Ford and Cook at odds on Red River Dam

By LINDA CARNES
Kernel Staff Writer

Two leading contenders in this fall's Kentucky U.S. Senate race expressed opposite views Wednesday concerning construction of the proposed Red River Dam near Clay City.

Gov. Wendell Ford, candidate for the Democratic Senate nomination, said he is convinced it is in the best interest of Kentucky's future that the project proceed.

IN CONTRAST, incumbent Sen. Marlow Cook, a Republican candidate, said he will recommend the Red River Dam project be cancelled immediately and no further funds be appropriated.

Cook, releasing his statement prior to Ford's on Wednesday, said he will testify before the Public Works Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee today and suggest the Corps of Engineers (COE) abandon the Red River reservoir project.

GOV. WENDELL FORD

"I will also oppose the Paintsville Dam project," Cook added.

IN AN accompanying explanation of what led to his conclusion on Red River, Cook said, "My decision has been made after an exhaustive analysis of every aspect of the project, its social and economic ramifications and a personal tour of the area."

Ford said in his statement, released about three hours after Cook's, any decision by the governor for or against must be made in light of the overall best interest of the Commonwealth with the future needs being fully analyzed.

"In expressing my opinion on various issues I must consider every side without any personal feeling interfering, but must weigh carefully the ultimate results as they affect all citizens of Kentucky and this is my first responsibility as governor," Ford said.

FORD SAID he had high respect for persons who exercise their citizenship in the Red River Dam matter whether they are for or against the project.

As governor, Ford said, "those of us in positions of leadership are duty bound to be decisive, realizing difficulties involved and even more so, realizing that in any controversial issue you cannot please everyone."

Ford, who had not taken a stand on the issue until yesterday, criticized Cook for not taking a stand on the project sooner.

Local delegation testifies against gorge flooding

By LINDA CARNES
Kernel Staff Writer

Several UK students and faculty members are in Washington today to testify before House and Senate Appropriations Committees for Public Works and voice opposition to the proposed Red River Dam funding.

Both committees will meet today and hear testimony from supporters and opponents of the project and will decide whether more money will be allocated for the planning of the dam.

DELEGATES FROM Lexington include: Shelley Griffith, Student Government (SG) Commissioner of Physical Environment; Dr. Robert Kuehne, biology professor; Dr. Dave Richardson, assistant economics professor; Tim Murphy, an active Jessamine County environmentalist; and Linda Welch, an Environmental Action Society member.

The Senate Committee will meet at 10 a.m. today and the Lexington representatives will have a total of eight minutes to speak before the senators.

During the eight minutes, Griffith said she would describe the day-long rally in Frankfort last Saturday in opposition to the dam and reservoir, and would tell about the student movement and opinions concerning the project.

KUEHNE WILL speak for one or two minutes concerning the detriment the dam will cause to the area environment.

The remaining five minutes will be used by Richardson to explain monetary reasons why the dam should not be built.

In the House committee, the entire Kentucky delegations will be heard at the 2 p.m. meeting. Other than the Red River Gorge representatives, at least eight different delegations will speak on dams proposed throughout the state.

News in Brief

by THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- Grant announced
- Inflation worse?
- Allegations dropped
- Controls extended
- Case denounced
- Today's weather...

• THE National Cancer Institute has granted $63,862 to the University for a study of the metabolic characteristics of chemical carcinogens, according to Kentucky Sen. Marlow Cook (R.).

The money for the research to be conducted by Dr. James W. Fleisher was approved in Washington Wednesday.

• WASHINGTON — Inflation in the second half of the year will be worse than either the Nixon administration or private economists have predicted, the government's top price controller said Wednesday.

John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, also said he believes the inflation rate during the April-June quarter will be about the same as the 10.8 per cent surge of the January-March quarter.

• WASHINGTON — The ranking Republican on the House Judiciary Committee said today most of the allegations being investigated in the committee's impeachment inquiry will be dropped Thursday.

The committee staff has been gathering information on 56 allegations covering wide range of presidential activity.

"Most of them will be dropped when we meet tomorrow," Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., told newsmen after a meeting of the Republican committee members.

• WASHINGTON — The Senate's Democratic conference voted unanimously today to try to extend standby wage-price controls before the present authority ends Tuesday.

• NEW YORK — John N. Mitchell's defense attorney denounced a federal criminal conspiracy case against the former attorney general Wednesday as "a prosecutorial vision... a vision they set out to give life to."

"They have failed," Peter Fleming Jr., said in his summation as the trial of Mitchell and codefendant Maurice H. Stans, former commerce secretary, neared an end. It is expected to go to the jury Thursday.

...spring!

Spring may come again. It will be partly cloudy today in the mid 60s. Tonight temperatures are expected in the low 40s but Friday should reach the low 70s.

It's about time

After months of refusal to lean one way or another on the proposed Red River dam project, both Sen. Marlow Cook and Gov. Wendell Ford Wednesday chose to take opposite sides.

Both men earlier indicated they would like to keep the issue out of the senatorial campaign in which they will be likely opponents this fall. It's clear to us, however, this may become one of the hottest topics of the race.

Cook, for the second time within a year, has taken sides with environmentalists. He is an opponent of Red River dam. He is also an opponent of the Paint Creek dam project near Paintsville and is continuing down the path of his predecessor, former Sen. John Sherman Cooper, who promised Red River dam would not be built while he held his Senate seat.

Ford, on the other hand, is siding with business interests. He claims the dam is necessary for central Kentucky's future water needs, as well as a flood control measure in the Clay City area.

Cook will be in Washington today where he will exert his influence to cancel the project before the Public Works Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

We hope his testimony and that of several Kentucky citizens, including members of this University community, will be sufficient to stymie the project. Otherwise, we're afraid the Red River will be subjected to a partisan battle and a questionable life expectancy.

It's too bad Mother Nature has to put up with so much interference from politicians and engineers.

Gotta run to the store before the prices go up

WASHINGTON — A letter arrived from a Chicago reader the other day, and clipped to it was a Reichsbanknote for einhundert millionen mark. The paper was of poor-quality magazine stock, while the money itself was worth so little the government had only printed one side of it.

The bill's sender wrote: "In 1923 I worked in Germany on a construction job, and we got paid twice a week. The paymaster carried a suitcase full of money like the one bill I am enclosing. It sure could happen here. I feel sorry for many people like myself. I worked 45 years with the same firm, never got union wages, but saved a little money. Each year the purchasing power of my savings is getting less and less. Did it pay for me to save all those years?"

PRICES ARE not yet going up so rapidly that people have to be paid twice a week so they can get to the grocery store before their wages lose their purchasing power, but the rate of the price rise is accelerating. At the same time, the amount of inflation that the government normal or acceptable has been growing and growing.

During the Eisenhower years a 2½ to 3 per cent rise was thought necessary to maintain full employment and prosperity. In the Kennedy years that moved up to around the 4 per cent-plus level, and into the 5 to 6 per cent range under Johnson. Now with an actual inflationary rate that could be as high as 15 to 16 per cent, they'd be delighted to settle for 10 per cent a year.

Nevertheless, what goes up doesn't necessarily have to come down, and Murray Rothbard, the right-wing libertarian economist, doesn't think prices will.

"This year is more like 1927 than 1929, but the key difference is that then we were still on the gold standard, and so they could deflate the money. The government today will never deflate, so I don't think we'll get a classic 1929 crash but something more like the 1923 German thing."

ROTHBARD POINTS out that the Nixon Administration made a stab at checking the increase in the money supply, but when the inevitable recession began to hit them they panicked and went back to cheap money. No government, Republican or Democrat, is prepared to take a recession, even the quick one that Rothbard estimates is all that would be necessary.

"If we really had a free market recession, it would be over before people bellyache about it," he says, comparing the performance of the economy now with its laissez-faire past, when recessions were very sharp but of short duration.

It's government intervention, he asserts, which has lengthened them and which made 1929 and the Depression an object of such fright, even for those too young to remember. Rothbard thinks we have the savings and borrowing power to take a quick unemployment snap to get the inflationary infection out of our system, but he's poking around with a non-debatable topic.

EVEN THOUGH it requires

And you ask, what can he do?

more and more inflation to crank up proportionately fewer and fewer jobs, no one in Washington, with a few exceptions like Sen. Proxmire of Wisconsin and Arthur Burns, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve, are willing to contemplate a change from policies and practices that are serving us less and less well with each successive announcement of the monthly money figures.

Increasing the money supply looks sexy at the early stages of inflation because, Rothbard believes, prices don't rise as fast, at first, for the reason that people are saving their money and waiting for prices to come down. Then, when it becomes obvious prices never will drop again, the rush to buy and borrow is on, a rush that gets more frantic as people learn how hard it is to protect their money.

Only a few people are wealthy enough to do this. The rest suffer even with cost-of-living escalator clauses, which give little protection but encourage more inflationary throwing of money around. A very small minority, of course, can make money from the shrinking dollar; and they are the bankers who get first crack at the newly printed money, because the first spenders get to buy at the old, lower prices.

BY THE time the money gets to the rest of us, the sellers have caught on and the prices have caught up to the cheapened dollar.

This form of robbery was bad enough in the old days, when the government printed greenbacks. But now money is created even faster and more deceptively without a printing press by giving banks the power to create credit, which is the power to lend money that doesn't exist.

"Under these circumstances," Rothbard remarks, "it would be better to have a King. At least he'd own something and have an incentive to protect it."

Environmental legacy not easily concealed

By PHIL CREWE

Before Wendell Ford was elected governor, he crossed the border to Wise, Virginia, for a secret meeting with representatives of the Kentucky strip mining industry. The exact details of what went on behind those closed doors will probably never be known by Kentucky's citizens. However, Wendell Ford's environmental legacy, like that of his predecessors, cannot be so easily concealed. It is one of mountains butchered by the strippers, bleeding their precious topsoil into our streams. It is one of families displaced by sliding spoilbanks and public roads destroyed and monopolized by illegally-overweight coal trucks. It is one of powerful special interests superceding the public interest.

The Army Corps of Engineers, with the backing of a shortsighted Congressman and numerous real estate interests, now plan to sacrifice Kentucky's priceless Red River Gorge to the false god of private profit. The Red River Dam project, which will cost 30 to 40 million tax dollars, and displace 55 families, is being pushed by the businessmen and land speculators who stand to be the chief financial beneficiaries of the project.

GOVERNOR WENDELL FORD, the man who can stop this disaster by the mere stroke of a pen, has up till now remained indifferent to the opinions of Lexington Mayor Foster Pettit and Lexington's state legislators Mike Moloney and Joe Graves. These public officials have repeatedly said that Red River Lake is not needed to supply Central Kentucky's water and have come up with an alternative supply at a fraction of the cost. The less costly levee alternatives for flood control and the folly of trading off the gorge for mudflats and vacation homes have also been well documented by the Louisville Courier-Journal.

The point is this: Wendell Ford has been sending content-lacking form letter replies on the issue for too long. He has made it clear he doesn't intend Red River Dam to be an issue in the senatorial election. It will be only the mounting public outrage which finally forces Wendell Ford to save the Gorge.

Morally, legally, it is still adultery

By ARVIL C. REED, MSW

It is called many things — "an affair," "strange," "straying." Morally and legally it's still usually called adultery. More recently it's proclaimed as a sign of maturity and self actualization within an "open" relationship. Sexual intercourse with someone other than your spouse or committed partner is the topic.

The idea of an "Open Marriage" including freedom to experience others sexually is a somewhat different topic since the extramarital sex is discussed and agreed to by each. Here the "openness" about one's actions is seen as justification for outside sexual activities. The evidence to date suggests that this is based on an unrealistic view of human nature and likely to be a disaster for the majority of those who experiment with it. In any event "Open Marriage" is a special case and will not be dealt with here.

MY EXPERIENCE as a clinical social worker has led me to view "going outside" one's marriage as a "mixed bag" — in some few situations it is only incidental to other problems and has little or no effect on the couple. For another small number an affair gives new self confidence and helps toward a redefinition of their worth as individuals. In such cases this change is helpful to the relationship only if it leads the person to make reasonable demands and if kept secret to protect the spouse's feelings.

The most frequent result of "going outside" is to complicate an already bad relationship problem. The most recent research data (Playboy Foundation 1974) shows that anywhere from 80 to 98 per cent of men and women say that they or their partner would object to any kind of extramarital sex experience by the other. Among those who are divorced following extramarital sex more than half felt this was the major cause of the breakup. For most all of us this remains a major transgression and serious breach of trust and commitment.

"Going outside" can be as simple as an impulsive, one time "roll in the hay" that is experienced as fun but nothing more. This kind of sex may not effect a stable relationship unless "confessed" either out of guilt or desire to hurt. Couples with problems of sexual dysfunction frequently will go outside the marriage in an attempt to check themselves out sexually.

THIS TOO is not always harmful, particularly if it leads the couple to talk with each other about their problems and seek help. Most often extramarital sex is either unconsciously handled in such a way as to be discovered by others, or is proudly confessed to the partner. It's then likely to be taken as the hurting thing it is usually intended to be.

Now some words of advice (something people think counselors don't do). If you're contemplating sexual intercourse outside your marriage or relationship:

—Don't do it if you can't bear the burden of whatever guilt it will create in you. Here's one situation in which confession may be good for the soul but disastrous to the relationship.

—DON'T DO it if it's intended to punish your partner. This is an unfair way to fight and will usually compound your problems. There are better ways to fight than with your genitals.

—Don't over estimate your partner's "maturity" to handle such things despite reality are in direct conflict?

The essence of human life is risk and conflict, each person must accept the responsibility of his own behavior or abdicate his right to participate in life's decisions. Dr. Lee seems to intimate that doctors, psychiatrists and congressional committees have some intuitive knowledge as to what is normal, what is right and who should make the important decisions. Only the people have this right and consequently the responsibility to decide the destiny of themselves, their nation and their world. There are no simple absolute rules to determine the sanity of a person, let alone a nation, because persons and nations are complex and dynamic entities.

In no way should any person, be a president or a vagrant, ever be coerced to submit himself to a test of normalcy when in fact normalcy is a relative term at best. Dr. Lee, if a public official should be forced to take psychological tests and behold his future to a select committee of physicians and his peers for judgement, then certainly doctors and psychiatrists, in light of their position, should be willing to submit themselves to the same tests to be interpreted by psychologists, Etc., etc., etc.

Letters to the Kernel

Committee proposal is 'a great mistake'

I was appalled by Dr. Russell Lee's viewpoint (Apr. 19th), "When Insanity Holds the Scepter." His proposal of a congressional committee, doctors and psychiatrists to judge whether a "Person" is psychologically fit is as great a mistake as the examples he used to support his viewpoint. A person is more than a body which can be dissected or a statistic which can create norms to compare individuals. Personality testing is still in an infantile state and, in my opinion, it should only be used as one of many alternatives to help individuals learn more about their psychological makeup and thus help them grow as persons.

No one man can make wars, kill millions or bring a country to its knees; only the people, who for whatever reasons of their own and through their blind subservience to law as an end rather than a guide, can create the horrors that Dr. Lee recounted. Regardless of dream interpretation, psychoanalysis and chemo-therapy, a person can and should only be judged by his actions in relationship to their object, end and circumstance. How long can people and society be so blind as to believe without question a symbol, be it a grade on a report card or a title of a profession or a politician, rather than the reality which they themselves have experienced and learned when the symbol and reality are in direct conflict?

The essence of human life is risk and conflict, each person must accept the responsibility of his own behavior or abdicate his right to participate in life's decisions. Dr. Lee seems to intimate that doctors, psychiatrists and congressional committees have some intuitive knowledge as to what is normal, what is right and who should make the important decisions. Only the people have this right and consequently the responsibility to decide the destiny of themselves, their nation and their world. what you may tell each other. Acceptance of a spouse's outside sexual activities is very rare.

—Allow yourself and your partner room to fantasize and think about a variety of sexual partners. Fantasy is free and does not have the real life consequences associated with acting on your impulses. Thinking and feeling are entirely different from doing. Never feel guilty about what you think or feel. Guilt and sorrow are realistic and healthy only over things actually done.

—REMEMBER, YOUR push or pressure to have an affair may not be so much a reflection on your current marriage as you think. It may well be a reawakening of your childhood and adolescent problems. If you will stop and not take any action before exploring your motives as with a psychotherapist you may save yourself and those around you much hurt.

Ford vs. Cook

Senate rivals take opposite views on construction of Red River Dam

"I HAVE heard some say that in an election year I should oppose it (the dam). I disagree. Such decisions for political expediency are unreasonable," Ford said.

Claiming the project was under Cook's jurisdiction for the five years he has been in the Senate, Ford said, "perhaps he can now be against the Red River project because it is an election year, but this is not the way public officials should react."

Cook's main reason for opposing the dam is that it will destroy one of the truly unique natural areas in the world while providing dubious benefits for the surrounding area.

"AT THE same time I will recommend that the Corps of Engineers immediately begin the most effective means of providing flood protection for the Clay City area so that a project for that purpose may be expeditiously developed," Cook added.

In his statement, Cook explained the three objectives the project was designed to accomplish.

The first reason for flooding the gorge, Cook said, was to provide a recreational facility. "Last year some 900,000 people visited the Red River Gorge which indicates that it is already an appealing and attractive area," Cook added.

ANOTHER REASON for building the dam and reservoir is to provide flood protection for the Clay City area. Cook said this purpose could be accomplished much more quickly and economically through a project aimed exclusively at that objective.

The other objective to be obtained by the dam was to provide water, quality control and emergency water supply for 12 cities in the surrounding area.

Cook said last week the COE decided to delete the water supply objective from their request for the program. He added the water supply was the second major purpose of the project and since it has been eliminated, the recreational facility and flood protection are the only reasons for the dam to be built and they were not sufficient enough to continue the dam project.

IN HIS statement, Ford did not recognize the water supply reason has been deleted from the objectives.

"Support of this project is based on my firm conclusions that water supply and flood control are mandatory," Ford said.

Ford said there is no question about the impending lack of clean sufficient drinking water in communities below the dam.

"WE MUST think of the future and act now to insure that the future will not find insufficient water supplies," Ford added.

Also in his reasons for opposition, Ford said, "We must think of protecting property and lives from flooding which the project will do. We must think of uncontrolled development in the area and uncontrolled activity which could simultaneously destroy the values project opponents want to protect. So do I."

Ford added he did not think the lake will destroy the Red River Gorge.

Cook contends the dam will destroy the Red River Gorge area and said it should be immediately cancelled and called for no further funds to be appropriated for continued consideration of the dam and reservoir.

Nixon requests increase in foreign aid funding

By SPENCER DAVIS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Nixon asked Congress Wednesday for $5.18 billion in new foreign aid funds, including a $250 million economic boost for Egypt and another $100 million that possibly could be used for Syria and the Palestine refugees.

"In the Middle East we have an opportunity to achieve a significant breakthrough for world peace," said the President in a message requesting the aid for fiscal 1975.

"INCREASED FOREIGN AID will be a vital complement to our diplomacy in maintaining the momentum toward a negotiated settlement which will serve the interests of both Israel and the Arab nations."

U.S. assistance is no less critical to South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos as they try to make a difficult transition from war to peace, he added.

The Nixon request called specifically for $907.5 million to the Middle East — Israel $350 million, Egypt $250 million, Jordan $207.5 million, and $100 million in a special requirements fund.

HE ALSO sought $939.8 million for Indochina in the form of $750 million for Vietnam, $110 million for Cambodia, $55 million for Laos, and an additional $28 million to administer the program.

Lexington Public Library seeks book contributions for auction

By KIMYELTON
Kernel Staff Writer

Collections of a wide variety of books, some by Lexington authors, will be sold at the Lexington Public Library on May 28 and 30.

Friends of the Public Library, who will sponsor the sale, has asked for book donations from collectors, authors (especially from Lexington), scholars, people with duplicates and others who want to help the public library.

"WE WOULD like people to give us books they no longer need," said Sue O'Neil, chairwoman. "All donations are tax deductible.

"We will have two sales. The first, on May 28 from 7 to 9 p.m., is a sale of 'better books'. We will ask a minimum price of usually a dollar or more on all of the books."

Buyers write a bid on a piece of paper for the books they want. At the end of the evening, books are sold to the highest bidder.

"This is a silent auction," she explained.

"WHEN AN author's works are collected widely, as with these men, first editions are usually expensive", said Cecil Bull, chairwoman of the Tuesday night event.

The second sale, May 30 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., offers books for 25 cents or less.

"There is a great deal of good research material here," said O'Neil, "in history literature, political science, foreign languages and other areas."

"WE ARE also selling raffle tickets." A 25-cent ticket qualifies a person to win any of five books: America, by Alistair Cooke; The Kentucky Derby; The First One Hundred Years by Peter Chew; The Art of Walt Disney by Christopher Finch; Webster's Third New International Dictionary, and a three volume set of The Complete Letters of Vincent Van Gogh by the New York Graphic Society.

Tickets are on sale in the downtown library, the Southland branch and in bookmobiles.

"We have asked book dealers in this area for contributions and information of other book sales," O'Neil said. Contributors include Sen. Joseph Graves, (R-Lexington). "Adolph Rupp will donate his recent book, autographed." We also have two books from the collection of the late Dr. A.D. Kirwan (former UK President) and others.

"THE MONEY received from these events will be used to buy audio-visual equipment for the library," O'Neil explained.

The public library system in the U.S. is suffering from lack of funds. The Lexington library, itself, is far below what the American Library Association recommends in funding. This will be our main fund raising project for the year, she said.

Environmentalist groups ask for stiffer coal mining regulations

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Environmentalist groups, acting as a coalition, have asked the Army Corps of Engineers to adopt some of the stiffest coal mining regulations yet proposed for land surrounding corps reservoirs.

Their attorney, Dean Hill Rivkin, said the regulations would apply only to land owned or controlled by the corps. He said, however, the wording of the regulations could be used to help prosecute owners of polluting mines farther away from the reservoirs.

RIVKIN IS staff attorney for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, located in Lexington. He said he is representing the Letcher County Citizens League to Protect Surface Rights and the Floyd County Save Our Land Club.

He said the Natural Resources Defense Council of New York is involved in the action along with the Sierra Club, Kentucky Audubon Council, Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club and the Russell Fork Fish and Game Club.

Rivkin said the groups drew suggestions from a wide variety of sources to come up with "the best regulatory scheme we could think of."

HE SAID he understands the corps will publish its proposed regulations soon and that his groups' proposal can be used as a basis to improve the corps proposal, and perhaps force a public hearing on the matter.

College of Law is notifying students

By STEWART TRISLER
Kernel Staff Writer
Students accepted by the College of Law for its fall term are currently being notified by mail, said Admissions Director Margaret Morgan.
Her office is now forming a pool of approximately 75 alternates who will also be notified in case some of those accepted decide not to attend UK.

GARRETT FLICKINGER, law professor and head of the committee that reviews UK law school applicants, said Chase and UL were on the "rolling-admissions plan" whereby applications are taken as they come in by groups of 50 or 60, and a few students are accepted from each group.

ABOUT 900 applications were received for the 160 openings, Morgan said, a decline from recent years.

To be considered for admission to the college, a student's Law School Data Assembly must be sent to UK by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., before March 31. Included in this profile are transcripts and Law School Admission Test scores (LSAT).

Morgan said 25 to 30 students with exceptionally high grade point averages (GPA) and LSAT scores were advised of acceptance before the March 31 deadline. The remaining applicants are presently being notified.

STUDENTS WITH a GPA below 2.6 and a LSAT of 525 or lower are generally not reviewed for admission unless they ask for special consideration.

The University of Louisville (UL) School of Law will notify all applicants of acceptance by June 1, according to A.E. Lovesee, admissions officer. UK has space for about 225 students in its school.

Salmon P. Chase College of Law at Northern Kentucky State College will admit 200 in the fall, said Shari Diego, admissions director. All its applicants will be notified of acceptance by May 1.

In contrast, UK reviews all applicants after the March 31 deadline, unless they are one of those accepted on the basis of a high GPA and LSAT score prior to the deadline.

Flickinger said over one-third of last fall's entering class majored in history or political science, with the rest distributed among many undergraduate fields.

FLICKINGER said the committee also weighs extra curricular activities and leadership capabilities along with GPA and LSAT.

Morgan said she had observed that "academic credentials get higher each year" and now students usually must have a GPA of 3.0 or better and score above 600 on the LSAT to gain acceptance.

Since UK is a state-supported university, the College of Law "highly favors Kentucky residents," Morgan said. However, many students may change their minds and attend another school so the "complexion may change."

A $100 DEPOSIT is required by all accepted students if they intend to enter UK in the fall. It is not refundable if they decide to attend another law school, but does insure that students won't keep other, more well-intentioned candidates from entering UK.

New appointees please Singletary

By JIM MAZZONI
Kernel Staff Writer

UK president, Dr. Otis Singletary, expressed delight yesterday over the two appointments and the one reappointment to the UK Board of Trustees made by Gov. Wendell Ford.

Concerning Richard E. Cooper, the reappointed member Singletary said, "He's been a good trustee and a good solid fellow. I am glad he was reappointed."

FRANK RAMSEY and Homer Wendell Ramsey were the two newly appointed members.

Singletary noted the former Ramsey has been active in the alumni association for a number of years and acknowledged him as the alumni trustee.

As for the latter Ramsey, Singletary said, "I've never met him, but people I know who know him speak very well about him."

FORD FIRST announced the appointments Tuesday. The two new members replace trustees whose terms expired last Dec. 31.

Even Singletary wasn't informed of the decision until earlier in the week.

"They called me from the governor's office a couple of days ago to let me know just as a matter of courtesy," he admitted.

SINGLETARY said trustee appointments were solely up to the governor according to a state statute and noted, "The president has no voice in appointing anyone to the Board of Trustees."

Then he added, "The governor doesn't need any help from me in making his appointment."

Frank Ramsey, a Madisonville businessman, replaces Lexington lawyer Tommy Bell. He has been a member of the alumni board of directors since 1966.

RAMSEY WAS a basketball All-American in the early 50s and graduated from UK in 1954 with a B.S. in commerce. He also coached the ABA Kentucky Colonels in the 1970-71 season.

"Dr. Singletary called me Monday afternoon and said he thought it was going to happen and I heard about it on the news Tuesday," he said and admitted he didn't know he was in consideration.

But he added, "I think it's a tremendous honor."

WHITLEY CITY lawyer, Homer Wendell Ramsey, replaces Paris newspaper publisher Jesse Alverson.

"I want to do what's in the best interest of the University students body and the University as a whole," he said yesterday from Russell Springs where he's serving as a Special Judge on a school board case.

"I don't think any particular group should run everything," he explained.

TO EXPLAIN how he would handle the responsibilities of his new appointment he laughed and said, "I don't take orders from anybody. I try to listen to all sides and then make my own decisions."

Ramsey graduated from the UK law school in 1949, has been president of the school's alumni association and is on the board of governors for the Kentucky Bar Association.

Cooper, from Somerset and the general manager of the Somerset Stone Company, is beginning his third consecutive four-year term as a member of the Board.

HIS TWO previous appointments were made by Governors Breathitt and Nunn respectively.

Cooper graduated from UK in 1938 and has been a long time member of the alumni association. He has also served as president of the alumni association, the finance committee, the student code committee, and in more recent years has been a member of the Board's five-man executive committee.

Concerning his previous terms Cooper said, "It's been a very interesting experience in the last eight years."

AND LOOKING ahead he added, "Whatever I'm asked to do, I'll do."

APA will sponsor 'awareness' hearing

Opponents and supporters of the controversial Newtown Pike Extension will air viewpoints at a May public hearing on the proposed highway.

The Assembly for Political Action (APA) is sponsoring the hearing to maximize public awareness and increase citizen participation in decisions affecting the community.

THE $6.5 million proposed expressway would connect Newtown Pike at Main Street with Euclid Avenue at Rose Street.

The hearing was originally scheduled May 3 at the UK Agricultural-Science Auditorium.

"The hearing has been postponed until the week of May 20 due to scheduling difficulties with some participants," said Nancy Daly, APA steering committee member.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT President-elect David Mucci, who opposed Newtown Extension in the recent election, will participate in the program.

The Lexington-Fayette County Transportation Commission, which last week urged immediate construction of the road, will also participate.

APA, a good government and party reform group, is sponsoring the hearing in conjunction with the Temporary Kentucky Organization. (The Highway Department will hold the required public hearing later this summer.)

TENTATIVELY, the format includes:

—Kentucky Department of Highways;

—Lexington-Fayette County Transportation Commission;

—Irishtown, Davis Bottom and South Hill Neighborhood Associations, representing residents of the affected area;

—Dr. J.A. Prestridge, author of the alternative "City Edges" plan; and —UK Student Government.

Persons or groups interested in participating in the program should contact Daly or Ken Walker of the APA steering committee.

Summer jobs?

Office of Experiential Education finds internships for summer sessions

By CAROL MUNROE
Kernel Staff Writer

An alternative to four and eight-week summer school sessions is offered by the Office for Experiential Education (OEE) for students who would like to steer clear of stuffy summer classrooms yet still gain credit hours.

For the many students who plan to remain on campus this summer to earn those few needed credits, OEE has a storehouse of information from local agencies anxious to accept help from student interns in exchange for college credit.

KATHY SHELTON, OEE's director of research, has compiled an index of Kentucky agencies seeking student aid.

About 4,000 statewide agencies were recently surveyed with questions that asked how students might be placed with that agency, what students might learn, what majors are preferred, what time schedule is required, and what pay, if any, would be given.

"The response has been tremendous," Barbara Hofer, OEE assistant director said. "We have received hundreds of replies with more coming in every day."

SHELTON HAS the information filed by academic major and area of interest. A student can readily refer to his field of interest and find the agencies with which he can apply.

"The response has been tremendous," Hofer said. "We have received hundreds of replies with more coming in every day."

The index lists opportunities with agencies looking for help in areas such as alcohol and drugs; youth rights; summer recreation; personnel and business administration; women's rights; accounting; and social professions. Many positions are in Lexington, but several are available throughout Kentucky.

"Students going home for the summer can check out the opportunities available in their home towns," Hofer said.

OEE HELPS students obtain positions by making phone calls, arranging interviews and suggesting references. Depending on the major field, year in school and involvement with the agency, OEE works with students to determine the number and type of hours earned through the internships.

The experience will "allow students to become involved and explore career interests" — and earn credits.

The positions, available for both summer and fall, are not simply summer jobs. Most agencies offer volunteer spots, and students accepting them usually earn academic credit instead of a salary.

BUT HOFER stressed the "unique and excellent opportunities for practical experience which allow students to become involved and explore career interests while earning hours," in an environment much different from a summer classroom.

In addition to the Kentucky survey index, OEE has contacts with urban corps centers in several major cities, including the Consumer Advocate Program in New York City.

Also, institutions such as the UCLA Experiential Learning Center can put students in touch with similar internship positions in other localities. Programs in Washington, D.C. have been set up in this way.

"IT IS a little late to arrange for positions outside the state at this time," Hofer said. "But we want students to be aware these are, and will be, offered every semester. The positions are there; they just need to be filled."

Hofer and OEE director Robert Sexton want students interested in trying the summer and fall Kentucky positions now.

By contacting OEE students can arrange for a consultation session with the agency internship index and experiential education directors.

Circus moves into Guignol in comedy of 'Mockinpott'

By CAROL CROPPER
Kernel Arts Editor

A circus has taken over the Guignol Theatre and the clowns look amazingly like our own friends and neighbors.

For, last night's opening of How Mr. Mockinpott Was Cured of His Sufferings set up tent and spent a night out to poke fun at man and the whirlwind of his woes.

WHAT THE play's director, Douglas E. Powell, describes as one of the UK Theatre's most ambitious undertakings is certainly one of the most unusual and lustily comic ones.

The costumes alone are enough to win it recognition. Bright yarn wigs and colorful stuffed vests bring back memories of the Marx brothers — as do some of the antics engaged in by the play's cartoon characters.

Mockinpott and his fellow sufferers successfully seem unreal. No knight in shining armor steps forward to win empathy in his struggle for truth. Each character is pleasantly distant from ourselves . . . and therefore it isn't too big a blow to the ego to admit, "Yes, it is all a little ridiculous."

LINES ARE rhymed to add to the effect of ludicrous pretentious melodrama.

It is this technique which creates problems for the play — especially in the beginning. Mockinpott's (Russell Henderson) voice often chops into sing-song rhythm, stealing attention from his words.

But this hurdle is cleared as the play progresses and the audience

becomes accustomed to this mode of speaking.

AND SO, a bright parade of sex-object nurses and rhetoric-spouting politicians dance their way across the appropriately unusual stage.

Even God and his angels show up in all their splendor (one must remember that so-called heavenly splendor is defined in the materialism of Man, i.e. "streets of gold") and Mockinpott gets his chance to probe the mysteries of the universe.

Laughter is the only answer.

STAGED NIGHTLY through Sunday, Mockinpott and its cast create a world that is entertaining to visit.

Perhaps its playwright, Peter Weiss, would retort, "Too bad you have to live there."

The Mark Twain?

Drew brings back author for evening of laughter

By JAY BENNETT
Kernel Staff Writer

One of the more well-known figures in American history was recreated Tuesday evening in the Student Center.

Parker Drew brought the character of Mark Twain to life before a crowd of approximately 30 people.

THE COSTUMING was to be expected. The University of Louisville freshman wore a white suit complete with a white vest and red tie. A grey wig and a drooping grey mustache added to the visual aids.

More important was the characterization itself. It was the Twain you were taught about all through high school, but now he was there in front of you. The slow shuffling walk as he roamed about the stage while speaking . . .

his back bent slightly, as if showing the weight of the years.

The voice, however, held the key to it all. It had a slightly wavering quality. It ranged from a quiet whisper to a powerful, commanding tone, demanding your attention.

PARKER CAME across, not as someone acting as Twain, but as

Twain himself. The result was an evening of laughter.

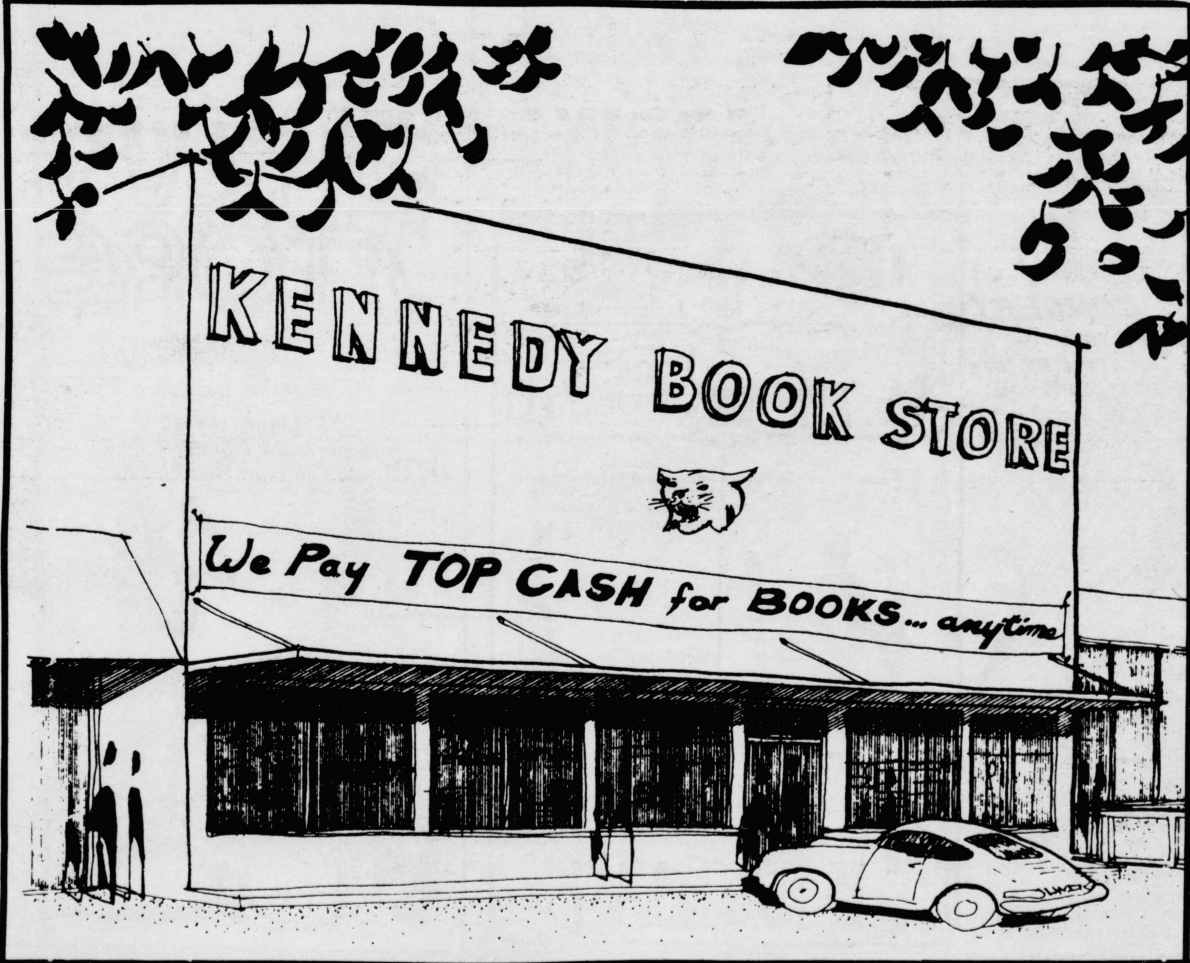

The material was far from new. Drawn from the works of Twain, warm stories were woven by the crouching, greying figure. Works like Huckleberry Finn, Speeches and Letters from the Earth were represented.

The stories covered topics from old slave tales to the virtues of vices. Some people would call them funny stories. Others would label them folklore. But either way, they were rich and alive.

THE SECRET of Twain came across near the end of the show as Drew walked slowly to the front of the stage.

He leaned forward, and said calmly, "I'm 70 years old now. I'm getting old. I recognize the fact, I just don't realize it."

'A nation that can't stand ...'

By GARY RAWLINGS
Kernel Staff Writer

ONE OF our forefathers once said a nation that can't stand criticism, can't stand. Well, I think these words are applicable to any modern institution. Including basketball.

Also and conversely, anyone who makes errors in his criticism must be able to realize his own mistakes and admit them openly.

Louis Stout coached at Lexington Bates Creek, Robert Graves is the mentor of Louisville Central High School and Kentucky has not been shorted in assistant coaches.

SO, I'll eagerly eat crow for these errors I made in a recent column. No excuses.

It wasn't, and it has never been, my intention to hurt UK's recruiting by making derogatory statements about coach Joe Hall. I never doubted Hall's coaching capabilities nor his ability to encourage good rapport with his players.

I love the University of Kentucky athletic program and it is this love that makes me criticize when criticism is due.

MY INFORMATION about the need for black coaches was not taken off the top of my head. It was derived from several interviews with Blacks, both within and outside the University.

Still, there is a problem. If there was no problem, the Kentucky Wildcats wouldn't have roared to a 13-13 season. I think this record speaks for itself. Maybe the guys who selected Kevin Grevey, Mike Flynn and Jimmy Dan Conner to numerous high school honors were mistaken. But I don't think so.

Last season it was commonplace for sportswriters from many areas in the south to call in search of an answer to the problem. After all, "Kentucky has too much talent to be playing so poorly!"

AGAIN, I repeat this is not a direct reflection on Hall. There are too many other factors which must be realized.

The other members of the SEC have been gunning for UK for as

Height never hurt before

 many years as the Cats have won the conference crown. They have become immensely stronger. They had size, aggressiveness and an overwhelming desire to beat us.

But in the past, Kentucky has had the same desire to win. With the talent UK had they should have been a winner. A small team in Kentucky blue had been a resounding success before.

RUPP'S RUNTS had nothing but desire to win. They literally hustled their way into the NCAA Finals. Sure they had talent, but still no size. They were true masters of the fast break.

I didn't mean to infer in the article that a black assistant coach would come out of the sky to rescue UK. It is simply my conviction that the time is ripe for the move and that he would be a valuable aid to Coach Hall.

But (not meaning to sound like you-know-who) now is the time to look ahead to recruiting and next year. Kentucky is finally removing the racist stigma many felt existed here. I sincerely believe a call for a black assistant coach is not rekindling that fire.

WHO KNOWS the source of the problem? Surely not myself. It doesn't lie out in the open for the world to see. It is not in the hands of UK Athletic Director Harry Lancaster, the assistants or Joe B. Hall.

It lies, in my opinion, at the heart of the Kentucky basketball hierarchy. The pressure to be a winner at a school that has known nothing but winners is enormous. It affects the players, the coaches and the fans.

Someone once said, "I would like to be the man that follows the man that follows Adolph Rupp." How true.

I SINCERELY hope and believe whoever that man might be, won't be coming around for another 41 seasons.

WALLACES

It's another wide-open race in today's Blue Grass Stakes

By KAY COYTE
Kernel Staff Writer

ROUND AND ROUND they go and who will come in first, nobody knows.

In the continuing story of the most mixed-up batch of horses ever competing for the 100th Kentucky Derby, no real favorite stands out for today's $50,000-added Bluegrass Stakes at Keeneland.

The top three entries in the one and one-eighth mile Derby prep — Bushongo, Judger and Little Current — have all beaten each other at least once.

IT'S A handicapper's nightmare.

Would you believe Little Current won over Bushongo in the Everglades, Judger beat Little Current in the Florida, Bushongo ran away from both of them in the Flamingo and all of the above have whipped Gold and Myrrh.

If Seth Hancock's Judger or Montpelier Stable's Bushongo can pull off a first-place finish in the Blue Grass, they will improve their chances for victory in the May 4 Derby and, inadvertently, reduce the number of entries for that race.

It would appear, however, if the trend in three-year-old horse racing this year continues, tomorrow's best bet would be William Wilmot's Gold and Myrrh. He hasn't had his turn to beat anyone yet.

(Gold and Myrrh will also carry one of the lowest weights — 114 pounds, will start from the good inside No. 4 post position and will tote Keeneland's winningest jockey, Don Brumfield.)

PROTAGONIST, the 1973 two-year-old champion, will pass up the Blue Grass today and instead will head for Saturday's Stepping Stone Purse at Churchill Downs.

The Elmendorf Farm's Las Vegas winter book

favorite has been bothered by sore knees throughout his winter racing career, perhaps giving reason to his poor finishes in the Bay Shore Stakes and Gotham Mile in New York.

And this week his problems have been compounded by an infection of the horse's coronet band on his hoof.

ANOTHER interesting factor in today's race is the manner in which weights were distributed among the top three contenders.

Bushongo and Judger, the most recent Florida stakes winners, will carry the highest weights of 123 pounds each. Their closest challenger, Little Current, will carry only 114 pounds.

Anti-dam delegation testifies before legislative committees

"IDON'T know how much time we will have to speak in the House, but I think it will be really short," Griffith said. She added the delegation would wait until they got to Washington and then plan who would speak in the House committee.

Griffith said she and other representatives have appointments to meet with almost every Kentucky legislator and other Washington officials.

"We will try to meet with everyone we can in the two days we'll be in Washington," Griffith added.

THE HOUSE and Senate committees can appropriate money to further planning of the dam if they see fit. If they do not allocate more money the project will not be finished, but just postponed, Griffith said.

The Washington trip for the Lexington opponents was donated by the Sierra Club, Save Our Red River (SORR) organization, SG, and money collected at the Frankfort march last Saturday.

The dam, if built, would inundate 1,546 acres of land and 15 miles of stream in the gorge area. The U.S. Corps of Engineers, originators of the project, maintained the final decision of the dam is up to Congress and the Kentucky politicians.

If the final environmental impact statement is approved by a federal agency next month, the dam will have final approval and construction could begin as early as fall 1975.
