LCC poll shows support for war

Survey: Political science professor uses poll to teach; results favor Bush, local ownership of water company

In more than 30 years of conducting public opinion polls, Lexington Community College professor Tim Cantrell has not seen a president with a higher approval rating than George W Bush.

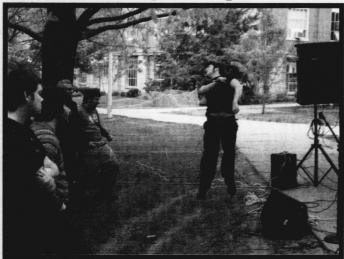

Of the 1,987 area voters contacted by students in Cantrell's political science classes at LCC, 33 percent said they feel Bush has done an "outstanding" job as pres-ernment ownership of the water company, upcoming state elections and other hothout not pics.

"It is president is the highest anyone has ever been rated," said Cantrell, whose classes have been doing simil ar surveys at LCC for the past 15 years.

The telephone survey, conducted from April 947, solicited the opinions of individuals who had voted in eight of the previous 12 elections and asked their opinions on the war in Iraq, gov-

Policing the campus

Art studio senior Mike Connelly, of the Lexington band Hair Police, jumps up in the air while performing on the lawn in front of WRFL. On the left, sociology freshman Amir Akhlaghi, wearing a green T-shirt with the band's name on it, yells along. "I'm the biggest fan," he said.

The band was performing as part of WRFL's annual Outdoor series, station manager Ben Allen said. Performances are furnsday from noon to 1 p.m. Hair Police was the second performance of the spring Outdoor series. Other performers will include May I: Mad Shadows; May 8: The Murders; May 15: The Elephants; May 22: The Crunchies.

Allen said that WRFL may extend the series further into the summer.

Candidate may argue SG election in court

Still fighting: After meeting with dean of students about concerns, Hutchinson says he's not satisfied

By Jake McDonald

As Student Government President Rachel Watts and Vice President Matt Rippetoe were sworn into their offices last night, dispute over the election that placed them in their positions was still being debated.

Thursday viewful candidate David Hutchinson met Thursday viewful candidate and the concern over the election and request an investigation into it. Hutchinson cited the 24 election claims against Watts and Rippetoe that were not heard by the SG Supreme Court or the SG Board of Claims as justification for meeting with the administration.

Hutchinson said that Hazard was not as helpful as he had hoped.

"Tm a little frustrated," he said. "It's a waste of time tog othrough the administration. (Hazard) said he doesn't know if I'm sour grapes or if student government is completely corrupt. I'm not sure if he's doing his job, but at least he's being cooperative.

Communities put together to enhance undergrad life

Common interests: Students can now choose from service, religious, fine arts living environments

Students looking for a change from normal dorm life now have a few more options open to them.

Residence Life has created 11 Learning Communities that will group students with common interests together.

UK has six communities that have been in existence for several years, but with the creation of five new ones, administrators hope more students will get involved.

"We hope to promote the new communities and make sure students know about the current programs that are place." said Jim Wims, the student services director for Residence Life.

Ky. election finance numbers released

Attorney general candidates' efforts have made for an expensive race, mostly due to Democrats

FRANKFORT — Candidates for governor and other statewide constitutional offices have raised $11.4 million and spent more than $8.6 million, according to new campaign finance reports.

Those running for offices other than governor filed their first campaign finance reports of the season this week. Gubernatorial candidates have through today to file an updated batch of reports with the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance. The primary election is May 20.

Aside from the race for governor — which has eight candidates, four from each major party — the race for attorney general has shaped up as the most expensive.

Six candidates in the race have gathered $768.782 — more than half of it by Democrat Greg Stumbo — and spent $333.16. Stumbo and his two Democratic rivals account for the lion's share of fund raising. Three Republicans have mustered just over $25.000.

Stumbo. majority leader of the Kentucky House, report-draising $88.185. He reported spending $131.172.

Former Attorney General Chris Gorman, who is trying to regain the office he held from 1992 to 1996, raised nearly $211.000 and spent about $145.000. The third Democrat in the race, state Auditor Ed Hatchett, had raised $127.000 and spent $40.000.

State Treasurer Jonathan Miller, the only constitutional officer eligible to seek re-election this year, has topped $400.000 in fund raising. His opponent, Kenton County Commissioner Adam Koenig, reported less than $12,000. Neither has a rimary opponent.

The lone Republican candidate, Trey Grayson, has raised $12.000 without a primary opponents with $807.000 raised and $47,000 spent.

On the Republican side, Osi Onyekwuluje of Bowling Green reported raising $41,000 and spending about $33,000.

Totals for the state's gubernatorial race fluctuate, as candidates file 24-hour reports with the registry every day. They have until today to file their next round of campaign finance reports.

n the name of "diversity" and "tolerance," schools are systematically violating the rights of students who follow Jesus. Are you or a campus Christian group to which you belong being singled out for unfair treatment? The answer

- Restricts where or when your group can meet or engage in expressive activities, but places no such limitations on other groups that, for instance, advocate radical feminism or abortion.
- Enforces a speech code that limits you or your group's right to speak disapprovingly of extramarital sexual, homosexual, or other behaviors.
- Restricts how or where your group can advertise (i.e. speech zones), or censors the ads' contentbut places no such requirements on other student
- Mandates "diversity training" that attempts to force you to affirm behavior or viewpoints that violate your faith or conscience.
- Applies one set of rules for Christian groups seeking access to the student fee funding pool, and other rules for secular student organizations.

Digital Donatello: Expo gives chance to see 'nontraditional' forms of art

His creative canvas is a computer screen, his brush is a mouse and instead of paint, he uses pixels.

For graphic design senior Aaron Cuker, computer generated artwork provides an infinite source for his artistic

UK students and others will have the opportunity to experience Cuker's work all through next week as the Rasdall Gallery in the Student Center hosts Cuker's graphic design exposition "Zero."

"The show is going to be great way for anybody, art fan or not, to experience nontraditional forms of art," Cuker said.

Aside from commissioned work, Cuker will also show original images thematically based on America's involvement in the Middle East.

"Some of the pieces are my response to the war in Iraq," he said.
"People can interpret them however they want to."

"Zero' will showcase more than 30 images, Cuker said. Some will be print-outs hanging on the wall and some will be displayed in their original form—on a computer screen.

Along with showing his artwork to the public, Cuker hopes to raise awareness about the importance of graphic design in our culture.

"People don't understand how important graphic design is. It's everywhere."Cuker said.

Cuker will be one of the last students at UK to graduate with a degree in graphic design. this year was the last to choose the field as a major. Perhaps, Cuker said, his show will may convince the administration to consider bringing back the graphic design more option from 5 to 8 pm. Friday, May 2, with food and entertainment by Club Dub.

And they delivered, bringing Ben Folds, Indigo Girls, Ani DiFranco and Wilco to UK already. They spent weeks writing proposals, talking to agents, promoting the shows. The arts administration students got first-hand experience in bringing national acts to Lexington. They'll use the skills they learned to enrich the culture of their communities in the future

The Singletary Center staff is not the only organization working to bring entertainment and culture to the campus. ## Modern prisons have become country clubs

By Scott Darnell

Moral dilemmas exist throughout the political world, and their intense nature consistently render any positive solution or compromise virtually impossible. Capital punishment is a rigorous moral epate that has, for years, left two groups of individuals pitted against one another; it's a political subject that most everyone would enjoy seeing some sort of solution to, or at most, some sort of way to avoid such a divisive moral encounter.

When people argue for the death penalty, most argue that it assuredly keeps heinous criminals from ever having the chance to creep back onto our streets [usually a result of not having to serve the entirety of he long sentences they're given] and that it ensures that this nation's taxpayers won't have to dole out more and more money each year supporting more and more terrible criminals for more and more lifetimes.

Whether the death penalty is a deterrent is an open question — there is very convincing evidence on each side, but the argument must be disregarded as largely inconclusive.

And, those few that argue revenge or retribution as a justification for the death penalty are understandably feeding off of hurt emotions, but creating an argument that lacks both any sound democratic basis and validity.

an argument that lacks both any sound democratic basis and validity.

Let's stick to the fact that people don't like to pay great taxes to keep violent criminals alive in our prison system and they want to do what they can to ensure that murderers don't roam our streets. Where, then, does the crux of the debate over capital punishment lie and isn't there an easy way to wid the moral debate that inherently comes with killing someone else? It lies with prison reform, an avenue of political action that possesses the possibility of compromise and which can entirely negate our argument over the death penalty.

Drug war an unnecessary drain on troubled budget

With the conflict in Iraq all but over, the time has come to shift our attention to another ongoing war, this time within our own borders. Since birth, our generation has been told of the horrors of drug use. Surely everyone remembers the "This is your brain ... this is your brain on drugs" commercials from years past. Some of us even had D.A.R.E. in elementary school, where we were warned of all of the bad things that would result from drug use.

of the bad things that would result from drug use.

At the time, such things worked for the majority of us, and we entered our teenage years scared of drug use — scared of the criminality of the act, and scared of the dire consequences that were sure to follow any use of any drug. But now we've grown up. And 99 percent of us have probably either used drugs or been around when someone else did.

Personally, I have smoked marijuana in the past. It did not lead me down the path to "harder" drugs, as some claim it inevitably does. I've never even had the urge to try "hard" drugs such as cocaine, heroin or meth. I am also not homeless, nor have I been arrested, two other alleged consequences of drug use. I smoked marijuana willingly, I did not become addicted, and I gave it up willingly. I'm not proud of my past use of marijuana, but I'm not necessarily ashamed of it.

And why should I be? Why shouldn't I, or anyone else for that matter, be able to come home and smoke marijuana, provided that it is in fact done at home, and there is no driving afterward? Anyone over 21 can go and buy a case of beer and driving, it not more so. The long-term effects aren't nearly as bad as with long-term use of alcohol or tobacco.

But you'll never see or hear of a scientific study that says marijuana really isn't all that harmful.

You will, however, hear candidates in every election clamor on and on about wasteful government spending, You want to see some really staggering numbers on government waste, digest these figures. So far this year, the government has spent more than 86 billion on the "war on drugs." At this rate, $19.2 billion will be spent this year by the federal another $20 billion.

Wouldn't it be better if the "war on drugs" didn't exist?

The $40 billion spent by the federal and state governments could be spent elsewhere, or put toward tax cuts. Perhaps Kentucky would not have to cut funds going to UK, as the state would save many millions of dollars from not pursuing a massive campaign against marijuana growers. Better still, if drugs are legalized, they could be easily soft in specialty stores and taxed, much like cigarettes are now. The tax money work as the worked in the Netherlands, where the addiction rate is much less than in the United States.
