CLR GRANTS AND PROGRAMS

The Council on Library Resources has announced a number of grants and programs available to librarians which will be awarded to librarians in the coming year. The Academic Librarian Management Intern Program, which is offered biennially, will select up to three interns for the 1990-1991 academic year. Successful candidates will spend the academic year working with the director and senior administrative staff of a large and well-managed research library observing and participating in management activities and special assignments. Deadline for applications is October 16, 1989.

The CLR Fellows Program offers financial support to individuals who wish to undertake research or conduct analytical studies pertinent to library operations and services or to pursue other professional projects of importance. The program is open to professional staff members of academic, research, and public libraries. Applications are considered three times each year, on March 1, October 1, and December 1.

CLR Cooperative Research Grants are designed to support research projects proposed jointly by librarians and members of the teaching faculty. Grant deadlines are April 1 and December 1.

CLR Research Grants are meant to encourage exploration of the issues and questions posed by a changing information structure, with special attention to the needs of faculty and students and the services and responsibilities of academic and research libraries. For more information on these or other grants and programs of The Council on Research Libraries, you may write the Council at 1785 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20036, or telephone them at 202-483-7474.

STAFF ACTIVITIES

Bonnie Cox, Collection Development, has been named Director of Women's Studies in the College of Arts and Sciences. The appointment is a part-time position.

Mr. Willis received the following letter from Dr. George Newell, associate professor in the College of Education:

I have been at UK for six years as a professor of English Education in the College of Education. Over the course of about four of those years I have had the pleasure of working with Mary Vass, director of the Education Library. While Ms. Vass has helped me in many ways with library resources, she has contributed to my work in two specific ways. Ms. Vass has supported my efforts to build a strong collection of books and journals in English education and literacy research and teaching. In addition, she has been very competent and knowledgeable when I have called upon her for computer searches as part of my scholarship. I have found Ms. Vass to be more than competent, however; she has strong intellectual and scholarly inclinations that enable her to understand academic endeavors and requirements that go beyond mere library management.

As Ms. Vass is considered for tenure and promotion during the ensuing academic year, I will be taking a position at another university. Thus, I want to assure you of my support of her and make clear that I will miss her commitment to and progress in building a strong Education Library, and, by extension, an intellectual community within the College of Education.

Gail Kennedy received the following letter from Janet Stith, Assistant Director for Public Services at the Medical Center Library:

I wanted to take a few minutes to compliment one of your branch librarians, Brad Grissom.

Since Brad has been in charge of the Biological Sciences Library, the communication and cooperation between our two libraries has increased tremendously. We are sharing monthly reports, acquisitions lists, journal titles on order files and maintaining an excellent relationship in the areas of collection development, interlibrary loan and reference services. Brad has visited our library and several of our staff have also met with him at BS.

Brad and I send e-mail back and forth weekly with relationship to faculty recommended titles that overlap both our areas and we are trying to stay on top of the duplication problem with books and journals in our libraries. He has been very supportive and helpful in all our dealings and it is such a wonderful difference from previous BS librarians that I really wanted to let you know.

Kate Seago recently received the following note from Martha Birchfield, librarian at Lexington Community College:

Thank you and Maggie Doult for helping me and Bonnie Reed with the /AB function. The session was most helpful: you cleared up many problems we could not solve just reading the manual. We do appreciate all the time you spent.
