TUESDAY ISSUE SEMI-WEEKLY KERNEL

NUMBER 39

The World Thinks On By JIM WOODBRIDGE

The Finnish loan bill passed the House last week by a comfortable margin and went back to the Senate to have some amendments tacked before its passage. Thus ends one of the most controversial questions of the present Congressional session—to give or not to give aid to a belligerent nation.

Probably the only instance in which the loan bill was brought before the public for any length of time was at last month's meeting of the American Youth Congress in Washington. The Congress took the isolationist stand of strict "hands off Europe" policy. Whether they were truly isolationists at heart or merely to have some headlines tacked before its passage. Thus ends one of the most controversial questions of the present Congressional session—to give or not to give aid to a belligerent nation.

When they arrived at the White House a message from the President expected some kind of statement regarding the loan bill. In fact, the President didn't avoid the issue in the least. Calling their denouncement of Finland "the silliest thing I have heard of since the 18th century," he told them to go home and think things over before raising a much agitated question which they could hardly understand. As for their appreciation bill, he stated that the NYA was doing all in its power to aid poor youths and asked them not to expect "Utopia overnight."

The delegates then listened to John L. Lewis, who a few days before had broken with the President and the administration and had declared that any attempt at a third term would be met with complete failure. Lewis spoke with all the warmth and affability of his command; this was an opportunity to make political capital of the isolationist votes which the Youth Congress claims.

Stating that his United Mine Workers were with him in his proposal of a fund to aid underprivileged youths, Lewis encouraged those who had been in the command; this was an opportunity to make political capital of the isolationist votes which the Youth Congress claims.

Georgia Licked In Finals, 51-43

Climaxing a typical Horatio Alger "from rags to riches" climb, a courageous underdog team of Kentucky Wildcats retained its Southeastern conference basketball title with a smashing 51-43 verdict over the Georgia Bulldogs in the final round of the annual hoop tournament Saturday night in Knoxville.

From the very start of the game it was apparent to the 6,000 fans that Kentucky was not to be halted in its drive for the crown. Georgia presented a big, aggressive team that fought with all the tenacity of its canine mascot, but while its offense blazed with off-balance, one handed shots, the defense couldn't handle the onslaught.

The victory further emphasized the Kentucky team's superiority over the Georgia Bulldogs in the Southeastern conference. In the nine years that he has headed the team, Coach Adolph Rupp holds one of the best winning percentages in regular season play. Kentucky, in that time, has won 157 games and lost 87.

Lug Home The Salt Pork Again

With pardonable pride and a tug on the bell-rope, we point to the fact that Kentucky's Wildcats have won the Southeastern conference basketball crown for the second time in as many years. It also marked the fourth time in the past seven years that the Cats have lugged home the proverbial salt pork. Actually, then, the victory was nothing new.

There are three factors, however, which make THE KERNEL feel that this year's triumph is especially praiseworthy. In the first place, the Wildcats had a streak of bad luck all season. What have illness did not break, unsympathetic officiating did. If ever a basketball team was deserving of some breaks, Kentucky was, but somehow they just didn't come. And so, the Cats had to get out and make their breaks, which isn't exactly an easy thing to do.

Secondly, winning a tournament is probably the world's toughest way to win a championship. "Anything," the saying goes, "can happen in a tournament, and usually does." Consequently, when Kentucky braved the brackets with an illness-crippled squad, and still managed to win out, it constituted quite an accomplishment.

And lastly, the rest of the teams in the Big 13 have become mighty tired of Kentucky winning the title so often. We think it can be said, without fear of contradiction, that nearly every five in the conference was "laving" for the Wildcats, with an idea at least of knocking them out of the running even if they couldn't win the tournament themselves. This didn't exactly ease matters, either.

No Longer To Be Held Accountable

What's To Be Done About Easter-KEA-Spring Vacation?

Clearing House carried a discussion of the problem before the vacation and the item of April 12 which explained that calendars are planned a year in advance. Student opinion in the form of letters and additional petitions would be needed to convince calendar-planners of the desirability of a spring vacation for Easter for this year. But the vacation had already passed, an extra day had been granted, and, as confirmed procrastinators, the students forgot about the whole thing.

Maybe this modern generation isn't so mollycoddled after all.

The other day we heard a student express the opinion—and he seemed sincere about it, too—that our generation is a generation of milksoops. He said our forefathers, if they could see us now, would be ashamed of our low red-corporeal count.

This self-styled champion of virility (we're certain that if he had been living in 1862 he would have been a blockade-runner, went on to elaborate on how our forefathers had had to put up with hard winters and the Indians.

Of course we have no way of proving this, but we'll bet that if our "rugged" forefathers were required to choose between the Indians and the hell-drivers, they'd take the nice, gentle, kind-hearted redskins everytime.

Water Cats To Head into Yankee-land For Three Cut-throat Meets

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

It is with pardonable and blushing pride that I, minor prophet and grand exalted optimist No. 1, call your attention to the fact that Kentucky won the Southeastern conference basketball tournament.

That I was right in my forecast of two weeks ago came as an abrupt shock. Over the years I had proved so remarkably inaccurate that to be correct even once is a horrible boost to my average.

However, it must be admitted that I had secretly harbored a wild passion to hit with a prediction sometime prior to my entrance into this mad world.

To defend my faith and forecast, over the past week end there arose a Kentucky team that, without so much as consulting the American Bar Association appointed itself attorney for the defense. There were several reasons why, if I were to elude those who round up inmates for padded cells and straight jackets, a good strong defense was needed.

Most of the wise guys said Kentucky hadn't even an outside chance of retaining its conference crown, that it was too much like sending an invitation to someone you knew couldn't come to the party. Some even went so far as to opine that Kentucky's chances were so dead that a certain sea might well have been named after them. These fellow oracles pointed out, and quite properly, that the Cats were still in deplorable physical condition, they had just concluded one of their most disastrous seasons, no champions had ever succeeded itself in the league, and the competition was simply too stiff.

Thank Their Noses
But the Cats thumbed their noses at the crepe paper hangers, packed up the troubles in their old kit bags and exploded on the tournament with more noise than a DuPont plant.

Advanced to the second round by the lack of a bye, Kentucky went for its first opponent, Vanderbilt, like a parched throat goes for water and mauled the Commodores by 44-34. The scoring pattern was out by David and Goliath of the squad, snail Eral Allen and Eitel-Tower Marion Clughish, who melted the hoops with 12 and 13 points, respectively.

Came The Climax
The tourney was practically concluded Friday night when the Cats eliminated Tennessee and 2,500 wild-eyed Vol followers with a hair-graying 30-29 overtime decision. At the point of regulation playing time the score was deadlocked tighter than a case of lock-jaw at 27 all.

Early in the extra session Bernie Mehen, brilliant Vol forward, connected with a long field goal and Tennessee, favored by the smart money for the title, began to freeze the ball. The margin was out to one point as Keith Farnley converted with a foul chance and once again the Vols attempted to hold the lead.

With 15 seconds to play, Farnley, who exploited the hook and pivot shots to their fullest extent, broke down the floor and wheeled in a left handed flip that settled the issue.

Concerning Allegories
To all with an imagination as warped as my own, that Tennessee bout was an allegorical game. Since I am a Kentuckian, naturally unprejudiced, right was represented by Kentucky.

CONTENDERS FOR CHAMPIONSHIP LOOM ON INTRAMURAL HORIZON

With Spicer leading the scoring, the SAsE clinched a position in the finals of the intramural basketball tournament Friday night by defeating the ATOs, 19-9.

The powerful SAsE formed an early lead on a field goal by Harris Walker and held their position throughout the game. The score at the end of the half was 11-7.

In the same division the Sigma Nus received a free pass to the final tournament from the Alpha Sigs in the form of a forfeit. The Sigma Nus have won four out of their five encounters, dropping one to the AEs.

However, the SAsE have one loss tabbed against them, at the hands of the Phi Taus early in the season, and therefore fell into a tie with the Eucled Avenue boys, bringing them both into the finals.

Division 2.
The Kappa Alphas got a pin hold on the championship of the 2nd division Friday night by defeating the Phi Delt five 22-18. Bob Jones led the scoring for the winners with a total of five points, while Carl Garner, erstwhile freshman netter, trotted out nine points for the Phi Delt.

The Kappa Sigs, led by Ted Meyer who dropped in three field goals and shot a guard position on the Associated Press seventh annual Southeastern conference all-star basketball team.

So outstanding was Rouse's play during the tournament that he received 78 votes out of a possible 80. The only unanimous selection of coaches and sports writers was Bernie Mehen, Tennessee's sophomore forward.

Keith Farnley, who led the Wildcats in scoring for the tournament, was voted a second team berth, while Marion Clughish, Ermal Allen and Carl Combs were given honorable mention for their play during the eliminations.

Four teams, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, were honored by having players named to the first team. In being named to the honor, Rouse kept alive Kentucky's tradition of presenting the outstanding guards in the conference. Last year and the year before it was Bernie Opper, later an All-America selection, who was placed on the all-star five.

BILL WILL OPEN WITH DE PAUW TOMORROW

Back in win prosperity after last week's triangular win over Murray and Eastern, Kentucky's much publicized pool-less swimming team will leave early tomorrow on its annual Mid-Western tour that includes meets against DePauw, Loyola and Armour Tech.

First stop in the Yankee-land stamp will send the Wildcat-fish against DePauw tomorrow night. Next Kentucky will move on to Chicago to meet Loyola Friday night and Armour Tech Saturday night. The 12 man Cat squad is scheduled to return to Lexington Sunday.

In the meets the Cats will be out to defend a two year record of 13 wins, one tie and but two losses. After going through last season undrunk, Kentucky dropped decisions to Georgia and Florida, the South's top water teams, on a recent Southeastern tour. On the same trip, however, the Blues tied Tennessee and rolled over Georgia Tech.

Then, a week ago, Kentucky stepped back into the win column with an easy victory in a three way meet against Murray and Eastern State Teachers colleges in Richmond.

Against the Mid-Western foes the Cats will send a team that, despite its record for the season, is stronger and better rounded than last season's instated. While last year's team picked on several easy teams, the Cats of this season have been gunning in the big leagues of swimming. For instance, the Florida team that trimmed Kentucky has been undefeated since 1934 and has won the Southeastern Conference title for three successive years.

Talks On Current Excavation, Election Of Officers Planned

The Kentucky Archaeological society will meet in the Lecture room of the Physics building at 7:30 p. m. Friday, March 8, W. G. Haas, secretary-treasurer of the organization announced.

Continuing the usual procedure of discussing the current excavations of the University, the topic of the evening's talk will be "The Fort Ancient Culture," divided into two parts.

The first portion of the program will be an illustrated lecture on the recent excavations of Fort Ancient sites in Greensburg, Boone, and Bourbon counties, presented by Mr. Haag. The second phase of the program will be given by Prof. William S. Webb, who will compare this material with other areas, pointing out the historic contacts between these and other Indian tribes.

Because an election of officers will precede the lecture, J. D. Fagin, president of the society, requests that all members arrive early.

HUTCHINS HONORED
President Francis Hutchins of Berea college was guest of honor at a dinner of the International Affairs club Monday in the Union building. He discussed "China Under War."
