

STUDENTS HEAR U. K. PRESIDENT AT CONVOCATION

Executive Says University Faces Most Serious Times in History of School

McVEY'S APPEARANCE FIRST THIS SEMESTER

More Students Want Jobs Than Ever Before, Speaker Continues

"We have entered another school year facing one of the most serious times that the university ever has faced—an era of depression," were the words of Pres. Frank L. McVey, speaking before the student body at a general convocation held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning in Memorial hall. Inevitably was made by the Rev. Joseph Clark, pastor of the Good Shepherd church, and music was rendered by Dr. Abner Keller's organists.

It was President McVey's initial appearance before the student body this semester, he having been delayed from an earlier appearance by the death of his mother.

"We need sympathy as well as help in facing such a serious situation," he said, "and this situation is not of the Victorian age nor of some previous age, but of an age in which there must be some adjustment of difficult conditions. I emphasized the fact that prices have been lowered prodigiously and also the fact that the money standard of numerous countries has dropped to lowest levels. This is a great time for reconstruction."

The speaker said that in such an era one should quickly realize the value of an education. Some students, he said, consider their instructors heartless creatures and some students do not know the names of their instructors. Many waste their time in idleness and awaken to the fact when it is too late for any remedy.

President McVey expressed his wish that the public should have the minds of the student on the first day of school—a purpose comprised of high noble ideals.

University's New Buildings Only Part of Expansion Plan

BY MARY ALICE SALYERS
The university is proud of its new buildings. But their construction is only the first sign of progress in the improvement of the physical make-up of the university.

During the past year an extensive program of remodeling and reconditioning of old buildings has been carried on by the department of buildings and grounds. This has as its object the utilization of space—the moving out of old and possibly useless equipment to give place to a new and more modern arrangement designed to meet the constantly increasing needs of a growing university. It is a process which is constantly moving—one which goes on about us possibly without attracting much notice, but one which is far-reaching in its results; for with new available space comes greater opportunity for expansion on each field, with expansion comes more of that broadening of our field of knowledge which is the chief aim of the university.

Nowhere is this process better illustrated than in the Agriculture building which has been completely remodeled and plastered, with a partition to cut off the room from the boiler room, and with plate glass construction for the protection of delicate instruments. On the first floor the large laboratory has been rearranged to better advantage, and some new equipment added. Laboratories on the second floor have been rearranged also, so that the home economics department has a better condition than ever before.

In the Civil Engineering and Physics building the space left by the removal of the State Highway department's road-testing equipment to Frankfort has been utilized to advantage. A new building has been constructed with equipment capable of heating both the boiler room and the laboratory. An old boiler was removed and that space renovated and used for a new physics laboratory.

The part of animal hall which is used, and has been used for some years as a gymnasium for girls, also has been improved. The basement new partitions have been erected and new windows put in. A modern shower has been installed and a locker room outfitted in the most convenient way possible. The new recreation room to be used for a recreation room or lounge. On the first floor twelve new windows have been put in for better ventilation. The second floor has been realigned, put in good shape, and painted.

The part of White Hall improvements have been made also. The partition between classroom 101 and the room formerly used as a botany laboratory was taken out, and the whole space made into a large laboratory. The room formerly used as a lecture room with a seating capacity of 125.

The progress follows:
Monday, September 28
12:45 to 1:00 p. m.—"Canning and Food Preservation," field extension in home economics; "The County Agent and Marketing," H. F. Link, assistant state agent, extension division.

1:00 to 1:30 p. m.—"Your Foods and What They Do for You, No. 1," Richard S. Allen, head of the department of anatomy and physiology.

Tuesday, September 29
2:45 to 3:00 p. m.—"The County Agent's Part in Community Development," I. C. Crady, assistant state agent, extension division; "Re-arrange Your Fields and Save Labor," C. B. Byers, assistant in farm organization and management.

1:00 to 1:15 p. m.—"The Blue and White orchestra."
1:15 to 1:30 p. m.—"The Current Business Situation," by Dr. E. Z. Palmer, associate professor of economics.

Wednesday, September 30
12:45 to 1:00 p. m.—"The County Agent's Part in Community Development," I. C. Crady, assistant state agent, extension division.

ELECTION ERROR TO BE CORRECTED BY U. OF K. BOARD

Student Publications Group Will Meet in McVey Hall Wednesday

TO CHOOSE EDITORS, BUSINESS MANAGER

By-Laws of Organization Will Be Amended; Applications Are Asked

Because of a technical oversight in the election last March of the editorial board of the business manager of the 1932 Kentuckian, student annual, the board of student publications has completely re-elected all such matters, at a meeting held at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon decided to declare both offices vacant and call for petitions from eligible students desiring to offer them. Petitions must be in the hands of the board not later than 12 o'clock noon, Wednesday, September 30. The board fills all vacancies.

At the meeting Tuesday, one member of the board also called attention to the fact that because she had entered upon the duties of a graduate student, the position of editor of the Kernel, held by Miss Virginia Dougherty, is also automatically vacant and that at the meeting on Wednesday, September 30, steps should be taken to appoint her successor.

The circumstance that brought about this situation affecting the organization was that the business manager of the Kentuckian offered their petitions to the board last March, both were below standing for the previous semester. Since the rules of the university require that students shall fill such positions who are below a standing of "B," the semester previous, the board of student publications has been called upon seriously the work of publishing the 1932 Kentuckian.

Those nominated are: E. B. Webb, Cliff Thompson, Dr. George H. Williams, J. J. Miller, L. K. Frankel all of Lexington, and W. H. Gray, Louisville.

Alumni members entitled to vote will do so by mail. All ballots must be returned to Dr. Wellington Patterson before the December meeting of the board. The three receiving the highest number of votes will be presented to the governor of the state for final selection.

Get Together, Boys, Get Together
The coaches and players can't agree on things at Alabama. When 'Bama's championship chances are brought up, the coaches say "Nix."

Just listen to Head Coach Frank Thomas: "How in the world do these coaches and writers get the idea that a second team of 1930 is going to win a conference championship is beyond me.

"We ought to have been the first team last year. We did half of the work and if we had had Cain in our backfield we could have run those other birds off the field. We will show them this time or get beat to death trying."

In the backfield the new plays seem to click. The rhythm of the shifts is chanted and executed almost perfectly. Defense is their only worry now. Passes seem to sail over their heads.

MORE THAN 1,500 TAKE EXTENSION COURSES AT U. K.

Figures Are Exclusive of Evening and Non-Credit Courses

DEPARTMENT RENDERERS HIGH SCHOOL SERVICE

Courses for credit at the University of Kentucky during the year just closing were taken by 1,518 students in credit classes, representing that many individuals, according to a statement recently issued by the Department of University Extension. Of this number 722 took correspondence courses and 796 took extension classes. This is exclusive of evening courses and non-credit courses, including evening and non-evening courses and non-credit courses, the Department of University Extension gave instruction to 2922 different individuals during the last year.

During the second semester 23 extension courses were given by different individuals away from the university including one course given in the city of Lexington. These courses were given by: Dr. Frank T. McFarland at Ashland, Prof. W. H. Adams at Ashland, Dr. E. Adams at Covington, Prof. W. S. Webb at Covington, Dr. Jesse E. Adams at Danville, Prof. R. E. McClam at Frankfort, Dr. G. K. Brady at Harrodsburg, Prof. J. L. Horlacher at Harrodsburg, Prof. F. E. Farlow at Newport, Dr. M. Knapp at Nicholasville, Prof. B. B. McInteer at Paris, Dr. Wellington Patrick at Paris, Dr. T. T. Jones at Paris, Dr. T. T. Jones at Versailles, Dr. C. C. Ross at Williamstown, and Mary K. Duncan at Winchester.

The development of extension teaching at the university is partly a business venture. The university pays overhead salaries in the offices, but the funds for instruction are provided entirely by students. Fees collected by the department. During the year just closing the department collected $29,000.45 in fees for instruction and other miscellaneous programs, which fees were used to defray the cost of instruction.

Extension teaching at the university started in the fall of 1918. At that time James D. Moore, an extension committee of which W. W. Funkhouser was chairman, Prof. L. Dantzer, Prof. Enoch Grechan, and Prof. T. T. Jones were members of the committee which organized extension work. Wellington Patrick was made director of extension work in September, 1919. Since that time there has been a steady growth in the development of university extension work. The principal features of this have been instruction by correspondence, class instruction on the campus, a service program for high schools of the state, a service program for women's clubs, and various other miscellaneous types of service rendered by the department.

During the year just closing, the department carried on a program service to the high schools in which it reached some 25,000 different high school pupils throughout the state. It carried on a program of competitive debating throughout the state which reached more than half the high schools of the state, taking in approximately 85 per cent of the high school population.

The state is divided into 18 districts, and in these districts is carried out competitive school programs in music, debating, speaking, and a number of other activities. At the High School Week last spring there were approximately 5,000 persons in attendance including 3,500 high school pupils who took part in the various activities. Two thousand of these took part in the Kentucky High School Music Festival.

The Kentucky High School Music Festival was started five years ago. Since that time it has grown rapidly for the purpose of the program of service to the high schools of the state is to carry on a strictly educational program which would be helpful to those interested. The standard of music has been materially raised, as has also the type of public speaking. This has been particularly due to debate.

The Kentucky High School Debating League was started in 1920 and has steadily grown in importance since that time. Each year students from more than 200 high schools participate in high school debates, resulting in a final series at the University of Kentucky.

New Features Are Added to 1931 Football Program

By EDNA MARIE BELL

The football programs will be a source of interest, pep and humor as well as information this year. To begin with, they are going to be made up of a lot of humorous material, spicy jokes, funny feature columns, University stories about things that fans like to read.
The make-up of the book will be different from that of former programs. Instead of spectators knowing before each game just what the program is to be made up of, pictures of the home team, pictures of the opposing team, the home team's number and opponent's number, purchasers will get a surprise every time they buy a program.

Pennsylvania has its "Punch Bowl," Ohio State its "Sun Dial," and Dartmouth its "Jack-O-Lantern," and this year, Kentucky will have something more like one of these magazines of humor and wit to snicker over. There will be "He

Head of University Post Office Serves Long Career

By GILBERT KINGSBURY

On April 26, 1913, President Barker, then head of the Kentucky State College (now the University of Kentucky), sent for F. E. Farlow, young lady and asked her to aid the business office staff for a three-week period. Death had taken a member of the staff and the office had been hard pressed in keeping step with the business on hand. That three-week period has grown to 18 years and the young lady is still with the school.
When Miss Carrie Bean came she was an employee of the Kentucky State College. Transylvania was then known as the University of Kentucky. Neville Hall was unknown. The building was there but the students called the structure the new dormitory! White Hall was the old dorm.

HIS CRIME

The chairs were vacant, the rooms were quiet.
Everything was ready for coming of night.
The students had all gone to their homes.
A single light burned—a light in the dome.
A figure half-hidden, slipped in the room.
All was cold—and quiet as a tomb.
He felt his way along the wall,
And slowly crept down the long vaulted hall.
Slipped into a room and turned to the right.
'Twas the janitor who forgot—to turn off the light.

Football games in the past 40 years of Kentucky State history in his article, "Forty Years with the Wildcats." Several pages of pictures of former stars and old timers will be another feature in the first number.

The programs which are printed under the direction of the athletic council, are sold at the gates of the stadium by freshmen athletes and varsity basketball men. Nihil Plummer is managing editor and William Ardry is contributing editor of the publication.
These programs will prove to be interesting and enjoyable, and after reading one of them, the reader won't want to miss a single edition. Both editors and contributors are striving to make each copy bigger and funnier for those who enjoy wit and humor along with their football news.

Tilden and Cohorts Flash Form Before Local Tennis Fans

By MARVIN WACHS
Almost 2,000 students and townspeople saw William T. Tilden, II show flashes of scintillating form Wednesday afternoon in the tennis exhibition on the university courts.
Those who saw the matches can only echo the detestation of a hundred former audiences: "The best tennis player of all time." The ease with which he covered his court and turned drive after drive into well placed returns brought shouts of praise from the crowd.

Hackensmith Gives Three Reasons for Dropping Football

There will be no intramural football here in the university this year. This announcement emanates from the office of C. W. Hackensmith, director of interamural athletics. In the place of football, "Hack" will stress volleyball.

Tilden's Protege Says UK Girls Best Looking

By John St. John
There are more good looking girls in amateur ranks last week on the campus of the University of Kentucky than on the campus of any other school in the country," said dapper Bruce Barnes, Tilden's protege, when I asked his opinion of our university during his recent stay here.

Greenies Show Power In Passing Combine Against Varsity Team

By NORBERT CAMPBELL
If there are any hopes of a Southern championship brewing in the minds of this year's edition of freshman gridders, those hopes will be realized via the aerial route. The passing combination of Barney, former Ashland high school star, and Rubert, extraordinary pass snagger from Catelettsburg, has been the outstanding feature of all the scrimmages between the varsity and the freshmen so far this season.

Seen From The Press Box

By a Football Program
Kentucky football programs this year will be well worth any price the University cares to charge. They will be souvenirs for posterity. How do we know? Well, we were peeping. Prof. Niel Plummer, whose imagination was proven when he bought a Whippet, has been working on these programs since last fall.

Sign Under Shady Maple Does Not Refer To Robins or Thrushes
By JOHN M. KANE
Under the shady maple in front of Mechanical hall, there is a sign reading, "Please do not play with these birds." For these birds are of passerby during the early morning or in the evening, this sign does not refer to the robins and thrushes hopping about that portion of the campus.

not talk. However, he has such excellent table manners that he has his perch and dishes beside the dean at most of his keeper's noonday lunches.

Helping to make the group cosmopolitan are the Lories, which are small birds, deep red with black markings, and who seem to prefer to stand upside down clinging to the top of their cage. They come from Australia.

Besides the birds of the parrot family, there are many others in this group. The two small Java sparrows with their grey, sleek plumage and deep black heads; and the Cockatoos, one a Rosette and the other a white, lead color to this large birdhouse. It is interesting to have such a group of songsters on the campus, and they fit in with the cool, shady lawn in front of Mechanical hall.

They are not "just parrots," but are a number of the splendid birds of a collection belonging to Dean F. Paul Anderson.

Do you remember that grey parrot with the red tail peeking out from under her wings, which imitates bird calls so readily? Her voice is deep and clear, (as compared with men, Dean Anderson explains) and her name is Lauretta. The materialistic person will be dying to know that such birds are extremely rare, that they come from Africa, and that they often cost about a thousand dollars.

Then there is Senorita, the blue headed bird from Brazil. She was thirteen years old her last birthday and imitates the dean as he calls his airdogs. Her favorite perch is on a pine shoulder and then laugh—not behind your face as a lady should—but right to your face.

Be sure that you see the reaction of the birds to climate of the propert temperature and moisture content. When brought into the regulated office of the dean, the birds show their liking for climate regulation by singing and talking with renewed vigor.

Besides the birds seen under the tree, there are a number of others quite interesting in the collection. There is the big Red Macaw that has free reign in the office, and which seldom bothers anyone with his freedom. His name is Walka, and he has a wing spread of over 30 inches.

Little Peter Pan is a quiet small bird of the parrot type, but he does
