A WELCOMED SPIRIT

The University alumni of Franklin county are to be congratulated upon their splendid work in bringing about a closer contact of the graduate and his alma mater. Here is one alumni group who realize the one outstanding service that they are capable of adhering their university, and at the same time reap untold benefits and pleasures for themselves.

Governor Laffoon's acceptance of the invitation extended to him to attend the gala festivities of the banquet and dance, as well as the conception of the entire plan by the organization, deserves not only the wholehearted support of every person actively connected with the University, but the greatest of praise and thoughtful consideration of its merit by every University of Kentucky alumni body in existence.

Not only do they realize their duty, but also the fact that it should be done. The number of alumni of this institution is an insignificant matter when calculating its strength—it is what these sons and daughters do that foretells her power throughout the commonwealth. It is truly surprising the great number of alumni of the University that are to be found gathered in cities and towns throughout the state. It is equally surprising the little assistance they give their school as compared with what they could do for it.

The Kernel wishes the Frankfort alumni association great success upon its embarkation of the first creative work done by an alumni organization in recent years. Such spirit it among the former students of the University of Kentucky is welcomed by the entire student body, and it is hoped that other alumni clubs will follow in their footsteps with such meritorious work, and make the link of the University organization chain that much stronger. It is similar cooperation and enthusiasm on the part of every alumnus that will bring about a better University of Kentucky—one that will be capable of raising its banners proudly along with the greater educational institutions of our nation.

HUEY LONG—CENSOR

In years gone by, men of politics sought friendship of the press. They realized that without the amity of newspapers their own cause would suffer. They knew that the press is the greatest moulder of public opinion and that it exerts a tremendous influence over the average citizen.

Perhaps we are entering a new era, a modern order of things. Perhaps our statesmen are more brilliant than those of the past. Perhaps they can go unaided, to political heights.

United States Senator Huey Long of Louisiana recently declared war against the old methods of procedure, and in so doing created a furor that did not stop at the boundaries of the state. The Reveille, student publication at Louisiana State University, published articles which did not meet the approval of Senator Long; so, they were censored, as were succeeding articles. Members of the staff and other students of journalism rebelled. Twenty-six were suspended.

Freedom of the press was definitely established more than 200 years ago. Since that time no individual or faction has broken through its protective borders. It has remained an impregnable barrier to outside, selfish interests.

For two centuries it has withstood many attempts to invade the security it offers. Now, one puny man, unmindful of the several failures heretofore, is dashing his head against the rock wall.

Mr. Long has announced his colossal plans to an attentive world; Mr. Long will be a candidate for the Presidency at the next election. Mr. Long, with a half-dozen of his people, can put this country on an even keel in ten days, if some of the "mugwumps" can be gotten away from Washington.

Mr. Mr. Long evidently forgets that he numbers among his prospective voters thousands of college students; that such action on his part, in suppressing comment in one small paper, might result in his having to buck newspapers throughout the nation. If Huey Long censors one newspaper now it is only to be expected that he would try to censor all of them, providing he did reach the post of President.

Is it possible that we have among us a personage powerful enough to thrust aside the rights of independence for which bitter struggles have been waged, simply by his domineering personality and showmanship? No, not even Huey Long, alias "Kingfish" Long, alias "Hooper" Long, can do that.

OUR PARTICIPATION

Do you believe the United States can stay out of another great war? As you answer that question you are deciding for yourself and your fellow students whether this country will participate in another debacle like that of 1914.

In the last analysis it is you who will weigh the advantages and disadvantages of "making the world safe for democracy," and it is you who will make the decision. Our moneyed interests may cause a diplomatic "break" and our munition-makers may arm the other fellow just as well as ourselves, but they won't do the fighting. It is you who will do the fighting. If you want to tramp those bloody battlefields of Europe and add your blood to the sod, you can do it. If you want to throw yourself at a bayonet and in the agony of death cry to heaven "I've done my duty," you still can do it.

But have you done your duty? By accepting the responsibility of war, you make it necessary for 100,000 other students who are not fools to sacrifice their lives. It is your duty—you with college educations—to lead a group of those who may know no better to destruction.

Participation of the United States in another international conflict must not necessarily be taken for granted. If the youth of America is willing to sacrifice its generation for such unholy slaughter, it will have its chance. If, however, youth is convinced that war is unnecessary, then the United States will hesitate to enter another great war.

JEST AMONG US

The sun shines bright in my old Kentucky home—so they say.

Wonder why we didn't realize all the time that the "L" in L. S. U. stands for "Long."

We pause to give thanks, belatedly, for the wonderful concrete walks throughout the campus.

With Christmas in the air and gentle hints flying everywhere, now is the time for bringing young men to rid themselves, temporarily at least, of all encumbrances.

Scientists proudly claim to be the most observant of all persons; it is peculiar then that some of those who so style themselves would not observe the effect of their presence in classrooms.

STUDENT OPINION

As a result of the letter signed L. W. and printed in the Student Opinion column of the Kernel Friday, I have decided to write to you to inform you and the readers of the paper that not all of the students of the University feel the same way about this matter as the writer does.

I don't believe that "Bill" has the proper school spirit, or any patriotism either—or any red-blooded American manhood. When I entered this institution, I did not wish to take military training either, and it was likewise to me the entire two years in which I was forced to endure it. But toward the end of my two years' course I became imbued with the military spirit of good fellowship and comradeship which such an organization produces, if taken in the right way. Of course, narrow-minded chauvinists like you cannot see but one way, and that way because it may cause him some extra hard work or bodily discomfort.

All of us who have taken this training did so without outward murmuring, although harassed with doubts from within. I am not a militarist, far from it, and do not like to see such gross ignorance displayed at this dear old school—which was founded almost in the arms of the army.

This country needs an army to foster good feeling among the many peoples in this broad land of ours for an army is a sort of melting pot which leaves the various men into one steadfast body with a united soldier put to the wheel.

Military training brings out the best in a man. If it's there, the army will get it, one way or another. Let's all get this wonderful look on her face... She informed the clerk that there was a mouse in her room and that she wanted to get rid of it. The old-fashioned remedy was suggested.

We hear that Sigalph Bob Sherman and Tridelt Virginia Kendrick had a "little argument" the other night.

SCANDAL SNICKERINGS

By CAMERON COFFMAN

Last Tuesday night's downtown paper carried an announcement in the marriage license column that Ohio Luquet and her "Georgia Boy Friend" had applied for a license. (Sister Alice breaks forth with the statement that "It was all a farce".... We break forth with the remark, "Nertz, Alice".... People do not journey to the county clerk and pay $2.00 for a marriage license just for a laugh.

GOOD MORNING FRIENDS AND ENEMIES... It has been a long time since last Wednesday... This old city has been as quiet as the inside of Grant's tomb... So please don't begrudge the fact that we have nothing to write about... despite the fact that the "Cats took it on the chin".... The week-end at Louisville was Okay with Herbie Kay and Ernest Cummings at the best... and the Versailles alle was "keen".... and so on and on with nothing definite... So here 'tis...

The Gal With the Rose... Ann Perry is her name.... She's a Junior... A Kappa... A most congenial person, which stamps her as a personality equalled by few.

Orle, Will You LeBus Alone Now? This report that Phidiot Orle LeBus is very unhappy... It seems that he has been trying to make headway with this little "Van Meter gal from Winchester".... He is said to have tried time and time again to get a photo of his little lady... but with no success... Then Joe Schultz returns from his first date with Jessie and proudly exhibits a photo of Orle's... Just a Pow-erhouse, we think.

From Knoxville comes the report that KA DUSTY Rhodes has found a new use for a drinking fountain.

What Happened, Edna? Another Knoxville stogie informs us that many are wondering why Edna Evans did not attend the dance.

Dan Cupid Takes His Toll of Thanksgiving Victims... A courtship which began in college was recently climaxed by the marriage of Phidiot Bill Artery and Alpagam Georgianna Weeden last week... Even our faculty get themselves "hitched" now and then.

Dr. Ester Cole, political science professor, became Mrs. Harry Franklin... Several little Kentucky coeds will be sorry to hear that E. B. Brown, handsome Delt crooner of last year, took unto himself a wife last Thursday in Morton's Gap, Ky. Many other old timers will regret to hear that Kappa Georgianna Walker, former beauty queen and campus edifice, has Sing, Oh My Heart! Sing, oh my heart, of your high-roads and hills; Be proud you have gone where others have trod; Sing, oh my heart, of your meadows and streams, Be proud of the beauty you have found in them! And sing, wild heart, of nocturnal madness, Of summer moons and haunting skies; Gryto the world of mid-spring glories, Of autumnal biases and winter silence. Sing, oh my heart, of men and their folly, Of women and love, courage and death. Oh, sing, my mad heart, of the fleeting tomorrow! Be proud that you tread where no other has dared! Be proud that you've found what no other has dreamed! Sing, oh my heart, until you burst!

Let your last thin cry be a song! —LUCY JEAN ANDERSON.

To those of us who are fully aware of the fact that we are in the midst of a political upheaval and who are keenly interested in the governmental affairs of our country, a new book will prove fascinating reading: It is ex-President Herbert Clark Hoover's "The Challenge To Liberty." Mr. Hoover believes that liberty includes the rights and privileges that are the American citizen's through the Bill of Rights, his balance of his time-old freedom of conscience, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, and free utterances on all matters, the right of trial by jury, and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. He also holds that this liberty is necessary to lasting economic security. This view differs greatly from that of some future time the American people will face the "Challenge to Liberty."

William Allen White, in speaking of this book says: "The former President has written his book in the best Hoover manner with a certain passion of earnestness that amounts, by its sheer force and fire, to eloquence. Yet, he is never a phrase-maker, not in the white hot moments of his wrath at those who would cramp our liberty."

A never failing source of wonder to me is the endless and artful gift of gab all dentists possess. Not long ago I went to one who was the wisest, the most elusive, the beatniest around the business man I ever came in contact with. Armed as he was with the usual equipment of drill, air hose, and numerous other gadgets of torture, he did more damage to one of my teeth in five minutes than I ever expect old Pluto to do in ten years of practice in the lost land. All the while he was plunging into a long dissertation on "The Trident," Margaret Clarke, "The Silver, Gold, and Blue," and Mrs. Brut Halbert. "The Motto." Following the program, skits were presented by the freshmen of the two chapters.

After so long a wearying me a brief rest and I had the opportunity to vehemently demand, "How the—do you expect me to answer you with my mouth full of your hands?"
 Not so long ago I said a few words about Frank David Ross Burser and it gives me the utmost pleasure to inform you that the gentleman and freshman from Louisville has now been promoted to head announcer over at the University's extension studies of WIASA. It's fun and satisfaction to see a pre-diction fulfilled.
 A most interesting personality is that of Ken Harrison, erstwhile student who left school and decided he needed his degree, so came back for it this year. A rather unassuming fellow, somewhat older than the rest of us, you probably have seen him floating around the Engineering college. He reflects that seasoning one attains after contact with what we are pleased to call the cold world, and looks funny in glasses, but sings beautifully.
 Phil Ardery has compiled a lot of statistics for the "Bloody Breath-It" county. Jack Crain, who hails from Jackson, says it ain't so, and that it was a long time ago. However, Ardery has really gone into the subject and stands up for his side. Maybe we'll have a feud in Fayette by the residents of Breath-It and Bourbon counties, with the good brothers of Phi Delta Theta and Delta Tau Delta on either side.
 Speaking of honesty, I noticed a cartoon in a Detroit newspaper depicting two Tennessee mountaineers stalking over the hills with their shotguns, the one saying to the other, "That Roosevelt has got me wishing I had one of them jobs."

FINANCE AND CITY CLERKS TO CONVENE
 An Institute for city clerks and finance officers will be held at the University December 10, 11 and 12. The Institute is being arranged for approximately 25 city clerks and finance officers representing various cities in the state.

SHOP SIGHTS

By MARY REES LAND
 Santa Claus was in Lexington on Denton's Saturday. Since all the children were crowding up to tell him what they want, he took time to say to me just "Evening in Paris," by Bourjois, for college girls. They range from large sets filled with many articles of luxury to petit ones containing powder and perfume. If you want actually to try your eyes open wide and wider, look at the large sets arranged in a box fashioned as a library volume of blue satin with silver corners. A smaller set is in a silver box with little blue figures depicting what constitutes an evening in Paris. Silver paper monograms will be furnished if you desire. The inside of these boxes is just as interesting with its silks to feminine charm.

For the Christmas festivities, Embry has gay little dinner hats. To match the metallic bodies of your dress there are gray or gold sequin tri-cornered turbans, said by the department head to be "very smart for a young person," and there is the hat of shadow lace threaded with silver which has a brown cowbeef veil. Another is a black hand-made felt edged by a rhinestone band. Another, called "Profile," is of jet and black velvet, with a high bow in the back. Despite the jokes concerning women's passion for hats, one of these would do wonders towards putting a person in a scintillating mood.

TEAMS TO COMPETE IN NATIONAL TEST
 The live stock judging team left for Chicago last Thursday to compete in a national live stock judging contest with 23 other colleges of the United States and Canada. L. J. Horstcher has coached the team.
 The members of the team are: John Clark, Mayville; Eugene Corder, Parkville; Woodrow Coats, Russellville; Morton Henshaw, Henshaw; Albert Isham, Perryville; Jack Lynch, and Chas. Mathis, Lexington.
 The team has been training since the state fair in September, and have made trips to Ohio State University, Purdue and Illinois State University for study of this subject.

 This is the first team entered by Kentucky in a national contest since 1930, at which time the team won first prize in hog judging, second in sheep judging, and third in general live stock judging.

F. E. R. A. BEGINS IMPROVEMENT WORK
 Construction of a road and sidewalk from the south side of McVey hall to Graham avenue, the enlargement of the parking area in that section, and repairing the ceiling of the geological museum were started this week under the FERA, through an application made by Mr. M. J. Crutcher, supervisor of the department of buildings and grounds of the University.
 The roadway, to be constructed of macadam, will be forty feet wide, including the space allotted for a sidewalk adjacent to it. By the enlargement of the parking space, approximately fifty more cars can be accommodated in this section.
 The ceiling of the museum, on the second floor of the Administration building, is being plastered and painted, to repair damage done by a storm last summer.
 About 18 men have been employed for these projects.
