Tuition increase topic of Monday's hearing

By JAY BLANTON
Executive Editor

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education will hold a public hearing at UK on Monday to discuss a proposed mid-year tuition increase.

If the tuition-increase proposal were enacted, students would be required to pay $10 more in tuition next semester. UK students currently pay $706 a semester, a 4 percent increase that resulted from last year's tuition raise by CHE.

The hearing is the first of three scheduled in the state to gather student input on the issue. Other hearings are scheduled for Western Kentucky University on Sept. 24 and Ashland Community College on Sept. 28.

The tuition proposal is in response to a projected $8.8 million shortfall in the state's budget for higher education. The tuition-increase proposal would recover $1.1 million of the projected budget cuts.

Groups from UK, Eastern Kentucky University and Kentucky State University are expected to attend the hearing, which begins at 2 p.m. in the Worsham Theatre, located in the Student Center.

Terry McBrayer, vice-chairman of the CHE finance committee, will open the hearing with a brief statement. University presidents followed by student government presidents will then be allowed to speak.

Any student who wants to voice an opinion will also be allowed to speak. UK President David Roselle will present UK's position on the tuition proposal at the hearing. Ed Carter, vice president for administration, said the administration opposes the increase proposal because students can't make the financial adjustment in the middle of the year.

In addition to the tuition-increase proposal, the hearing will address a proposal to change the way tuition is set.

Tuition is now set in two ways by the CHE — a comparison with tuition at other benchmark institutions and by examining the state's per capita income. Currently, tuition rates are examined every two years by the council.

David Holton, CHE student representative, said a mid-year tuition increase would be "unprecedented," and "potentially very devastating to students."

Holton, who is a UK law student, said an increase would send a negative signal to the legislature in Frankfort which lawmakers will perceive as saying that the CHE can go to students any time funding is needed.

Legislators might think that state funding for higher education would no longer be needed, he said.

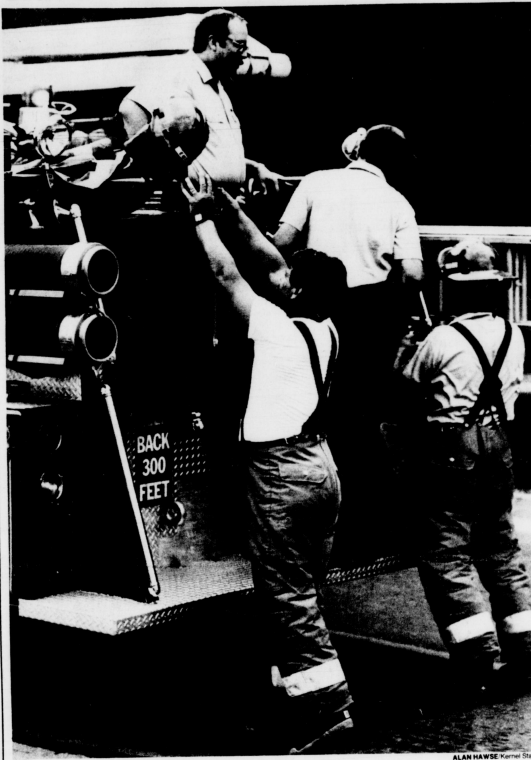

Student government representatives in this region agree.

UK Student Government Association President Cyndi Weaver said a mid-year tuition increase would be unfair because it would be "changing the rules in the middle of the game."

ESU Student Senate President David Nusz said a tuition increase would be "ridiculous," mainly because aid has already been set and financial aid couldn't be adjusted to compensate for the increase.

KSU Student Government Treasurer Matt Miller said needed funds for higher education should come from HEARING, Page 7

Couple discusses times in Vietnam

By HEIDI PROBST
Contributing Writer

"If you ever, ever have the chance to go to Southeast Asia, take it," said Lucille Boyd in a question-and-answer period after a slide show presented yesterday by the Council on Aging.

Mrs. Boyd and her husband, Robert, discussed the trials they experienced while in Singapore, Australia, India, Egypt and Malaysia.

Boyd, a former director at Lexington Community College and dean at Tory State University in Alabama, was asked to be on a team chosen to help convert the Vietnamese from French to English.

After World War II, the Vietnamese were interested in learning English and bringing in more science. Boyd said there was only one science teacher in the entire area.

The United States contributed by sending in typewriters to help modernize the education program as well as the team that Boyd was on. That team and Boyd's wife journeyed to Southeast Asia.

Mrs. Boyd gained teaching experience from a Georgian military school and a Lexington elementary school.

The Boyds began their two-year Southeast Asian teaching experience in 1969. At first, the couple was separated from one another. Boyd went to Vietnam and his wife went to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, where she taught high school for 14 months.

She described her experiences as frustrating because she only saw her husband about once a month.

She taught school in a shack in the edge of the jungle. Her students would go on rattlesnake and cobra safaries for the weekend. She said she had fears they would not return.

Mrs. Boyd said she was harassed on her way home from school one night by a Vietnamese because she was an American woman. She described Malaysia as "very hot" and said she got sick one evening from dehydration.

But the situation got better. Mrs. Boyd said she lived a plush life which helped ease her frustrations. "Kuala Lumpur is the fastest growing city in the world," the teacher said. "The Malades may own it, but the Chinese run it."

She described the Malades as reserved and the Chinese as very friendly and willing to learn.

Boyd didn't describe his beginning experience as a pleasurable one. He said he heard gunfire every night but knew he was in no harm.

Sanders addresses UK GOPs

By CA DUANE BONIFER
Associate Editor

Ron Sanders, Republican nominee for Kentucky secretary of state, is wondering when Kentuckians are going to get excited about the situation the state is in.

Kentucky has some of the "best workers in the world," the Madisonville businessman said, but the state's economic situation is one of the worst in the nation.

"When are we going to get excited about the situation this state is in," Sanders told about 45 people in 228 Student Center last night, most of them members of the UK College Republicans.

One of the reasons the state is in such poor economic shape is because "we have had the same party (Democratic) in total control for the last 16 years," Sanders said.

"We're losing ground because of them," he said.

Sanders, president of Emerald Energy Corp., said he could be making more money running his company instead of running for political office.

"I could be very comfortable running my business rather than being out on the road adding premature gray hairs to my head," he said.

What made him decide to run for secretary of state, Sanders said, was that the state has had too many self-serving officials in Frankfort instead of statesmen.

"For too long we've had people saying, 'What can politics do for me?'" he said.

Although Kentucky's secretary of state does not have the power or jurisdiction of some higher state executive offices, Sanders said there are several things he can do to improve the state's condition.

Kentucky's political system, he said, is only open to insiders or the wealthy. In order to make it "fair for everyone," Sanders said an open primary needs to be implemented.

Kentucky's poor business climate also needs to be improved, he said, including making Frankfort an environment of "pro-business."

"Too many of our skilled workers are leaving the state and what we're left with is high school drop outs," he said.

There also needs to be more trust in state government, Sanders said, and the only way that can be done is by putting people in office who represent the same moral standards he does — honesty and hard work.

"I can promise you three things if I'm elected," he said. "I won't tell you any lies, I will not steal from you and I will work hard."

Sanders' opponent in the fall election is former Jefferson County Judge/Executive Brehmer Ehrler. "If I didn't think I had a long shot I wouldn't be in this race," Sanders said. "I think (Ehrler) is a nice fella, but I think he ought to be sitting out in his boat fishing rather than running for secretary of state."

Fraternities gain pledges, patrol parties

Frats have banner rush

By EVAN SILVERSTEIN
Staff Writer

UK's 23 fraternities have reported a banner year for rush as many fraternities doubled the number of pledges over last year.

About 3,000 students participated in the rush, which was held Aug. 24-30, said Bob Dunn, president of the Interfraternity Council.

"In my opinion and everyone's, rush went really well. The people that were coming through were really high on the greek system," Dunn said.

IFC vice president Chris Chase said rush was a learning experience for freshmen.

"Freshmen have learned that they really can benefit from joining a fraternity. They found that they can get more from their college experience if they go greek," he said.

Although some houses did not experience an increase in numbers, most did, according to the fraternity system's governing board, the IFC. Many houses averaged around 25-30 pledges at the end of rush.

Dunn attributes the rise in rushes primarily to a few new procedures enacted this semester.

A colored rush brochure which the IFC sent during the summer to all incoming freshmen was a major reason for increased numbers in rushes, Dunn said the brochure consisted of a fraternity row map and stressed scholarship, brotherhood, community service, athletics and leadership, made the incoming freshmen more aware of the greek system and also helped to dispel the "animal house" image.

"It's the image you are always fighting," Dunn said. "It has become a label somewhat. One of the main objects of the brochure pointed out the other aspects. We tried to stress community service, brotherhood and athletics, he said, adding, "I think we were successful in doing so."

Pledges of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity performed the Rou-Rah-Rega, the chapter's traditional chant, yesterday afternoon.

Dunn said the first annual Casino night, held Aug. 23, (the night before rush started), was another major factor in attracting freshmen.

Each fraternity had their own gambling table. Blackjack, poker and craps table were common sights. The event drew a standing-room only crowd in the Student Center Ballroom.

"When you have something like that so close to rush it makes an impact," Dunn said.

A new orientation program, held the day rush started, educated freshmen about greek life.

learned "that they can develop their interpersonal skills and sharpen their academic potential," said Chase, who also coordinated the orientation.

This year's rush was the first time freshmen were required to pay a pre-registration fee. A potential rusher had to pay a $10 registration fee prior to rush week. If an individual decided to enter rush late, a $15 fee was required after rush.

This was a catalyst in helping freshmen deciding for or against the greek system, Dunn said. "If you have a fee to send in, then you have to make a decision," Dunn said.

Around 300 freshmen registered to attend rush during the summer.

Palm said he thinks the questionnaire IFC included with the brochure helped the IFC in planning the fall rush. Palm also said the questionnaire will play a vital role in future rushes because it helps the IFC know what people are looking for.

IFC sets up new enforcement rules

By EVAN SILVERSTEIN
Staff Writer

The Interfraternity Council recently changed its policy on alcohol enforcement, calling for a board of six fraternity members to patrol chapter parties.

The six-member committee will run on a rotational schedule while checking fraternity parties for proper alcohol procedures, such as the checking of greek IDs, denial of undrugged drinkers and checking guests.

The new policy comes as a continuation in changes made last spring along alcohol guidelines. The IFC acts as the governing body for all fraternities.

This rotational schedule of patrolling freshmen parties was previously done by IFC representatives.

The six-member committee is made up of representatives from each of the six selected chapters. These chapters, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Nu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Farm House and Alpha Gamma Rho, will check party registration, an idea passed last year in the wake of greater concern by chapters over libel.

The host chapter is required to provide information about its party, the invited fraternities and sororities and the party theme to the committee by 4 p.m. Wednesday prior to the party.

Any fraternity not registering their party by 4 p.m. will be held responsible and fined. Fines can range from $1 to $10 per member. Any chapter wishing to protest may appeal before the judicial board.

Raising tuition

I am David Holton, a law student at the University of Kentucky and the student representative on the Council on Higher Education.

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage students, parents and other interested parties in the future of higher education in Kentucky to attend a public hearing on potential increases in tuition rates. A hearing will be held at 2 p.m. Sept. 21 in the Worsham Theater in the Student Center addition on UK's campus.

Members of the Council's finance committee will be in attendance to hear the comments of interested parties on two important issues: a potential increase in tuition for the 1988 spring semester; and potentially revising the Council's current tuition-setting policy for the next two years. Due to state budget cuts in higher education's appropriations ($9.4 million in operating funds in this year), the Council is considering increasing tuition substantially to offset these reductions.

The Council on Higher Education is directed by statute to establish tuition rates for Kentucky's public community colleges and universities.

The current tuition setting provides for the maintenance of tuition levels for Kentucky residents at a reasonable percentage of per capita personal income. This policy has enabled the Council to keep tuition relatively low and affordable for Kentuckians. There is the potential that this policy may be abandoned.

Final decisions concerning the tuition rates and policy will be made at a future meeting of the Council's finance committee. These hearings and your participation will play an important part in that decision-making process. Therefore, I encourage everyone interested in this issue and the furthering of quality higher education in Kentucky to attend this hearing.

David L. Holton II is the student representative on the Council on Higher Education.

Yes, RFL

The real tragedy of the Sept. 14 editorial calling for Radio Free Lexington to demonstrate if it has student support, is that the Kentucky Kernel appears to have withdrawn its support from an idea whose time will eventually come.

"Methinks the Kernel doth protest too much!" It is rationally possible that the editors and the staff of the Kernel view a student run radio station as competition they don't want.

Let's separate the two issues here, wanting a radio station and funding one. In all probability if I asked the average UK student do you want or care to have a student-run radio station, they probably could find little enough to object to. They would either respond yes or "I don't care."

Funding, however, is a different matter, and it's difficult no matter how noble the cause. If I ask the average UK student if they want to pay an extra dollar for something, let alone a radio station, the answer would probably be negative.

But then, is there a demand for a student newspaper on this campus? If I gave you the choice of listening 24 hours a day to some good tunes or reading an article about condoms in residence hall restrooms — which would you prefer?

Hey, bye-bye newspaper. In the spirit of fairness the Kernel should ask students if they want to give an extra dollar per semester to keep their newspaper in business (scary, huh?).

Perhaps then the Kernel would realize that their position, as well as unborn RFL's, are one in the same.

Vanderbilt University (also an SEC school) has joined their respective newspaper and radio station funding under one roof as Vanderbilt Communications Inc. (or some such derivative). The important thing is that it is a system that works.

Just what kind of proof that students want a station is the Kernel calling for? Demonstrations, crowds of football spectator proportions?

The turnout last week of over 100 radio enthusiasts was probably larger than the Kernel's entire staff. They were students of all musical tastes with an earnest desire to make radio a happenin' thing. It is the responsibility of the Kernel to help in the birth of her little unborn sister RFL. Together they can and will do great things for the University of Kentucky.

J. Boyd is an arts and sciences graduate student.

Royal Crescent Mob to play Sunday in support of WRFL

Royal Crescent Mob is currently touring the U.S. Sunday, they will bring their funk/soul blend of and Canada, supported by their LP, "Omeria."

By TIM FOGLE

David Ellison, lead singer and harmonica player for the Royal Crescent Mob, who will appear on campus Sunday, cites some strange influences. James Brown and Led Zeppelin are counted among this disparate group.

But a man from Columbus held more sway than any. When Ellison grew up, he cut grass to earn soda pop money. Luckily, or unluckily, one of his customers was hard blues funkster, Sugar Bonner. Bonner, lead guitarist for the regional funk band Ohio Players, injected the sharp edge that controls Ellison and the Mob. "It was great hanging around his house. I couldn't play anything at the time. I didn't start playing harmonica until college, but just being there was great," Ellison said.

"B just stands for B, that's it," Ellison said. "Betty Crocker doesn't tell anyone what's in the brownies and we don't tell what B stands for. No, actually his parents stuttered and when it was time to fill in the birth certificate they kept saying, 'B-b-b,' so the people at the hospital gave up and just typed in B." After their triumph in Louisville, they quickly dubbed themselves The Royal Crescent Mob. After several changes and alterations ("we went through a boatload of drummers, we just couldn't find anybody to satisfy us," Ellison said) the band developed into its present form — Ellison, B, Chichester and Carlton Smith on drums. "Things really jelled after Carlton came in," Smith was a child actor and veteran of '60s classics "Julia" and "Matt Helm." "He really wasn't much of an actor," Ellison said. "When the stars of the show would have company, Carlton would be their kid — about 10 seconds on screen."

The Mob has been touring nearly nonstop since June, pushing their new album "Omeria." ("Omeria" is the Italian mafia vow of silence. New mobsters kiss the hand of the godfather and promise to not reveal the secrets of the underworld.)

"We've only had about 15 days off since June," said Ellison. "We've been all over the country, headlining probably 75 percent of the time. We opened for the Replacements on a few dates, but we feel we can hold our own." Omeria feels heavily on its influences, particularly James Brown and Sugar Bonner.

"I wrote 'Love and Tunafish' (a James Brown sound-alike) on a tour bus," Ellison said. "I had this 90-minute Brown tape and it just came to me, words and music. On this tour we've been doing mostly original stuff, but I can read the crowds pretty well and sometimes I'll signal the band to play a cover or something when it strikes me."

Louisville's Fancy Pants will open the concert Sunday. It is being sponsored by WRFL as a part of its Alternative Music Week.

THE LONESOME JUBILEE
John Cougar Mellencamp
Mercury (PolyGram Records)

With The Lonesome Jubilee, Mellencamp plunges headfirst into a collection of protest songs and domestic lamentations that show him to be anything but a visionary. Instead, he has brought together a collection of songs that exhibit nothing but smalltown tunnel vision. In the contest of Scarecrow and Uh-huh, Jubilee is decidedly regressive.

Even Bruce Springsteen leaves his characters with the chance that comes from the struggle. When we last see the narrator of "Thunder Road," he is pulling out of a "town full of losers."

Most of the 10 songs on Jubilee swell on stagnant lives that never play themselves out with any form of nobility. Mellencamp closes off all of the escape routes, leaving his characters without hope. — Erik Reece

Door to Door, the first Cars album in 3 1/2 years, is also the first produced by front man Ric Ocasek.

Containing 11 songs, it is an eclectic mix of old and new material that somewhat abandons the typical Cars sound. "The first song on the album, 'Leave or Stay,' and the last song on the first side, 'Ta Ta Wayo Wayo,' were recorded while the Cars were still a club band.

"Double Trouble" and "Strap Me In" provide a heavy guitar edge while breaking somewhat from the band's synth-based mold. — Steve Bragg

"The Fourth Protocol" is an espionage thriller starring Michael Caine as a British secret agent caught in a cat-and-mouse game with Russian spy Pierce Brosnan, whose mission is to detonate a nuclear weapon in England.

Caine is superb as the talented, yet weary, super-spy who can't stay out of trouble. Brosnan and his character are the real disappointment of course, a weak character can always be overcome by a strong storyline and lightning-quick pacing. Unfortunately, "The Fourth Protocol" misses the mark here. Too every plot detail unfolds with the immediacy of drying paint.

Who can stop who, that is the question

By JIM WHITE

Tomorrow at Commonwealth Stadium the two top offenses in the nation will be displayed.

You heard it right. The top two yardage machines in the nation after week No. 1 are the Big 10's Indiana and then Kentucky.

The Hoosiers racked up 539 yards in total offense in a 35-13 win over Rice last weekend. The Wildcats were a close second with 530 yards after thrashing Utah State 41-0.

"Somebody told me we had the second-ranked offense in the nation and then I found out that Indiana was No. 1," said UK coach Jerry Claiborne. "That's really a shock for a lot of people to see Kentucky and Indiana one and two."

But that's not all. On the other side of the ball, UK's defense, which held the Aggies to a meager 153 total yards and zero points in the season opener, was the nation's best in scoring defense.

"That was exactly what we needed," said UK linebacker Jeff Kremer. "It gave a lot of confidence to the guys. We just played well."

Claiborne said his defense is going to have to repeat last week's effort against Indiana.

"If we're going to score some points, we got to keep their offense on the sidelines," Claiborne said. "We got to control the football and keep their offense on the bench."

One person Claiborne would like to see riding the pine for most of the afternoon is Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell.

"Schnell is truly outstanding," Claiborne said. "He looks like he's automatic."

Against Rice, the junior ran for one touchdown and passed for two more. He was 12 of 16 in passing last week, throwing for 224 yards.

"Schnell got hurt, had surgery but he made good steady improvement," said Indiana coach Bill Mallory. "He's my quarterback and he's a player with good potential."

Indiana's other top offensive player is 6-foot, 205-pound tailback Anthony Thompson.

"He is a young man who has just got better and better," Mallory said. "He's got some niftiness to him. He's got some good speed and we can throw the ball to him."

"That's really a shock for a lot of people to see Kentucky and Indiana one and two."

Jerry Claiborne
UK football coach

Thompson rushed for 105 yards on 25 carries against the Rice Owls. It was his sixth straight game with more than 100 yards rushing.

"We want to keep the score as low as we can keep it," said UK defensive back David Johnson. "(Thompson) is a good back. We expect him to be one of the better runners we face this year."

Claiborne said Thompson has some of the qualities of UK tailback Mark Higgs, who racked up 185 yards and two touchdowns last week, but on a larger scale.

"Thompson is like a big Mark Higgs," Claiborne said. "He has excellent speed and the balance and quickness Mark has, but he's bigger."

In the opener, UK didn't have much trouble at all from the backfield. Utah State had 12 third-down conversion opportunities. They didn't make one.

"You just don't go through many games where a team doesn't make a third-down conversion," Claiborne said. "They only had the ball 13 times and didn't have a drive of eight plays or more."

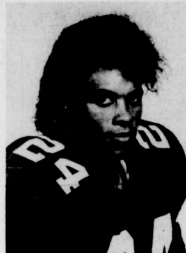

Utah State, however, is not exactly known to be an offensive powerhouse. In 1986, the Aggies finished the season dead last in the nation in total offense.

The UK defense realizes the opponent this Saturday will be a little more challenging.

"We know what we got to go out and accomplish," Kremer said. "There's no big heads, nobody is walking on the moon. Indiana has got a heck of a team. We know that."

Indiana's defense has had its problems in the past, Mallory said, but they're not to be ignored, not with seven seniors returning.

"I told our players don't be stand-

This season, the Cats won't have to be haunted by an opening game loss as they are accustomed to. Instead they are hoping the feeling of a 41-point win will carry over to this week.

"I hope the first game keeps rubbing off on the next 10," said UK center Brad Myers. "It feels a lot different. It makes all the difference in the world."

"In the past, sometimes we looked too far ahead and lost our focus," said UK defensive tackle Dermontti Dawson. "This year we're just looking one game at a time. That's been our motto."

Runners set

Wildcat cross country teams ready to sprint into season

By TOM SPALDING
Contributing Writer

After months of intense training that included ten mile runs, long sprints and heavy intervals, the UK cross country runners are a little anxious to hear that first starting gun.

"We're tired of running against each other," Richard Ede said. "We want the season to begin."

Ede will get his wish tomorrow morning. The UK men's and women's teams will begin their season at the Kentucky Horse Park in the annual Kentucky Invitational.

The field for the meet will consist of 19 men's and 17 women's teams including Big Ten powers Purdue, Michigan and Indiana. Races begin at 8:45 a.m.

Wildcat coach Don Weber said this year's Invitational will be UK's biggest meets ever because of the increased size of the field.

"There will also be three Canadian teams," Weber said. "They wouldn't travel this far unless they felt there was some pretty good competition in the meet."

Last year, the UK women's team dominated the race by placing eight runners in the top 20 to win convincingly. The men placed eighth, but Weber is expecting more tomorrow.

"This year should be different," Weber said. "If we can stay healthy, we should have the best men's team in two decades."

Weber's statements are strong, but he has the background to know what he's talking about. In his four years as coach at UK, he has produced athletes who have earned All-American honors 22 times, including two national champions.

Weber said for the men's team to go anywhere this year, they are going to have to count on a big year from their All-American Ede.

The junior from England was the Southeastern Conference's best runner in 1986. He captured the cross country title by 16 seconds over his closest competitor.

"Richard right now has to be one of the top 15 contenders for the NCAA title," UK assistant coach Gene Weiss said.

Ede feels ready to go. And he thinks his teammates are ready to follow his spikes.

"Physically I'm in the best shape I've ever been," he said. "But so is the rest of the team."

Benny McIntosh, a junior from Auburn, New York, appears to have anchored down the No. 2 spot on the team and Weber believes he'll be a possible all-conference candidate.

McIntosh will be pushed by sophomore Bob Whelan and junior Joe Butler from Louisville. Weber said both have improved tremendously since their freshman year at Kentucky.

Jay Birindelli, another junior, caps off what should be a tough top five. With no seniors in scoring spots, Weber has the foundation for a strong future. But he only has the present on his mind.

"In past years, Kentucky has not been in the upper division," Weber said. "This year, we have a shot."

The men are trying to climb into the upper echelons of the SEC. The women are already there.

"They've been one of the top (teams) in the country for the past couple of years," said Weber.

The coach believes there's no reason that that shouldn't continue. The Cats return three of their top five runners from last year's squad which finished fourth in the NCAA Championship Meet.

Heading up the powerful lineup is junior Lisa Breiding, a two-time All-American from Louisville, Ohio. Last year, Lisa paced the Cats to victory in the UK Invitational with a strong third-place finish.

Breiding will not be able to stop and rest on her laurels. Not when she has two more All-Americans hot on her heels.

RICHARD EDE

LISA BREIDING

Patricia Padorno, a junior from Madrid, Spain, and two-time All-American junior Sherry Hoover, will be pushing Breiding Hoover, will be chosen as UK's Female Athlete of the Year as a freshman.

The women's team lost one senior from last year's team, Audrey Pierce from New York. UK has also lost junior Kim Hawkins for the season with an injury. But talent is waiting in the wings.

Weber is counting on freshman Denise Bushallow from Auburn, New York, to work her way into the squad's top five.

If she can't make it, Weber has a flock of other fleet-footed women to challenge for a top spot. Three are juniors Lynn Segret and Deanne Horn, and sophomore Donna Combs.

UK announces three hoop scrimmage dates

Staff report

Sure, the weather is still hot and the football season just one game old. But at UK you can already here the distant sound of a bouncing basketball.

Yesterday, Wildcat coach Eddie Sutton called a press conference to announce three of the four scheduled dates for the pre-season Blue-White scrimmages.

The opening intra-squad game will be at Louisville's Freedom Hall on Tuesday, Nov. 5. Tickets are $5 reserved and $3 general admission.

Two nights later on Nov. 7, UK will make its premiere at Rupp Arena with ticket prices remaining the same.

For the first time, the Wildcats will play a scrimmage game outside of the state. Cincinnati, Ohio, will host the third game at Riverfront Coliseum on Nov. 12th.

Ticket prices for the Queen City contest will be a bit steeper — $15 for reserved seats and $7 reserved. But Coliseum president Bill Barnhill is confident the prices will not keep fans away.

"Kentucky basketball influence extends in many directions, not the least, the Greater Cincinnati area," Barnhill said. "Initial response is that the event will be a sell-out — or close."

The site of the fourth scrimmage has not been decided upon.

UK sports information director Brad Davis said the game will be played in the eastern part of the state.

All the games are being sponsored by Diet Coke, with co-sponsors in each city. Proceeds go to the UK Athletics Association. In the last four years, the Blue-White games have raised $70,000.

A change has been made this year with three of the games being played at major sporting arenas. In years past, the idea was to take the Cats to parts of the state where fans don't have a good chance to see them. But Sutton said the small towns will not be forgotten.

"We're not going to discriminate the little towns," Sutton said. "We plan to return there with Blue-White games in the future because they've been the grass roots of UK basketball."

The gyms have gotten a lot bigger but the purpose of the scrimmage games has remained the same.

"It gives us a game-like condition to play in and it's a good way for the coaching staff to evaluate the players," Sutton said. "You get to see how they perform in front of 19,000 or 24,000 people. That sometimes is a good indication of what a young man can do and if he's ready for major college basketball."

UK rugby club eyes clock, wants revenge

By TOM SPALDING
Contributing Writer

After whipping up on Western Kentucky University in its season opener last Saturday, you'd think the UK rugby team would celebrate all week long. Think again.

Kentucky has been practicing and preparing both mentally and physically for what should be its toughest match of the year.

The Wildcats will have revenge on their minds when they take the field tomorrow at Bowling Green, Ohio. Divots of grass should be flying on the field. Emotions are running high. It was Bowling Green that ended Kentucky's Cinderella season last year in the semifinals of the Midwest Region.

The Cats compiled impressive numbers last year despite being unranked at the start of the season. They rumbled through their regular season with a 12-1 record and then captured the Southeastern Conference Tournament at Athens, Ga.

From there, UK went on to take the Indiana regionals and claim a spot in the Midwest Region. The winner of that tournament would earn a spot in the "Final Four" of rugby in Southern California.

The Cats swept through three games to earn a spot in the semifinals. Then came Bowling Green.

Trailing by one goal, 25-24, Bowling Green drove down the field and scored. With that, the official ended the game. The Kentucky players were stunned. But not because of the game clock. Butler and the other Cats felt that the official allowed the game to go eight minutes over.

Hearing to discuss tuition increase from somewhere else besides students' pockets.

However, changing the formula by which tuition is set is potentially more dangerous than a mid-year increase because of the long-term effect it would have on students, Holton said.

One person particularly close to the current way of setting tuition is Carter. He formulated it.
The current formula for setting tuition is a "shared responsibility" because it takes into consideration other institutions and per capita income, Carter said.

would not be complaint about a possible mid-year increase in tuition.
Students can't assume an increase won't happen, he said. Students "have to be aggressive" and attend the hearings.
