HERE SHALL THE KERNEL ALL STUDENT RIGHTS MAINTAIN

BOO YOURSELF

Just substitute the word "football" for "basketball" in the following editorial and there emerges a completely timely piece.

What used to be a somewhat comical situation, indulged in only by a few who desired nothing more than to attract a little attention to themselves, has by its own momentum, grown until it has now reached serious proportions.

Granting the fact that sometimes the officiating at various athletic contests is not all it should be, it does not excite those students who vent their displeasure by letting loose a loud and lusty "boo" every time they feel that the decision is even slightly controversial.

A fast game of basketball lends itself admirably to this practice. Decisions must necessarily be called at short intervals and a first-class boer has a chance to come into his own.

There is one thing of which The Kernel is certain: If this practice continues, as it has recently, the Kentucky student body and the entire University is certain to acquire a reputation for being unsportsmanlike in their attitude toward athletics and those things which have a fair athletic contest stand.

CUTTIN' UP THE CAMPUS

with "Scoop"

CAMPUSOUNDS:

In the post office: "He's so nasty he asks a girl to go to a dance with him just so he can gripe about being stuck with her."

In the Commons: "It took me four years to discover that we have such a nice library on the campus, and now that I'm a senior I never have time to go there."

On the steps of the Physics building: "She's a funny girl. Of course, it may be only an idle rumor, but I hear that she's got PRINCIPLES!"

At the football game: "If you would pay more attention to the team down there instead of gaping at the cheer leaders, the wildcat, the band, and the other freaks around here—you'd probably know who was winning."

In Neville hall: "Oh sure you know him. He's the one who doesn't come to class all the time!"

In the Administration building: "Yeah, I used to date that guy. He told me he was a senior when I was a freshman, and now that I'm a senior—he's still telling that to freshmen!"

DON'T LOOK NOW, BUT—I think you're being followed, said the guard to the half-back, as they raced down the field.

UNIVERSITYTYPES:

The Campuscientist—He enjoys rushing into the post office in his lab coat, hoping he looks a little like Robert Taylor, when Robert Taylor is impersonating a scientist in a lab coat... There is the perpetual aroma of chlorine about him... and a perpetual vague look around his eyes when the conversation is on anything but chem and bacteriology... Sometimes we find a campus scientist who has other interests, a wide circle of friends, and who actually engages in campus activities... but these are so rare that other scientists label them and put them into the Museum... and then they are lost forever to us common laymen... The campuscientist's four years at college are four years of going to school... no love life, no heartbeats, no dances, no nuthin'... but he is of the stuff that makes germs afraid... so we'll let him play with his bacteria in his own quiet way, if that's what he likes... After all, SOMEBODY has to!

This Campus and That World

By RALPH E. JOHNSON

Today there is a letter to be answered. A good friend, Russell Lowell Hall, has written me a letter in which he sets forth a very interested fact concerning Kentucky.

Mr. Ralph E. Johnson, University of Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Johnson: Your column of Tuesday on the persistence of Civil War feeling was very interesting; and very true—although I have not found any particular dislike of a Kentucky native for a northerner, other than personal.

Sometimes a New Englander makes himself very obnoxious because of his infernal rump and hurry to get complacent or to do something.

While, as you say, "they show ill-feeling in the North for a southerner," they always let him know he is from the South. I cannot see where the North or South has a right to hate Kentucky; yet we did not secede from the Union, yet we put as many men on one side as the other.

What strikes me as being pathetic is the fact that, while Kentucky is one of the most beautiful states in the Union, she is cursed and unclaimed by every other section of the country because of her location.

If a Kentuckian goes North, they call him a southerner; if he goes South they call him a "Daw" Yankee; and if he travels West, they say, "Ah, one of those top-hatted easterners." When he visits New York he is called a westerner, and immediately examined to see if he has a revolver under his coat.

The only bright ray in the whole setup is that, they all respect you because of Kentucky; Kentucky and its mild juleps, fast horses, pretty women, and heritage of pioneer stock. After all, who wouldn't respect all that?

This is neither a criticism nor a declaration of war, Mr. Johnson; so please don't make a "Fort Sumter" out of me.

Respectfully, RUSSELL LOWELL HALL.

Mr. Russell Lowell Hall, University of Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Hall: First of all—I appreciate that letter, though I must admit I rather expected some one would get just a wee bit sore about what I said concerning "living in the past," etc. The real reason I appreciate that letter is because you are apparently a real southern gentleman in the bud.

I don't know you—don't even know whether or not you are a Kentuckian, but I take it you are. I wonder why you mentioned "New Englanders" instead of just "northerners"? Is it perhaps because there has been a New Englander who has been a particular pain to you? Or maybe you don't know any New Englanders, and that happens to be your impression of them?

It has always been my impression that real New Englanders were more like Kentuckians than any other section of people I know. In Maine, New Hampshire or Vermont you will never find any one in a rush. In fact, their very slowness is irksome. They have some of the same homespun ways found in many parts of Kentucky.

Of course, their speech differs, but it differs only on the pronunciation of the "r."

If any one from the North has ever let you know you are from the South he was probably complimenting you. At least that has always been my attitude. There may be a few crude ones from up there who feel superior just because they are from the "city," but brother, they rub it in even when they find I'm from New Jersey.

I was introduced today to a fellow who was told that we lived "just across the river (Hudson) from each other." He, living in the change with the other and wear the badge.

Tridell Polly Craddock breezed into town Tuesday, blonde hair and all, to see her pal of former years, Kathleen Cole. And G. Houston displayed his true devotion by calling her up and trying to monopolize the situation.

The Tridells request that when the Dells come over for open house just to be different, they will refrain from putting their famous Glee club into operation, at least for a little while, as the Tridells are going to attempt to furnish the music themselves.

You mentioned "Fort Sumter"—never even heard of it! So if I have inadvertently made a Fort out of you in this letter you may attribute it to sheer ignorance on my part. Please write again.

Sportfully yours, RALPH E. JOHNSON.

P. S.—As I bring this letter to a close I notice a peculiar thing about your name—each of your three names ends in two "s." And if your last name had been Hell, the names would have ended in ell... Oh, me...

For examples of powerhouses we would like to refer you to that red-headed Simpson over at the Sigma Chi house. Went over to the Tridell house with a borrowed Evelyn pin and his badge, tied up Evelyn with the pin and then took Janie Hardwick into the next room and repeated the process with his badge.

October 8, 1936. Mr. Russell Lowell Hall, University of Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Hall: I appreciate that letter, though I must admit I rather expected some one would get just a wee bit sore about what I said concerning "living in the past," etc.

Shop Sights

By BETTY EARLE

Well, well, what do you think? Tippy had an assistant this week — none other than — no, I just can't be persuaded to tell his name! Anyway, this is his story, and it's a good one!
"Girls, Purcell's have solved this sweater and skirt problem. They have the grandest looking angora wool sweaters you've ever seen. They come in the gayest colors, reds, blues, dubbons, and also in the good old black and brown. They're soft and so sporty looking as you could want. Pick your sweater and then match it up with one of their skirts. You can choose from checks plaids, or plain skirts. And to complete your outfit be sure and see the sport oxfords — they're shoes with style, and I mean style! The best part of it is that they come in colors. Well, I'll see you at Purcell's — it's the style center for smart coats. P. S. It won't break you up either — your budget will love it." "Now, it's your turn — guess who?"

On up the street at Mitchell, Baker and Shan's there's a great variety of footwear. For your dressed up moods choose the suede "step-in," high in front, buttoning over with three tiny circles. Then there's one they call the "tea-timer". Its high tongue is bordered with patent leather edged in silver — a new note! All the shoes this season will have that leather trim of sort sort — it lends a sport or dressy air, depending upon the type it is. Jacqueline has another built high, is of suede, and laces up to tie on the side. You make have it in black with patent, or brown with russet calf. There are so many more I can't tell you about all of them!

Bradley's always has the last word for knit suits, you know, and they're exclusive with shipp's! Try the bumpy soft one or brown with the gold belt clasp — or any color, style, you like. Bradley is always obliging. If you're in the market

Sigma Chi
Sunday dinner guests were Mrs. Mrs. H. D. Palmore and daughter, Eloise, Frankfort; Ruth Richmond, Mabel Lovens, Jean Barker, Ann Lang, Bettye Murphy, Jane Day, Billie Phillips, Betty Mitchell and Clarence Kiehl.
Week-end guests were Sherman Ferrell, Danville; S. M. Spears, Louisville; Claude McAllister, Louisville, and William Hamilton, Mt. Sterling.
Mr. Gale Fields spent the week-end in Cincinnati, Ohio.
Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Adams and Mr. C. O. Ryan were visitors at the house Saturday from Louisville, and Lawrenceburg, respectively for a less expensive knit, there are some for $5.95, made of jersey that approaches the fuzziness of angora wool. It fastens with buttons looped on at the neck. The pockets are square to begin with but they've been turned around, so they seem to have that diamond shape. In just sweaters there is the one of dark brown trimmed with a braid of bright green and brown around the neck; or the wavy wide knit with wood buttons.

Deaton's have some new horsey pins — just in, and you'll like them! Some have the hunting horn curled around and round.

Bernad Fay Speaks At Memorial Hall

(Continued From Page 1) Doctor Fay gave the third reason for the growth of a dictatorship as the general feeling in a country which does not face the variances of social classes...

A list of seventeen dictatorships in Europe were presented by Doctor Fay, among them Russia, Roumania, Italy, Poland, Hungary, Albania, Finland, Bulgaria, Greece, and Portugal.

It is Doctor Fay's opinion that the dictatorship will not last, basing this on the fact that it is founded on emergency, ultimately bound with one man, who cannot live forever...

Doctor Fay concluded with a challenge to the youth of the generation. "You know," he said, "what destroys a democracy. You know the reasons for the growth of a dictatorship. You are young and strong...

Many of her friends will be interested in knowing that Tridell Phoebe Ellis was married this fall to Phigam Warfield Everett, climaxing a whirlwind romance. We offer congratulations.

Who knows, maybe it's the beginning of a fine romance? Anyway, we hear that Jiggsy Whittinghill had a blind date with Kappa Lillian Gaine Webb last night. And now that he is singing "Won't You Come into My Webbs Said the Spider to the Fly," instead of "Marsie, My Margie."

With all the chatter about the fine girls on the campus, we all seem to have missed one of the finest. She's a Theta transfer but don't hold that against her. We are referring to the "Sightseer's" little sister, Louise Slaton. HOOEY POLLUI

Been having ideas about writing a similarity of Peppy's Diary for this column but a letter from Suede Youngberg to our sports editor, Joe Quinn, settled that for us this week. Like to take a few excerpts and place them here just to show what our Kentucky boys do in New York.

"I have secured a penthouse on 71st and Central Park West, but the only trouble is that the room is only about two by three and a half for $30 a month, ain't that awful? I looked up Gasling when I got here and we've really been seeing the spots in New York, every night - we haven't missed a lick. I've been to the world famous Cotton Club and heard Cab and Bill Robinson, a wonderful floor show, but it ought to be with Scotch and sodas at ninety-five cents a crack. Been to the Hickory House and heard Riley and Farley, they're really a lot better than I thought they were. Thence to the Roseland Ballroom to hear Clyde McCoy and Claude Hopkins - a very cheap evening there. To Leon and Eddie's with a truly remarkable floor show, also to the Yacht Club to hear Red McKenzie, who is not so hot. To the famous Astor to Lopez, and to the Hotel Traft to hear George Healy and Dolly Dawson, who is really the best femme lyric interpreter I have heard in a blue moon. I guess that's all - oh, yes, I mustn't forget Minsky's with a very suggestive and intimate revue, nevertheless bore some at times. Have taken in two Brooklyn Dodgers football games (compliments of 'Moon'). Kerch is going pretty hot as is Bobby Wilson and that great Georgia Tech idol of years gone by, 'Father' Lumpkin. (He would have to bring up George T.)

One night not so very long ago down at the "German-American" collegiate hangout and rendezvous I ran into no one but Elvis (The Great) Stahr and Jimmy Moore. Stahr was on his way to England and Moore was on his way to enter into the portals of Harvard, and for old Kentucky's sake we really tossed one."

Razzle dazzle, razzle dazzle. Gosh, how I wish someone would let me in on what that stuff's all about. Heard of rival teams having many things up their sleeves but never heard of a razzle dazzle. Sounds to me like a fourth or fifth cousin to Popeye's Jeep. Say, I wonder what they are saying about our team down in Atlanta if we can judge by what we are saying about theirs?

Is there such a thing as a "jinx" in football? Sometimes it really appears that there is but the cynics won't believe in any such thing. To them it's just a case of a good football team beating one that's not so good and doing it year in and year out.

For those who believe in the "old Indian sign", however, there is ample justification. Here are one or two specific examples. Dartmouth meets Yale every year in the huge Bowl and time after time the Indians came out of the hills of Hanover with an apparently superior team but could never defeat the Elks. One year we saw the two teams stage the wildest scoring-fest we have ever witnessed and wind up in a 33-33 deadlock. Last season, Dartmouth finally broke the ice and registered a 14-6 triumph.

To bring the story back to Lexington it might be well to mention the famous jinx that Wallace Wade-coached teams have held over our own Wildcats. According to the rumors, when Wade was rejected by the University in favor of Harry Gamage for the position of head football coach, he accepted an offer at Alabama and vowed that Kentucky would never defeat one of his teams. And since that time, many years ago the Cats have never done so. And since Wade left Alabama the Tide has done pretty well on its own account, under Frank Thomas, to carry on the best-Kentucky tradition.

With the Wildcats ready to trot onto Grant Field tomorrow against Georgia Tech's Ramblin' Wreck, that old jinx talk is bound to come up again. For Kentucky has never lost to the Engineers, although their football history has been a short one. The teams have met but four times and three of the contests have gone to the Cats and one was tied.

It was the first meeting between the schools in 1923 that resulted in a tie. The Wildcats went to Atlanta as a rank underdog, given only the slightest chance to win. Outplayed perhaps, but not outthought, the Wildcats held their own all the way until Curt Sanders dropped back to boot a perfect field goal and give the lowly Cats a tie game and a moral win, 3-3.

In 1932, again at Atlanta, the Kentuckians triumphed, 12-6, when Pop Beck's disputed lateral to Dutch Keweter was carried over the goal for the deciding points. The next year it was Ralph Kercheval's great kicking that kept Tech in hot water and his placement-after-touchdown that provided the 7-6 victory.

Last year, as most of you know, Kentucky played one of its best games of the season to subdue the Techsters, 25-6. The seeming decisiveness of the score was somewhat deceptive as Tech had a powerful squad, led by Dutch Koneeman, and most of that team is back again this season.

Which brings us up to the moment. Just as Tech has many returning veterans, so has Kentucky. Very few of the team which started against the Engineers in 1935 are absent. And we took them that time.

One difference between the games may cause some difficulty. For years, now, Kentucky has been unfortunate on the road, although always a great home club. But when the boys start to travel they seem to suffer mentally for some reason and fail to give their top performance. One outstanding exception of the past few years was their exhibition against Ohio State last season at Columbus. The Cats were keyed up that day and would have been a winner against any other team.

Tomorrow's game means a great deal to the Wildcats just as it does to Georgia Tech. Each team needs a victory to keep in the conference running and the winner will receive a goodly share of the national spotlight.

Cochs Wynne stated a few days ago that he thought Tech would win. But when such a confirmed pessimist as Captain Stanley Nevers believes that Kentucky will win, who are we to doubt it?

Without any further ado, then, we nominate Kentucky as the winner of tomorrow's classic of the South, but refuse to name the score. Just look what happened to us last week.

"Pardon me, Duchess, but you're sitting on my Twenty Grands."
"Oh, Colonel, you say the cutest things. Have one of mine!"

WE CERTIFY that we have inspected the Turkish and Domestic Tobaccos blended in TWENTY GRAND cigarettes and find them as fine in smoking quality as those used in cigarettes costing as much as 50% more.

BASKETEERS TO REPORT ON OCT. 14

By BOBBY EVANS

The University of Kentucky Wildcats basketball team, champions of the Southeastern conference last year, will report to Coach Rupp for their initial practice October 14 at the Alumni gymnasium. Out to capture their sixth consecutive championship in the conference, the Wildcats will be minus two star players in Garland Lewis, regular center, and Andy Anderson, guard and captain of the '36 team. Anderson was hailed as one of the best guards in the nation for the past two years, and his absence will be felt tremendously. However, the fine recruits from last year's freshman team will make the Cats a strong contender for the Southeastern crown according to Coach Rupp.

The Wildcat mentor will have for the nucleus of the '37 team Warfield Donohue, captain and guard, Red Hagan, forward and Ralph Carlisle, all-southeastern forward. The latter will be a candidate for all-American honors this season. From last year's varsity squad, J. Rice Walker, a dependable substitute center is slated to move into that position, but he will be pushed by "Tub" Thompson, star pivot man from the freshman ranks.

The battle for the vacated guard position will be interesting as will the fight between Walker and Thompson. Russ Ellington and Jimmy Goforth, roommates since their freshman year, have an even chance of landing a regular berth on the first five. After two years of varsity experience either of these men should be able to step into the shoes of Andy Anderson, and give any forward in the conference a run for his money. Then, too, there are several sophomores who will be competing for their first year on the varsity. Bernie Opper, Walter Hodge, or Lawrence Garland might find themselves on the starting lineup.

In Carlisle and Hagan, Kentucky will have two forwards that will make it warm for opposing guards. Carlisle has the most accurate crisp shot in the conference, and his ability to get up in the air, which is very essential in basketball, was unsurpassed by opponents last year. Hagan, after a slow start last season, proved that he has the caliber of a first class college player. Coach Rupp will have Fred Curtis, Bob Tice, and Cortland Bliss as able reserves.

SPORT SHORTS

By LOUIS HAYNES

The largest crowd ever to see a football game, (112,912 paid attendance) saw the Notre Dame-Southern California at Soldier Field, Chicago, in 1929.

Alabama has not lost an opening game since 1904, but Howard tied them last year 7-7.

There are about 700 colleges in America that have football teams. It costs $85 to equip the average gridman.

Andrew E. Wyant played 98 college games in seven football seasons. He was guard and tackle for Bucknell in 1888-89-90-91, and then went to Chicago where he played center for three years in 1892-93-94. Moon Mullins, playing fullback for Notre Dame in 1929, gained one inch in line play against the Navy, but this one inch resulted in a victory for Notre Dame.

Rutgers won the first intercollegiate football game in the United States defeating Princeton 6-4 in 1869. Since that time the teams have played 32 more games, Princeton taking the mail.

FORMULATE DANCE PLANS

At the regular meeting of the Interfraternity council Monday night at the Phi Delta Theta house plans for their annual dance were formulated and a committee was appointed. The committee is composed of Reynolds Watkins, chairman, Ray Lathrem, and C. T. Hertz.

The meeting was presided over by Ken Raynor, president.

Enemy Camps

It looks as if the University of Kentucky football team is rapidly becoming the champion "bubble-burster" of the South. After seeing the Wildcats destroy the illusion set up around Xavier and V. M. I., there is bound to be some doubt in the average fan's mind as to whether Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado will give up to advance predictions.

The 'Cats will find no "bubble" to burst when they line up against the Tornado, but in its place will be a strong, experienced team with an offense so tricky that Atlanta sports writers have labeled it "razle-dazle." Using none of this new offense the Rambling Wreck swamped Sewanee completely last Saturday under a 38-0 score. Headed by Marion "Dutch" Koenemann and Fletcher Sims, Tech has a backfield worthy of being compared to Kentucky's own "Million dollar" quartet.

Those of you who saw the Tech game here last year will remember Koenemann and his long run for the opening touchdown of the game. An experienced line will be in front of the Tech backfield and the mettle of the Wildcat's heretofore slightly-tested forewell will have to come through a rigid trial if the team expects to emerge victorious.

The Engineers took only three plays to tally the first marker against Sewanee and marched 85 yards from their own 15-yard line in doing it. A 35-yard end run opened up the attack, followed by a five yard line plunge. Then Koenemann received a 20 yard forward pass from Sims and campered the remaining 25 yards for the score.

This type of play was repeated many times during the course of the game and although no special effort was made in an attempt to run up the score, the melee ended with Tech very decisively on top. The majority of touchdowns were made on passes or as the direct result of them.

To date Tech has played but two games but has scored 113 points, 55 against Presbyterian and 58 against Sewanee, while the Wildcats have the same total with three games behind them. Both teams came out of Saturday's games in excellent condition. A few minor injuries are reported to have been suffered by the Yellow Jackets, but all should heal up by game time. Pritchard is the only Wildcat reported injured and his bruised heel should be well in a couple of days. As things stand now the tilt between the 'Cats and the Tornado heads the list as the leading combat in the South.

Army's Cadets turned Washington and Lee's Generals' attack into a retreat, bombarding them with 28 points while allowing the Generals to garner none. Florida had trouble in downing Citadel 20-14 but Alabama's Crimson Tide reeled over Clemson, considered strong in the Southern Conference, to a 28-0 victory. The Jaspers from Manhattan took Niagara into camp with a 23-7 triumph. Tennessee's Volunteers could get only 6 points while they allowed North Carolina to make 14.

For the first time in many, many years, things are pointing towards a Hillenmeyer being a very frequent visitor over at the house of Ekappa. But with a beauty like Leigh Brown who wouldn't?

DAYTON HIGH SCHOOL HAS THE THIRD DAVIS

From Northern Kentucky comes the news that there is a Davis running wild for the Dayton High School Green Devils, and on investigating we find that he is of the same family as Bob and Dameron, the two outstanding backs on the Big Blue team. His name is Donald Davis, and he is a brother to the Kentucky Davis's.

Donnie, as he is called by his teammates, is a halfback on the team, and according to the coach of Newport High School, W. J. Blue Foster, is making a great job of filling the shoes of his more famous brothers.

Young Davis is just a sophomore and has gained around 140 pounds in his fifteen summers. He is dangerous in a broken field and he can kick and run.

A new record was hung up by the Appalachian State Mountaineers, when they beat Piedmont 105 to 0. The second team started the game and made 20 points the first quarter, then the first team was put in and rolled up 20 points. The second half the third team started and run up 27 more points and finally the fourth and fifth teams went in and rung up 38 points, to boast the grand total of 105 points. There was a rumor that the A. S. score keeper had a relapse after the game.

Chick Meehan's Manhattan Jaspers are using a brand of razzle dazle football that Kentucky will have a hard time stopping. They beat St. Bonaventure 32 to 7 in their first tussle. The Manhattan boys play an unorthodox brand of ball, as they use plenty of trick passes on any down or in any section of the playing field.

W.A.A. News

(By Eleanor Snedeker)

Well our party is over... I was glad to see so many of you out... I hope you enjoyed it as much as we enjoyed giving it... we had lots of fun rehearsing for the thing, and thought that we would never get our silhouettes to look right... Didn't the punch and cookies taste good, and the playing of red haired Carolyn Sigler helped to make everything go along smoothly.

Now that the first day of archery and hockey practice is over I hope that you aren't stiff... Get more of your friends to come out... We were well pleased at the attendance of the two sports this afternoon... Don't forget practice is held daily, Archery at 3:00 on the campus, and hockey at 4:00 on the field back of Patt Hall... even though you have never indulged in these two sports, come out anyway and you will be shown by the manager and Miss Averill how it is done

... Maybe you can't hit the bull's eye now,—but I will be willing to bet that before the three weeks is up you will be hitting it every time... Maybe you have never hit a hockey ball before,—well that's all right, just remember that you are not hitting a golf ball,—and the first thing you know you will be scoring goals for your side.
