—O—

The extraordinary favor in which the DAILY PRESS is held by advertisers is to be attributed to the character as well as to the extent of its circulation. Its habitual readers are the buying class of the community—those who buy books, real estate, stocks and bonds, dry goods, jewelry, pictures, furniture, carriages, and the thousand and one things which are the mark and index of advanced civilization. Its advertising columns thus have a peculiar value which the public have learned to appreciate. There is no class of persons in the community more vigilant and less likely to be deceived in the long run than advertisers. They know when they get their money's worth and when they do not. Nobody can tell them anything on this subject. That they have put the seal of their approval upon the DAILY PRESS is abundantly evident.
