close to bases of the towers until those canopies are completed. A tower-related injury would be bad news, indeed.

But the bad news doesn't end there, however. The University's continuing search for harmful absetos has turned up evidence of the hazardous material in Boyd Hall, the Funkhouser Building and the American Tobacco Building.

When asbestos is deteriorating, it causes a condition the Funkhouser burning and ing.

When asbestos is deteriorating, it causes a condition known as asbestosis, which is similar to black lung.

The hazardous material has been removed from the three buildings, according to UK Information Services. That much is good news. But you have to wonder where else harmful asbestos might be lurking. And how much bad news about building news will the future hold?

Energy, loose bricks, asbestos bring UK buildings to the spotlight

Anyway, Ann, some of the responses to your survey troubled me. For instance, "I am under 40 and would be delighted to settle for tender words and warm caresses. The rest of it is a bore and can be exhausting. I am sure the sex act was designed strictly for the pleasure of males."

One of your respondents (part of the unregenerate 26 percent) said it best: "To say that touching and ten-der words are sufficient is like set-ting for the smell of freshly baked bread and ignoring the nourishment it provides. Such people must be crazy."

But neighbors had reported the screams of children coming from Dill's house late at night long before the molestation was brought to light. Dill has not yet been charged with murder. It may turn out that the only evidence against him is the word of his daughter; because a so-tial worker who had investigated the original reports of screams in short, those who immediately condemn Dill would be taking revenge for an act that may not have taken place. The word of his daughter ceannot prove his guilt — although it may yet convict him— and he stands by his denial.

Charles Lane Conrad, 34 and paralyzed from the waist down for several years, was arrested last week at the Jessamine County Courthouse, according to state police.

Authorities refused to discuss the arrest until Tuesday, the day after they apprehended Lloyd Estill Dyer, 44, of Lexington.

Detective Al Borne of Lexington said the two men and a third broke into an elderly woman's home last month, robbed her at gunpoint and stole her medication.

State police said Conrad fired shots at Michael Foor of Nicholasville on Dec. 27, prompting the attempted murder charge.

Continued from page one thing like that, "Sands said. "It's not something that's automatic. It's something faculty members have to apply for and justify."

One problem many departments face is how to distribute a professor's work load while he or she is on substical. Sands said UK does not have the funds to pay for replacement faculty and that professors often have to take on extra classes while one of their often have to take on extra classes while one of their colleagues is away.

"They're usually willing to do that," Sands said. "But if everybody in the department wants to have a sabbatical at the same time, it's not possible." For that reason, professors may have to wait more than six years before they take a leave of absence. The results of sabbaticals are often intangible and it's difficult to judge whether the faculty members have used their time wisely. "The dean will want to know what's been accomplished in that sabbatical period," he said, "and if not much was accomplished, that person is not likely to ever get another sabbatical."

sabbatical."
Sands said one of the strengths of the sabbatical system is that students are enriched from the knowledge professors acquire while on leave.
"Our sabbatical policy is really very valuable to the students when the faculty are working on the frontiers of knowledge and can come back with new experiences they can pass on."

Another advantage of the system is that professors get a break from teaching and committee obligations long enough to maintain a research program. "A lot of the best work is done in sababitical periods and people do have the uninterrupted time to concentrate on it and contribute greatly to the research productivity of the University," the said.

He added, "Overall, it's a very great asset. Things are very positive about our sababitical policy — the weaknesses are few and minor.

Kierman spent his last two substiticals researching Kerman spent his last two substiticals researching English epic that has survived. He said a sababitical is important because it gives professors time to finish a long project without interruption.

"One problem is that not everyone can afford to take a full year at half pay," Kierman said: "It think for a major project you need a full year. Not everyone gets sababitical and I think that people ought to have the opportunity to get them. They can be missued, but people need that time."

Farrar teaches a class in community journalism and was previously the editor of a weetly newspaper editor for some time and of the community herewapper editor for some time and or trade papers in community journalism will result from his sabbatical, which began this semester.

Hayden spent the spring of 1994's sabbatical working on a project he began in the fall of 1983. The project is related to control of stem cells in the bone marrow and the problems of leukemia in certain stages.

He has recently formulated a mathematical model describing biochemical feedback which controls the differentiation of the stem cells into various components, such as red and white blood cells.

Hayden is now trying to write up the results of the extensive research he conducted on sabbatical. "Inceeded eight of miles to more than the severably a wirek, the conducted on the severable of the conducted on the conducted of the severable of the conducted of the severable of the conducted of the conducted of the severable of the conduction of paper. Tight security set for inauguration mock inauguration Monday will be the tightest ever for a major public event in the nation's capital, including precautions against terrorist attack from the air or the ground.

The same strength of the proper strength of the theonon swearing in ceremony at the West Front of the Capitol will be required to pass through metal detectors, even though that's an invitation-only crowd.

The same applies to the 60,000 holders of $125 tickets for the inaugural balls, presuming Reagan drops by all eight of the black-tie parties for adults as well as the one for young people. That's the tipoff to the guests that right: no metal detector, the president probably won't be dancing with you.

Another first, as a recurity officials have drawn up seen the second of the second probably with the Capitol erremony from air attack, probably with a sentry armed with the shoulder-fired Stinger missile.

The Secret Service, as usual, would not publicly discuss any specific security steps. But neither did it deny that the air defense system at the White House, long reported to be equipped with the Stinger, would be extend-entemporarily to protect the Capitol.

"I think you can presume that will be the case," said one high-ranking Pentagon official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified. "But it's strictly a Secret Secretice, and Washingfon's various police departments, including the 1,200-man force at the Capitol itself, have been planning for months for the inaugural events. So, too, has the military, whose 8,300-person contingent is largely ceremonial, including marching units totaling 2,000 soldiers, airmen and sallors.

Assembled for the swearing im— actually a repeat of the official oath-taking on Sunday— and Reagan's inaugural address will be virtually every top U.S. official.

Bomb damages Army building, injures one

By ROBERT WIELAARD

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A car bomb exploded less than a mile from NATO headquarters Tuesday, shattering windows and wrecking the facade of a U.S. Army social center, which officials said also housed offices of zentagon security agency.

An extreme leftist group claimed responsibility for the blast and indicated a U.S. security agency in the blaiding was one of its targets. It also warned of reluctions where the control of the
