MRAP UPDATE

The Management Review and Analysis Program (MRAP) study team is currently investigating and compiling a record of: histories of the University and the Libraries; current library goals and objectives; and areas which should be explored in the MRAP study. The study team will mobilize task forces to study the various areas of library operations-- e.g., budgeting, staff development, etc.; the task forces will make reports, and the study team, aided by the rest of the Library Staff, will examine these reports and make recommendations.

This self study needs the cooperation and assistance of each staff member. Without critical input, the MRAP study will be meaningless. Thus, the following means of communication will be available to all staff members.

1. Open meetings

These meetings will be held when each task force report is completed, after every staff member has received a copy of the task force report. Everyone will be allowed a few days to evaluate the report, and then will have the opportunity to make comments, suggestions and recommendations about the report.

The date of the first open meeting will be announced soon. Before this meeting, all staff members will receive a report on what areas the department heads have suggested for in-depth study by the task forces. Other staff members - classified, personnel, library technicians and librarians - who have suggestions on further areas which should be explored can come to this open meeting to make their suggestions.

One or more persons may schedule an interview with the MRAP study team at any time, by contacting any team member.
