Kick snaps UK losing streak

By Chris Easterling
Sports Editor

UK's two-game losing streak came to an end Saturday night, thanks to the leg of Brian Johnson.

Johnson, a sophomore, booted a 26-yard field goal with only 14 seconds remaining to give the Cats a 3-0 win over Indiana in front of 40,500 rain-drenched fans at Commonwealth Stadium.

"Being a kicker, you get used to the fact that you'll either be a hero or the goat," Johnson said.

"Going in for the kick, I was totally focused. I knew how important it was. I just had to do my part."

UK Coach Bill Curry said that he didn't try to put any pressure on Johnson before he went out to kick the game-winner.

"We were telling jokes," Curry said. "Brian came over and I said 'You know any good jokes.' I really thought he was going to pass out. He just said, 'Coach, this is good as gold.'"

It was the second consecutive year that UK (1-2) prevented a 0-3 start with a win over the Hoosiers (2-1). Last year, the Cats reclaimed the "Bourbon Barrel" with a 17-10 win in Bloomington.

The Cats should enjoy the win as long as possible, considering they will travel to Gainesville to face the top-ranked team in the country in Florida. The Gators beat Tennessee 35-29 last week in Knoxville.

Senior linebacker Lamont Smith helped put the Cats in position for the game-winner when he intercepted a Chris Dittie pass at the UK 45-yard line, and returned it 15 yards to the IU 40 with 2:08 remaining in the game.

"When I was dropping back," Smith said, "I saw the quarterback, read his shoulders, felt the receiver coming in and caught it."

The interception must have inspired the UK coaching staff to take a gamble in their play calling.

After Michael Dales gained one yard off right tackle, quarterback Tim Couch and Dales appeared to run the option left on the next play.

But that was where Indiana, and most everyone else in Commonwealth were wrong. Instead of pitching it to the running back, the ball went to wide receiver Quentin McCord running to the right on the reverse.

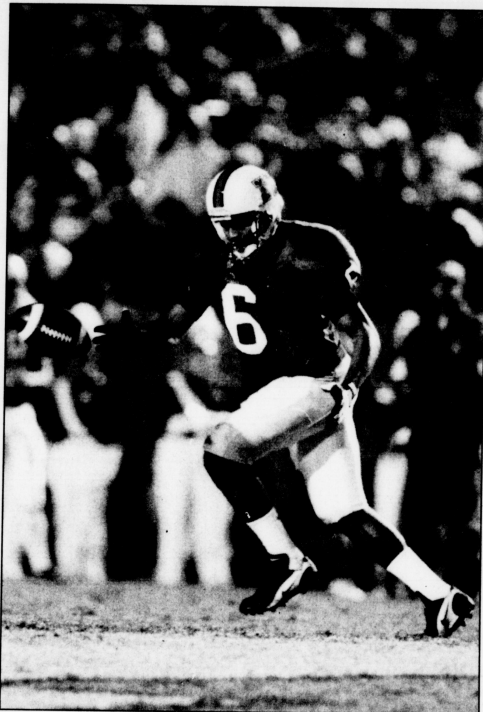

McCord took the pitch and scampered all the way to the Hoosiers' eight-yard line before strong safety Aaron Warnecke tripped him up. Two plays and two time-outs later, Johnson was on to end the 59 minute-46 second scoreless drought with the field goal.

"Coach (Elliot) Uzelac made a phenomenal call on the McCord play," said Curry, who is 3-4 now against Indiana as a head coach.

"We knew it was there. We ran outside a lot and saw they were charging to the back side."

Indiana coach Bill Mallory was disappointed with the way the Hoosier defense, which entered

NATION Old basketball arena burns at Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn's old wooden basketball arena, fondly known as "The Barn," went out with a bang, shooting flames high into the air and providing a dramatic backdrop for the nationally televised LSU-Auburn football game.

Auburn Fire Chief Ronny Blankenship said yesterday that investigators believe a barbecue grill from a tailgate party may have been responsible.

The fire began to appear over the northeast corner of Jordan-Hare Stadium early in the first quarter of LSU's 19-15 win over Auburn on Saturday night. But none of the 85,214 people were ever in danger and no thought was even given to evacuating the stadium, which was 50 yards away and across the street from the fire.

Nobody was injured and only two cars suffered slight damage as firefighters hosed down vehicles in the building's parking lot, which had been open for tailgating before the game.

Nirvana to release new live album

NEW YORK — More than two years after the death of lead singer Kurt Cobain, Nirvana is releasing a new 16-song live album.

"From the Banks of the Muddy Wiskah," painstakingly assembled from recordings of old concerts, is scheduled to be released Oct. 1.

It will be Nirvana's second release since Cobain's death. The first was "MTV Unplugged in New York," which featured acoustic versions of the band's usually ear-shattering grunge hits.

College deans give GPA certificates

By Wallis Malone
Contributing Writer

Students are honored for their academic achievements to provide incentive for future dedication and an example for others to follow.

Hard-working black students were recognized Friday night. The Office of Minority Affairs along with the Black Student Union sponsored the first annual Academic Achievement Awards Banquet.

The banquet was originally held as a reception for black freshmen who had maintained a high grade point average in their first year. This year it expanded to a banquet open to all black students.

The banquet honored 95 students for earning 3.0 GPAs or better. Students were given certificates from the deans of the 12 colleges represented, including engineering, architecture, and pharmacy.

Damon Porter, a marketing and management junior, was one of the students honored.

"I think the banquet was a success," Porter said. "It properly recognizes and honors those students that are so often overlooked on a campus of this magnitude."

Crystal Harris, finance senior, liked the banquet.

"It's given me inspiration to continue to maintain the academic level I have now and achieve even higher," Harris said.

William Parker, former vice chancellor of the office of minority affairs was the keynote speaker.

Parker encouraged students give back to their communities and to attend graduate school.

Eric Brown, an academic counselor at the learning services center, said the biggest problem facing black students is discouragement.

"These students are positive influences and they need to keep reaching out to other students so that they know that a 3.0 or better is attainable at the University," Brown said.

Minor league baseball plans supported by UK

By James Ritchie
Senior Staff Writer

UK sports officials support attempts to bring minor league baseball to Lexington despite possible disadvantages for the University's baseball program.

Lexington is competing against eight other cities for one of two Class AA expansion franchises. Play would begin in 1999.

UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton said he has no problem with a minor league team coming to Lexington.

"If it's good for the community, then we're all for it," Newton said.

Newton, who used to play minor league baseball, said he does not think a minor league team would have much of an impact on UK baseball, since their seasons do not run concurrently.

The college season runs from February to May; minor league teams play from April to September.

The only disadvantage Newton saw for UK was that the professional team might siphon entertainment dollars away from UK baseball.

Still, Newton said this should not be a significant problem for the University.

"I don't think it will have any real effect," he said.

Far-reaching effects

But the impact of AA baseball on UK athletics may be more far-reaching than lost entertainment dollars, UK baseball coach Keith Madison said. Media coverage would favor the minor league team over UK's program, especially when both teams were playing in May, Madison said. This could result in less awareness of the University program.

And with a minor league team in Lexington, the UK team might get less corporate sponsorship, such as outfield advertising and season ticket packages, Madison said. Other University sports might also receive less attention and support.

"There are only so many slices in the pie," Madison said.

The coach said it is easy to imagine an AA team's effect on UK baseball by thinking about what would happen to UK basketball if an NBA team moved to the Lexington.

Wildcats might surrender

The Wildcats would surrender television time and newspaper column inches to the professional team, Madison said.

However, the coach said he fully supports efforts to get a minor league baseball in the city.

"I don't want to do anything to hinder the progress of baseball in the community," Madison said, adding that he would attend the games.

Lexington's biggest obstacle in getting a professional baseball team has been the lack of a baseball stadium. Questions remain as to where Lexington would build a stadium, estimated to cost over $12 million, and who would pay for it.

Investors raising big bucks

A group of investors, led by real estate developer Dudley Webb and including UK football coach Bill Curry and UK basketball coach Rick Pitino, has come up with the $4.5 million franchise fee.

The city council is expected to announce this week whether it will commit any public funds to the construction of a stadium. Mayor Pam Miller has told Webb that she would try to get public financing from the city council if his group of 100 investors provide a third of the funding.

Both Newton and Madison said they oppose the use of city funding to finance a stadium.

Associate Athletics Director Kathy DeBoer, a member of the mayor's baseball fact-finding committee, said most stadiums are built with both private and public funds.

She said that with a stadium in Lexington, UK might be able to host an NCAA regional tournament, something it currently cannot do because it does not have a stadium.

DeBoer said that an AA team might very well divert money away from UK sports.

"There is a finite entertainment dollar," she said. But she said the effect would be no different from a new movie theater or a concert coming to town, and since Lexington is a growing city, it will be able to support more entertainment options.

DeBoer said that if Lexington wants a professional team, then there is no reason to oppose the idea.

"If this community wants a baseball team and wants to support a baseball team, then I would be supportive," she said.

UK scavengers go on quest for campus items

By Kathy Reding
Assistant News Editor

How quickly could you locate a copy of Ace Magazine, a ticket stub from Saturday's football game, a UK parking ticket and a Kernel from last Thursday?

Participants in yesterday's Campus Quest scavenger hunt had to locate these items and others around campus and bring them back to South Campus.

Teams also had to unscramble a building name, find it and complete an activity such as doing the C-A-T-S cheer or humming the UK fight song at the correct locations. From there, designated "clue masters" handed out the next scrambled location.

Campus Quest, sponsored by the Student Development Council, is intended to promote student involvement and increase familiarity with campus, said Chris Kemper, an SDC member.

"It's a lot of fun for them," Kemper said. "It's stuff you can find around if you look, not something anyone had to steal."

Through the scavenger hunt, SDC also hopes to raise money for its scholarship fund and get students in the habit of contributing to the University, said Mary Buckles, adviser to the group.

Buckles said 22 teams pre-registered for the event. Each team of five paid a $35 fee, which goes to the scholarship endowment.

"We hope to raise about $1,000 for the scholarships," Buckles said.

She said the 38 SDC members originated the Campus Quest plan for a fundraiser this year to replace the council's Oozeball mud volleyball tournament canceled for liability reasons.

"It's really been a team effort to get this accomplished," Buckles said.

Teams gathered in Memorial Coliseum at 4:30 p.m. They received the list of items, the first scrambled clue and an explanation of the rules. All the teams were let out at 5 p.m. to begin their quest.

Members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity team, freshmen Greg Kennedy, Quint Tatro, Jim Herr, Shaun Sanders and Greg Brown, discussed their strategy before the quest. Three members were designated to find items and the other two had to unscramble clues.

"We're doing this for our fraternity," said Tatro. "We're trying to get involved."

Free food and t-shirts also lured participants.

"It sounded like a really fun time," said Rachel Rastetter, a nursing sophomore on the Delta Gamma social sorority team.

Participants ended up on South Campus to receive a group prize of pizza, trophies and a live DJ.

In the fraternity division, Sigma Phi Epsilon won the quest. Delta Gamma Number Five won the sorority division, and the Blanding II Busters were champions in the residence hall division.

Notables

- ▼Attendance: A crowd of 40,500 braved the elements to witness the battle for the Bourbon Barrel. It was the smallest crowd for the second home game of a season in Commonwealth Stadium history.
- ▼Offensive Play of the game: A reverse to freshman Quentin McCord on second down with less than two minutes in the game gave the Cats one of their largest gains of the evening with 31 yards. But more importantly, that single play put UK in position for the game winning field goal. The run put the Cats on IU's 8-yard line and eventually led to Brian Johnson's 26-yard field goal.
- ▼Offensive Player of the Game: Johnson. He was the only man able to put points on the board with his game-winning field goal with 14 seconds left in the game.
- ▼Defensive Play of the Game: Lamont Smith's fourth quarter interception of Chris Dittoe's pass with 2:08 left in the game ended any hopes IU had of scoring and gave the Cats excellent field position to start their eventual game-winning drive.
- ▼Defensive Player of the Game: Needless to say, it was Smith. Along with his interception, Smith made six unassisted tackles and one was for a loss of four yards late in the fourth quarter. The linebacker also broke up one IU pass.
- ▼Next up: UK travels to Gainesville to face No. 1 Florida at 3:30 p.m.

Defense steps it up in victory over Hoosiers

By O. Jason Stapleton
Staff writer

Against Indiana on Saturday, the UK defense continued to step up its play despite a lethargic game by the Wildcat offense. This fact was evident by the final score of Saturday's game, a 3-0 UK victory.

The shutout represented the first by a UK team since the Cats blanked Ole Miss 21-0 on Oct. 2, 1993.

"We came out with the most emotion that we've had all year," said UK middle linebacker Mike Schellenberger.

"We had a lot of people flooding to the ball, and covering each other, and we played pretty much mistake free."

That was not the case with the Hoosiers on the other hand.

"I felt that we really came out kinda lethargic in the first quarter and first half even," said IU senior linebacker Matt Surface.

Surface attributed the sluggishness to sitting around for a long time on a rainy day.

UK linebacker Lamont Smith thought also thought Indiana was not up for the game.

"They came out real flat, and I think they kinda took for granted," Smith said. "Because they didn't come out hard at all."

Indiana's defense did a good job overall, holding the Cats to just 226 total yards. The Hoosiers simply failed to come up when they needed to.

"We let a reverse go around and that was the game," Surface said.

On the other side of the field, UK's defense held the Hoosiers to 262 total yards despite a monster day from running back Alex Smith. Smith finished the day with 160 of IU's 262 total yards. He rushed for 155 yards on 33 carries and caught one pass for five yards.

UK Coach Bill Curry was very pleased with the play of his defense unit, particularly the pass rush.

"We've been pressuring them, but not getting there," said Curry. "Our pass rush was a little better than it has been."

One of the best qualities of the defense's play was the fact that they overcame injuries.

Shawn Smith started for an injured Dele Ali at outside linebacker, but Smith suffered a sprained ankle early in the game and did not return.

Smith is listed as doubtful for Saturday's game at No. 1 Florida.

This forced freshman Anwar Stewart into duty. Stewart performed at levels above all expectations finishing third on the team in tackles with nine. He also broke up two passes.

Indiana coach Bill Mallory was shocked that the Cats' defense held his Hoosiers to no points.

"Their defense played us hard," Mallory said.

"We had some breakdowns and just came away with a big fat zero, and you can't win games doing that."

Trio plays big role in victory

By Chris Easterling
Sports Editor
and O. Jason Stapleton
Staff writer

Three freshmen played huge roles for UK in its 3-0 win over Indiana on Saturday night.

Tim Couch was inserted at quarterback on the third Wildcat possession of the game, and immediately went to work trying to make something happen. He threw deep down the middle to Craig Yeast, who dropped the pass at about the Indiana 3-yard line.

He finished the night 2-for-8 for only 19 yards, but at least three of his incomplete passes were just flat out dropped by the receivers. Couch was also in for the entire fourth quarter, helping to lead UK down for the game-winning field goal by Brian Johnson.

He did have one mishap in the fourth where he fumbled the snap from center Jason Watts at the IU 34-yard line with 8:24 left in the game. Indiana ended up punting the ball back to the Cats after three unsuccessful plays.

NOTEBOOK

"We just had a bad exchange from the center to the quarterback," Couch said. "It was just a bad break. When coach stuck with me in crunch time it really boosted my confidence."

It is uncertain who will start for UK when it faces top-ranked Florida on Saturday in Gainesville, but Couch said that he can't worry about that right now.

"I just have to work real hard and leave that to (the coaches)," he said.

Michael Daies gave the Wildcat running game a big boost in his first collegiate start in place of senior Ray McLaurin. The 5-foot-8, 190-pound Lake City, Fla., native gained 92 yards on 22 carries, including a 34-yard run on his third carry.

"Daies was a real presence for us," UK Coach Bill Curry said. "It was his first game of collegiate football. He helped out our line's confidence."

Despite his big game, Daies was not completely satisfied with his performance.

"I try to give the team 100 percent in everything I do," Daies said. "I had pretty good speed, but I can do better."

But the freshman who had the biggest impact on the game was wide receiver Quentin McCord. McCord raced 31-yards on a reverse down to the Hoosiers' eight-yard line. The run helped to set up Johnson's field goal.

Manolopoulos misfires

Indiana kicker Bill Manolopoulos had two opportunities to put IU on the scoreline in Saturday's game, but missed them both.

On the Hoosiers' first drive of the third quarter, Manolopoulos missed wide to the right from 43-yards out. In the fourth quarter, he missed a 30-yard attempt wide to the left.

Manolopoulos made no excuses after the game.

"The first one I played right and it felt pretty good," he said. "The second field goal went off to the left. I had good footing. I just didn't kick it well."

Indiana coach Bill Mallory ruled out the possibility of the grass turf being a problem, despite the fact that IU's first two games have been played on artificial turf.

"The field shouldn't have been a problem because he kicks on grass all the time (in practice)," Mallory said. "He just couldn't get them through tonight."

Here come the Gators

UK will get its first opportunity to play the number one team in the nation in football since 1980 on Saturday when it ventures into Ben Hill Griffin Stadium at Florida Field in Gainesville to play top-ranked Florida.

The Gators (3-0) gained the top spot in both the Associated Press, which polls writers, and the USA Today/CNN, which is chosen by college coaches, thanks to a 35-29 win over then No. 2-ranked Tennessee, and the monumental 19-0 upset of then No. 1 Nebraska by Arizona State last Saturday.

The last top-ranked team the Cats played was Alabama, who blasted the Cats 45-0.

Nebraska may have to forget about a three-peat.

The top-ranked Cornhuskers had their 26-game winning streak snapped Saturday night in a stunning 19-0 loss to No. 17 Arizona State on the same field where they won their second straight national championship in January.

The Sun Devils, routed by the Huskers 77-28 last season, recorded three safeties in handing the Huskers their first defeat since losing the 1994 Orange Bowl to Florida State.

It was Nebraska's first shutout since a 22-0 loss to Miami in the 1992 Orange Bowl, and its first regular-season loss since dropping a 19-10 decision to Iowa State on Nov. 14, 1992.

It also was just the second regular-season shutout during coach Tom Osborne's 24-year tenure at Nebraska. Oklahoma beat the Huskers 27-0 in 1973, Osborne's first year as head coach in Lincoln.

Nebraska (1-1), which opened the season with a 55-14 win over Michigan State, committed three turnovers against Arizona State, which was a 24-point underdog.

Arizona State (3-0) pulled off the huge upset before a capacity crowd of 74,089 on a 91-degree night when the university honored former coach Frank Kush, who led the Sun Devils to undefeated seasons in 1970 and 1975.

The Sun Devils capped their 1975 season by beating Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl, where the Huskers won the national title last season by beating Florida 62-24.

Kush watched the game from the Arizona State sideline at newly renamed Frank Kush Field at Sun Devil Stadium.

Nebraska's shocking loss opens the door for several teams to move atop the AP poll, with No. 4 Florida heading the list.

The Gators got four TD passes from Danny Wuerffel in the first half and withstood a second-half surge by No. 2 Tennessee for a 35-29 victory before an NCAA-record crowd of 107,608 at Knoxville.

"We came in very prepared and jumped out of the box in good shape," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said.

"I think we had 35 (points) with about 10 minutes left in the half, so give them credit. We still have a lot to improve on."

Florida (3-0) built a 35-0 lead in the first half, but the momentum shifted after Peyton Manning hooked up with Peerless Price on a 72-yard play to get Tennessee (2-1) on the board.

Manning, intercepted four times in the first half, rebounded in the second half and finished 37-of-65 (both school records) for 492 yards and four TDs. Wuerffel was 11-of-22 for 155 yards.

"We got ourselves in a big hole and it was difficult to overcome," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said.

Florida voted to top spot in both polls.

The Florida Gators were voted as the number one team in college football by both the AP poll and the USA Today/CNN coaches poll yesterday.

The Gators beat out rival Florida State for the top spots in both polls. Penn State was a unanimous pick as the No. 3 team in the nation, with Ohio State and Notre Dame rounding out the top five.

The biggest jump was made by Arizona State, who moved up from 17 to sixth in the AP polls after its upset of Nebraska Saturday night in Tempe, Ariz.

the game ranked third in the nation in total defense, defended the reverse.

"We didn't cover it well at all," Mallory said. "I saw it coming, and unfortunately, our defensive player didn't because he was already down the line of scrimmage. It was a good call on UK's part."

IU linebacker Matt Surface was impressed with the play, despite the negative effect it had on his team.

"It was a nice play," Surface said. "We had seen it a couple of times on film, but obviously they hadn't run it tonight. It was just a great play call by Coach Bill Curry."

Indiana kicker Bill Manolopoulos contributed to the Hoosiers' problems missing a pair of field goals, one from 43 yards and one from 29 yards out.

The Wildcats had an opportunity to put some points on the board at the end of the first half, but failed to convert the chance.

IU punter Alan Sutkowski miss handled the snap, and only punted the football to the Indiana 22-yard line, where UK would get the ball with 14 seconds left in the half and no time-outs.

But instead of throwing to the endzone, Billy Jack Haskins hit Kevin Coleman near the middle of the field and he was tackled at the 15-yard line.

The Wildcats were never able to get another play off, and left the field under a cascade of boos from the crowd.

"It was a joint mistake," Curry said of the first-half blunder.

"If I was a player, I might have grabbed a coach by the throat and taken my helmet and rammed him against the wall a few times. But they weren't mad at (the coaches)."

Wildcats shutout Belmont 2-0 in men's soccer

By Jill Erwin
Staff Writer

All season, UK men's soccer coach Ian Collins has been stepping that freshmen need to press up and compete at a higher level. He got his wish Sunday.

Freshman Bryan DePriest scored two goals in his first collegiate game, pushing the Cats to a 2-0 victory over Belmont in a physical game.

DePriest was not even on the travel squad for the Cats' first two games, but he scored his first goal after only playing six minutes. Sean Endicott crossed the ball in front of the goal, and DePriest flew through the air to head it in past the Bruins goalkeeper.

"I was just waiting for my chance, and today I got the call at midfield."

DePriest said. DePriest's natural position is sweeper, but UK already has senior Greg Lohring firmly in place. He earned playing time by working hard in practice and remaining positive.

"That goal was one of the best ones we've ever seen here," Collins said. "I'm truly happy for Bryan."

Endicott's assist puts him into sole possession of third place on UK's all-time leading assist list with ten.

That is even more amazing considering he has only been with UK for just over a year following his transfer from Cincinnati. Brian Baltzell's assist on DePriest's second goal was his fifth in six games this year.

The game was physical from the outset, with the first yellow card thrown just 1:51 into the contest.

Belmont's Adam MacDonald was tossed from the game after receiving a red card with just under 15 minutes left. Belmont coach Ronnie Littlejohn had somewhat expected it.

"We knew we were playing one of the best teams in the (Mid-American Conference)," Littlejohn said. "We felt we had to assert ourselves right away if we could."

The Bruins are in their first season of NCAA competition.

At times, they appeared out-matched by UK's experience, as evidenced by the Wildcat's 10-1 shot margin.

Sunday's victory followed a hard-fought game against intrastate rival Louisville on Friday afternoon. UK and U of L finished in a 1-1 overtime tie.

UK will next travel to play at Winthrop on Sunday.

The Attack of the Mediocre Movies

Last Man Standing
New Line Cinema

The best thing about good action movies is that they are fun. Even at their grimmest and goriest it's still exhilarating to see the hero come in and kick some donkey. Last Man Standing is beautifully photographed, fairly well written and fairly well acted. The problem is, for an action movie, it's awfully gloomy.

The story, which is based on a Dashiell Hammett novel that has also been made as a samurai movie and a western, centers around a dying prohibition era border town controlled by rival bootlegging gangs. The innocent live in terror, and the law is powerless and corrupt. Then our hero walks in and cleans up the town, pitting one gang against the other by playing both sides against the middle.

After last years dismal Wild

Bill, writer/director Walter Hill proves again that maybe he could use some prozac. He has left us with a grim adaptation of a classic story.

A lot of the problem lies with the hero, played by Bruce Willis. Usually, I am a big fan of Willis. His own brand of cocky humor and charm generally raises his films above the standard action fare, and it is that charm that is solely missing from this film. Clint Eastwood can pull off the silent stoic hero, Willis can't and it shows. There are times when it almost seems like he is trying to do an Eastwood impression, personally I would rather have Bruce.

Christopher Walken does add a little fun playing the brand of psychopath that he is so good at, but he doesn't show up until half the film is over and then is given almost nothing to do but fire a tommy gun. He's good, but he's too little too late.

Bruce Dern, another pro at playing crazies, is surprisingly laid back as the towns apathetic sheriff. David Patrick Kelly, last seen in Heavy, does the best job of the cast, lending humanity to the character of Doyle, the Irish mob boss with a misguided love for his Mexican mistress. Which brings me to the women in the cast. As usual for an action movie, we get cartoon women who are either whores or virginal but never really human. Only Karina Lombard stands out as the beautifully sad Mexican mistress.

All in all, Last Man Standing isn't a bad film, it just isn't much fun to watch. The fight scenes are impressive, but they were too few and far between to make up for the gloom in between. If you want a quick action fix see it, but if you want to see this story done better go rent Miller's Crossing, it's more fun. —J.H.

The First Wives Club
Paramount Pictures

It's finally here, the movie women have been talking about, the movie divorcees have been hearing about, and the movie they've been racing to see: The First Wives Club. One bit of advice: Slow down.

From the start, The First Wives Club seems as if it would radiate success. How could it not with the all-star cast of Goldie Hawn, Bette Midler, and Diane Keaton? But they're just the start. Sarah Jessica Parker (If Lucy Fell), Dan Hedaya (Nixon), Bronson Pinchot (Perfect Strangers) and Elizabeth Berkley (Shogun) are the supporting cast. As if they weren't enough for a blockbuster movie, Kathie Lee Gifford and Ivana Trump pop in as real-life guests.

The First Wives Club tells the story of three wealthy women, Midler, Keaton, and Hawn, who have just been dumped by their husbands for younger, prettier girls, Berkley, Parker and Harden. The women team up to make The First Wives Club, and a delightful trio. Hawn, a ruined movie star, Midler, an outspoken housewife, and Keaton, a shy housewife, have two things in common: they've all helped their husbands to become rich and they've all been ruthlessly dumped. Their plan is revenge. Their motto, "Don't get mad, get everything."

Throughout the movie they trick, scheme, and fall their way through offices, bedrooms and down the sides of buildings in an effort to ruin their husbands. These women were fun to watch because their characters meshed well and the situations lent themselves to laughs.

By the end of the movie, however, some viewers felt as if they had missed something. Besides the story being tremendously unbelievable, the plot lacked essential details.

The audience left the theater feeling a bit cheated, as if they were still trying to sort the tangled plot out in their heads.

Overall, the cast was enjoyable and the audience generally had a good time. The laughs, the slaps and the dance numbers kept the audience relatively happy. The idea for the movie was excellent, but the plot development was poor.

So walk, don't run to the theater. And remember, there's always video. —S.Z.

It's a man's world. At least that was the case in the late 1950's music scene, a few exceptions aside.

Those exceptions set the foundation for Allison Anders' thoughtful but slow-moving period drama Grace of My Heart.

In a role written specifically with her in mind, Illeana Douglas (To Die For) stars along with a host of others who made their name in independent films. She plays a woman singer/songwriter trying to make it in New York during a time when women singers didn't sell. Her difficult journey, which spans through the psychedelic late '60s and early '70s, depicts her encounters with the men who provided a profound influence on her career and persona.

Douglas brings a charming depth to her character, drawing vivid emotions of confusion, passion and love for the men and music so prevalent in her life.

John Turturro, Eric Stoltz, Patsy Kensit, Matt Dillon and Bridget Fonda contributed their talents. If nothing else, the picture featured flawless acting throughout, especially Kensit and Turturro in possible Oscar material.

Along with the stellar ensemble cast, Douglas' boyfriend Martin Scorsese expressed his interest in the project by becoming the executive producer.

In Scorsese fashion, the film follows the growth and hardships of the lead character for over a decade. The difference break-ups, unwanted pregnancies and deaths come and go too easy. Where more successful directors amplify the harshness and brutality of the situation, Anders falls into the habit of explaining it away with a song. She doesn't quite have the knack for capturing the height of the moment on a consistent basis.

Nevertheless, Anders (Gas Food Lodging, My Vida Loca) turns in her most accomplished film to date.

The biggest flaw came in trying to cover too much material while making viewers anxious for my wrist even though I wasn't wearing a watch.

Snail's pace aside, Grace of My Heart manages a well-acted, fairly intriguing study of an era in transition and a woman finding peace in music. —D.O.

Blackstreet, Aunt Bettys fall short

DEAD END Blackstreet's sophomore effort fails to tread any new waters in regards to musical styles.

New releases rehash old standards

Blackstreet
Another Level
Interscope

Any fan of modern R&B knows Teddy Riley well. The creative force behind Bobby Brown's solo superstardom and the success of Guy, Riley was the "it" producer of the 1980s.

The '90s haven't been so kind. In fact, Riley's only legitimate hits this decade have come as a member of his new group, Blackstreet. So not surprisingly, singer-songwriter-producer Riley is back with a new-look Blackstreet searching for some hits.

And while the group's second album, Another Level, might provide a few, it's not the trend setting stuff Riley was cranking out in the late '80s.

Actually, it is a similar sound. The problem is, it's 1996.

Riley is — to be politically correct — vocally challenged. Smartly, he let the Hall brothers, Aaron and Damion, handle most of the lead vocals in his Guy days. Here, he sometimes takes too much of the spotlight without letting talented Chauncy "Black" Hannibal strut his stuff often enough.

That's especially apparent on "My Paradise," a jazzy little tune that could use some of Hannibal's soulful stuff over the groove. Unfortunately, Riley insists on leading off the track with his own strained vocals, preventing it from being the album's high point.

Riley still concocts bootie-movers with the best of them, though. The thumping first single, "No Diggity," featuring Dr. Dre, will make you groove. Sadly, short of a couple of nice mid-tempo grooves like "Happy Song (Tonight)," there aren't more tunes like it.

And the slow jams don't match up with some of the hits on Blackstreet's first release.

Though the addition of new members Eric Williams and Mark Middleton gives this new Blackstreet a better vocal balance, the material Riley gives them falls short.

"Don't Leave Me," "I Wanna Be Your Man" and "(I Can't Get You) Out of My Mind" are too heavy on the bells and whistles and too light on the lyrics and harmonies.

Even "The Lord is Real (Time Will Reveal)," Blackstreet's answer to a gospel song, can't escape Riley's back-to-the-80s mentality. Like much of the album, it's so synthesized, you'll start having flashbacks to high-top fades and rayon shirts.

Slow isn't always bad on Another Level. Hannibal finally gets his chance to belt out a tune on the group's ballad version of the Beatles' "(Money Can't) Buy Me Love." It's a simple song, but a soaring victory.

It's shame that Riley, trapped in the '80s excess, doesn't feel well enough alone more often. — B.D.

Aunt Bettys
Aunt Bettys
Elektra

I was rubbing my aching temples and desperately searching for aspirin when I decided to be fair and give Aunt Bettys' debut album a second listen. Halfway through I tapped "eject" and realized that although obnoxious to listen to, the CD made an excellent coaster for my Dr. Pepper.

Aunt Bettys, a self-described "punk" band from Orange County (let's try "pop" band, boys) has just released their self-titled debut on Elektra.

The sound is vaguely familiar to a few teenagers in a garage pathetically trying to cover Green Day and the Pixies.

Granted, the CD has a generous 16 tracks, but every song sounds alike. Michael Knott, the band's singer and sole song writer should really look for some outside creativity and input for variety. Every song begins with a mellow acoustic guitar, and then explodes into hard core electric, complaint-rock. As a fan of all things acoustic, I felt like I was being teased. Also, the random lyrics leave something to be desired.

For example, I was actually enjoying the peaceful guitar solo at the beginning of "Double" when my reverie was broken by the words, "Someone's yelling from behind the bathroom door/The toilet's overflowing on the floor."

Call me old-fashioned, but I also don't relate well to songs about impregnated martians, group sex, and sadistic women whose bodies are covered in tattoos. This four-man band not only has a lack of taste, but a lack of talent.

Their sound is manufactured to appeal to an audience of pre-pubescent skater wannabes who think anyone with two-toned hair color and a disturbed guitar is deity.

A word of friendly advice: If you consider yourself a music connoisseur, feel free to change the radio upon hearing the Aunt Bettys line, "I've got my racing stripe/You've got your O.J. knife/Come on Baby, let's rock and roll."

Mark my words, in six months and a couple MTV videos from now, even the suckers that buy this album will have a new coaster for their next dinner party. — L.B.

McNICKY Kernel logo. Established in 1894 Independent since 1971. EDITORIAL board: Bronna Reilly, editor in chief; Tiffany Gilmartin, editorial editor; Chris Padgett, news editor; Kathy Reding, asst. news editor; Gary Wull, asst. news editor; Lindsay Hendrix, features editor; Tracie Purdon, design editor; Ben Abes, on-line editor; Boyce Watkins, columnist.

The Commission on Presidential Debates ruled that only two presidential debates would be held and only Clinton and Dole would be allowed to participate.

This decision was an unfair move by the commission.

By not allowing Perot equal time in the candidate debates, the commission is effectively deciding who they think the election is between. Forgetting the one integral component of the democratic process: the voters.

Instead this commission, established more than a decade ago by the two parties, ruled that Perot has no chance of winning.

That should be established by the voters in November, after all the information has been heard, not in September before all the facts are known.

In 1992 Perot earned 19 percent of the popular vote, while polls this year show his support hovering at 5 percent.

Regardless of his current support in the last election, 19 percent of American voters were compelled by Perot's message or they were so discontented with the established parties that they supported him.

The commission should not overlook that small minority.

By doing so, they have given more reason for Americans to be dissatisfied with the political system. Clinton and Dole's participation in the very debates that exclude a valid third party is just another example how out of touch the two-party system has become.

As a democratic nation, majority rules, but the minority should never be forgotten.

IN OUR OPINION

While the commission was correct in excluding political parties that truly have no possibility of making an impact on the national election, it is not the case for Perot's party.

It may be politically inconceivable that Perot will win the 1996 Presidential election, still he has enough protest votes to give him legitimacy in the political process.

A third debate with all three candidates should be held. The two established parties will have a chance to go head-to-head twice and Perot would get his time in front of the American people.

Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman called this decision "a travesty and an insult to the American people." She is right on that point.

Foul smell lingers around inclusive learning policies

Saturday night, I was sitting on my couch, half doing homework, half watching the UK-IU football game, half trying to figure out the meaning of life (if you want to know the answer, I can tell you for $19.95).

Then I thought about Longshanks again and the fact that nobody would know (or care), if I were to walk into his office and never be seen again.

But most importantly, I thought about my homework, and I knew that the Oz, I mean president, couldn't do anything to me as severe as what my Statistics teacher would do if I didn't get my homework in on time.

A few days later, I got another message. So, I went to see him. Actually, I was a little excited about finally meeting this mysterious man.

I was so curious as to why I was important enough to sit and talk to the president of the university for 45 minutes, yet not important enough to participate in the integration of the initiatives that I remember typing in the computer lab.

I walked into his office, and my first thought was, "Wait till I tell mama about this office!" As a child, I could only dream about living in a house as large as his office.

We sat down with a long table between us. Me at one end and him on the other, sort of like two negotiators sitting down for important negotiations. When I crossed my legs, he put his. When I put my hand under my chin, he did the same.

He talked. I listened. He talked some more, I listened. Then our 45 minutes were up and I left.

It is also difficult to represent black students when every student involved in the protest that led to the initiatives, is excluded from the "student teams" chosen to help create the programs.

As a matter of fact, the only time I got a call from any administrator was when President Wethington called to ask me to stop insulting him in the paper.

When I got Wethington's message requesting a meeting, I first thought about the movie Braveheart where the evil King Longshanks invited the revolutionaries to a meeting and had them all hanged.

With that gruesome thought, I threw the message in the garbage. "Why would the all-mighty Oz, I mean Wethington, want to talk to me?" I thought.

Then a few days later, I got another message from his secretary. I thought, "Man, this guy is serious, maybe I should go talk to him."

One thing I did say to him was that I didn't hate him. If I tried to hate all of the people who don't like me, my heart would probably melt and fall out of my mouth.

I only asked him not to tell me to be patient, because that is the only thing that black people hear.

I also wanted him to understand that any fool can smell bullshit from a mile away. When I smell bullshit, I have this sick need to tell the world that I smell it, how strong the smell is, and what direction it is coming from.

I haven't thought about our meeting since then. It only popped back into my head during the football game.

Why? Because I smelled bullshit, and it's coming directly from the Chancellor's office.

Reynolds building is in need of a fix

To the editor:

Thanks for the update on how bad the Reynolds building continues to be. I was facing the same problems back in 1993 when I was taking black & white photography. It got so bad that a girl once found a bum who had snuck in masturbating in the dark room. I wish the best of luck in using the Grehan building. I took some photo journalism classes there and the facilities aren't that bad for developing. It is a shame that UK hasn't done anything about this matter in the last decade. Oh well.

Edit cartoon angers Panhellenic council

To the editor:

I am writing in response to the editorial cartoon that was in the Kernel on Thursday, Sept. 19, 1996, which depicted a man at a "Panhellenic" Council meeting pointing to a flip chart and six derogatory steps. After seeing this cartoon, many readers approached me puzzled by the depiction because a male figure was featured as leading Panhellenic. The Panhellenic Council is the coordination body of Panhellenic Association which is the largest female organization on UK's campus. Some members of the Panhellenic Association took offense at this cartoon. These steps included: 1. completion of the University Commons/ Royal Lexington Apts., 2. takeover of SGA, 3. introduction of Greek money system, 4. fall break for BMW owners, 5. construction of giant dome/bubble, 6. initiate deportation process.

Most readers felt that the main idea behind this cartoon was that Panhellenic is an elite group of women attempting to take over the UK campus. If this is the accusation that the staff of the Kernel is suggesting, then nothing could be farther from the truth.

The Panhellenic Association is an organization that stands for good scholarship, guarding of good health, for maintenance of fine standards, and for serving the college community. Panhellenic tries to implement programs to address each of these goals and which will affect the lives of all women, and all men, and all of the UK campus and community. The women that are members of sororities are a diverse group of scholars, leaders, and participants in the UK campus. Members come from different parts of the state and the country, from different economical backgrounds, and from different cultures. We encourage participation from the entire community and Panhellenic Council meetings are open to all students.

READERS' forum

Like a good wine, feminism tastes better with age

Attached to a bulletin board in my apartment is a button that reads "Feminism is the radical notion that women are people too."

I thought it at the State Fair this year, courtesy of the Jefferson County National Organization of Women.

I would have never stopped at that booth five years ago. I would never have spoken with the women sitting there, much less bought several buttons from them.

What changed all that? Five years ago, I would have never called myself a feminist. I had set images of feminists, and I didn't fit with any of them. Feminists, I thought, hated men. They didn't wear dresses or do anything remotely "girly". On the other hand, I didn't hate me; most of my best friends were male. I loved dresses. I even collected Barbie dolls. How on earth could I possibly be a feminist?

I believed that women and men were equal. I thought women should be able to do as they wished; just because I had no desire to be a nuclear physicist didn't mean I should be barred from that role. Of course, I also assumed everyone thought that way.

I grew up in a wonderful family that taught me there were no limits on me, save those I imposed myself. In their eyes, I could do anything I wanted. My choices of careers ranged from astronaut to President to zoo keeper. I went to a school where the girls were required to take shop, and the guys took home economics. My school system never gave me problems over two XX chromosomes did not pose a barrier. Imagine my surprise when I got to college and realized other people were not as fortunate as myself. There was the guy who sat behind me in one class and told me I didn't belong here. I should home, learning to be a good wife, and I was taking up space in a class a friend of his wanted to take.

Not being shy, I promptly informed him of my grade point average (which, by the way, was higher than his) and told him if he couldn't deal with women in his classes to return to his own century.

I watched my female friends go through similar situations. I saw how furious one science-minded woman became when a guy made some crack about women not knowing their way around a chemistry lab because they don't understand science. This year, I listened to my younger sister protest because the high school she attends took her out of auto mechanics and placed her in home economics, much to her dismay. She really wanted to learn how to fix her car. But she can't, not in school, anyway.

Those were the mild occurrences. I have friends with eating disorders, friends who have been raped, friends who have been forced into unwanted roles all because of gender.

That's what woke me up. My internal alarm went off and said

INFORMED SOURCES

"IT'S A sad day for VM1. It's a sad day for the state and it's a sad day for the nation as far as I'm concerned."

Robert Patterson, a 1943 graduate of the Virginia Military Institute and lead council in the effort to continue the school's 157 year single sex tradition, commented Saturday as the school opened its doors to women.

choose their path in life: if I want to work, fine. But if I want to stay home and raise a family, that's fine, too. I have my own personal definition of feminism: the right of a woman to choose her own role on the stage of life, that no one may dictate to her or force her to go against her own wishes.

Feminism is still, years after Betty Friedan and Gloria Steinem, a controversial subject. There are still a million stereotypes bouncing around. I am not certain where my previous views came from, but I'm willing to guess a good deal came from the media. Conflict plays well, and the extremes always get great press. It's time for those of us in the middle to speak.

That's me; I'm a moderate feminist. It took me almost seventeen years to realize it, but it's true.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $249 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve - with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over 1.8 million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today and learn how simple it is to build a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA-CREF working on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

BREWERY & GRILLE

WIN YOUR OWN BREWERY (At least for a day)

The Holy Grail Brewery and Grille wants to know why you want to be our brewmaster for a day!

You can win your own batch of beer. You will be our brewmaster for a day...creating your own special recipe. Then live the life of the beer big shots and invite your friends to the brewery for free beer.

Government Warning: Helping this contest will make you very popular among people you hardly know! You may receive compliments, praise and intriguing offers from strangers that may be hard to refuse!

Prizes:

One Grand Prize of Brewmaster for a day:
This lucky individual will (together with our brewing staff) create their own beer recipe and brew a batch at the Holy Grail Brewery. When the beer is complete they will host a party for 20 of their friends to enjoy dinner and this special brew, all compliments of Holy Grail and the winning brewmaster. ($500 value)

Five First Prizes: Dinner for two at the Holy Grail Brewery and a Holy Grail "We Brew It, We Drink It, We Sell What's Left!" shirt. ($42 value)

Ten Second Prizes: A Holy Grail "We Brew It, We Drink It, We Sell What's Left!" shirt. ($17 value)

The Rules:

1. In 100 words or less, answer the statement: "Why should I be brewmaster for a day." Drop it off at Holy Grail Brewery and Grille or mail it to 122 West Maxwell, Lexington, Ky. 40508. All entries must be received by 5 p.m. on October 1, 1996. You must be 18 to enter (although you must be 21 to drink your own product) and either a Kentucky resident or a student, faculty or staff member at UK. The winners will be selected by our judges and announced by October 15, 1996. All entries become the property of the Holy Grail and participants, by entering, agree to the use of their name, likeness, and entry in promotional campaigns of Holy Grail without further compensation. No purchase necessary to win.
